NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information about several older classic sleuth films now or soon to be available on DVD. Includes Sherlock Holmes, the Collection. "Hawk-visaged Basil Rathbone embodied Conan Doyle's detective in 14 B movies, some transporting him from Victorian to modern London to outwit the Nazis. As Dr. Watson, Nigel Bruce was an ideal foil for the great man."
4368. Fox, Bette-Lee, and Daniel B. Schuetz. "Sherlock Holmes/Sherlock Holmes (Film)." Library Journal 128, no. 6 (2003): 145.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the digital videos 'Sherlock Holmes: The Hound of the Baskervilles,' and 'Sherlock Holmes: The Last Vampyre,' by MTI Home Video.
4369. Kehr, Dave. "Critic's Choice: New DVDs." New York Times, July 4, 2006: E5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews several films released on DVD format including "Petulia," directed by Richard Lester, starring Julie Christie, "Cannibal Holocaust," directed by Ruggero Deodato and "Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror."
4370. Kendall, Nigel. "Sherlock Holmes - The Definitive Collection." The Times (London), January 29, 2005: 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Sherlock Holmes - The Definitive Collection. Directors: Various. Stars: Basil Rathbone, Nigel Bruce....Ah, Holmes, sweet Holmes! This 7-DVD set comprises all 14 of the adventures starring the inimitable pairing of Rathbone's meerschaum- toting sleuth and Bruce's bumbling sidekick. The films have been restored and reassembled from the best available prints, a process that took ten years but is worth every minute...."
4371. Macnab, Geoffrey. "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes (Film)." Sight & Sound 14, no. 8 (2004): 77-77.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the DVD videodisc release of the motion picture "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes," directed by Billy Wilder and starring Robert Stephens.
4372. Neuhaus, Mel. "The Sherlock Holmes Collection, Vol. 1." Sound & Vision 68, no. 10 (2003): 132.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the DVD version of the motion pictures collected in "The Sherlock Holmes Collection, Volume 1." "Sherlock Holmes Faces Death"; "Voice of Terror"; "Secret Weapon"; "In Washington."
4373. Rogers, Michael. "Classic Returns." Library Journal 130, no. 19 (2005): 107.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An annotated bibliography of re-released classic fiction and nonfiction titles is provided. Includes an entry for Doyle and Holmes. Doyle, Sir Arthur Conan. The Sherlock Holmes Mysteries. 547p. ISBN 1-59609-176-2. Signet. 2005. pap. $14.95 with DVD. "These clever packages combine a classic text with a DVD of a film version. The Holmes volume's 22 stories accompany Terror by Night and The Woman in Green, starring Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce...."
4374. Ts. "Tapes & discs: Laserdiscs." Video Magazine 18, no. 5 (1994): 54.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the videodisc 'The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes: Collector's Edition,' directed by Billy Wilder.
4375. Wagner, Holly J. "There's No One Like Holmes." Video Store 25, no. 35 (2003): 28-28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the DVD version of the TV program "The Return of Sherlock Holmes," by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.
4376. Walters, Ben. "The Sherlock Holmes Collection (TV Program)." Sight & Sound 14, no. 9 (2004): 97-97.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the television program "The Sherlock Holmes Collection," starring Peter Cushing and Douglas Wilmer released on DVD format.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4377. "Language Arts." School Library Journal 45, no. 8 (1999): 91.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a directory of audio-visual materials about language arts. Includes Sherlock Holmes: A Study in Scarlet. 2 cassettes. Prod. by BDD Audio. Dist. by Random House. ISBN 0-553-52553-0. $18. "Gr 7-12-In the first of the Sherlock Holmes stories, Dr. Watson, discharged from military service after suffering wounds, is at loose ends until a chance encounter leads him to take rooms with Sherlock Holmes. When Watson is drawn into the investigation of a bizarre murder in which Holmes is involved, he is unaware that it is the beginning of the most famous partnership in the history of criminal detection." Sherlock Holmes: The Sign of the Four. 2 cassettes. Prod. by BDD Audio. Dist. by Random House. ISBN 0-553-52640-5. $18. "Gr 7 Up-Holmes and Watson accompany a woman on a quest which leads them through the dark heart of London to a one-legged man, a mysterious and terrifying creature, and an incredible tale of greed and revenge." Sherlock Holmes: The Valley of Fear. 2 cassettes. Prod. by BDD Audio. Dist. by Random House. ISBN 0-553-52622-7. $18. "Gr 7 Up-A coded warning of imminent danger sends Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson to the country house of the reclusive Jack Douglas. When they arrive too late to prevent a tragic death, they must follow bewildering clues and find a murderer." The Sharp Wits in the Extraordinary Case of the Essay Test. video. 12 min. with tchr's, guide. Media Inc. ISBN 1-89305807-7. price unavail. "Gr 3-5-An alien has abducted Sherlock. Only the rest of the Sharp Wits can rescue him. It will take steely nerves, quick minds and the answer to an essay question. Join them as they uncover the keys to answering an essay question and save their friend."
4378. "The original Granada TV Series on videotape starring: Jeremy Brett [Advertisement]." Canadian Holmes 17, no. 3 (1994): 27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Advertisement from Creative Enterprise for the Granada series.
4379. Beauregard, Sue-Ellen, Candace Smith, and Jeff Dick. "Videos and DVDs: Adult Travel." Booklist 98, no. 2 (2001): 239.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several videotapes on adult travel. 'In the Footsteps of Sherlock Holmes,' by Chip Taylor; 'The Keepers of Cana Island Light'; 'New Mexico: The Land of Excitement.'
4380. Bender, Pat. "In the footsteps of Sherlock Holmes." School Library Journal 47, no. 8 (2001): 80.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "In the Footsteps of Sherlock Holmes ($159.99), from Associated TV International, is a 45-minute video that visits the settings of the fictional crimes investigated by Arthur Conan Doyle's Victorian detective. Amid descriptions of late 19th-century London and shots of the British city today, the narrator summarizes the plots and settings of the Sherlock Holmes tales. Suitable for students in grade 7 and up, this video would be a delight for all Holmes fans and could supplement a unit on Victorian history or literature."
4381. Burr, Ty. "Video; (Cover story)." Entertainment Weekly, no. 255/256 (1995): 132.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a list of the best and worst videos of 1994. Billy Wilder's The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes is listed under the "Honor Roll" category.
4382. Davies, David Stuart. "Review--'Sherlock Holmes, The Speckled Band and The Illustrious Client' BBC Video." The Musgrave Papers, no. 9 (1996): 132-133.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4383. ———. "Review--'The Sherlock Holmes Video,' Countryside TV Productions." The Ritual, no. 15 (1995): 57.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4384. Michael, Patrick. "Review--'The Hound of the Baskervilles' Second Sight Video." The Ritual, no. 24 (1999): 59-61.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4385. Nye, Doug. "Jeremy Brett is Sherlock Holmes - 8 New Tapes." The Philadelphia Inquirer, April 6, 1995: E01.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "'I was intimidated by Rathbone at first,' Brett said during a chat in Los Angeles. 'It was depressing, because Rathbone looked exactly like the old drawings of Holmes.' Rathbone played Holmes in 14 movies during the 1940s as well as on radio for several years. Nevertheless, when Brett was offered the role in a series produced by Granada for the BBC, he was determined to bring his own interpretation to the character. 'I reread everything I could about the character,' Brett said. The results are nearly 10 years of marvelous adaptations of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's fictional detective. Not only has the series been a hit in England, but it also has won loyal fans in America with airings as part of PBS's Mystery! series and as Sherlock Holmes on cable's Arts & Entertainment network. Not surprisingly, the Holmes/Brett series has become popular on the home-video market. MPI has released many episodes of the series on video and recently made eight more available...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4386. Olson, Catherine Applefeld. "Labels make a killing with mysteries." Billboard 108, no. 44 (1996): 71.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the popularity of mystery videos. Healthy sales of MPI Home Video's 42-tape Sherlock Holmes series, A&E Home Video's 'Cracker Mysteries' and others; Comments by MPI's Nasser Zegar and A&E's David Walmsley.

10S ACTORS, PERFORMANCES AND RECORDINGS -- OTHER FORMATS (1)

4387. "Notices (Announcements and Advertisements)." Postmodern Culture 4, no. 3 (1994).
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Doyle and Holmes reference under "English Literature Sublist." Arthur Conan Doyle, four disks, $10 each, $40 for the set Disk #1 (1.1 Mbytes) --The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes, The Casebook of Sherlock Holmes Disk #2 (1.1 Mbytes) -- The Return of Sherlock Holmes, A Study in Scarlet, The Poison Belt Disk #3 (1.1 Mbytes) -- Through the Magic Door, The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes, The Sign of the Four Disk #4 (1 Mbyte) -- His Last Bow, The Hound of the Baskervilles, The Valley of Fear

11A PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- GENERAL AND MISCELLANEOUS (41)

4388. "American Literature." Reference & Research Book News 18, no. 3 (2003): 237-241.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Lists books on American literature. Lists Durkheim is Dead!: Sherlock Holmes is Introduced to Sociological Theory by Arthur Asa Berger (AltaMira Press, 2003) 172p. ISBN 0-7591-0299-6.
"In a mystery novel featuring detective Holmes and his trusty sidekick Dr. Watson, Berger...explores the ideas of some of the most influential sociologists and social thinkers of the 19th and 20th centuries..."
4389. "English-Language Literatures." Reference & Research Book News 18, no. 4 (2003): 245-252.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Lists several books on English literature including The Alternative Sherlock Holmes: Pastiches, Parodies and Copies by Peter Ridgway Watt and Joseph Green. (Ashgate Publishing Co., 2003) 359p. ISBN 0-7545-0882-4
4390. "Gaslight Grimoire: Fantastic Tale of Sherlock Holmes." Publishers Weekly 255, no. 36 (2008): 39-39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Gaslight Grimoire: Fantastic Tale of Sherlock Holmes," edited by J. R. Campbell and Charles Prepolec. Edge (www.edgewebsite.com), $16.95 paper (336p) ISBN 978-1494063-17-3. "In his foreword, David Stuart Davies asserts that the authors of these 11 stories pitting Holmes against the supernatural 'are very well-versed in the world of Sherlock Holmes and Doctor Watson.' Unfortunately, this authority fails to come through. The eloquence of the one standout, Barbara Roden's 'The Things That Shall Come Upon Them,' only emphasizes what the others lack. Roden effortlessly involves Holmes in a mystery derived from M.R. James's classic tale of terror, 'Casting the Runes,' featuring psychic sleuth Flaxman Low. By contrast, Martin Powell's 'Sherlock Holmes in the Lost World' sees Holmes battling ape-men and dinosaurs without any display of his remarkable intellect, and M.J. Elliott's 'The Finishing Stroke' pays so much homage as to neglect originality. As a whole, this mixed bag fails to differentiate itself from other similar anthologies."
4391. "I So Don't Do Mysteries." Publishers Weekly 255, no. 42 (2008): 50-51.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "I So Don't Do Mysteries," by Barrie Summy. Includes a reference to Holmes. "About to be shipped off to San Diego while her widower dad goes on his honeymoon, seventh-grader Sherry (short for Sherlock) Holmes Baldwin prepares to put up a fight when she is contacted by her mother's ghost. Killed in the line of duty, her cop mother is flunking out of an afterlife law-enforcement academy, and she needs Sherry's help to crack a case at the San Diego Wild Animal Park...."
4392. "Mystery." Publishers Weekly 249, no. 44 (2002): 30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features several mystery books on the best seller list in the U.S. as of November 2002. Mention of Doyle and Holmes. "In the most notable Sherlock Holmes pastiches, the great detective was essentially off-stage: Laurie King's seventh Mary Russell mystery, Justice Hall (Bantam), and David Pirie's The Patient's Eyes (St. Martin's Minotaur), with a young Conan Doyle playing Dr. Watson to Dr. Joseph Bell's Holmes."
4393. "Sherlock Holmes Readers Rejoice!". Journal of chemical education 81, no. 5 (2004): 634-634.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // In 1989 Thomas G. Waddell and Thomas R. Rybolt published their first story in "Journal of Chemical Education" (JCE) in "The Chemical Adventures of Sherlock Holmes series", "Sherlock Holmes and the Yellow Prisms". That one story has now grown to 15 with the publication of "Autopsy in Blue" in the April 2004 issue. By popular request JCE has gathered all 15 stories into a single volume. The formatting has been standardized so that there is consistency among all stories, making it easier for educators to make photocopies for students that include only the stories and not the solutions.
4394. "Spring Hardcover. (Cover story)." Publishers Weekly 255, no. 3 (2008): 40-110.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews several hardcover books, including Gotham Books The Murder Room: The Heirs of Sherlock Holmes Gather to Solve the World's Most Perplexing Cold Cases (May, $27.50) by Michael Capuzzo. Studies the real-life crime fighters who meet monthly in Philadelphia. Ad/promo. Author tour.
4395. "Trade Paperbacks." Publishers Weekly 248, no. 33 (2001): 233.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a list of paperbacks including Sound & Vision (dist. by Firefly) Quotable Alice and Quotable Sherlock (Dec., $14.95 each), edited by David W. Barber, "collect quotes from the works of Lewis Carroll and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle." Berkley Prime Crime's More Holmes for the Holidays (Oct., $13), edited by Martin H. Greenberg, Jon L. Lellenberg and Carol-Lynn Waugh, "features the famous detective."
4396. "The Year in Books 2001: Mystery." Publishers Weekly 248, no. 47 (2001): 36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a list of mystery books. 'The Wooden Leg of Inspector Anders,' by Marshall Browne; 'Six-Pound Walleye,' by Elizabeth Gunn; 'The Great Game,' by Michael Kurland; 'Samurai Boogie,' by Peter Tasker; 'Strawman's Hammock,' by Darryl Wimberley.
4397. Aykroyd, Clarissa, and Trevor S. Raymond. "'Bookshelf': Reviews of The Poems of Sherlock Holmes and The Mark of the Gunn and Other Untold Tales." Canadian Holmes 24, no. 3 (2001): 45-46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4398. Aykroyd, Lucas, Clifford S. Goldfarb, and Brian S. Brodie. "'Bookshelf' Reviews of The Abominable Wife and Other Unrecorded Cases of Mr. Sherlock Holmes, The Spenserian Holmes: Being the Annotated Manuscript of the Hell of the Baskervilles, Teller of Tales: The Life of Arthur Conan Doyle and The Hounds Collection: Volume IV." Canadian Holmes 23, no. 1 (1999): 38-42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4399. Beeman, Herbert. "Some Adventures of Mr. Surelock Keys." Canadian Holmes 19, no. 1 (1995): 5-7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4400. Blau, Peter E. "The Adventure of the Acephalous Agronomist." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 1 (2000): 1.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides some background on Vincent Starrett's parody, first published in 1944, in a limited edition of the three copies.

4401. Brainard, Dulcy. "Forecast: Mystery." Publishers Weekly 241, no. 8 (1994): 236.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'The Game is Afoot: Parodies, Pastiches and Ponderings of Sherlock Holmes,' edited by Marvin Kaye.

4402. Cassada, Jackie. "Gaslight Grimoire: Fantastic Tales of Sherlock Holmes." Library Journal 133, no. 17 (2008): 60-60.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article reviews the book "Gaslight Grimoire: Fantastic Tales of Sherlock Holmes," edited by J.R. Campbell and Charles Prepolec. "...Unlike other anthologies featuring Conan Doyle's eccentric detective, this one, edited by Campbell and Prepolec, posits encounters between Holmes and the supernatural that cannot be explained by logic alone. Introductory essays by the editors and an evocative full-page illustration by Phil Conell for each story round out an excellent addition to the Holmesian apocrypha. A good addition to any library."

4403. Dahlin, Robert. "Scene 2: Making short work of crime." Publishers Weekly 246, no. 17 (1999): 46.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on book publishers' marketing strategies for mystery anthology books as of April 26, 1999. Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Over the years, there have been a number of collections based on further exploits of the great denizen of London's Baker Street. One of the latest is The Confidential Casebooks of Sherlock Holmes, edited by Marvin Kaye, which St. Martin's is reprinting in July as a Griffin trade paperback. 'As a subject, Holmes is different from those in many other short stories,' says SMP senior editor Keith Kahla. 'Almost all of what Conan Doyle wrote were short stories, and Holmes fans are devoted readers. They'll read anything from actual Conan Doyle to the pastiches.'" 4404. Davies, David Stuart, Paul M. Chapman, and Kathryn White. "Pastiche or Not Pastiche--that is the question." The Ritual, no. 18 (1996): 16-26.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4405. Dirda, Michael. "Book World; Clues to Sherlock Holmes." The Washington Post, April 11, 1994: B02.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of The Game is Afoot: Parodies, Pastiches & Ponderings of Sherlock Holmes. Edited by Marvin Kaye. St. Martin's. 512 pp. $24.95

4406. Glenn, Joshua. "The Misadventures of Sherlock Holmes." The Boston Globe, September 19, 2004: D3.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "'Shamrock Womlbs had receeded a telephart whilst we sat at our lunch eating. . . Quite sydney without warping he turd apod me with a miscarriage twinkle in his eye,' recounts Doctorod Whopper in John Lennon's 1965 story collection 'A Spaniard in the Works.' Lennon's 'The Singularge Experience of Miss Anne Duffield' may be 'deliciously incomprehensible and yet gloriously comic,' write retired British research scientists Peter Ridgway Watt and Joseph Green. But the writing Beatle's impulse to pay homage to Sherlock Holmes was hardly original. In their new book 'The Alternative Sherlock Holmes' (Ashgate), Watt and Green present a comprehensive study of Holmes pastiches (in which he matches wits with everyone from Russian Nihilists to Jack the Ripper to Dracula), parodies (from Lennon's Womlbs to Sherlock Hemlock of 'Sesame Street'), and imitations (such as Augustus S F X Van Dusen, the 'Thinking Machine,' star of 35 excellent stories by Jacques Futrelle in the 1900s)...."

4407. Hirayama, Yuichi. "Chinese Works in the History of Sherlockian Pastiches." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 104-108.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4408. Izban, Donald B. "To the Pastiches--May They Go On Forever." Shoso-In Bulletin 14, no. (2004): 53.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4409. Johnson, Roger. "Romancing the Holmes: Some Thoughts on Sherlock Holmes Pastiche." The Musgrave Papers, no. 11 (1998): 117-138.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4410. Le Fanu, James. "The case of the missing data." BMJ: British Medical Journal 325, no. 7378 (2002): 1490.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the fictional story 'The case of the missing data,' by James LeFanu, which includes the characters Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson.
4411. Lovisi, Gary. "Writing the Sherlockian Pastiche." Shoso-In Bulletin 14, no. (2004): 77-79.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4412. McGrath, Charles. "Sherlock Holmes's eternal appeal." The International Herald Tribune, May 24, 2005: 10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Mention of recent works on Holmes including Klinger's Annotated and Carr's Italian Secretary, among others. "Sherlock Holmes, the subject of a spate of recent books, has enjoyed what must surely be the most extensive afterlife of any character in fiction. To begin with, he survived the attempt of his own creator, Arthur Conan Doyle, to kill him off in the 1893 story 'The Final Problem,' the one that begins with Watson writing, 'It is with a heavy heart that I take up my pen'..."
4413. ———. "What Makes Him The Supersleuth?" New York Times, May 20, 2005: E.2:27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Nearly identical article to that in the International Herald Tribune. "...Holmes has since become a one-man entertainment complex. He has been the subject of at least 100 movies and nearly as many plays and radio dramas, and he has inspired an entire library's worth of books. There have been countless sequels and knockoffs -- among them Nicholas Meyer's trilogy, which paired Holmes with figures like Freud, Oscar Wilde and the Phantom of the Opera; Laurie R. King's Mary Russell novels, about a young heiress who teams up with the retired Holmes; and "A Samba for Sherlock," by the Brazilian writer and television personality Jo Soares, which transports a fumbling, nearsighted Holmes to Rio to solve the case of a stolen violin. There is also a vast and ever-growing trove of serious and semiserious Holmes scholarship...."
4414. McKuras, Julie. "100 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 2 (2000): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the December 1900 publication of the parody "The Stolen Cigar-Case By A. C---N D---le, Author of 'Rodney Stone and other Light Weights'." in Pearson's Magazine as well as its author Bret Harte.
4415. Memmott, Carol. "Holmes resurfaces in two new tales." USA Today, April 21, 2005: D4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle has been dead for nearly 75 years, but his most famous literary creation, Sherlock Holmes, lives on as never before. Two critically acclaimed authors, Caleb Carr and Mitch Cullin, are following in Conan Doyle's foot-steps by placing Holmes and his loyal friend Dr. Watson at the center of their new novels...."
4416. Picker, Leonard. "The Real Sherlock Holmes." Publishers Weekly 253, no. 27 (2006): 56-56.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents an interview with David Pirie, author of three mysteries. He explained his reasons for writing mysteries about Conan Doyle, creator of Sherlock Holmes. He discussed his novel The Dark Water. He shared how he had created his characters Doyle and Joseph Bell for BBC.
4417. Pitt, David. "Gaslight Grimoire: Fantastic Tales of Sherlock Holmes." Booklist 105, no. 4 (2008): 25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "Fantastic Tales of Sherlock Holmes: Gaslight Grimoire" by Jeff Campbell. "...This anthology, featuring such writers as Barbara Hambly, Chris Roberson, and Kim Newman, purports to present the kinds of Holmes stories Conan Doyle might have written if he had allowed Holmes to become involved with the otherworldly. The stories are a mixed lot, with characters ranging from Peter Pan to a 1940s Los Angeles private eye to old friends like Professor Moriarty and Inspector Lestrade, but unfortunately some of them read not like a story Conan Doyle might have written but like fan fiction--long on imagination but short on execution. Others, however, are a lot of fun, well written and entertaining. Holmes devotees may be a bit disappointed, but fans of fantastic fiction should be happy to see the famous detective stepping into their world."
4418. Raymond, Trevor S. et al. "Which of you is Holmes? A special Canadian Holmes edition on Sherlockian

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- pastiche." Canadian Holmes 20, no. 2 (1996): 4-39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4419. Rogers, Michael. "Book reviews: Arts & humanities." Library Journal 119, no. 4 (1994): 88.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'The Game Is Afoot: Parodies, Pastiche, and Ponderings of Sherlock Holmes,' edited by Marvin Kaye.
4420. Soares, Jo. "De donde viene la caipirinha." Americas 60, no. 6 (2008): 64-64.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A short piece featuring Holmes and Watson, in Spanish.
4421. Sullivan, Greg. "The Seven Deadly Sins of Sherlockian Pastiche." The Holmes & Watson Report 6, no. 3 (2002): 20-21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4422. Trifonas, Peter Pericles. "The aesthetics of textual production: reading and writing with Umberto Eco." Studies in Philosophy & Education 26, no. 3 (2007): 267-277.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // In The Name of the Rose, Umberto Eco essentially presents an educative vision of some basic semiotic principles that infuse the textual form of a popular fictional genre--the detective story. In effect, it characterizes the postmodernization of the traditional "whodunnit" moving the genre from the realm of "the real" or the plausible into the realm of "the metaphysical" or the unthinkable. The Name of the Rose is a practical application in semiotics. Or, how the aesthetics of textual production as generated through the lexical signs and codes manifest the discursive text of a novel work. The semiotic twists and turns of the detective story facilitate this educational function and the purposeful transformation of the reader into an individual capable of appreciating and grasping the conflicting ideological viewpoints expressed through its dialogical structure. The detective genre enables the Umberto Eco to produce an educational narrative via the intricacies of plot in the detective story while teaching main aspects of semiotic theory. [Abstract from author]. Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.
4423. Trone, Mary C. "Mystery; [Metro Edition]." Star Tribune (Minneapolis), Dec 12, 1994: 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A Small Sacrifice by Ellen Hart (Seal Press, $20.95) and Once Upon a Crime by M.D. Lake (Avon, $4.99) are both by local authors, continuing two series that feature Twin Cities' protagonists. Hart's Jane Lawless is a restaurateur and amateur sleuth who's called on to find a killer among her friend Cordelia's reunited college chums. Lake's campus cop, Peggy O'Neill, seeks a wolf disguised as a lamb during a Hans Christian Andersen conference at the university.; Sins of the Wolf by Anne Perry (Fawcett, $20), The Alienist by Caleb Carr (Random House, $22) and Laurie R. King's The Beekeeper's Apprentice (St. Martin's Press, $21.95) are all outstanding period mysteries. Perry returns to Victorian London; Carr takes readers back to New York City in the 1890s, and King provides Sherlock Holmes with a young woman sidekick to liven up his retirement.
4424. Utechin, Nick. "It's Elementary, My Dear." The Scotsman, June 28, 2000: 14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Some observations on Holmes parodies and pastiches. "There's a famous 'Punch' cartoon of a giant Sir Arthur Conan Doyle - who died 70 years ago next week - sitting puffing contentedly with his head in the clouds and down at his feet an austere midget Sherlock Holmes; the two are manacled together. The image could not be more simple, expressing the truth that Doyle could never accept that he would, in the public mind, be forever shackled to Sherlock. 'He takes my mind from better things,' Doyle wrote, when he hurled Holmes off the Reichenbach Falls in 1892; but by the time he wrote the last adventure of the fabulous detective 35 years later, American publishers were paying him a dollar a word, such were the readers' demands. Holmes's impact was immediate; and over the years, some 16,000 attempts have been made at parodying him, or re-writing him in pastiche form...."
4425. Wren, Celia. "Sherlockian Apocrypha." Commonweal 128, no. 22 (2001): 18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on several playwrights and writers who have indulged in works related to the fictitious [sic] detective Sherlock Holmes. Characters in Carole Nelson Douglas' mystery novel 'Chapel Noir'; Examples of fictional mysteries that feature historical personages.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4426. You, Wenjia. "When Sherlock Holmes and Freud meet: Psychoanalysis and the mystery story." PsyArt: An Online Journal for the Psychological Study of the Arts Electronic, no. 980715 (1998).
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Posted date: September 7, 1998. "Many scholars mention the use of Freudian psychology in literary works, but very few scrutinize the interplay between the literary and the psychological texts involved. This paper explores how the mystery story can incorporate psychoanalysis into its essential components, such as the crime, the clues, and the detective. I set up a theoretical framework in which the key elements of the mystery story may appropriate psychoanalysis, and I generalize how psychoanalysis may influence the mystery story as a subgenre. Then I offer 2 case studies of Marnie and The Seven-Per-Cent Solution, which both use a large amount of psychoanalysis. I examine how these two works incorporate psychoanalysis and measure their formal qualities against my theoretical conjectures." [Abstract from author]
4427. Zaleski, Jeff. "Returning to Holmes." Publishers Weekly 252, no. 16 (2005): 36-36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Interviews mystery fiction writer Caleb Carr. Background of his book "The Italian Secretary: A Further Adventure of Sherlock Holmes"; Reasons behind the interest shown by mystery writers in the literary works of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle; His views on the tendency of readers to expect conspiracies in mystery stories.
4428. Zvirin, Stephanie. "Murder Short & Sweet." Booklist 105, no. 4 (2008): 26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "Murder Short & Sweet" by Paul D. Staudohar. 512p. Chicago Review, $19.95 (9781556527975). A practiced anthologist, Staudohar has assembled a rich collection of crime stories, each of which pivots on foul (and occasionally funny) murder--in practice, in theory, and in a surprising variety of ways. Twenty-first century authors are noticeably absent, but the roster is, otherwise, truly a list of mystery writer royalty....About half of the 20-plus entries are by Brits--including Christie, Conan Doyle, and Norwegian-born Brit Roald Dahl, from whom comes the deliciously clever 'Lamb to the Slaughter' (1954)....Not a single clunker in the bunch."

11B PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- SOLAR PONS AND DR. PARKER (AUGUST DERLETH) (2)

4429. Herguth, Bob. "Ely Liebow." Chicago Sun-Times, Dec 19, 1994: 16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "He's a Sherlockian. He's an author and a Northeastern Illinois U. English prof who's an expert on Sherlock Holmes. He's a member of the fictional detective's fan club, the Baker Street Irregulars. In 1991, the Irregulars gave him the rare Two-Shilling Award. And a Derlethian. He just edited and produced a book of essays about the late August Derleth, a cult figure who lived in Sauk City, Wis. Derleth wrote more than 150 books, ranging from horror tales to children's classics. Liebow's book is titled August Harvest...." (excerpt)
4430. Sarjeant, William A. S. "The Prince of Pastiches: August Derleth's Solar Pons." Baker Street West 12, no. 3 (1996): 15-20, 32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES (35)

4431. "The Ghosts of Baker Street: New Tales of Sherlock Holmes." Kirkus Reviews 73, no. 22 (2005): 1213.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of the book.
4432. "Master Sleuths." The Statesman (India), March 20, 2001: 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Inspired by Sherlock Holmes and his acute powers of observation and reasoning, Satyajit Ray created his own Bengali super sleuth. Prodosh Chandra Mitter or Feluda to his fans and his cousin

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Topse, was a master sleuth...."

4433. "Review--'And to think I saw it on Mulbaker Street' by Wiggins." The Holmes & Watson Report 8, no. 1 (2004): 20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4434. "Spawn of Cthulhu!". Booklist 104, no. 2 (2007): 53.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the books "The Children of Cthulhu: Chilling New Tales Inspired by H. P. Lovecraft," edited by Joh Pelan and Benjamin Adams, "Move under Ground," by Nick Mamatas, and "A Night in the Lonesome October," by Roger Zelazny. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Zelazny and collaborating illustrator Gahan Wilson, the dean of horror cartoonists, don't know when to stop pastiche-ing in this Lovecraft-cum-Sherlock Holmes-cum-monster-movie parody that, since it's told by a watchdog, honestly merits the rubric shaggy dog story.
4435. Booth, Matthew. "Review -- 'Sherlock Holmes and the Hellbirds' by Austin Mitchelson & Nicholas Utechin." The Musgrave Papers, no. 8 (1995): 110-112.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4436. Calamai, Peter. "For Sherlockians, one's masterful, the other's a cardboard cutout." The Ottawa Citizen, March 20, 1994: C3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of The Beekeeper's Apprentice Or; On the Segregation of the Queen By Laurie R. King, St. Martin's Press; 347 pages; $31.99; and The Case of Emily V. By Keith Oatley, Reed Books; 407 pages; paperback; $17.99. "Everything Laurie King does right, [Keith Oatley] does wrong...."
4437. Cassada, Jackie. "Book reviews: Fiction." Library Journal 119, no. 21 (1994): 139.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Sherlock Holmes in Orbit.'
4438. Cornwell, Bob. "Book Review (Krimis im Fadenkruzl)." Shoso-In Bulletin 11, no. (2001): 219-220.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4439. Deacon, Theodore, and William Dunlop. "The Case of the Downloaded Diva." Opera News 68, no. 4 (2003): 46-48.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an excerpt from the book "The Case of the Downloaded Diva," by John H. Watson. "A hitherto unpublished fragment from the memoirs of John H. Watson, M.D. Transcribed by Theodore Deacon and William Dunlop, with the generous assistance of Brian Bailey."
4440. Dorn, William S. "Did Watson Write The Case of the Man Who Was Wanted?" Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 4 (1994): 233-239.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Using the work of statisticians Mosteller and Wallace on literary "fingerprints," the author presents information on the possibility of Watsonian authorship.
4441. Elliott, Doug, and Trevor S. Raymond. "'Bookshelf': Reviews of The Annotated Lost World and The Unpublished Solar Pons." Canadian Holmes 20, no. 1 (1996): 29-33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4442. Flutsch, Maria. "Book Reviews." Asian Studies Review 31, no. 4 (2007): 471-497.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews several books including one by Okamoto Kidô. The Curious Casebook of Inspector Hanshichi: Detective Stories of Old Edo (trans. Ian MacDonald). Honolulu: University of Hawai'i Press. Introduction. xxiv, 335 pp. US$50.00, hardcover; US$24.00, paper. Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes. "...The fascination of these stories lies in the 70-year time-overlap of the writing (second and third decades of the twentieth century) and the setting (mid-nineteenth century Edo): they are modern, beautifully crafted short stories about the activities of the Edo detective, Inspector Hanshichi. Unlike Sherlock Holmes, on which Okamoto himself indicates that these stories are based, Hanshichi does not have science or technology to work with....'

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4443. Grove, Nathaniel, and Stacey Lowery Bretz. "Sherlock Holmes and the Case of the Raven and the Ambassador's Wife: An Inquiry-Based Murder Mystery." Journal of chemical education 82, no. 10 (2005): 1532-1533.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An inquiry-based activity that instructors can incorporate into chemistry courses is described. Students become actively involved in helping Sherlock Holmes solve a suspicious death by devising a series of laboratory experiments that will prove the guilt of the accused murderer. The 4 suggested experiments are molar mass determination using freezing point depression, flame tests, qualitative analysis, and the identification of crystal shape.
4444. Gunson, Eilidh. "Review--'The Mammoth Book of New Sherlock Holmes Adventures' edited by Mike Ashley." The Ritual, no. 20 (1997): 64-65.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4445. Hall, John. "Review--'As it Might Have Been: A Collection of Sherlockian Parodies from Unlikely Sources,' collected and edited by Robert C. S. Adey." The Ritual, no. 23 (1999): 58-59.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4446. Hardenbrook, Don, and Thomas Przybilka. "Book Review (Jet by Tsuyaku Ginishago)." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 191-192.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4447. Harmidarow, Walter, Doug Wigglesworth, and Trevor S. Raymond. "Bookshelf: Reviews of The Scroll of the Dead, The Case Files of Sherlock Holmes: The Dying Detective and Waterloo: a Case-Book on Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's Historical Play." Canadian Holmes 22, no. 2 (1998): 42-44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4448. Hatfield, Rab Conan. "Sherlock Holmes and the riddle of the 'Niccolò da Uzzano'." Villa I Tatti, The Harvard University Center for Italian Renaissance Studies. Publications, 2, no. (1978): 219-238.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A pastiche of Conan Doyle, examining the question of the identity and authorship of the bust known as Niccolò da Uzzano and attributed to Donatello (Bargello, Florence). On the basis of a portrait in Ghirlandaio's Sassetti Chapel frescoes in S. Trinità, executed 1484, argues that the bust represents not Niccolò da Uzzano (d.1433) but Gino di Neri Capponi, and that it is not by Donatello but a serial product by an artisan specialized in inexpensive portrait images. Also traces the relationship of Niccolò to the Capponi and Capponi ownership of this and other busts. (Staff)
4449. Hiramaya, Yuichi. "Some Problems in Lestrade and the Hallowed House." The Nezire Zanmai International 2, no. (1992): 50-54.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4450. Hobbs, Don. "Review--Chinese Box Mysteries Vol. II." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 3 (2000): 13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4451. ———. "Review--Curious Incidents 2 edited by J. R. Campbell and Charles Prepolec." The Holmes & Watson Report 7, no. 4 (2003): 29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4452. ———. "Review--My Sherlock Holmes edited by Michael Kurland." The Holmes & Watson Report 7, no. 2 (2003): 32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4453. ———. "Review--Sherlock Holmes and the Clocktower Mystery." The Holmes & Watson Report 6, no. 4 (2002): 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4454. ———. "Review--Sherlock Holmes and the Dangerous Game." The Holmes & Watson Report 7, no. 6 (2004): 32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4455. ———. "Review--The Confidential Casebook of Sherlock Holmes edited by Marvin Kaye." The Holmes & Watson Report 2, no. 2 (1998): 21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4456. Hughes, Mel. "The Adventure of Damascus Rode: The real lost 61st Story of the Holy Writ." Shoso-In Bulletin 5, no. (1995): 77-80.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4457. Hughes, Mel, and Michaud Rosemary. "The Strange Persecution of John Vincent Hardin." Shoso-In Bulletin 12, no. (2002): 81-84.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4458. Katterjohn, Anna. "Prepub Mystery." Library Journal 133, no. 20 (2008): 100-100.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews several books, including Faye, Lyndsay. Dust and Shadow: An Account of the Ripper Killings by Dr. John H. Watson. S. & S. Apr. 2009. 352p. ISBN 978-1-4165-8330-1. $25. "In 19th-century London, Sherlock Holmes hunts Jack the Ripper. This is New York City-based Faye's debut."
4459. Kenney, Michael. "Holmesian tale engaging, inventive." The Boston Globe, February 20, 2001: D7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Book Review Sherlock Holmes: The Missing Years By Jamyang Norbu Bloomsbury, 288 pp., $23.95. "...Now comes an account by a Tibetan novelist, Jamyang Norbu, and while one does not want to play Baker Street Irregular by describing it as authentic, it is of more than passing interest because of its authorship, in addition to being a credible invention and an engaging entertainment...."
4460. Lovisi, Gary. "Book Review (The Alienist. Sherlockian Formul Transmogrified)." Shoso-In Bulletin 13, no. (2003): 159.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4461. Przybilka, Thomas. "Book Review (Sherlock Holmes und die Schrecken von Sumatra)." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 237-238.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4462. Reed, Kevin. "Cockroach Bones and the Five Orange Peeps." Shoso-In Bulletin 14, no. (2004): 56-60.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4463. Shaw, Ken. "The Chemical Adventures of Sherlock Holmes: The Serpentine Remains." Journal of chemical education 85, no. 4 (2008): 507-510.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The short story "The Chemical Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" by Ken Shaw is presented.
4464. Shiffman, Stu. "Adventure of the Danzig Mien I, a tale of Holmes & Watson." Shoso-In Bulletin 6, no. (1996): 60-73.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4465. Steinberg, Sybil, and Genevieve Stuttaford. "Forecasts: Fiction." Publishers Weekly 244, no. 51 (1997): 51.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'The Confidential Casebook of Sherlock Holmes,' edited by Marvin Kaye.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES -- A (8)

4466. "Disciplinary Classification." ISIS: Journal of the History of Science in Society 95, no. (2004): 24-50.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a bibliography on disciplinary classification of science. Lists Sherlock Holmes in Babylon and other Tales of Mathematical History, ed. by Marlow Anderson, Victor J. Katz, and Robin J. Wilson. (The Mathematical Association of America, 2003) ISBN 0883855461 4467. "Math, Computers." SciTech Book News 28, no. 2 (2004): 12-33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Lists several books related to mathematics and computers. "Concurrent and Distributed Computing in Java," by Vijay Kumar Garg; "Foundations of Algorithms Using Java Pseudocode," by Richard E. Neapolitan and Kumarss Naimipour; "Sherlock Holmes in Babylon and Other Tales of Mathematical History," edited by Marlow Anderson et al.
4468. Chechile, Richard A. "Books received for review." Journal of Mathematical Psychology. Print; 49, no. 1 (2005).
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a list of books to be reviewed in the field of mathematics including "Sherlock Holmes in Babylon and Other Tales of Mathematical History," edited by M. Anderson, V. Katz and R. Wilson (2004).
4469. Hargreaves, David. "Review--'Sherlock Holmes and the Strange Events at the Bank of England' by Graham Avery." The Ritual, no. 22 (1998): 62-63.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4470. Kleiner, Israel. "Sherlock Holmes in Babylon and Other Tales of Mathematical History." ISIS: Journal of the History of Science in Society 95, no. 3 (2004): 465-466.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- M3: Book Review // Reviews the book "Sherlock Holmes in Babylon and Other Tales of Mathematical History," edited by Marlow Anderson, Victor Katz and Robin Wilson.
4471. Ousby, Ian. "...My dear Derrida." Tls, no. (1998): 31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'The Secret Marriage of Sherlock Holmes and Other Eccentric Readings,' by Michael Atkinson.
4472. Rauff, James. "Sherlock Holmes in Babylon and Other Tales of Mathematical History." Mathematics Teacher 98, no. 5 (2004): 364-365.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- M3: Book Review // Reviews the book "Sherlock Holmes in Babylon and Other Tales of Mathematical History," edited by Marlow Anderson, Victor Katz, and Robin Wilson.
4473. White, Kathryn. "Review--'Draco, Draconis' by Brett Spencer Altamont and Dorian David Altamont." The Ritual, no. 19 (1997): 68.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES -- ANDREWS, VAL (18)

4474. Arthur, Joanna. "Review--Sherlock Holmes and the Man Who Lost Himself by Val Andrews." The Ritual, no. 20 (1997): 57-58.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4475. Ashworth, Peter. "Review--The Torment of Sherlock Holmes by Val Andrews." The Ritual, no. 26 (2000): 68.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4476. Fell, Christine. "Review--Sherlock Holmes and the Circus of Fear by Val Andrews." The Ritual, no. 20 (1997):

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

58-59.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4477. Gunson, Eilidh. "Review--Sherlock Holmes and the Theatre of Death by Val Andrews." The Ritual, no. 21 (1998): 74-75.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4478. Hall, John. "Review--Sherlock Holmes and the Egyptian Hall Adventure by Val Andrews." The Ritual, no. 20 (1997): 60-61.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4479. Hobbs, Don. "Review--Sherlock Holmes and the Circus of Fear by Val Andrews." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 3 (2000): 12-13.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4480. ———. "Review--Sherlock Holmes and the Holborn Emporium by Val Andrews." The Holmes & Watson Report 5, no. 5 (2001): 4.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4481. ———. "Review--Sherlock Holmes and the Longacre Vampire by Val Andrews." The Holmes & Watson Report 5, no. 5 (2001): 33.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4482. ———. "Review--Sherlock Holmes and the Sandringham House Mystery by Val Andrews." The Holmes & Watson Report 3, no. 2 (1999): 16.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4483. ———. "Review--Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Seven by Val Andrews." The Holmes & Watson Report 6, no. 1 (2002): 17.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4484. ———. "Review--Sherlock Holmes and the Theatre of Death by Val Andrews." The Holmes & Watson Report 3, no. 2 (1999): 33.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4485. ———. "Review--Sherlock Holmes and the Tomb of Terror by Val Andrews." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 4 (2000): 35.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4486. ———. "Review--Sherlock Holmes at the Varieties by Val Andrews." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 4 (2000): 32.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4487. ———. "Review--Sherlock Holmes on the Western Front by Val Andrews." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 4 (2000): 25.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4488. ———. "Review--The Torment of Sherlock Holmes by Val Andrews." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 6 (2001): 7.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4489. Johns, Ray. "Review--'Sherlock Holmes and the Greyfriars School Mystery' by Val Andrews." The Ritual, no. 21 (1998): 73-74.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4490. Michael, Patrick. "Review--'Sherlock Holmes at the Varieties' by Val Andrews." The Ritual, no. 27 (2001): 62-63.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4491. Vicarel, Jo Ann. "Sherlock Holmes and the Brighton Pavilion Mystery." Library Journal 132, no. 10 (2007): 97-97.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents a review of the book "Sherlock Holmes and the Brighton Pavilion Mystery," by Val Andrews.

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES -- B (11)

4492. "New books." Physics Today 50, no. 9 (1997): 74.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Introduces several books on Materials Science, Nonlinear Science and Chaos, Nuclear Physics and other topics in physics. Includes The Strange Case of Mrs. Hudson's Cat and Other Science Mysteries Solved by Sherlock Holmes. C. Bruce. Helix Books (Addison-Wesley), Reading, Mass., 1997. 254 pp. $23.00 hc ISBN 0-201-46139-0
4493. Arney, Chris. "Conned Again Watson!" Mathematics and Computer Education 39, no. 2 (2005): 160-161.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book Conned Again, Watson!: Cautionary Tales of Logic, Math, and Probability by Colin Bruce (Cambridge, MA: Perseus Publishing, 2001), 290 pp.
4494. Ballew, William. "Review--The Strange Case of Mrs. Hudson's Cat and Other Mysteries Solved by Sherlock Holmes by Colin Bruce." The Holmes & Watson Report 1, no. 4 (1997): 18-19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4495. Dorey, Helen. "Review--'The Strange Adventures of Charlotte Holmes, Sister of the More Famous Sherlock' by Hilary Bailey." The Musgrave Papers, no. 7 (1994): 117-119.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4496. Hobbs, Don. "Review--The Haunting of Torre Abbey by Carole Bugge." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 3 (2000): 13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4497. ———. "Review--The Secret of Sherlock Holmes by Gary F. Boothe." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 3 (2000): 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4498. Kamsar, Joseph. "Reviews." Science Teacher 65, no. 2 (1998): 78.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book, The Strange Case of Mrs. Hudson's Cat and Other Science Mysteries Solved by Sherlock Holmes, by Colin Bruce.
4499. Klett, Rex E. "Book reviews: Fiction." Library Journal 123, no. 1 (1998): 148.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book The Star of India, by Carole Bugge. (St. Martin's. c.208p. ISBN 0-31218-034-9. $21.95) "In an addition to the Sherlock Holmes saga that seems likely to succeed, Holmes displays his legendary powers of observation, and Watson unwittingly aids the bad guys. The story revolves around a beautiful woman and her expensive perfume, a missing fabled gemstone, and the return from certain death of Holmes's nemesis, Dr. Moriarty. First novelist Bugge captures the essence of Holmes as well as the spirit of the time. For all Sherlock fans."
4500. Motyka, John, and Gerald Jonas. "Books in brief: Fiction." New York Times Book Review 147, no. 50936 (1997): 23.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several fiction titles. 'The Englishman's Boy,' by Guy Vanderhaeghe; 'Pure Slaughter Value,' by Robert Bingham; 'A Gracious Plenty,' by Sheri Reynolds; 'The Strange Case of Mrs. Hudson's Cat and Other Science Mysteries Solved by Sherlock Holmes,' by Colin Bruce; 'A Jewish Mother From Berlin and Susanna,' by Gertrude Kolmar.

4501. Petocz, Peter, and Eric Sowe. "Statistical Diversions." Teaching Statistics 29, no. 2 (2007): 60-64.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses the issues of undergraduate students learning statistics. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...For further interesting reading on the gambler's fallacy and the law of small numbers, we suggest...Bruce, C (2002), 'The Case of the Gambling Nobleman', in his Conned Again, Watson! Cautionary Tales of Logic, Maths, and Probability, UK: Vintage. In this Sherlock Holmes pastiche the gambler's fallacy comes under scrutiny...."

4502. Sveum, Richard J. "100 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 3, no. 3 (1999): 2.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on John Kendrick Bangs, his connections with Doyle, and some of his writings from 1899. These include The Dreamers, A Club and "Sherlock Holmes Again" in Harpers Weekly.

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES -- BARRETT, TRACY (4)

4503. "Children's Books for Spring." Publishers Weekly 255, no. 7 (2008): 27-116.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // List includes Nancy Springer's The Case of the Bizarre Bouquets (the Enola Holmes Mysteries) ($14.99, 9-up); The Boy Sherlock Holmes continues with Death in the Air by Shane Peacock ($19.95, 10-14); The Sherlock Files debuts with The 100-Year-Old Secret by Tracy Barrett ($15.95.8-12).

4504. Cruze, Karen. "The 100-Year-Old Secret." Booklist 105, no. 4 (2008): 81.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "The 100-Year-Old Secret" by Tracy Barrett. Read by David Pittu. 2008. 3hr. Listening Library, CD, $24 (9780739367636). Gr. 4-6. "This first Sherlock Files mystery-series title rests on the conceit that 12-year-old Xena Holmes and her 10-year-old brother, Xander, are direct descendants of Sherlock Holmes. Transplanted to England with their parents, the American sleuths investigate an unsolved Sherlock Holmes case involving a missing painting.... A fun, fast listen for young mystery lovers."

4505. Kosiorek, Kathryn. "The 100-Year-Old Secret." School Library Journal 54, no. 6 (2008): 134-134.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The 100-Year-Old Secret," by Tracy Barrett. "Detective stories derived from the adventures of Sherlock Holmes are well represented in juvenile literature from Donald Sobol's 'Encyclopedia Brown' series to Nancy Springer's 'Enola Holmes' mysteries. Welcome 12-year-old Xena Holmes and her brother, Xander, Sherlock's great-great-great grandchildren, newly arrived in London from Florida....The main characters are observant, bright, and gifted with powers of deduction. Watson's great-great-great grandson, Andrew, is integral to the plot. Some clues seem to be obvious, but they can lead to a wrong conclusion. A well-paced beginning to a new series."

4506. Romriell, Deanna. "The 100-Year-Old Secret: The Sherlock Files, Book 1." School Library Journal 54, no. 10 (2008): 74-74.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A review of the CD release of the audio book "The 100-Year-Old Secret: The Sherlock Files, Book 1," by Tracy Barrett, is presented. (unabr.). 3 CDs. 5:50 hrs. Prod. by Listening Library. Dist. by Listening Library/Books on Tape. 2008. ISBN 978-0-7393-6763-6. $24. "Shortly after 12-year-old Xena and her younger brother Xander move with their parents to London from Florida, they discover that they are the direct descendents of Sherlock Holmes and they receive his notebook of unsolved cases in this first title (Holt, 2008) in the series by Tracy Barrett....Likeable characters, an intriguing premise, and references to original Sherlock Holmes stories combine for a fun telling. David Pittu does a laudable job reading the tale and has an excellent sense of timing. He gives each character a unique voice and brings the various personalities to life. An enjoyable beginning to a new series."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES -- BRANDRETH, GYLES (13)

4507. "Fall 2008 Trade Paperbacks." Publishers Weekly 255, no. 26 (2008): 122-157.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews several books including Oscar Wilde and a Game Called Murder (Touchstone, Sept., $14) by Gyles Brandreth. "Imagines Wilde as a detective aided by Arthur Conan Doyle."
4508. "Oscar Wilde and a Death of No Importance." Kirkus Reviews 76, no. 4 (2008): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Oscar Wilde and a Death of No Importance," by Gyles Brandreth. Includes passing references to Doyle. "...When a beautiful boy of the streets is brutally murdered and then his body disappears, Wilde enlists the investigative help of Robert Sherard, his faithful biographer, and Arthur Conan Doyle, a brilliant young author Wilde has just met. 'The challenge--and the excitement--has been to create a truthful portrait of Wilde, an atmospheric evocation of London and Paris in the late 1880s and an exciting murder mystery all at the same time,' says the author. 'Being a biographer has helped, I think. I want my portrait of Oscar Wilde--and Conan Doyle and their circle--to be accurate, truthful, human, sometime humorous and revealing.'..."
4509. "Oscar Wilde and a Death of No Importance." Publishers Weekly 254, no. 40 (2007): 38-38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Short review of the book by Gyles Brandreth (Touchstone), $14 paper (368p) ISBN 978-1-4168-3483-9 with a passing reference to Doyle. "Oscar Wilde makes a stylish sleuth in this is clever series debut from Brandreth, a British author best known as a biographer (John Gielgud: An Actor's Life, etc.). Narrating the tale from his old age, poet Robert Sherard enjoys recalling the summer of 1889, when his friend Wilde was still celebrated and happily married. After discovering the butchered body of handsome young Billy Wood, Wilde fetches Sherard and his new friend Arthur Conan Doyle, but upon returning to the scene, they find neither body nor blood...."
4510. "Oscar Wilde and a Death of no Importance." Kirkus Reviews 75, no. 23 (2007): 1220-1220.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Oscar Wilde and a Death of No Importance," by Gyles Brandreth.
4511. "Oscar Wilde and a Game Called Murder." Publishers Weekly 255, no. 27 (2008): 40-40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Oscar Wilde and a Game Called Murder," by Gyles Brandreth. "...At a May 1892 meeting of the Socrates Club, a group founded by Wilde and including such luminaries as Arthur Conan Doyle and Bram Stoker, the members play 'murder,' a game that involves writing the name of a 'victim' on a piece of paper and trying to guess who chose whom and why...."
4512. "Oscar Wilde and a Game Called Murder." Kirkus Reviews 76, no. 14 (2008): 43-43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Oscar Wilde and a Game Called Murder," by Gyles Brandreth. "As in Oscar Wilde and a Death of No Importance (2008), he enlists the assistance of Doyle, who ironically plays Watson to the playwright's Holmes."
4513. Fletcher, Connie. "Oscar Wilde and a Death of No Importance." Booklist 104, no. 5 (2007): 29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "Oscar Wilde and a Death of No Importance" by Gyles Brandreth. "In this wow of a history-mystery, Brandreth (a former MP, BBC broadcaster, and biographer) gives us nothing less than the most credible Sherlock Holmes since the master of deductive reasoning toppled into Reichenbach Falls--except the uncannily brilliant sleuth is not Holmes but Oscar Wilde. Wilde gets to demonstrate his Holmesian knack for discovering the telling detail to his new friend Arthur Conan Doyle, whose recent 'Study in Scarlet' has skyrocketed him to fame. The mystery that engages Wilde is the murder of a 16-year-old artists' model and male prostitute, Billy Wood (whose demise was the inspiration for The Portrait of Dorian Gray), with whom Wilde had an appointment. Wilde discovers the naked body of the model in the middle of a squalid flat; when he, enlisting Doyle as witness, returns later, the scene has been entirely cleaned and the body removed...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4514. ———. "Oscar Wilde and a Game Called Murder." Booklist 104, no. 22 (2008): 46-47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "Oscar Wilde and a Game Called Murder" by Gyles Brandreth. "...Brandreth heightens the effect by having one of Wilde's friends, Arthur Conan Doyle, play the role of dumbfounded Watson to Wilde's brilliant Sherlock. Sharing the Watson role is narrator-poet Robert Sherard, who writes of Wilde's exploits..."
4515. Gunn, Drewey Wayne. "Oscar Wilde and a Death of no Importance." Lambda Book Report 16, no. 1 (2008): 24-24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Oscar Wilde and a Death of No Importance," by Gyles Brandreth.
4516. ———. "Oscar Wilde and a Game Called Murder." Lambda Book Report 16, no. 3 (2008): 31-31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Oscar Wilde and a Game Called Murder," by Gyles Brandreth. Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Since another one of the main characters is Arthur Conan Doyle, Sherlock Holmes fans get the added pleasure of an extended conceit that some of Oscar's best lines become the source for dialogue Holmes will subsequently deliver in Doyle's stories...."
4517. Jackson, Lorne. "Wilde about Oscar; book of the week, Oscar Wilde and the Ring of Death by Gyles Brandreth." Sunday Mercury, May 25, 2008: 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "He's a legendary former resident of Baker Street. An eccentric Englishman with a great nose for crime and a highly distinctive dress sense. However, he doesn't wear a deer-stalker hat or puff a pipe. This bloke is famous for his woolly jumpers. Gyles Brandreth is his name, not Sherlock Holmes. Perhaps you only know the plummy-voiced TV presenter because of his residency in Dictionary Corner in Countdown. Or for his less than distinguished career in the Nineties as a Tory whip in the ailing government of John Major. But Brandreth is also an author, and has just published the second book in a highly-polished series of detective novels starring none other than Oscar Wilde...."
4518. Picker, Leonard. "Call of the Wilde." Publishers Weekly 255, no. 28 (2008): 46-46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Gyles Brandreth, a former MP and an Oscar Wilde biographer, delivers his second mystery to feature Wilde as a Holmesian detective, Oscar Wilde and a Game Called Murder. A brief interview with the author that includes references to Doyle and Holmes.
4519. Vicarel, Jo Ann. "Oscar Wilde and a Death of No Importance." Library Journal 132, no. 18 (2007): 48-48.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Oscar Wilde and a Death of No Importance," by Gyles Brandreth. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. Brandreth, Gyles. Oscar Wilde and a Death of No Importance. Touchstone: S. & S. Jan. 2008. c.347p. ISBN 978-1-4165-3483-9. pap. $14. "In 1889 London, writer Oscar Wilde finds the corpse of a male artist's model in a house used by men for assignations. Wilde later returns with friends Robert Sherard and Arthur Conan Doyle, but the body has vanished, the room cleaned, and the police declare that nothing has happened...."

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES -- C
(6)

4520. Hobbs, Don. "Review--Every Dark Cloud by David Coker." The Holmes & Watson Report 2, no. 3 (1998): 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4521. ———. "Review--The Case of the Reluctant Agent by Tracy Cooper-Posey." The Holmes & Watson Report 6, no. 6 (2003): 10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4522. ———. "Review--The Elementary Cases of Sherlock Holmes by Ian Charnock." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 2 (2000): 18.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4523. Hoffert, Barbara. "Prepub Alert." Library Journal 133, no. 1 (2008): 58-64.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews several fiction books including Capuzzo, Michael. The Murder Room: The Heirs of Sherlock Holmes Gather To Solve the World's Most Perplexing Cold Cases. Gotham: Penguin Group (USA). May 2008. 384p. ISBN 978-1-59240-142-0. $27.50. "Capuzzo investigates the Vidocq Society (named for Eugène François Vidocq, the first modern detective), which gathers in Philadelphia to solve ice-cold cases. He'll tour cities featured in the book."

4524. Klett, Rex E., and Barbara Hoffert. "Book reviews: Fiction." Library Journal 123, no. 2 (1998): 116.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book Barker Street Regulars, by Susan Conant. (Doubleday. Mar. 1998. c.262p. ISBN 0-385-48668-5. $29.95.) "Conant's following will enjoy series sleuth Holly Winter's latest outing with malamutes Rowdy and Kimi. Rowdy's work as a therapy dog for a Sherlock Holmes fan at a local nursing home ultimately involves Holly in another case of murder."

4525. Wright, Henry James. "Review--'Watson's Last Case' by Ian Charnock." The Ritual, no. 27 (2001): 60-61.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES -- CARR, CALEB (22)

4526. "Caleb Carr." Entertainment Weekly, no. Issue 227 (1994): 48.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Cites author Caleb Carr's book preferences, with a passing reference to Holmes. "When people leave me alone long enough, I read [a] big, two-volume collection of Sherlock Holmes."

4527. "The Italian Secretary: A Further Adventure of Sherlock Holmes." Publishers Weekly 252, no. 14 (2005): 44.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "The Italian Secretary: A Further Adventure of Sherlock Holmes," by Caleb Carr, with an afterword by Jon Lellenberg.

4528. "The List." Rolling Stone 973, no. (2005): 35.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents current developments in the field of mass media in the United States. Includes the observation in the list: "Extreme Victorian makeover! Alienist author Caleb Carr brings his twisted eye for historical detail to the Sherlock Holmes franchise in The Italian Secretary (due out May 10th), which takes the coke-addled sleuth to the streets of Scotland."

4529. Adams, Michael. "Audio." Library Journal 131, no. 5 (2006): 108-110.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An annotated directory of audiobooks is provided including Carr, Caleb. The Italian Secretary: A Further Adventure of Sherlock Holmes. 4 cassettes, unabridged. 7 hrs. S. & S. Audio. 2005. ISBN 0-7435-5003-X [ISBN 978-0-7435-5003-1]. $26. "When two men are killed during the renovation of the royal palace at Holyrood in Scotland, Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson are summoned. Mycroft Holmes, the famous detective's brother, is a trusted advisor to Queen Victoria and wants to prevent a possible assassination attempt. Clues point to the involvement of David Rizzio, but the Italian secretary of Mary, Queen of Scots, was murdered at Holyrood 300 years earlier. Carr seems a natural to try his hand at a Holmes adventure since the psychologist hero of The Alienist, his best-known novel, uses methods similar to those of the consulting detective. As with The Alienist, this book offers plenty of period detail and is written in a slightly stiff style, approximating that of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Carr's Sherlock seems a bit vague, with Watson and Mycroft being much more specific and interesting. Simon Prebble, one of the best readers of mysteries, employs a variety of voices and accents to heighten the Victorian verisimilitude. Recommended for all popular collections."

4530. ———. "The Italian Secretary: A Further Adventure of Sherlock Holmes." Library Journal 131, no. 5 (2006): 108-108.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the audiobook "The Italian Secretary: A Further Adventure of

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Sherlock Holmes," by Caleb Carr.

4531. Baker, John F. "Hot Deals." Publishers Weekly 251, no. 50 (2004): 12-12.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents news briefs on deals between authors and publishers in the U.S. as of December 13, 2004. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...Military historian and novelist Caleb Carr is writing his next novel, a Sherlock Holmes tale involving murder in the entourage of Queen Victoria, for Carroll & Graf, where Will Balliett bought North American rights from agent Suzanne Gluck at William Morris; it's called The Italian Secretary and will appear in May..."

4532. Forbes, Steve. "Two Holmes Runs." Forbes 177, no. 6 (2006): 32-32.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article presents reviews for two books entitled "The Italian Secretary: A Further Adventure of Sherlock Holmes," by Caleb Carr and "Holmes on the Range," by Steve Hockensmith.

4533. Goodwin, Karin. "Holmes returns for case at Holyrood." Sunday Times (London), June 19, 2005: 13.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The deer-stalker has been dusted off, the pipe packed and the magnifying glass polished. Sherlock Holmes is to make his first official return to the printed page since the death of his Scottish creator 75 years ago. In what Sir Arthur Conan Doyle might have called The Case of the Homecoming Hero, the sleuth investigates his first murder in Scotland. The Italian Secretary, written by the American thriller writer and historian Caleb Carr, is the first novel to be commissioned by the Conan Doyle estate...."

4534. Hargreaves, Tracy. "'We Other Victorians': Literary Victorian Afterlives." Journal of Victorian Culture 13, no. 2 (2008): 278-286.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The article explores how 20th century writers have portrayed Victorians and the Victorian period. It examines the works of authors such as Virginia Woolfe and John Galsworthy and discusses the social, political and family issues that were raised in the 20th century regarding life in the Victorian period. It discusses the representation of Victorian life on television in the 1950s and 1960s and what the afterlife of the Victorian period has allowed social and cultural commentators to reexamine about the values and morals of the Victorians." Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...The classic text has been re-imagined.... Emily Brontë resurfaces in Jane Urquhart's Changing Heaven: A Novel, Clare Boylan's Emma Brown: A Novel From the Unfinished Manuscript of Charlotte Bronte appeared in 2004, Maryse Conde transplants Wuthering Heights to Windward Heights, Emma Tennant imagines Heathcliff's Tale, Caleb Carr and Jamyang Norbu add to the Sherlock Holmes canon (The Italian Secretary: A Further Adventure of Sherlock Holmes and Sherlock Holmes: The Missing Years respectively) as of course did Julian Barnes in Arthur and George. Wilkie Collins and Charles Dickens were intertextually present in Sarah Waters' Fingersmith...."

4535. Herman, Carol. "Sherlock in Scotland." The Washington Times, June 5, 2005: B08.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Google Sherlock Holmes and you'll find 1,460,000 entries to choose from. The vaunted detective has lived so far beyond the original four novels and 56 short stories in which he sleuthed and disarmed that it is hard to fathom how it will all end for him, if it ever does.... Sherlock Holmes prospered for almost 30 years more in Conan Doyle's work and to varying degrees ever after in the work of others. Readers can find him in countless parodies... But there are also the pastiches. For these, the stakes are considerably higher because, among other things, they have been devised with the idea of matching or extending the original vision of their creator. This takes chutzpah. Or, in the case of Caleb Carr, author of the bestselling novel The Alienist, what it seems to have taken is a direct invitation from the Conan Doyle estate. And chutzpah. So, how does The Italian Secretary: A Further Adventures of Sherlock Holmes measure up? Well, it turns out that the book is very smart and entertaining and, most importantly, Mr. Carr returns the super sleuth to a challenge that is worthy of him...."

4536. Klinger, Leslie S. "Review: The Italian Secretary, by Caleb Carr." Los Angeles Times, May 8, 2005: 6.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // In Books section.

4537. Martinez, Susan B. "The Old Enemy." Journal of Religion & Psychical Research 28, no. 4 (2005): 205-217.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An intensive study of MPD (multiple personality disorder) has spilled over into other areas of mental aberration (obsession, possession, criminology, etc.) -- with a common link that goes

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- beyond childhood abuse. Case studies reveal that religious mania and the idee fixe play a significant part in warping the vulnerable mind. We look to the family background -- but also beyond it -- to the excarnate intruders who prey upon mortal minds in disruption. Deceit, control -- even bondage -- are the inevitable themes explored in this investigation of "inexplicable" human behavior. [Abstract from author]. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Where the patient is TELLING us something meaningful, we must not dismiss it as fantasy or quirk, 'It is remarkable, gentlemen, how often clues are mistaken for riddles' -- Sherlock Holmes (as portrayed by Caleb Carr in The Italian Secretary, p. 11... '
4538. Memmott, Carol. "Holmes resurfaces in two new tales." USA Today, April 21, 2005: D4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle has been dead for nearly 75 years, but his most famous literary creation, Sherlock Holmes, lives on as never before. Two critically acclaimed authors, Caleb Carr and Mitch Cullin, are following in Conan Doyle's foot-steps by placing Holmes and his loyal friend Dr. Watson at the center of their new novels...."
4539. Riippa, Laurele, and Robert Dahlin. "Hardcover Fiction/General and Short Stories." Publishers Weekly 252, no. 4 (2005): 144-150.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents several books including The Italian Secretary (May, $25) by Caleb Carr. "The author of The Alienist returns with Sherlock Holmes and Watson investigating a pair of gruesome murders." A Slight Trick of the Mind (Apr., $23.95) by Mitch Cullin "probes beneath the cool facade of Sherlock Holmes to reveal his hidden past."
4540. Samson, Antonio R. "Fence Sitter." BusinessWorld, July 11, 2005: 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Certain serial characters like James Bond live on in sequels that more modern authors have been authorized by the estate to take on. Even Victor Hugo's Cosette and Margaret Mitchell's Scarlet O'Hara have been resurrected in sequels. But no other character fascinates mystery writers more than Sherlock Holmes....Caleb Carr's The Italian Secretary (2005, 266 pages) hews more closely to the Sherlock Holmes "canon." This canon consists of the Doyle's Sherlock Holmes character in the complete stories which define his mannerisms, history, approach, and partnership with Watson whom he first met in A Study in Scarlet. Thus, continuing the character beyond the life of the original author needs a familiarity, if not intimate knowledge, of who Sherlock Holmes is...."
4541. Samul, Ron. "The Italian Secretary: A Further Adventure of Sherlock Holmes." Library Journal 130, no. 7 (2005): 74.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "The Italian Secretary: A Further Adventure of Sherlock Holmes," by Caleb Carr.
4542. Skow, John. "A case for Sherlock Freud." Time 143, no. 16 (1994): 74.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews Caleb Carr's novel 'The Alienist,' a good psychological thriller and a remarkable time machine voyage. Carr's story is so well told that Paramount has paid $500,000 for the film rights, but it is his ability to re-create the past that is truly impressive. No reference to Holmes beyond title.
4543. Stoffman, Judy. "There's still smoke in Sherlock's pipe." The Toronto Star, April 30, 2005: H02.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A short profile and review of Caleb Carr's The Italian Secretary.
4544. Teeman, Tim. "Sherlock Holmes." The Times (London), December 11, 2004: 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The Conan Doyle estate has given its approval to a novel called The Italian Secretary by Caleb Carr, author of The Alienist, in which two royal servants die, with echoes of the murder of a confidante of Mary, Queen of Scots 300 years earlier."
4545. Trone, Mary C. "Mystery; [Metro Edition]." Star Tribune (Minneapolis), Dec 12, 1994: 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A Small Sacrifice by Ellen Hart (Seal Press, $20.95) and Once Upon a Crime by M.D. Lake (Avon, $4.99) are both by local authors, continuing two series that feature Twin Cities' protagonists. Hart's Jane Lawless is a restaurateur and amateur sleuth who's called on to find a killer among her friend Cordelia's reunited college chums. Lake's campus cop, Peggy O'Neill, seeks a wolf disguised as a lamb

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

during a Hans Christian Andersen conference at the university.; Sins of the Wolf by Anne Perry (Fawcett, $20), The Alienist by Caleb Carr (Random House, $22) and Laurie R. King's The Beekeeper's Apprentice (St. Martin's Press, $21.95) are all outstanding period mysteries. Perry returns to Victorian London; Carr takes readers back to New York City in the 1890s, and King provides Sherlock Holmes with a young woman sidekick to liven up his retirement.

4546. Zaleski, Jeff. "Returning to Holmes." Publishers Weekly 252, no. 16 (2005): 36-36.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Interviews mystery fiction writer Caleb Carr. Background of his book "The Italian Secretary: A Further Adventure of Sherlock Holmes"; Reasons behind the interest shown by mystery writers in the literary works of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle; His views on the tendency of readers to expect conspiracies in mystery stories.

4547. Zeitchik, Steven. "Books on the Side." Publishers Weekly 252, no. 10 (2005): 20-20.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the reasons of authors for doing side projects with other publishers while maintaining a publishing contract. Projects of author Caleb Carr for Carroll & Graf and Random House; Reaction of Scribner, publisher of King, on the decision of King to write a book for Hard Case Crime; Reason of author Stephen King for agreeing to do a book for Hard Case Crime. Includes passing references to Holmes. "...But the issue of publisher reaction begs the larger question: in this era of unprecedented reward and resources for celebrity authors, what makes one want to jump in the first place? For some, of course, it's the chance to step out of the limelight and into a more free-spirited space, the literary equivalent of putting on a Halloween costume. 'There's a lot less weight of expectation,' said Carr agent Suzanne Gluck, referring to her client's C&G book, a Sherlock Holmes mystery in the voice of Dr. Watson....C&G is a Holmes hotbed in a way Random could never be...."

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES --
CARR, JOHN DICKSON (1)

4548. Strout, Cushing. "Theatrical Magic and the Novel." Sewanee Review 111, no. 1 (2003): 169.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the use of theatrical magic in more serious forms of the novel. Affinity between classic fictional methods of detection and theatrical methods of deception; Use of theatrical magic in novels such as 'The Magician's Wife,' by Brian Moore, 'The Houdini Girl,' by Martyn Bedford and 'The Magician's Assistant,' by Ann Patchett. Includes references to Doyle and John Dickson Carr.

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES -- CHABON, MICHAEL (18)

4549. Cahill, Bryon. "Michael Chabon: A writer with many faces." Writing 27, no. 6 (2005): 16-19.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article focuses on writer Michael Chabon and includes a reference to Holmes. "...I asked him if he could pinpoint a time in his life when he knew that he wanted to be a writer. He said that when he was just 10 years old, he had to write a short story for a class assignment. The result was a tale about Sherlock Holmes. It was a grand success, receiving an A and flattering kudos from his parents. Interestingly, 30 prolific years later, Chabon's most recent book, The Final Solution, is a novella centered on the character of Holmes as an old man (though the author never actually names the famous detective)...."

4550. Carter, Adrienne, Jonah Freedman, Megan Johnston, Tara Kalwarski, and Stephanie D. Smith. "Book Picks." Money 33, no. 12 (2004): 152.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This article recommends several books for holiday gift-giving. Picks by Todd Stewart and Bridget Warren. "The Complete Aubrey/Maturin Novels," by Patrick O'Brian. Last year's "Master and Commander" film spawned a whole new set of rabid fans of O'Brian's 20-book series of sea adventures. "McSweeney's Enchanted Chamber of Astonishing Stories," edited by Michael Chabon. This "pulp fiction" collection includes tales from Stephen King, Margaret Atwood and Joyce Carol Oates. "The New Annotated

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- Sherlock Holmes." Dr. Watson, Moriarty, the hound: All here in a two-volume illustrated collection of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's 56 detective stories...."
4551. Dahlin, Robert, Natalie Danford, Charles Hix, Karole Riippa, and Laurele Riippa. "Fall 2004 Hardcovers: Fiction/General & Collections." Publishers Weekly 251, no. 32 (2004): 157-161.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features several fiction books, including a Holmesian title. "The Final Solution (Dec., $16.95) by Michael Chabon turns to the great master of detection: Sherlock Holmes. 60,000 first printing."
4552. Davis, Alan. "Road Trips." Hudson Review 58, no. 2 (2005): 344-351.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Critiques several novels including 'The Final Solution,' by Michael Chabon. Includes reference to Holmes.
4553. Davis, J. Madison. "Mix and Match: Michael Chabon's Imaginative Use of Genre." World Literature Today 82, no. 6 (2008): 9-11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A literary criticism of the book "The Yiddish Policemen's Union," by Michael Chabon is presented. The author comments on how Chabon writes novels that present variations on popular genres. The author discusses how the book combines elements and archetypes of mystery novels with an alternate history and comments on surreal elements of the book's plot.
4554. Deresiewicz, William. "The Imaginary Jew." Nation 284, no. 21 (2007): 44-48.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the books "The Yiddish Policemen's Union," by Michael Chabon, and "The Ministry of Special Cases," by Nathan Englander. Includes a reference to his Holmes title. "...Chabon's detective novella The Final Solution centers on the relationship between a young German-Jewish refugee and Sherlock Holmes...."
4555. Donahue, Deirdre. "'Union': Original but overwrought." USA Today, May 1, 2007: D4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of The Yiddish Policemen's Union by Michael Chabon. HarperCollins, 414 pp., $26.95. Other works listed, including The Final Solution. "The 2004 novella features an elderly Sherlock Holmes."
4556. Francken, James. "This Month's Choice." The Daily Telegraph (London), February 5, 2005: 10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "In 'The Final Problem', an ingenious short story by Arthur Conan Doyle, Sherlock Holmes plunges over the Reichenbach Falls, locked in the grip of his nemesis - Professor Moriarty. Does Holmes survive? Conan Doyle's story never lets on. But in The Final Solution, the dazzling new novella by Michael Chabon - this month's choice for the Daily Telegraph Book Club - we are given an answer...."
4557. Grossman, Lev. "The Genius Who Wanted to Be a Hack." Time 170, no. 19 (2007): 74.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A book review is presented of "Gentlemen of the Road," by Michael Chabon. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "In the past eight years Michael Chabon, who is probably the premiere prose stylist--the Updike--of his generation, has written a novel about superhero comics; a fantasy tale; a mystery starring an old man who may or may not be Sherlock Holmes; and a pulp crime book set in an alternate time...."
4558. Henderson, Eleanor. "From Pittsburgh to Sitka." Virginia Quarterly Review 83, no. 3 (2007): 248-257.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The Yiddish Policemen's Union," by Michael Chabon. Includes passing references to Doyle and Holmes.
4559. Hobbs, Don. "Review--The Final Solution by Michael Chabon." The Holmes & Watson Report 8, no. 6 (2005): 14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4560. Hoberek, Andrew. "Introduction: After Postmodernism." Twentieth Century Literature 53, no. 3 (2007): 233-247.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses various reports published within the issue including one by Jeremy Green on declarations of postmodernism's demise and another by Minsoo Kang on the sign of an intellectual idea's final demise. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...We can see in this example a continuity with the postmodern project as it works its way back and forth between the production and criticism of fiction: postmodern fiction's openness to mass culture begets the culturalist turn in criticism which begets not only the opening of the canon but also the expansion of what counts as literature in the present. Among younger authors this shift can be quite self-conscious. Thus Michael Chabon argues--at the same time that his fiction progresses from the early novels of alienated middle-class life through the transitional The Amazing Adventures of Kavalier and Clay (2001) to The Final Solution (2005), a novella featuring an unnamed but recognizable Sherlock Holmes, and his own alternate history The Yiddish Policemen's Union (2007)--that serious authors should return to genre fiction as an antidote to the dominance of 'the contemporary, quotidian, plotless, moment-of-truth revelatory story' (6), a form he understands not as essentially literary but as itself a genre contingently elevated to high cultural status...."

4561. K, S. "The Final Solution (Book)." People 62, no. 24 (2004): 58-58.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "The Final Solution," by Michael Chabon.

4562. Kingsbury, Pam. "Maps and Legends: Essays on Reading and Writing Along the Borderlands." Library Journal 133, no. 5 (2008): 72-72.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Maps and Legends: Essays on Reading and Writing Along the Borderlands," by Michael Chabon. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "In his first work of nonfiction, Pulitzer Prize-winning author Chabon (The Amazing Adventures of Kavalier & Clay) tells readers of some of the books that have helped shape his writing career. Among his loves: F. Scott Fitzgerald's The Great Gatsby, Philip Roth's Goodbye, Columbus, Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes mysteries, and various comic strips and ghost stories...."

4563. Miller, Laura. "Zelig on Baker Street." New York Times Book Review 154, no. 52998 (2004): 31-31.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an essay on Sherlock Holmes and his many resurrections since his invention some 150 years ago. Contention that the book "Curious Incident of the Dog in the Night-Time," by Mark Haddon, not only gets its title from author Arthur Conan Doyle but also parallels the way that trusty Watson could notice facts without grasping their meaning; "The Hamilton Case," by Michelle de Kretser which also makes mention of Holmes; "Final Solution," by Michael Chabon where an elderly unnamed man (suggested to be Holmes) is brought out of retirement to solve a case; Criticism of "The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes" edited by Leslie S. Klinger who is a confirmed Sherlockian; How the campiness of the stories remains a winning feature after all this time.

4564. Myers, D. G. "Michael Chabon's Imaginary Jews." Sewanee Review 116, no. 4 (2008): 572-588.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents a biography of Michael Chabon, author of novels focused on the modern Jewish tradition. "...The Final Solution tried to combine Sherlock Holmes with a Holocaust narrative; and, if passionate readers of Doyle were unable to recognize literature's most famous detective from what passed for his reasoning, the Paris Review was impressed, awarding the novella its Aga Khan Prize for Fiction; and reviewers were too--by and large. One exception was Melvin Jules Bukiet, a ten-years-old American novelist, himself an author of Holocaust narratives, who noted that 'although the language is often luscious enough to lap up, it leaves a bad taste because Chabon uses a background of genocide for what is essentially a young adult novel or a mystery story,' Bukiet was right about the novella's effect, although its source is not Chabon's impiety toward the Holocaust, Tova Reich, another Jewish novelist, recently published an irreverent look at "Holocaust obsessiveness" (My Holocaust, 2007) that respects the event by puncturing the false pieties surrounding its remembrance. If his novella was inappropriate the reason is that Chabon had never given a moment's thought to the question of appropriateness, and not much more to what he was trying to say. His conceptions of genre and style were too rigid to allow for much beyond genre-bending and stylistic play...."

4565. Sayers, Valerie. "The Chosen Frozen." Commonweal 134, no. 16 (2007): 26-27.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The Yiddish Policemen's Union," by Michael

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Chabon. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Chabon's subsequent work continues to pair his interest in popular culture with his exploration of the twentieth century's dark history. As guest editor of a controversial 2002 issue of McSweeney's, he wrote a manifesto celebrating old-fashioned genre-driven plot, and followed that up with The Final Solution, a short novel that resurrects an aged Sherlock Holmes to solve a post-Holocaust mystery...."

4566. Seaman, Donna. "Maps and Legends: Essays on Reading and Writing along the Borderlands." Booklist 104, no. 13 (2008): 28.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "Essays on Reading and Writing along the Borderlands: Maps and Legends" by Michael Chabon. "...He offers a fresh and affecting take on Arthur Conan Doyle and pays witty and provocative tribute to M. R. James, a seemingly serene British author of superb horror and ghost stories...."

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES -- CULLIN, MITCH (10)

4567. "The Post-War Dream." Kirkus Reviews 76, no. 1 (2008): 5-5.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The Post-War Dream," by Mitch Cullin. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Cullin's fiction has ranged widely, and results have been mixed, but he seemed to have found his footing in A Slight Trick of the Mind (2005), a dazzling fictional portrayal of Sherlock Holmes in old age...."

4568. Adams, Michael. "Audio." Library Journal (1976) 130, no. 20 (2005): 183.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An annotated bibliography of fiction and nonfiction audiobooks is provided. Includes Cullin, Mitch. A Slight Trick of the Mind. 6 CDs. unabridged. 7 1/4 hrs. HighBridge Audio. 2005. ISBN 1-56511-950-9. $29.95. "Cullin takes an unusual approach to Sherlock Holmes by creating a character study of the elderly detective instead of having him solve a traditional mystery. A Slight Trick of the Mind alternates between three narratives: the 93-year-old Holmes in retirement, keeping bees at his cottage on the Sussex coast; a visit to Japan shortly after World War II; and flashbacks to a case of a missing wife years earlier. The author smoothly ties the three strands together to present Holmes's regret over his underdeveloped emotional nature. A death for which Holmes bears some responsibility results in the cold, distant old man seeking forgiveness. The sections depicting the detective in his prime and the sojourn to Japan are full of colorful period detail. Cullin's moving story of the necessity and pain of love is brilliantly handled by Simon Jones, who creates a wonderfully evocative, gruff voice for Holmes. Recommended for all collections."

4569. Baker, John F. "Hot Deals." Publishers Weekly 250, no. 45 (2003): 14-14.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Offers updates on book deals in the U.S. as of November 10, 2003 with a reference to Holmes. "A new novel that portrays Sherlock Holmes, in retirement at 93, suffering some loss of his fabled memory, uncharacteristically subject to emotion and struggling to come to terms with a mysterious case from his past, was signed as part of a two-book deal by Coates Bateman, a new editor at Nan Talese's Doubleday imprint. The author is L.A.-based Mitch Cullin, who has been a devoted Sherlockian ever since childhood, and the North American rights deal was made with agent Peter Steinberg at JCA Literary. Steinberg said that both Bateman and Talese had 'flipped' for the book, called The Moon Reflects the Sun, and offered a two-book buy, which helped clinch the deal against strong auction opposition from other publishers."

4570. Costa, Richard Hauer. "A Slight Trick of the Mind." Magill Book Reviews, no. (2005).

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Mitch Cullin has written a loving, sad tale of Sherlock Holmes in the era of Hiroshima--a Holmes who, while no longer sure of his powers, has come into his own humanity."

4571. Klinger, Leslie S. "Review: A Slight Trick of the Mind, by Mitch Cullin." Los Angeles Times, April 15, 2005: 2.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // In Books section.

4572. McCord, Jeff, and Mike Shea. "Previews + Reviews." Texas Monthly 33, no. 4 (2005): 60-60.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several books and music releases. "Black Sheep Boy," by Will Sheff and Jonathan Meiburg; "A Slight Trick of the Mind," by Mitch Cullin; "Dishing," by Liz Smith. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...Texas-raised Mitch Cullin has taken a lion-in-winter approach to the Sherlock Holmes myth, portraying the legendary sleuth as a beekeeping retiree drifting into the mists of forgetfulness on his Sussex Downs estate in Slight Trick of the Mind (Nan A. Talese/Doubleday). And he's done so in an elegantly entertaining fashion, triangulating his book between Holmes's daffy domestic concerns, a visit to post-World War II Japan, and a manuscript written by the man himself about a mystery from his heyday as an investigator. Cullin shrewdly employs young Roger, the housekeeper's son, as the device to tie the narrative together and lead it to a brilliant conclusion. Inventive and thoroughly satisfying.

4573. Memmott, Carol. "Holmes resurfaces in two new tales." USA Today, April 21, 2005: D4.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle has been dead for nearly 75 years, but his most famous literary creation, Sherlock Holmes, lives on as never before. Two critically acclaimed authors, Caleb Carr and Mitch Cullin, are following in Conan Doyle's foot-steps by placing Holmes and his loyal friend Dr. Watson at the center of their new novels...."

4574. Riippa, Laurele, and Robert Dahlin. "Hardcover Fiction/General and Short Stories." Publishers Weekly 252, no. 4 (2005): 144-150.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents several books including The Italian Secretary (May, $25) by Caleb Carr. "The author of The Alienist returns with Sherlock Holmes and Watson investigating a pair of gruesome murders." A Slight Trick of the Mind (Apr., $23.95) by Mitch Cullin "probes beneath the cool facade of Sherlock Holmes to reveal his hidden past."

4575. Sklaroff, Sara. "Read More Books." U.S. News & World Report 137, no. 23 (2004): 56-56.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Encourages people to read more books. Book titles to look for in 2005. Includes A Slight Trick of the Mind by Mitch Cullin; Nan A. Talese/Doubleday. "The legendary Sherlock Holmes is 93 and retired to a Sussex farmhouse."

4576. Wilkinson, Joanne. "The Post-War Dream." Booklist 104, no. 8 (2007): 26-27.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "The Post-War Dream" by Mitch Cullin. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "After his multifaceted fictional portrait of Sherlock Holmes, A Slight Trick of the Mind (2005), Cullin turns to a seemingly more ordinary tale of a Korean war vet haunted by both his combat experiences and the recent fatal diagnosis of his wife's ovarian cancer...."

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES -- D
(6)

4577. Dahlin, Robert, Natalie Danford, Charles Hix, Karole Riippa, and Laurele Riippa. "Fall Trade Paperbacks: Fiction/Mystery & Suspense." Publishers Weekly 251, no. 32 (2004): 206-206.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents several mystery and suspense fiction books available in the U.S. as of August 2004. Included, from Berkley Prime Crime, is Mrs. Hudson and the Spirits' Curse (Dec., $13) by Martin Davies. "[F]eatures the brilliant housekeeper for Sherlock Holmes."

4578. Hobbs, Don. "Review--Sherlock Holmes and the Alice in Wonderland Murders by Barry Day." The Holmes & Watson Report 7, no. 4 (2003): 20.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4579. Pitt, David. "Indigo Christmas." Booklist 104, no. 22 (2008): 43.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "Indigo Christmas" by Jeanne M. Dam. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Luckily, Hilda's a resourceful woman, and she soon comes up with an ingenious solution to her investigative problem, one that will, not to give too much away, be of particular interest to Sherlock Holmes fans. The novel has a suspenseful story, but, as usual, it's the characters and setting (rendered in precise but not obtrusive detail) that really capture our interest"

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4580. Samson, Antonio R. "Fence Sitter." BusinessWorld, January 28, 2008: S1/4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Box-office hit movies invite new installments to continue the narrative from where it left off. So popular are sequels that producers always look out for a 'franchise' - a succession of sequels featuring the same characters moving into different situations....Strangest of all are sequels to old classics fashioned by new authors....Then there is Michael Dibdin, a mystery writer who has created his own unforgettable detective in Aurelio Zen, an Italian sleuth struggling with the police bureaucracy and the mafia. Early in his mystery-writing career, Dibdin wrote a story featuring Sherlock Holmes. Dibdin prefaces his mystery, The Last Case of Sherlock Holmes, with a quote from Arthur Conan Doyle which purports to allow future writers to do what they wish with his immortal character, Holmes. 'Marry him, kill him, do what you want with him,' Conan Doyle is claimed to have said. Dibdin takes Conan Doyle at his word and proceeds to spin a tale of the master of deductive reasoning which is sure to upset some Sherlock Holmes fans, including this one...."
4581. ———. "Fence Sitter." BusinessWorld, June 13, 2008: S1/4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The popularity of the sequel is easy to understand. A box-office hit already contains the ingredients that have worked with the paying audience. There is a built-in following that understands the major characters. A sense of clubbiness prevails among fans who share trivial knowledge of the plot, its history, and the various characters involved. Even when new villains are matched up against the familiar hero, they exude the same evil and familiar mystique....Then there is Michael Dibdin, a mystery writer who has created an unforgettable detective in Aurelio Zen, an Italian detective struggling with the bureaucracy and the mafia. Early in his writing career, Dibdin had written a sequel of Sherlock Holmes...."
4582. Sullivan, Greg. "Review--Seventeen Steps to Slimness: A Sherlockian Diet Manual by Susan Z. Diamond." The Holmes & Watson Report 6, no. 1 (2002): 28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES -- DAVIES, DAVID STUART (4)

4583. "Without Conscience: A Johnny Hawke Novel." Publishers Weekly 255, no. 37 (2008): 48-48.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Without Conscience: A Johnny Hawke Novel," by David Stuart Davies. St. Martin's Minotaur/Dunne, $23.95 (224p) ISBN 978-0-312-38210-0. "Sherlock Holmes expert Davies relies too much on contrived plot twists in his second WWII novel to feature PI Johnny Hawke (after 2007's Forests of the Night)....Davies repeatedly sets up coincidences to advance the plot, including a link between Hawke and Jenkins that leads to Blake's being taken hostage. Those looking for a nuanced view of the English home front on a par with, say, TV's Foyle's War may be disappointed."
4584. Booth, Matthew. "Review--The Scroll of the Dead: A Sherlock Holmes Adventure by David Stuart Davies." The Ritual, no. 22 (1998): 64-65.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4585. ———. "Review--The Shadow of the Rat by David Stuart Davies." The Ritual, no. 24 (1999): 62-64.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4586. Masters, Rosalind. "Review--'The Annals of Skelington Bones: the Case of the Phantom Paperhanger of Bug Hare Hall' by David Stuart Davies." The Ritual, no. 16 (1995): 60.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES -- DOUGLAS, CAROLE NELSON (7)

4587. "Core Collection: Historical Mystery Timeline." Booklist 103, no. 17 (2007): 14-15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article presents reviews of books that are set between the year 80 BC and 1901. Includes a couple of Holmes references. "1881 Irene Adler series, by Carole Nelson Douglas (Forge). The beautiful opera singer who outwitted Sherlock Holmes takes center stage in a series of crime-solving capers....1915 Mary Russell and Sherlock Holmes series, by Laurie R. King (Bantam). The famous detective's brilliant young apprentice becomes his partner in both mystery and marriage...."
4588. "Spider Dance: A Novel of Suspense Featuring Irene Adler and Sherlock Holmes (Book)." Publishers Weekly 251, no. 48 (2004): 27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "Spider Dance: A Novel of Suspense Featuring Irene Adler and Sherlock Holmes," by Carole Nelson Douglas.
4589. Hobbs, Don. "Review--Castle Rouge by Carole Nelson Douglas." The Holmes & Watson Report 6, no. 5 (2002): 15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4590. ———. "Review--Chapel Noir by Carole Nelson Douglas." The Holmes & Watson Report 5, no. 6 (2002): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4591. ———. "Review--Femme Fatale by Carole Nelson Douglas." The Holmes & Watson Report 7, no. 6 (2004): 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4592. ———. "Sherlocking With Carole Nelson Douglas." The Holmes & Watson Report 6, no. 5 (2002): 5-10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4593. Wren, Celia. "Sherlockian Apocrypha." Commonweal 128, no. 22 (2001): 18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on several playwrights and writers who have indulged in works related to the fictitious [sic] detective Sherlock Holmes. Characters in Carole Nelson Douglas' mystery novel 'Chapel Noir'; Examples of fictional mysteries that feature historical personages.

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES -- E (1)

4594. Skoyles, Lesley. "Review--'Absolute Discretion' by Grant Eustace." The Ritual, no. 21 (1998): 69-70.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES -- F (5)

4595. "Venus on the Half-Shell and Others." Publishers Weekly 254, no. 48 (2007): 54-54.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Venus on the Half-Shell and Others," by Philip José Farmer. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. "Farmer appends his own name at last to his stories written under pen names borrowed from other authors' characters, most famously Venus on the Half-Shell, a novel allegedly by Kurt Vonnegut's fictional science fiction writer, Kilgore Trout. As Harry Manders, created by E.W. Horning, Farmer pens the suspenseful 'The Problem of the Sore Bridge--Among Others.' As Rex Stout's psychologically and physically maimed Paul Chapin, he offers the violent 'The Volcano.' A story by Harlan Ellison's Cordwainer Bird, 'The Last Rise of Nick Adams,' discloses that Bird was related to Farmerian heroes the Shadow and the Spider. Finally, after demonstrating how Tarzan might have sounded had he been written by William S. rather than Edgar Rice, Farmer dons the mantle of Conan Doyle's Dr. Watson and introduces Tarzan to Holmes in 'The Adventure of the Peerless Peer.' Only a writer as mature as Farmer could have pulled this stunt off so successfully."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4596. Hargreaves, David. "Review--'Flashman and the Tiger' by George MacDonald Fraser." The Ritual, no. 25 (2000): 61-62.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4597. Hobbs, Don. "Review--Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Three Dragons by Luke Steven Fullenkamp." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 5 (2000): 24.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4598. ———. "Review--Spanking Watson by Kinky Friedman." The Holmes & Watson Report 3, no. 5 (1999): 13.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4599. Stander, Bella, and Daisy Maryles. "Whodunit? Morrow may tell at ABA." Publishers Weekly 240, no. 20 (1993): 39.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses promotion by William Morrow and Avon Books for Mark Frost's first novel 'The List of Seven,' slated for hardcover publication in September 1993. A Victorian adventure/occult thriller featuring the young Arthur Conan Doyle; Susan Halligan, Morrow's director of advertising and promotion; More.

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES -- FAWCETT, QUINN (6)

4600. Hobbs, Don. "Review--Embassy Row by Quinn Fawcett." The Holmes & Watson Report 2, no. 6 (1999): 8.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4601. ———. "Review--The Flying Scotsman by Quinn Fawcett." The Holmes & Watson Report 3, no. 5 (1999): 26.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4602. ———. "Review--The Scottish Ploy by Quinn Fawcett." The Holmes & Watson Report 5, no. 3 (2001): 29.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4603. Michaud, Rosemary. "Review--Against the Brotherhood by Quinn Fawcett." The Holmes & Watson Report 1, no. 5 (1997): 21-22.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4604. Sullivan, Greg. "Review--The Flying Scotsman by Quinn Fawcett." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 6 (2001): 22.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4605. ———. "Review--The Scottish Ploy by Quinn Fawcett." The Holmes & Watson Report 5, no. 6 (2002): 16-17.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES --
FROST, MARK (2)

4606. "Bobbi Tichenor; [Fourth Edition]." The Oregonian (Portland, OR), December 4, 1994: F05.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Owner of Annie Bloom's Books Currently Reading: "The Art of the Personal Essay" by Phillip Lopate. Just finished "The List of Seven" by Mark Frost. What They're About: "The Art of the Personal Essay" is a collection of essays by writers starting with the Roman philosopher Seneca and including Dorothy Parker, Robert Benchley, E.B. White, Annie Dillard and many others.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4607. Hoffert, Barbara. "First novelists: What measure success?" Library Journal 119, no. 5 (1994): 43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses first novelists and presents a retrospective of last season's most promising new talents. Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes with: Frost, Mark. The List of 7. Morrow. ISBN 0-688-12245-0. $20. "In Frost's spooky retelling of the creation of Sherlock Holmes, the charismatic Jack Sparks comes to the rescue of Arthur Conan Doyle, who is being pursued by an occult group out for revenge. Morrow put plenty of time, money, and energy into promoting this book, and though it didn't break out as expected, the estimated sale of 40,000 copies is nothing to regret. Morrow bought the book as a package with Avon. which will shortly issue the paperback in a big way. And since Frost is both a director (Storyville) and screenwriter (Twin Peaks), it's no surprise that a movie is in the offing."

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES -- G
(3)

4608. Hobbs, Don. "Review--Sherlock Holmes and the Frightened Golfer by J. M. Gregson." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 4 (2000): 32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4609. Pitt, David. "Moriarty." Booklist 105, no. 6 (2008): 21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "Moriarty" by John Gardner. Nov. 2008. 320p. Harcourt/Otto Penzler, $24 (9780151012527). "More than 30 years after The Return of Moriarty (1974) and The Revenge of Moriarty (1975), the late Gardner presents a new story featuring the archnemesis of Sherlock Holmes...."
4610. Sullivan, Greg. "Review--Sherlock Holmes and the Clown Prince of London by Joe Gentile." The Holmes & Watson Report 6, no. 1 (2002): 29-30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES -- GREENBERG, MARTIN H. (5)

4611. "The Ghosts of Baker Street." Publishers Weekly 252, no. 47 (2005): 26-26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of The Ghosts of Baker Street. Edited by Martin H. Greenberg, Jon Lellenberg and Daniel Stashower (Carrol & Graf), $16.95 paper (240p) ISBN 0-7867-1400-X 4612. "A Savvy List of the Season's Best." Publishers Weekly 248, no. 33 (2001): 173.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a list of bestseller hardcovers including Carroll & Graf title Murder in Baker Street: New Tales of Sherlock Holmes (Oct., $25), edited by Martin Greenberg et al., "collects stories by Anne Perry and 10 other mystery writers."
4613. Addy, John. "Review--Sherlock Holmes in Orbit edited by Mike Resnick and Martin H. Greenberg." The Ritual, no. 16 (1995): 59-60.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4614. Hobbs, Don. "Review--More Holmes for the Holidays edited by Martin Greenberg, Jon L. Lellenberg and Carol-Lynn Waugh and The Vital Essence by David L. Hammer." The Holmes & Watson Report 3, no. 6 (2000): 14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4615. ———. "Review--Murder in Baker Street edited by Martin H. Greenberg, Jon L. Lellenberg and Daniel Stashower." The Holmes & Watson Report 7, no. 5 (2003): 23.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES -- H
(6)

4616. Burns, Ann. "Best Audiobooks of 2003." Library Journal 129, no. 3 (2004): 44-45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An annotated directory of the best audiobooks of 2003 is provided. Included is Haddon, Mark. The Curious Incident of the Dog in the Night-Time. Recorded Bks. 5 cassettes, 61/4 hrs. ISBN 1-4025-5978-X. $45. "This first novel captures 'without sentimentality the joy and pain' of a child with Asperger's syndrome. Christopher, a 15-year-old with an interest in Sherlock Holmes, tries to solve the murder of his neighbor's dog. Jeff Woodman's 'voice and tone are totally convincing as those of a working-class English adolescent.' The print version was selected as one of LJ's Best Books of 2003. (LJ 1/04)" 4617. Chatzky, Jean Sherman. "Wall Street Irregulars." Money 32, no. 1 (2003): 124.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the book 'Detective and the Investor,' by author and mutual fund manager Robert Hagstrom. Includes multiple references to Holmes.
4618. David, Grainger. "Clueing In Investors." Fortune 146, no. 13 (2002): 186-186.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an interview with Robert Hagstrom and his view of the stock market according to mystery fiction, with details of his book, "The Detective and the Investor." Includes references Holmes. "...Sherlock Holmes is the most well known and popular of the detectives. He had attributes that were identified--hold on [rustles around his office]--on page 206. He is very objective and has an unemotional viewpoint. He pays attention to detail. Finally--and this is hard for investors--he remains open to new or contrary information....There are rules of fair disclosure in investing too. With Enron, I'm not sure that even Holmes could have figured it out."
4619. Hobbs, Don. "Review--More Holmes for the Holidays edited by Martin Greenberg, Jon L. Lellenberg and Carol-Lynn Waugh and The Vital Essence by David L. Hammer." The Holmes & Watson Report 3, no. 6 (2000): 14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4620. ———. "Review--The Curious Incident of the Dog in the Night-Time by Mark Haddon." The Holmes & Watson Report 8, no. 3 (2004): 21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4621. Leeper, Evelyn C. "Book Review--'The Whitechapel Horrors' by Edward B. Hanna." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 73 (1993): 45-46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES -- HADDON, MARK (8)

4622. Baker, John F. "Hot Deals." Publishers Weekly 249, no. 26 (2002): 14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents updates on deals in the book industry in North America as of July 1, 2002 with a reference to Holmes. "Britain's Mark Haddon is best known as a children's author, but many years ago he used to work with autistic children, and the experience is the basis for his first adult novel, just preempted by editor-in-chief Bill Thomas at Doubleday after a string of European sales at auction. The book is The Curious Incident of the Dog in the Night-Time, and if that sounds like a Sherlock Holmes sort of title, it's because the book's hero, young Christopher Boone, is obsessed with Holmes...."
4623. Greenwell, Bill. "The Curious Incidence of Novels About Asperger's Syndrome." Children's Literature in Education 35, no. 3 (2004): 271-284.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Since Asperger's Syndrome was formally recognised in 1994, several novels featuring characters with the syndrome have appeared. Bill Greenwell's article discusses these books in providing a context for a closer consideration of the British publishing sensation of 2003, Mark Haddon's 'The Curious Incident of the Dog in the Night-Time'. The reasons for the success of this suburban comedy, Greenwell argues, include the consequences for the reader of Haddon's choice of the sufferer from Asperger's as narrator, especially the generation of unconscious humour and the range of literary forms he uses to tell his story. Nicholas Tucker adds an Afterword from his perspective as an educational psychologist as well as a literary critic, finding in the novel a rich mixture of heroism, mystery and love mediated through narrative ingenuity." Includes a reference to Holmes. "...Christopher has also said he does not like 'proper novels' (like Lou), and gives an example of an elaborate metaphor he has seen in a library book. However, he does like Sherlock Holmes stories (which use metaphor, as it happens), and we are told therefore that he is going to write a murder mystery novel. He will solve the problem of who killed the poodle. The Holmes parallel--since Holmes sees the detail we mis, as do Asperger children--is very cunning...."

4624. Hearon, Shelby. "Fact-finding mission." Writer 117, no. 4 (2004): 38-40.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Suggests rules for finding factual information as a basis of a fiction. Importance of collecting rich and varied facts for a fiction writer; Significance of putting emphasis on the facts of the story; Use of the details of the facts in revealing the conflict of the story. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Finally, in Mark Haddon's amazing first novel, The Curious Incident of the Dog in the Night-Time, the rigid rules of the autistic narrator, 15-year-old Christopher, a British schoolboy, seem arbitrary and both sad and funny. Through detail the author shows: why Christopher is good at remembering things; why he likes Sherlock Holmes but not Arthur Conan Doyle;..."

4625. Hoffert, Barbara, Carolyn Kuebler, and Heather McCormack. "Best Books of 2003." Library Journal 129, no. 1 (2004): 48-50.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews of the winners of the Library Journal's Best Books of 2003 awards are provided. One entry includes a reference to Holmes. Haddon, Mark. The Curious Incident of the Dog in the Night-Time. Doubleday. ISBN 0-385-50945-6. $22.95. "In one of the most daring first-person narratives in recent years, first novelist Haddon recounts a teenaged autistic boy's search for the killer of his neighbor's poodle. Like his hero, Sherlock Holmes, Christopher Boone has the advantage of a fiercely logical mind, yet he is so rigid that he can't navigate the wider world. When clues point to a bigger mystery involving his parents, the boy must travel to London or suffer the consequences of his knowledge. Haddon deftly expresses Christopher's mind games, spinning a story filled with quiet but powerful irony."

4626. Miller, Laura. "Zelig on Baker Street." New York Times Book Review 154, no. 52998 (2004): 31-31.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an essay on Sherlock Holmes and his many resurrections since his invention some 150 years ago. Contention that the book "Curious Incident of the Dog in The Night-Time," by Mark Haddon, not only gets its title from author Arthur Conan Doyle but also parallels the way that trusty Watson could notice facts without grasping their meaning; "The Hamilton Case," by Michelle de Kretser which also makes mention of Holmes; "Final Solution," by Michael Chabon where an elderly unnamed man (suggested to be Holmes) is brought out of retirement to solve a case; Criticism of "The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes" edited by Leslie S. Klinger who is a confirmed Sherlockian; How the campiness of the stories remains a winning feature after all this time.

4627. Riippa, Laurele, and Robert Dahlin. "Spring 2003 Hardcovers: Fiction/First & Collections." Publishers Weekly 250, no. 4 (2003): 149.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on several fiction books including The Curious Incident of the Dog in the Night-Time (June, $22.95) by Mark Haddon "is told by a 15-year-old autistic savant who, accused of killing his neighbor's dog, uses Sherlock Holmes as his model to solve the crime. Ad/promo. Author tour."

4628. Talley, Heather Laine. "Review Essay: The Curious Incident of Disability in the Night-Time." Journal of Contemporary Ethnography. Electronic; 34, no. 2 (2005): 235-245.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book, "The Curious Incident of the Dog in the Night-Time," by Mark

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Haddon. This is a coming-of-age story of sorts. When fifteen-year-old Christopher Boone finds his neighbor's dog murdered with a pitchfork, he initially is arrested for the murder but then takes on the role of detective. Emulating his favorite literary character, Sherlock Holmes, Christopher begins searching for the real murderer. Christopher, the book's narrator, takes us through his interrogation at the police station, his subsequent release, and his process for developing a list of potential suspects. Initially, Christopher focuses on his neighbors, but these suspects reveal details that turn Christopher's focus toward his own family. Christopher eventually identifies the murderer, and in doing so, he solves several additional mysteries about his mother's whereabouts, his parents' relationship, and his role within the family. Although there is room for reading this book with mindfulness of the multiple ways in which people experience the world, there is the potential for readers to engage the narrative using the same "mindblindness" that characterizes some with autism spectrum disorders (ASDs). Perhaps the author's intention in creating a book entirely composed of stark details is to give readers without autism some sense of what it might be like to be autistic.

4629. Wynne-Jones, Tim. "Tigers and Poodles and Birds, Oh My!" Horn Book Magazine 80, no. 3 (2004): 265-275.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features several adult books that have enjoyed the readership of children thus blurring the line that differentiates adult literature from children's literature. "Life of Pi," by Yann Martel; "The Curious Incident of the Dog in the Night-Time," by Mark Haddon; "What the Birds See," by Sonya Hartnett.

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES -- HALL, JOHN (7)

4630. Ashworth, Peter. "Review--Sherlock Holmes and the Abbey School Mystery and Sherlock Holmes and the Hammerford Will by John Hall." The Ritual, no. 28 (2001): 54-56.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4631. Booth, Matthew. "Review--The Travels of Sherlock Holmes by John Hall." The Ritual, no. 21 (1998): 71-72.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4632. Healey, Tim. "Review--'The Abominable Wife and Other Unrecorded Cases of Mr. Sherlock Holmes' by John Hall." The Ritual, no. 23 (1999): 53-55.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4633. Hobbs, Don. "Review--Sherlock Holmes and the Boulevard Assassin by John Hall." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 3 (2000): 13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4634. ———. "Review--Sherlock Holmes and the Disgraced Inspector by John Hall." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 1 (2000): 29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4635. ———. "Review--Sherlock Holmes and the Telephone Murder Mystery by John Hall." The Holmes & Watson Report 3, no. 2 (1999): 16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4636. ———. "Review--The Travels of Sherlock Holmes by John Hall." The Holmes & Watson Report 3, no. 2 (1999): 13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES -- HOCKENSMITH, STEVE (12)

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4637. "The Black Dove." Kirkus Reviews 76, no. 1 (2008): 16-16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The Black Dove," by Steve Hockensmith. Passing references to Doyle and Holmes. "...Hockensmith's third Holmes on the Range mystery is buoyant and consistently entertaining...."
4638. "The Black Dove." Publishers Weekly 255, no. 17 (2008): 133-133.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the audiobook "The Black Dove," by Steve Hockensmith. Read by William Dufres. Tantor Audio, unabridged, nine CDs, 10.5 hrs., $34.99 ISBN 978-1-4001-0605-9. "William Dufres provides an appealing down-home delivery to his narration of Hockensmith's third adventure featuring the Sherlock Holmes and Doctor Watson-emulating brothers, Gustov 'Old Red' and Otto 'Big Red' Amblingmeyer...."
4639. "The Black Dove: A Holmes on the Range Mystery." Publishers Weekly 254, no. 44 (2007): 46-46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The Black Dove: A Holmes on the Range Mystery," by Steve Hockensmith.
4640. "On the Wrong Track." Publishers Weekly 254, no. 26 (2007): 56-56.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "On the Wrong Track," by Steven Hockensmith. Includes references to Holmes.
4641. Adams, Michael. "Holmes on the Range." Library Journal 132, no. 12 (2007): 130-130.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the audiobook "Holmes on the Range," by Steve Hockensmith.
4642. ———. "On the Wrong Track." Library Journal 132, no. 13 (2007): 129-129.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book on tape "On the Wrong Track," by Steve Hockensmith.
4643. Chipman, Ian. "The Black Dove." Booklist 104, no. 8 (2007): 28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "The Black Dove" by Steve Hockensmith.
4644. Ephron, Hallie. "Hitting one out of the park the first time at bat." Writer 120, no. 8 (2007): 19-23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article provides interviews with the five finalists for the 2006 Edgar Award for "Best First Novel by an American Author," with the interviewed writers talking about various aspects of writing their books. Alex Berenson is the writer of "The Faithful Spy." Cornelia Read is the writer of "A Field of Darkness." Gillian Flynn is the writer of "Sharp Objects." John Hart is the writer of "King of Lies." Steve Hockensmith is the writer of "Holmes on the Range."
4645. Forbes, Steve. "Two Holmes Runs." Forbes 177, no. 6 (2006): 32-32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article presents reviews for two books entitled "The Italian Secretary: A Further Adventure of Sherlock Holmes," by Caleb Carr and "Holmes on the Range," by Steve Hockensmith.
4646. Kim, Ann. "Prepub Mystery." Library Journal 132, no. 16 (2007): 50-50.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides pre-publication information on forthcoming books. Included in the list is one title with a Holmesian connection. Hockensmith, Steve. The Black Dove: A Holmes on the Range Mystery. Minotaur: St. Martin's. Feb. 2008. 304p. ISBN 978-0-312-34782-6. $23.95. "The two Sherlock Holmes devotees and cowpokes in training get a shot at 'detectifying' in 1893 San Francisco in their third appearance. Hockensmith lives in Petaluma, CA. Author tour in the West."
4647. ———. "Prepub Mystery." Library Journal 130, no. 16 (2005): 63.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A review of upcoming mystery titles is provided. Includes entries with Holmes references. Hockensmith, Steve. Holmes on the Range. Minotaur: St. Martins. Feb. 2006. 320P. ISBN 0-312-34780-4. $22.95. "A pair of cowboy sleuths with a Sherlock Holmes fetish kick up some dust and solve some murders in 1893 Montana. A debut by short story writer Hockensmith, who lives in the Bay Area, CA. Regional author tour." Kurland, Michael. Empress of India: A Professor Moriarty Novel. Minotaur: St.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Martins. Feb. 2006. 320P. ISBN 0-312-29144-2. $24.95. "More Holmes escapades as once again he squares off against his nemesis--but this time, maybe Moriarty's innocent? Edgar Award finalist Kurland lives in Petaluma, CA."

4648. Klett, Rex E. "Mystery." Library Journal 130, no. 18 (2005): 55-57.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An annotated bibliography of mystery titles set in small towns and villages is provided. Includes one title with a Holmes reference. Hockensmith, Steve. Holmes on the Range. Minotaur: St. Martin's. Feb. 2006. c.304p. ISBN 0-312-34780-4. $22.95. "Cross-genre fiction can be a lot of fun when it works. This first novel will keep both mystery fans and aficionados of Westerns grinning from the first page to the last. Two German cowboy brothers, Gustav ('Old Red') and Otto ('Big Red') Amlingmeyer, have been reading the adventures of Sherlock Holmes in magazines and take on the roles of the master detective and his sidekick, Watson, when an albino cowboy turns up dead in a locked outhouse. They have only 24 hours to solve a case that involves a blustery English lord, a fraudulent cattle scheme, some black-hatted bad guys, and a cannibalistic mountain man named Bob. Mix Big Red's earthy cowboy narrative and Old Red's deductive abilities with plenty of action, including cattle stampedes, a prairie ambush, and a six-gun showdown finale, and the result is highly recommended for all mystery and Western collections. Hockensmith, whose short stories featuring Big Red and Old Red appear in Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine, lives in Petaluma, CA."

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES -- I
(1)

4649. "When We Were Orphans (Book Review)." Publishers Weekly 247, no. 49 (2000): 32.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the audiobook 'When We Were Orphans,' by Kazuo Ishiguro and read by John Lee. Includes a reference to Holmes. "Set in Shanghai on the eve of World War II, Ishiguro's Booker-nominated novel follows the surreal predicament of Christopher Banks, an English expatriate whose overwrought state is perfectly rendered by narrator John Lee. After his parents are mysteriously kidnapped, nine-year-old Christopher is shipped off to England, where he grows up to become the Sherlock Holmes of his times--a man able to right wrongs, restore order."

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES -- J
(4)

4650. Butler, Tamara. "An Opened Grave: Sherlock Holmes Investigates His Ultimate Case." Library Journal 131, no. 18 (2006): 62-62.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "An Opened Grave: Sherlock Holmes Investigates His Ultimate Case," by L. Frank James.

4651. Chapman, Paul M. "Review--'The Case of the Scarlet Woman: Sherlock Holmes and the Occult' by Watkin Jones." The Ritual, no. 25 (2000): 55-57.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4652. Hall, John. "Review--'A Ghostly Crew: Tales from the Endeavour' by Roger Johnson." The Ritual, no. 28 (2001): 62.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4653. Hobbs, Don. "Review--A Duel With the Devil by Roger Jaynes." The Holmes & Watson Report 8, no. 1 (2004): 22.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES -- K
(7)

4654. "Empress of India: A Professor Moriarty Novel." Publishers Weekly 252, no. 45 (2005): 46-46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of the Empress of India: A Professor Moriarty Novel by Michael Kurland (St. Martin's Minotaur) $24.95 (320p) ISBN 0-312-29144-2
4655. Chapman, Paul M. "Review -- 'The Resurrected Holmes' by Arvin Kaye." The Musgrave Papers, no. 9 (1996): 125-127.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4656. Fletcher, Connie. "Hangman's Corner." Booklist 104, no. 14 (2008): 31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "Hangman's Corner" by Peter King. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "King gives readers a wonderfully diverse roundup of characters and classes from Victorian London by having a hansom cab driver as his hero. Ned Parker is kind of a poor man's Sherlock Holmes: his job matches his passion for observation and carries him into all corners of the city, making him a perfect amateur sleuth...."
4657. Hobbs, Don. "Review--Chinese Box Mysteries by Dan Kilcup." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 3 (2000): 10-11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4658. ———. "Review--Night Watch by Stephen Kendrick." The Holmes & Watson Report 7, no. 5 (2003): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4659. Kim, Ann. "Prepub Mystery." Library Journal 130, no. 16 (2005): 63.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A review of upcoming mystery titles is provided. Includes entries with Holmes references. Hockensmith, Steve. Holmes on the Range. Minotaur: St. Martins. Feb. 2006. 320P. ISBN 0-312-34780-4. $22.95. "A pair of cowboy sleuths with a Sherlock Holmes fetish kick up some dust and solve some murders in 1893 Montana. A debut by short story writer Hockensmith, who lives in the Bay Area, CA. Regional author tour." Kurland, Michael. Empress of India: A Professor Moriarty Novel. Minotaur: St. Martins. Feb. 2006. 320P. ISBN 0-312-29144-2. $24.95. "More Holmes escapades as once again he squares off against his nemesis--but this time, maybe Moriarty's innocent? Edgar Award finalist Kurland lives in Petaluma, CA."
4660. Knight, Bernard. "Sherlock Holmes returns to the case." New Scientist 120, no. (1988): 11-14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES --
KING, JOHN R. (3)

4661. "The Shadow of Reichenbach Falls." Publishers Weekly 255, no. 18 (2008): 47-48.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A review of the book by John R. King. Forge, $25.95 (352p) ISBN 978-0-7653-1801-5. "King's muddled alternate version of the epic final battle between Sherlock Holmes and Professor Moriarty teams the Baker Street sleuth with William Hope Hodgson's Thomas Carnacki, a detective who often contends with the supernatural....Despite the author's obvious affection for the characters, he fails to provide a plot that does justice to his intriguing premise."
4662. "The Shadow of Reichenbach Falls." Kirkus Reviews 76, no. 11 (2008): 34-34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The Shadow of Reichenbach Falls," by John R. King. "It takes two fictional sleuths to engineer Professor Moriarty's comeuppance. In a letter to Dr. Watson written 20 years after Holmes met Moriarty at Reichenbach Falls, Thomas Carnacki, the detective who solved supernatural cases using the principle of the electric pentacle, recounts how an apparently chance encounter with one Anna Schmidt led to their picnicking at the Falls just in time to rescue one man who had been pushed over by the other.....Sherlockians may quibble at their hero's fallibility, but King (The Angel of Death in Chicago, 2008, etc.) could well create new fans for William Hope Hodgson's early sci-fi tales of Carnacki."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4663. Pitt, David. "The Shadow of Reichenbach Falls." Booklist 104, no. 19 (2008): 54.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "The Shadow of Reichenbach Falls" by John R. King. "The popular fantasy novelist (readers know him better as J. Robert King) joins the ranks of Sherlock Holmes pasticheists with this thoroughly enjoyable novel...."

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES -- KING, LAURIE R. (37)

4664. "Core Collection: Historical Mystery Timeline." Booklist 103, no. 17 (2007): 14-15.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article presents reviews of books that are set between the year 80 BC and 1901. Includes a couple of Holmes references. "1881 Irene Adler series, by Carole Nelson Douglas (Forge). The beautiful opera singer who outwitted Sherlock Holmes takes center stage in a series of crime-solving capers....1915 Mary Russell and Sherlock Holmes series, by Laurie R. King (Bantam). The famous detective's brilliant young apprentice becomes his partner in both mystery and marriage...."

4665. "Miscellany." Writer 116, no. 7 (2003): 10.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides information on topics and issues related to literature as of July 2003. Includes reference to Doyle and Holmes under entry for Laurie R. King. "Had Laurie R. King known just how dedicated fans of Sherlock Holmes could be to the sanctity of Arthur Conan Doyle's stories, she wonders if she would have been so eager to invent Mary Russell, Holmes' investigative equal and eventual lovestruck. 'No, come to think of it, I probably wouldn't have [hesitated],' she tells Mystery Readers International. Holmes, she says, 'needed a change, of the sort that opened up the aspects of his personality not previously explored during his Baker Street days.'...King's Mary Russell novels begin with The Beekeeper's Apprentice, when Holmes retires from his investigations to raise bees in the country. King points out that historically, 'Holmes responds to strong, capable women,' noting that the only female known to have 'tweaked his interest' was Irene Adler, the one person who was able to outwit him in a case. Holmes needed a challenge, says King--and in Mary Russell, 'he got one.'"

4666. "Mystery." Publishers Weekly 249, no. 44 (2002): 30.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features several mystery books on the best seller list in the U.S. as of November 2002. Mention of Doyle and Holmes. "In the most notable Sherlock Holmes pastiches, the great detective was essentially off-stage: Laurie King's seventh Mary Russell mystery, Justice Hall (Bantam), and David Pirie's The Patient's Eyes (St. Martin's Minotaur), with a young Conan Doyle playing Dr. Watson to Dr. Joseph Bell's Holmes."

4667. "Prepub Alert." Library Journal 126, no. 20 (2001): 90.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides a listing of books due to be published in April 2002, including Laurie R. King's Justice Hall.

4668. Bliss, Laurel M. "Locked Rooms: A Novel of Suspense Featuring Mary Russell and Sherlock Holmes." Library Journal 130, no. 8 (2005): 67.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "Locked Rooms: A Novel of Suspense Featuring Mary Russell and Sherlock Holmes," by Laurie R. King.

4669. Burns, Ann. "Audio Reviews." Library Journal 125, no. 12 (2000): 161.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several audio tapes, including O Jerusalem by Laurie R. King. 9 cassettes. unabridged. 13 1/2 hrs. Recorded Bks. 1999. ISBN 0-7887-3746-5. $80. "King has received both the Edgar and the John Creasey Award. O Jerusalem is the newest in a series about Sherlock Holmes and his young

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- apprentice, Mary Russell. It is a flashback to a chapter in the Beekeeper's Apprentice in which Holmes and Russell flee danger in London, traveling to Palestine in the service of Mycroft, Holmes's older brother. When Holmes and Russell reach Palestine, they join Mahmoud and Ali, all four traveling in the garb of Bedouins. Their journey begins with the investigation of a murder and ends with preventing the destruction of Jerusalem. The narrator, Jenny Sterlin, is most convincing as the arrogant and condescending older Holmes, and the voices she uses for each character are distinct and believable. Essential for listeners or readers of the Holmes and Russell series."
4670. Burns, Ann, Kristin M. Jacobi, and Wry Martinis. "Audio Reviews." Library Journal 123, no. 16 (1998): 148.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents numerous brief reviews of audio recordings including The Moor by Laurie R. King. 8 cassettes, unabridged. 11 hrs. Recorded Bks. 1998. ISBN 0-7887-1979-3. $72. "In this fourth Mary Russell novel, read by Jenny Sterlin, King takes us back to Dartmoor, scene of The Hound of the Baskervilles, again on the trail of a spectral hound. Shedockians have been amused or horrified by King's misappropriation of Holmes. Holmes, who had stated that love is 'an emotional thing...opposed to true cold reason' and 'I should never marry myself, lest I bias my judgment,' is in the King books married to an American half his age. Not satisfied with changing Holmes's misogynistic nature, King also robs him of his trusty biographer, Dr. Watson. Pastiche, in its truest sense, tries to resemble the style of the original work. Libraries wanting Sherlock Holmes mysteries would do better with any of the BBC series (The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes, Audio Reviews, LJ 2/15/97). Not recommended."
4671. Calamai, Peter. "For Sherlockians, one's masterful, the other's a cardboard cutout." The Ottawa Citizen, March 20, 1994: C3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of The Beekeeper's Apprentice Or; On the Segregation of the Queen By Laurie R. King, St. Martin's Press; 347 pages; $31.99; and The Case of Emily V. By Keith Oatley, Reed Books; 407 pages; paperback; $17.99. "Everything Laurie King does right, [Keith Oatley] does wrong...."
4672. Cunningham, David S. "Summer Reading." Commonweal 135, no. 12 (2008): 26-28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Love and loss are also at the heart of my current favorite series of mystery novels. Mary Russell, the young protagonist of Laurie R. King's series, was sent to live with her English aunt after her parents died (in an accident for which Mary had always blamed herself). She buried her grief in scholarship on ancient languages and theological texts, until one day--wandering through the Sussex Downs--she met an avid beekeeper lately retired from detective work. How many men fit that description? He is, of course, Sherlock Holmes, whose powers of observation, deduction, and perseverance are well matched by the young Mary. The Beekeeper's Apprentice launched a series of finely wrought mysteries in which the two pursue their craft in tandem. Particularly noteworthy is King's deft grasp of Conan Doyle's narrative voice and characterization of his hero; those who know Holmes well will find him alive again in these pages, but more interesting for being forced to work with (rather than against) his intellectual equal, who is (egad!) a woman. The books often wrestle with theological elements, whether a text (A Letter of Mary), a place (O Jerusalem), or a charismatic preacher (A Monstrous Regiment of Women). The eighth and latest installment, Locked Rooms (Bantam, $6.99, 528 pp.), is set in Prohibition-era San Francisco, with flashbacks to the 1906 earthquake, allowing us to learn gradually where the secret past of Mary's family--and untimely deaths--has been locked away...."
4673. Dwyer, Ed. "Great Audio expectations." Billboard 107, no. 32 (1995): 45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Describes audiobooks that major publishers plan to release for fall and winter. Includes 'A Monstrous Regiment of Women' and 'The Beekeeper's Daughter' from Durkin Hayes Publishers; 'Game Plans for Success' from Time Warner Audiobooks; 'I Will Sing Life' from Dove Audio; 'The Lost World' from Random House Audio. While there is no reference to Doyle with 'The Lost World,' there is a passing reference to Holmes related to the King release. "...At Durkin Hayes Publishers, there's growing excitement over the September release of 'A Monstrous Regiment Of Women' by novelist Laurie King, acclaimed author of 'The Beekeeper's Daughter.' Like 'Daughter,' King's latest tale concerns the exploits of a feisty American girl who becomes Sherlock Holmes' sidekick...."
4674. Gropman, Jackie, and Susan Woodcock. "Adult books for young adults." School Library Journal 44, no. 12

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- (1998): 28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Lists several adult books for young adults that have been reviewed and selected by the 'School Library Journal' as the best books for 1998. Includes The Moor by Laurie R. King. St. Martin's. Tr $23.95. ISBN 0-31216934-5. "When Sherlock Holmes is summoned to solve an eerie murder at Baskerville Hall, the research skills of his independent young wife enhance his already superior powers."
4675. ———. "Best Books 2004: Adult Books for High School Students." School Library Journal 50, no. 12 (2004): 48-49.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An annotated bibliography of the best adult books of 2004 suitable for high school students is provided. The themes of the fiction, nonfiction, and graphic novels included in this bibliography reflect the varied interests of adolescents. Includes Laurie R. King's The Game. Bantam. Tr $23.95. ISBN 0-553-80194-5. "This is the seventh and possibly best Mary Russell mystery yet, rich in period detail and sense of time and place. The heroine and her husband, Sherlock Holmes, travel to India to search for Kim, the hero of Rudyard Kipling's novel."
4676. Hahn, Robert C. "PW Talks with Laurie R. King." Publishers Weekly 249, no. 7 (2002): 78.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Interviews author Laurie R. King. Opinion on the themes used in the novels; Comments on the reaction of the public to the novels; Views on freeing Sherlock Holmes from the preconceptions of Arthur Conan Doyle.
4677. Hobbs, Don. "Review--Justice Hall by Laurie R. King." The Holmes & Watson Report 6, no. 5 (2002): 20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4678. ———. "Review--O Jerusalem by Laurie King." The Holmes & Watson Report 3, no. 4 (1999): 23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4679. ———. "Review--The Game by Laurie King." The Holmes & Watson Report 8, no. 2 (2004): 15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4680. ———. "Review--The Moor by Laurie King." The Holmes & Watson Report 2, no. 2 (1998): 36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4681. Hoffert, Barbara. "Prepub Alert." Library Journal 128, no. 18 (2003): 52-54.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on several commercial and noncommercial fiction books including KING, Laurie R. The Game. Bantam. Mar. 2004. 368p. ISBN 0-553-80194-5. $23.95. "Conan Doyle meets Kipling as Mary Russell and hubby Sherlock Holmes head to India, hunting for a spy who turns out to be the model for the orphan in Kim."
4682. James, Dean, and Shirley E. Havens. "Word of mouth." Library Journal 119, no. 9 (1994): 128.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews five sleepers. 'Track of the Cat,' by Nevada Barr; 'The Beekeeper's Apprentice,' by Laurie R. King; 'Life Blood,' by Caroline Llewellyn; 'Death Comes As Epiphany,' by Sharan Newman; 'Trouble in Transylvania,' by Barbara Wilson.
4683. Jones, J. T. "Depending on Memory: Intertextuality in Popular Fiction." Journal of American & Comparative Cultures 25, no. 1/2 (2002): 81-84.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on intertextuality in popular fiction. Criteria for distinguishing between literary novels and popular fiction; Example of an author rewriting a story from an alternative viewpoint; Discussion on Laurie King's Sherlock Holmes novel 'The Beekeeper's Apprentice'; Existence of intertextual connections to classic works in the novels 'Ahab's Wife' and 'The 13th Warrior.'
4684. Jones, Trevelyn E., and Luann Toth. "Adult books for young adults: Fiction." School Library Journal 43, no. 6 (1997): 151.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several fiction books for young adults including Laurie R. King's A Letter of Mary. 276p. St. Martin's. 1996. Tr $23.95. ISBN 0312-14670-1. LC 96-22424. "As this latest Mary

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Russell/Sherlock Holmes escapade opens, the happy couple is settled in a cottage in Sussex. It is now 1923, and Mary and her husband set out to find the assumed murderers of her dear friend Dorothy Ruskin, an archaeologist working in Palestine at the beginning of the Zionist movement. The detectives employ all of the old tools of analysis, disguise, and reasoning for which Holmes is so well known to solve the puzzle. This story contains as much if not more, of the wit and intelligence of The Beekeeper's Apprentice (1994) and A Monstrous Regiment of Women (1995 both St. Martin's), as well as a fully developed relationship between the partners. King continues to provide period details and she maintains the integrity of Holmes's character as established by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. This is as good or better than the first and hopefully a harbinger of more well-constructed and literate adventures featuring this unusual but highly involving twosome. The mystery is well developed and the history and feelings of the time are evoked with much skill. A sure hit with previous fans and a fine introduction to a dynamic duo...."

4685. ———. "SLJ's best books 1994. (Cover story)." School Library Journal 40, no. 12 (1994): 20.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Lists many books chosen by School Library Journal's editors as the best of 1994 chosen from among more than 3,700 new titles reviewed during 1994. Includes Laurie R. King's Beekeeper's Apprentice: Or on the Segregation of the Queen. St. Martin's Pr. 1994. Tr $21.95. ISBN 0-312-10423-5.

"Humming interaction between elderly misogynist Sherlock Holmes and a bookish, orphaned heiress leads to a hive of intellectual activity and mentoring. A strong female protagonist invades Baker Street's most famous address. (July)"

4686. Jones, Trevelyn E., Luann Toth, and Joy Fleishhacker. "SLJ's best books 1998." School Library Journal 44, no. 12 (1998): 22-29.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A bibliography of 61 titles for children and young adults that have been selected as the best books of 1998 by School Library Journal is provided. One entry relates to Holmes. King, Laurie R. The Moor. St. Martin's. Tr $23.95. ISBN 0-312-16934-5. "When Sherlock Holmes is summoned to solve an eerie murder at Baskerville Hall, the research skills of his independent young wife enhance his already superior powers."

4687. Klett, Rex E. "Book reviews: Fiction." Library Journal 122, no. 20 (1997): 159.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the mystery novel The Moor, by Laurie R. King.

4688. Lewis, Shirley. "Outstanding new books K-12." Emergency Librarian 25, no. 2 (1997): 54.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features books for K-12 students. Includes 'Arctic & Antarctic,' by Dave Weller; 'Arctic son,' by Jean Craighead George; 'Chicken soup for the teenage soul,' by Jack Canfield. Also includes a reference to Holmes and Laurie R. King. "...A Monstrous Regiment of Women. Laurie King. Bantam. $5.99. 0-55357456-6. Grades 9 up. -- Now available in paperback, this sequel to The beekeeper apprentice will captivate adults and young people. The genre is mystery, the plot is rich and the style is beguiling. This ripping read features Sherlock Holmes and his young female apprentice who encounter a feminist cult movement where murders most foul are suspected."

4689. Maryles, Daisy. "Behind the Bestsellers." Publishers Weekly 251, no. 12 (2004): 15-15.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features several bestselling books as of March 22, 2004. "Bad Business," by Robert B. Parker; "The Game," by Laurie R. King; "The Power of Intention," by Wayne W. Dyer.

4690. McAuley, Lynn. "The followup to The Beekeeper's Apprentice doesn't disappoint." The Ottawa Citizen, December 24, 1995: C4.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review. "...A Monstrous Regiment of Women (St. Martin's Press; 326 pages; $33.50) has finally arrived -- a wonderful book, better in many respects than the first...."

4691. Nagle, Sarah. "Beyond Sherlock Holmes: British Crime Fiction." Library Journal 131, no. 7 (2006): 128.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An annotated bibliography of British crime fiction titles is provided. Includes reference to Holmes. "The American writer Edgar Allan Poe is often considered the father of crime fiction as we know it. But starting with Sherlock Holmes, the fictional character created by Arthur Conan Doyle at the end of the 19th century, British writers soon took the genre to great heights, peaking in the 1920s and 1930s,

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

mystery's 'Golden Age,' with Agatha Christie and Dorothy L. Sayers as the chief purveyors of detective fiction. Today, there is a new golden era of high-quality traditional mysteries, authored by both UK and U.S. writers, that feature atmospheric and historical British settings, as well as strong characters and sophisticated plots. Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes was a confirmed bachelor. However, Laurie R. King has created a 'fictitious' wife for Holmes's later years, the intrepid Mary Russell, who, at an early age, becomes an informal student of Holmes and later his independent and scholarly spouse. Together, the two sleuths sharpen their considerable deductive powers through conversation and battles of intellect. There are currently six novels in the series, starting with The Beekeeper's Apprentice (Bantam. 2002. ISBN 0-553-38152-0. pap. $12)."

4692. O'Gorman, Rochelle. "You know my methods: new Holmes mysteries." The Boston Globe, April 11, 1999: G3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Both Baker Street Irregulars and garden-variety mystery buffs should prick up their ears at the news of two new Sherlock Holmes whodunits. Though the mystery takes a back seat to vivid characterization and rich atmosphere, Laurie R. King's 'The Moor' is an addictive 1920s adventure (Recorded Books; unabridged fiction; eight cassettes; 10 hours, 45 minutes; $16.50 if rented, $72 if purchased; read by Jenny Sterlin; 800-638-1304)....A more conventional tale is found in a Sherlockian mystery by Larry Millett, who once again brings the hawk-eyed detective to America in 'Sherlock Holmes and the Ice Palace Murders' (Penguin Audio; abridged fiction; four cassettes; six hours; $24.95; read by Simon Prebble)...."
4693. Ott, Bill. "A Hard-Boiled Gazette to San Francisco." Booklist 104, no. 17 (2008): 10-13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews books including "The Art of Detection," by Laurie R. King.
4694. Peters, Timothy B. "Success Is No Mystery." Publishers Weekly 250, no. 17 (2003): 27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights the sales growth of books at M Is for Mystery bookstore in San Mateo, California due to author focused events. Profile of loyal clientele of the store; Overview of the extensive stocks of the store; Remarks from bookstore owner and founder Ed Kaufman regarding the events. Includes references to Holmes and Laurie R. King. "...The loyal clientele of his store--both Bay Area buyers who show up in person and 'virtual' customers from around the world--have made it a premiere venue for writers. Laurie King, the author of the Kate Martinelli mysteries, the Mary Russell/Sherlock Holmes series and three other suspense novels, has done several events at M Is for Mystery and was at the store in late March to promote her new book, Keeping Watch. 'Ed's events are remarkably well-organized and remarkably well-attended,' she reported. 'Ed gets a good mixture of real fans who know my work and new readers because he publicizes the events so well.'..."
4695. ———. "A Twist of Two Tales." Publishers Weekly 253, no. 24 (2006): 24-25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article focuses the combination of the two fictional worlds by author Laurie King into one book entitled The Art of Detection. The four novels featuring homicide detective Kate Martinelli are police procedurals that combine murders with portrayals of contemporary life. In King's novel, Martinelli discovers what could be the original manuscript of an unpublished Sherlock Holmes novella while investigating the bizarre murder of an eccentric, obsessive Holmes collector named Philip Gilbert.
4696. Pour-El, I. "Audio." Library Journal 131, no. 3 (2006): 155-157.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews of recently released fiction and nonfiction audio-books are provided. Included is King, Laurie R. Locked Rooms. 10 cassettes, unabridged. 14 hrs. Recorded Bks. 2005. ISBN 1-4193-4062-X. $94.75; 12 CDs. ISBN 1-4193-4064-6. $119.75. "Traveling back to England by way of her childhood home in San Francisco, Mary Russell (a.k.a. Mrs. Sherlock Holmes) is troubled by disturbing nightmares. Although she was the only survivor of the tragic motor-car accident that killed her father, mother, and younger brother, there is clearly something more than survivor's guilt on her mind. Gradually, as Mary explores the gaps in her memory, her husband realizes that someone is trying to kill her, and they both set out to identify the criminal. Set in a less exotic location than recent Russell/Holmes adventures, the book focuses on Mary's self-exploration rather than crime, politics, or mountaineering. Along the way, the two detectives collect an appealing set of assistants, including Dashiell Hammett, a Chinese scholar, and a modern set of street urchins. While the work lacks the charms of fictional, post-Victorian colonial England characteristic of the neo-Holmes canon, it is still a good mystery. King's writing style always transfers well to the audio format, and reader Jenny Sterlin is competent and easy to understand. Recommended for all public libraries."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4697. Riippa, Laurele, and Robert Dahlin. "Hardcover Fiction/Mystery & Suspense." Publishers Weekly 252, no. 4 (2005): 150-153.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents several books on mystery and suspense including Locked Rooms: A Novel of Suspense Featuring Mary Russell and Sherlock Holmes (July, $24) by Laurie R. King. In 1924, "Mary and hubby Sherlock intend to settle in San Francisco, despite her nightmares. 65,000 first printing. Ad/promo. Author publicity."

4698. Trone, Mary C. "Mystery; [Metro Edition]." Star Tribune (Minneapolis), Dec 12, 1994: 11.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A Small Sacrifice by Ellen Hart (Seal Press, $20.95) and Once Upon a Crime by M.D. Lake (Avon, $4.99) are both by local authors, continuing two series that feature Twin Cities' protagonists. Hart's Jane Lawless is a restaurateur and amateur sleuth who's called on to find a killer among her friend Cordelia's reunited college chums. Lake's campus cop, Peggy O'Neill, seeks a wolf disguised as a lamb during a Hans Christian Andersen conference at the university.; Sins of the Wolf by Anne Perry (Fawcett, $20), The Alienist by Caleb Carr (Random House, $22) and Laurie R. King's The Beekeeper's Apprentice (St. Martin's Press, $21.95) are all outstanding period mysteries. Perry returns to Victorian London; Carr takes readers back to New York City in the 1890s, and King provides Sherlock Holmes with a young woman sidekick to liven up his retirement.

4699. Vicarel, Jo Ann. "Mystery." Library Journal 131, no. 8 (2006): 67-8, 70-2.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An annotated bibliography of mystery titles is provided. Includes an entry with a Holmes reference. King, Laurie R. The Art of Detection. Bantam. Jun. 2006. c.358p. ISBN 0-553-80453-7 [ISBN 978-0-553-80453-91. $24. "After a six-year hiatus, King returns to her Kate Martinelli mystery series, set in present-day San Francisco. Much has changed in Kate's life, including the addition of a new house and a daughter with lover Lee. Fortunately, her partnership with Al Hawkin remains steadfast. When a body is found in a gun emplacement in the Marin headlands, jurisdiction is a bit iffy, but the case eventually goes to Kate and Al. The pajama-clad corpse is identified as Sherlock Holmes enthusiast Philip Gilbert, whom Kate discover had recently purchased a mysterious manuscript he thought might be an unpublished short story by Holmes, and she wonders if similarities between the story and Gilbert's fate hold the key to his murder. King knows both Holmes and the Bay Area, and this book is a delightful mix of the two. However, it's misleading to think it is connected to her Mary Russell series in any substantial way. Highly recommended for all public libraries."--Laurel Bliss, Princeton Univ. Lib., N

4700. Williams, Wilda. "Shelf Life." Library Journal 129, no. 3 (2004): 34-37.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Several librarian-authors discuss how their writing is a natural extension of their day jobs. They talk about how library books have inspired them and helped them in their research, the challenge of creating a writing life in the time left over after the working day, and the difficulties of finding a publisher." Includes a reference to Holmes. "...In [Will] Thomas's case, it was a library book that helped steer him down the road to publication. Long fascinated by the Victorian era, Thomas had for several years written essays for various Sherlock Holmes society publications and lectured on Victorian crime fiction. Although he enjoyed such writers as Perry and Laurie King, Thomas considered their Victorian mysteries to be genteel cozies that didn't really reflect the period...."

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES -- L
(4)

4701. "SF/Fantasy/Horror Notes." Publishers Weekly 253, no. 3 (2006): 41-41.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes Terrors by Richard A. Lupoff, who "gathers 16 diverting imaginative tales, each a pastiche in tribute to a popular author like Edgar Rice Burroughs, Arthur Conan Doyle or H.P. Lovecraft."

4702. "The Universal Holmes." Publishers Weekly 254, no. 18 (2007): 143-143.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The Universal Holmes," by Richard A. Lupoff. "The

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

affection of prolific fantasy author Lupoff (Marblehead: A Novel of H.P. Lovecraft) for Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson lifts this collection of five previously published tales, one of which, 'The God of the Naked Unicorn,' has a new ending. The strongest entry is 'The Adventure of the Voorish Sign,' in which the great detective and his Boswell pursue a cult planning to liberate H.P. Lovecraft's monstrous Old Ones. 'The Adventure of the Boulevard Assassin,' written in the style of Jack Kerouac, is a curiosity perhaps best appreciated by Kerouac fans. The volume concludes on a light note with a recipe for 'Giant Rat of Sumatra Stew' (chicken is an acceptable substitute). While these stories may fall short of the standard set by such masters of the Holmes pastiche as Denis Smith and Donald Thomas, Lupoff, as ever, consistently entertains."

4703. Hobbs, Don. "Review--Sherlock Holmes and the Wood Green Empire Mystery by W. Lane." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 4 (2000): 40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4704. ———. "Review--The Surrogate Assassin by Christopher Leppeck." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 3 (2000): 12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES -- M (10)

4705. Booth, Matthew. "Review--Sherlock Holmes and the Somerset Hunt by Rosemary Michaud." The Ritual, no. 11 (1993): 49-50.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4706. Glantz, Shelley. "Sherlock Holmes and the Baker Street Irregulars: The Fall of the Amazing Zalindas." Library Media Connection 25, no. 6 (2007): 74-74.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Sherlock Holmes and the Baker Street Irregulars: The Fall of the Amazing Zalindas," by Tracy Mack. "Lovers of the whodunit will be overjoyed to discover this new series. Set in Victorian England, the Baker Street Irregulars are nine homeless boys who often work for the illustrious detective Sherlock Holmes. Holmes employs the boys after a family of tightrope walkers fall to their deaths during a performance. Though the story's twist and turns are predictable, readers will enjoy the action. Fans of Sherlock Holmes will enjoy the many references to his other famous cases. Observant readers will find a message hidden throughout the text in bold letters. Pen and ink illustrations are scattered throughout the book."

4707. Gray, B. Allison. "The Fall of the Amazing Zalindas." School Library Journal 53, no. 1 (2007): 132-132.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The Fall of the Amazing Zalindas," by Tracy Mack and Micheal Citrin. "When three tightrope walkers fall to their deaths, Sherlock Holmes must investigate. He is aided by a group of street children who help him as well as one another. These ragamuffins, led by the very capable Wiggins, go to the circus to seek out clues while Holmes and Watson pursue other leads. The case involves the theft of a priceless 17th-century book commissioned by Charles II and only meant to be seen by the ruling king or queen. Frail Ozzie turns out to be a vital new member of the Irregulars with a razor-sharp memory, and a gypsy girl from the circus proves helpful to solving the murders. Ozzie and Wiggins are memorable characters, and Holmes and Watson are extremely well defined. Black-and-white illustrations seem quite slapdash and do little to enhance the Victorian flavor of the book. Alex Simmons and Bill McKay's The Raven League (Sleuth, 2006), another story about Holmes and a gang of waifs, gives readers a more immediate impression of the realities of Victorian London with its many abused and homeless children, child labor, filth, and class differences."

4708. Hobbs, Don. "Review--Sherlock Holmes: The Tandridge Hall Murder & Other Stories by Eddie Maguire." The Holmes & Watson Report 5, no. 4 (2001): 13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4709. ———. "Review--The Childhood of Sherlock Holmes by Mona Morstein." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 4 (2000): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4710. Leeper, Evelyn C. "Book Review--'The Canary Trainer' by Nicholas Meyer." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 75 (1994): 39-40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4711. Michael, Patrick. "Review--'The Hound of the Baskervilles According to Spike Milligan'." The Ritual, no. 22 (1998): 66-67.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4712. Skoyles, Lesley. "Review--'Sherlock Holmes and the Lure of Reichenbach' by Susan Maslen." The Ritual, no. 14 (1994): 52-53.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4713. Sullivan, Greg. "Review--The Hound of the Baskervilles According to Spike Milligan by Spike Milligan." The Holmes & Watson Report 6, no. 4 (2002): 32-33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4714. Valley, Richard. "Review--'The Canary Trainer' by Nicholas Meyer." The Ritual, no. 12 (1993): 37-39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES -- MILLETT, LARRY (10)

4715. "Midwest Bookends." Publishers Weekly 249, no. 33 (2002): 46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on trade shows and congresses of booksellers associations in the U.S. in September 2002 including the congress of the Upper Midwest Booksellers Association in Saint Paul, Minnesota. "On Saturday morning, the tried-and-true UMBA Book and Author Breakfast features regional writers Jerry Apps (Stormy), Larry Millett (The Disappearance of Sherlock Holmes)..."
4716. Amirthanayagam, Guy. "His American Bow." The Washington Post, January 2, 2000: X07.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Larry Millett's Sherlock Holmes and the Rune Stone Mystery.
4717. Dyer, Lucinda. "It's Not Whodunit, but How-Do-You-Do-It?" Publishers Weekly 246, no. 43 (1999): 34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Describes how publishers support the careers of their mystery writers. Process of building an author to a bestseller according to Bantam Deputy Publisher Nita Taublib; Opinion of Crown editor Steve Ross on writer Ruth Rendell; Effect of the changes in the book's cover on its sales. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...We try to stretch a little further with each book,' says Penguin marketing director Marcia Burch. That means additional reading copies to targeted booksellers, increased use of the Internet and a more creative use of author appearances. For Larry Millett's Sherlock Holmes and the Ice Palace Murders (Oct.) and Jonathan Gash's Prey Dancing (Nov.), it also means stretching to include cover redesigns...."
4718. Hobbs, Don. "Review--The Disappearance of Sherlock Holmes by Larry Millett." The Holmes & Watson Report 7, no. 2 (2003): 35.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4719. ———. "Review--The Rune Stone (sic) by Larry Millett." The Holmes & Watson Report 3, no. 5 (1999): 13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4720. Hoffert, Barbara. "The auteur allure." Library Journal 121, no. 16 (1996): 46.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents first novels from authors for October, 1996. Inset: Mapping this season's first novels, by Ann Burns. Inset mentions John H. Watson (Larry Millett), Sherlock Holmes and the Red Demon (Viking--Sept.) Minnesota.

4721. O'Gorman, Rochelle. "You know my methods: new Holmes mysteries." The Boston Globe, April 11, 1999: G3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Both Baker Street Irregulars and garden-variety mystery buffs should prick up their ears at the news of two new Sherlock Holmes whodunits. Though the mystery takes a back seat to vivid characterization and rich atmosphere, Laurie R. King's 'The Moor' is an addictive 1920s adventure (Recorded Books; unabridged fiction; eight cassettes; 10 hours, 45 minutes; $16.50 if rented, $72 if purchased; read by Jenny Sterlin; 800-638-1304)....A more conventional tale is found in a Sherlockian mystery by Larry Millett, who once again brings the hawk-eyed detective to America in 'Sherlock Holmes and the Ice Palace Murders' (Penguin Audio; abridged fiction; four cassettes; six hours; $24.95; read by Simon Prebble)...."

4722. Riippa, Laurele, and Robert Dahlin. "Trade Paperbacks." Publishers Weekly 246, no. 32 (1999): 265.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a list of trade paperbacks including Penguin, Sherlock Holmes and the Ice Palace Murders: From the American Chronicles of John H. Watson, M.D. (Oct., $5.99) by Larry Millett "takes place at the 1896 Winter Carnival in St. Paul. Author tour."

4723. Wales, Ruth. "Imagined memoirs of the famous." Christian Science Monitor, August 12, 1999: 19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Sherlock Holmes and the Rune Stone Mystery By Larry Millett (Viking 336 pp., $23.95). "Given the current popularity of autobiographical reminiscences, it's not surprising that the mystery memoir is almost a whodunit category. An author finds a hidden, handwritten document featuring a well-known literary name. With footnotes, commentary, or afterword, the resulting book can be fun to read and a delight to fans of the original. But writers who practice the art of the imagined famous-person memoir run risks. Their supposedly 'lost' manuscripts may be only clever echoes of a familiar voice. Or they may stretch readers' credulity by constructing an improbable plot. In 'Sherlock Holmes and the Rune Stone Mystery,' coming this fall, Larry Millett avoids both traps. His leading characters are true to type, and his Midwest setting allows him to create a believable background for his transplanted detectives...."

4724. Wales, Ruth Johnstone. "Mysterious old characters come back to life." Christian Science Monitor, February 25, 1999: 19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Sherlock Holmes and the Ice Palace Murders by Larry Millett. "Fans of the classic Sherlock Holmes stories may or may not be enchanted by Larry Millett's factual fictions in which the famous sleuth practices his art in an American location. Sherlock Holmes and the Ice Palace Murders, like its predecessor, takes place in St. Paul, Minn., at the time of the 1896 Winter Carnival. Using the pretense of a recently discovered manuscript by the indomitable Dr. Watson, Millett mixes real and invented people in a reasonable facsimile of an Arthur Conan Doyle tale...."

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES -- N
(10)

4725. "Sherlock Holmes (Book Review)." Publishers Weekly 247, no. 51 (2000): 58.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Sherlock Holmes: The Missing Years: The Adventures of the Great Detective in India and Tibet,' by Jamyang Norbu.
4726. Chapman, Paul M. "Review--'The Mandala of Sherlock Holmes' edited by Jamyang Norbu." The Ritual, no. 26 (2000): 69.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4727. Davies, David Stuart. "Review--'Anno Dracula' by Kim Newman." The Ritual, no. 11 (1993): 51.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4728. Fell, Christine. "Review--'Sherlock in Love' by Sena Jeter Naslund." The Ritual, no. 13 (1994): 50-51.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4729. Godwin, Marshall. "It's elementary medicine, my dear Watson." CMAJ: Canadian Medical Association Journal 177, no. 12 (2007): 1551-1552.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Evidence-Based Medicine in Sherlock Holmes' Footsteps," by Jorgen Nordenstrom.

4730. Hargreaves, Tracy. "We Other Victorians': Literary Victorian Afterlives." Journal of Victorian Culture 13, no. 2 (2008): 278-286.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The article explores how 20th century writers have portrayed Victorians and the Victorian period. It examines the works of authors such as Virginia Woolfe and John Galsworthy and discusses the social, political and family issues that were raised in the 20th century regarding life in the Victorian period. It discusses the representation of Victorian life on television in the 1950s and 1960s and what the afterlife of the Victorian period has allowed social and cultural commentators to reexamine about the values and morals of the Victorians." Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...The classic text has been re-imagined.... Emily Brontë resurfaces in Jane Urquhart's Changing Heaven: A Novel, Clare Boylan's Emma Brown: A Novel From the Unfinished Manuscript of Charlotte Bronte appeared in 2004, Maryse Conde transplants Wuthering Heights to Windward Heights, Emma Tennant imagines Heathcliff's Tale, Caleb Carr and Jamyang Norbu add to the Sherlock Holmes canon (The Italian Secretary: A Further Adventure of Sherlock Holmes and Sherlock Holmes: The Missing Years respectively) as of course did Julian Barnes in Arthur and George. Wilkie Collins and Charles Dickens were intertextually present in Sarah Waters' Fingersmith...."

4731. Heleno, Carlos. "Book review--'Return to the Lost World' by Nicholas Nye." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 71 (1992): 40-41.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4732. Hoveyda, Nourieh. "Evidence-based medicine in Sherlock Holmes' footsteps." Evidence-Based Medicine 13, no. 4 (2008): 124-124.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Evidence-based medicine in Sherlock Holmes' footsteps," by J. Nordenstrom.

4733. Sweet, Matthew. "Books: Old Enemies Unmasked; Matthew Sweet Finds Out what the Great Detective was really Up to in Tibet." The Independent (London), October 29, 2000: 68.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of The Mandala of Sherlock Holmes by Jamyang Norbu.

4734. Tracey, David. "Tibetan Sherlock shakes up the movement." The International Herald Tribune, March 28, 2002: 18.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Portrait of the Tibetan writer Jamyang Norbu. "...Welcome to the real world of refugee politics. Norbu knows it from the inside out, starting with his decision in 1962 to run away from school to join a group of CIA-financed Tibetan guerrillas fighting China. It sounds like fodder for some of the thrills he visits on his heroes in The Mandala of Sherlock Holmes: The Missing Years,' but Norbu chuckles at the real-life experience...."

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES -- O
(1)

4735. Andrews, Marke. "Booking time for 10 great reads this year: The Best of Books; [Final Edition]." Dec 28, 1994: C4.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...The Case of Emily H. By Keith Oatley. An ingenious novel from Toronto author Oatley that has a depressed Sherlock Holmes seeking out Sigmund Freud, then investigating a death that involves one of Freud's young patients. Freud's character is enriched by a personal crisis; he is tormented by self-doubt. A literary mystery...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES -- P
(5)

4736. Bliss, Laurel M. "The Dark Water: The Strange Beginnings of Sherlock Holmes." Library Journal 131, no. 13 (2006): 62-62.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The Dark Water: The Strange Beginnings of Sherlock Holmes," by David Pirie.
4737. Chapman, Paul M. "Review -- 'The Hampstead Poisonings' by Glen Petrie." The Musgrave Papers, no. 8 (1995): 115-116.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4738. Edwards, Owen Dudley. "Read of the Week Not a Bad Tale - if You can Forget about the Real Conan Doyle." The Scotsman, June 18, 2001: 13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of "The Patient's Eyes" by David Pirie.
4739. Hays, Carl. "Holmes: Haydn's Head." Booklist 104, no. 19 (2008): 60.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "Haydn's Head: Holmes" by Omaha Perez. "Ever since Conan Doyle penned his last Holmes and Watson whodunit, imitators have been resurrecting the pair in a colorful variety of further adventures. Perhaps none of those have been quite as bizarre as this risqué Sherlockian spoof from noted comics artist Perez...."
4740. Hobbs, Don. "Review--Sherlock Holmes and the Story for Which the World is Not Yet Prepared by Stephen F. Pierce." The Holmes & Watson Report 7, no. 2 (2003): 35.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES --
PEACOCK, SHANE (6)

4741. "Children's Books for Fall." Publishers Weekly 254, no. 28 (2007): 34-127.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A list of children's books for fall 2007 is presented. Included is one related to Holmes. "The Boy Sherlock Holmes debuts with His 1st Case: Eye of the Crow by Shane Peacock ($19.95, 10-14)."
4742. "Children's Books for Spring." Publishers Weekly 255, no. 7 (2008): 27-116.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // List includes Nancy Springer's The Case of the Bizarre Bouquets (the Enola Holmes Mysteries) ($14.99, 9-up); The Boy Sherlock Holmes continues with Death in the Air by Shane Peacock ($19.95, 10-14); The Sherlock Files debuts with The 100-Year-Old Secret by Tracy Barrett ($15.95.8-12).
4743. "Comprehensive Bibliography." Book Links 17, no. 4 (2008): 61-63.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // References for the articles published in the March 1, 2008 issue of "Book Links" are presented. Under "Best New Books for the Classroom" is listed Eye of the Crow: The Boy Sherlock Holmes, His First Case. By Shane Peacock. 2007.
4744. "Top 10 Crime Fiction for Youth." Booklist 104, no. 17 (2008): 47-47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article reviews the books "The Diamond of Drury Lane," by Julia Golding, "Evil Genius," by Catherine Jinks, and "Eye of the Crow," by Shane Peacock. Includes a reference to Holmes. "This first entry in Peacock's The Boy Sherlock Holmes series stars a 13-year-old Sherlock, whose curiosity is piqued after an Arab youth insists that he has been wrongly arrested for a vicious London murder."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4745. Fiscus, Sheila. "Eye of the Crow." School Library Journal 53, no. 11 (2007): 134.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Eye of the Crow," by Shane Peacock. "Solitary and brooding, 13-year-old Sherlock Holmes prefers observing street life in 1860s London to attending school, and is skilled at appraising people. He's frustrated by his family's strained financial circumstances and the social prejudice that limits his future. His mother, once a wealthy socialite, married a poor Jewish scholar and was disowned by her parents. His brilliant father has been forced to take a job training birds at The Crystal Palace, and his urging Sherlock to become whatever he wishes seems hollow. The boy becomes obsessed with a gruesome murder, an interest that eventually lands him in jail as an accomplice to the primary suspect. There, he's visited by Irene Doyle, a young philanthropist who becomes his crime-solving partner. To prove his innocence, Sherlock makes a daring escape and sets about solving the crime. The details of the plot are plausible, the pacing well timed, and the historical setting vividly depicted. Past advice from Sherlock's father steers his thinking as he gathers clues and employs deductive processes. The titular crow comes fascinatingly into play, as Sherlock imagines himself as one of the birds that were the only witnesses to the crime. Inspector Lestrade and his son are introduced, as is Malefactor, a gang leader with a mysterious past who is Sherlock's intellectual equal and worthy opponent. On balance, the characters enrich the book and help give Holmes's storied abilities credence. The tragic death of his mother paves the way for his future pursuit of justice."

4746. Goedhart, Bernie. "Young Sherlock holmes investigates a fatal plunge." The Gazette (Montreal), April 12, 2008: I12.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of "Death in the Air" by Shane Peacock. Tundray Books, 254 pages.

"Sherlock Holmes, boy detective, is back for a second adventure - this one involving some high-flying acrobats and a ruthless gang of thieves. Ontario native Shane Peacock, long fascinated with Arthur Conan Doyle's stories about the brilliant Sherlock Holmes, launched his own series about the character as a budding 13-year-old sleuth last year with Eye of the Crow...."

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES --
PIRIE, DAVID (11)

4747. "Did Conan Doyle play Dr Watson, on the case with a real Sherlock Holmes?". Daily Mail (London), January 3, 2000: 27.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Shortly before the black flag above the jail let the crowds swarming over Calton Hill know justice had been done, the condemned man made a remarkable request. Turning to Dr Henry Littlejohn, Edinburgh's chief medical officer who had come to witness the hanging, wife murderer Eugene Chantrelle said coolly: 'Give my compliments to Joe Bell. He did a good job in bringing me to the scaffold.' In 1878 the remark was widely reported, yet it remains a mystery. Joseph Bell was an eminent Victorian surgeon at Edinburgh's Royal Infirmary, who would amuse medical students by deducing the occupation of his patients from small clues in their appearance. This habit would later inspire a certain student called Arthur Conan Doyle to create the world's most famous detective in Sherlock Holmes. But could there have been more to it than that? Chantrelle's remark suggests Bell solved the murder, not those who took credit at the trial for proving the womanising alcoholic had disposed of his wife with a large dose of opium. If Bell was a real-life Sherlock Holmes, solving crimes that baffled the police, who was the real Doctor Watson who assisted in his secret detective work? The creator of a new BBC drama claims the model for Watson was Doyle himself, and that he and Bell were actively involved in solving crimes. In uncovering the evidence, screen writer David Pirie had to wrestle with mysteries that would have taxed even Holmes. Bell and Doyle were very private men and would in any case have been sworn to secrecy if they did special detective work for the Crown Office...."

4748. "Mystery." Publishers Weekly 249, no. 44 (2002): 30.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features several mystery books on the best seller list in the U.S. as of November 2002. Mention of Doyle and Holmes. "In the most notable Sherlock Holmes pastiches, the great detective was essentially off-stage: Laurie King's seventh Mary Russell mystery, Justice Hall (Bantam), and David Pirie's The Patient's Eyes (St. Martin's Minotaur), with a young Conan Doyle playing Dr. Watson to Dr. Joseph Bell's Holmes."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4749. Champkin, Julian. "Elementary! This is the real Sherlock Holmes." Daily Mail (London), May 20, 1999: 13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...And if that sounds like Sherlock Holmes, it is because the young medical student was Arthur Conan Doyle and his teacher was Dr Joseph Bell - the man who inspired the creation of the great fictional detective. But new research seems to show that Bell was rather more than just an Edinburgh doctor - he may have been a real-life detective....But now the BBC would have us believe otherwise. David Pirie, script editor for a BBC series on Bell to be shown in the autumn, claims to have evidence that Bell was not only a doctor when Conan Doyle met him - he was a consulting detective as well...."
4750. Gibb, Eddie. "Alimentary." The Sunday Herald, January 2, 2000: 12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...The parallels between Bell and Holmes have been milked for all they are worth in a new two-part drama called Murder Rooms: The Dark Beginnings of Sherlock Holmes, which the BBC has high hopes it will be able to turn into a series. Think of a Victorian Inspector Morse with a heavy dollop of Edinburgh Gothic and you will get an idea of how this show looks. Much of the drama was shot in the narrow wynds of Edinburgh's Old Town and has a grim, claustrophobic feel that producer Ian Madden likens to the contemporary horror movie, Seven...."
4751. Hanks, Robert. "Television Review." The Independent (London), January 5, 2000: 16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "David Pirie's two-part drama, Murder Rooms: the Dark Beginnings of Sherlock Holmes (BBC2), which concludes tonight, doesn't leave much to the imagination. Not that it is notably explicit; it just won't allow any credit to human powers of invention. The subject is the early life of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, and in particular his relationship with Joseph Bell, the Edinburgh surgeon whose forays into minute observation and deduction were the avowed inspiration for Sherlock Holmes...."
4752. Hellen, Nicholas. "Elementary, My Dear Doctor." The Toronto Star, May 22, 1999: 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes, regarded by many as the world's greatest fictional detective, might well have owed his literary origins to a note scribbled by a condemned murderer as he stood at the gallows. The doomed man identified Dr. Joseph Bell, Arthur Conan Doyle's medical instructor, as the sleuth who secretly helped the police secure his conviction. 'My compliments to Joseph Bell,' wrote Eugene Chanterelle. 'He did a good job in bringing me to the scaffold.' BBC researchers are convinced that the note alerted Conan Doyle to the double life of his eminent tutor and helped inspire some of the most memorable cases of the fictional Victorian detective. At the Cannes Film Festival last weekend, the BBC announced plans for a feature film and TV series starring Bell as the real Sherlock Holmes with Conan Doyle - rather than Dr. Watson - as his loyal assistant. Jonathan Pryce, the actor best known for his role as the villain in the James Bond movie, Tomorrow Never Dies, is tipped to play the part of Holmes. David Pirie, the script editor of the dramatization, says fresh clues to the origins of Holmes emerged from the memoirs of Conan Doyle's Edinburgh contemporaries...."
4753. ———. "Last words of killer gave life to Sherlock Holmes." Sunday Times (London), May 16, 1999: 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes, regarded by many as the world's greatest fictional detective, owed his literary origins to a note scribbled by a condemned murderer as he stood at the gallows. The doomed man, Eugene Chantrelle, identified Dr Joseph Bell, the medical instructor of Arthur Conan Doyle, as the sleuth who secretly helped the police to secure his conviction. 'My compliments to Joseph Bell,' he wrote. 'He did a good job in bringing me to the scaffold.' BBC researchers are convinced that the note alerted Conan Doyle to the double life of his eminent tutor, and helped to inspire some of the most memorable cases of the fictional Victorian detective. Tomorrow, at the Cannes Film Festival, the BBC will announce plans for a feature film and a television series starring Bell as the real Sherlock Holmes with Conan Doyle, instead of Watson, as his loyal assistant. Jonathan Pryce, the actor best known for his role as the villain in the James Bond movie Tomorrow Never Dies, is tipped to play the part of Holmes. David Pirie, the script editor of the dramatisation, said fresh clues to the origins of Holmes had emerged among the memoirs of Conan Doyle's Edinburgh contemporaries...."
4754. ———. "Secrets behind Sherlock's Scots origins revealed." Sunday Times (London), May 16, 1999: 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Tomorrow, at the Cannes film festival, the BBC will announce plans for a feature film and a television series starring Bell as the real Sherlock Holmes with Conan Doyle, instead of

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Watson, as his loyal assistant. Jonathan Pryce, the actor best known for his role as the villain in the James Bond movie Tomorrow Never Dies, is tipped to play the part of Holmes. David Pirie, the script editor of the dramatisation, said fresh clues to the origins of Holmes had emerged among the memoirs of Conan Doyle's Edinburgh contemporaries...."

4755. Joseph, Joe. "Review." The Times (London), September 5, 2001: 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...Although freshly minted, with a pacy storyline from David Pirie, Murder Rooms has the air of a show that could have been made at any time in the past three decades: those vintage railways, wreathed in steam so as to mask the electricity pylons in the background; the wigs that would never have got past Burt Reynolds's grooming consultant; the itchy suits; every set diligently screened for period authenticity. All this puts a heavy burden on the writer, cast and director which -in this case -they carry lightly...."
4756. Mazzeno, Laurence W. "The Dark Water: The Strange Beginnings of Sherlock Holmes." Magill Book Reviews, no. (2007).
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Sir Arthur Conan Doyle is the hero of this fictionalized tale about his work with his mentor Dr. Joseph Bell to prevent a notorious serial killer from stealing a family's treasure in a remote English village.
4757. Picker, Leonard. "The Real Sherlock Holmes." Publishers Weekly 253, no. 27 (2006): 56-56.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents an interview with David Pirie, author of three mysteries. He explained his reasons for writing mysteries about Conan Doyle, creator of Sherlock Holmes. He discussed his novel The Dark Water. He shared how he had created his characters Doyle and Joseph Bell for BBC.

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES -- R (9)

4758. "Forecasts: Fiction." Publishers Weekly 247, no. 19 (2000): 208.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'The Problem of the Evil Editor: A Charles Dodgson/Arthur Conan Doyle Mystery,' by Roberta Rogow.
4759. Baker, Simon. "The Character Who Refused to Die." Spectator 299, no. 9254/9255 (2005): 64-64.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews books "The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes, Volume III: The Novels," by Arthur Conan Doyle and "Sherlock Holmes: The Unauthorized Biography," by Nick Rennison.
4760. Burns, Ann. "Forthcoming Debuts." Library Journal 128, no. 16 (2003): 42-44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a list of books slated for launch in October 2003. Includes Ted Riccardi, The Oriental Casebook of Sherlock Holmes (Random).
4761. Cannon, Peter. "The Problem of the Surly Servant (Book Review)." Publishers Weekly 248, no. 28 (2001): 51.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'The Problem of the Surly Servant: A Charles Dodgson/Arthur Conan Doyle Mystery,' by Roberta Rogow.
4762. Hobbs, Don. "Review--The Oriental Casebook of Sherlock Holmes by Ted Riccardi." The Holmes & Watson Report 7, no. 6 (2004): 13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4763. Klett, Rex E., and Eric Bryant. "Book reviews: Fiction." Library Journal 123, no. 8 (1998): 143.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book The Problem of the Missing Miss, by Roberta Rogow. (St. Martin's. May 1998. c.272p. ISBN 0-312-18553-7. $21.95.) "First novelist Rogow pairs an aging Charles Dodgson (a.k.a. Lewis Carroll) and a youthful, impetuous Dr. Arthur Conan Doyle (willing to pursue a mystery at the expense of his honeymoon). They meet in late 19th-century Brighton, where Lord Marbury's daughter, meant to spend some time with Dodgson, is abducted by opponents of the upcoming Criminal

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Amendment Bill. The abduction spawns murder, but Doyle and Dodgson have difficulty convincing police that the daughter is in danger. Part of the fun here lies in the reluctant partnership, but there are other spunky characters to watch as well. A good Victorian historical."

4764. Leitch, Thomas. "Neither Fish nor Fowl." Kirkus Reviews 74, no. 18 (2006): 918-918.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Sherlock Holmes: The Unauthorized Biography," by Nick Rennison.
4765. Peters, Susan L. "Sherlock Holmes: The Unauthorized Biography." Library Journal 131, no. 15 (2006): 61-61.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article reviews the book "Sherlock Holmes: The Unauthorized Biography," by Nick Rennison.
4766. Southworth, Bruce E. "Book Review--'The Disappearance of Edwin Drood' by Peter Rowland." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 71 (1992): 42-43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES -- ROBERTS, BARRIE (10)

4767. "Booklines." Birmingham Post, February 3, 2001: 52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "West Midlands lawyer Barrie Roberts impersonating Conan Doyle in his latest Sherlock Holmes narrative, Sherlock Holmes & The Crosby Murder (Constable Crime, pounds 16.99)."
4768. "Off the Shelf: Murder and a Che Mystery." Birmingham Evening Mail, April 16, 2001: 27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Short review of "Sherlock Holmes and the Crosby Murder" by Barrie Roberts (Constable, pounds 16.99) "...This is the sixth Sherlock Holmes mystery penned by Barrie Roberts, a criminal lawyer with West Midlands firms and one of the men involved in the appeals of the Birmingham Six. For Holmes' fans the series is great fun, although the novels, understandably, never quite capture that special Arthur Conan Doyle atmosphere. Particularly impressive is the way Roberts explains his research and supports his theories with extensive editor's notes at the end of the story...."
4769. "Sherlock Holmes and the American Angels." Publishers Weekly 254, no. 25 (2007): 38-38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Sherlock Holmes and the American Angels," by Barrie Roberts.
4770. "Sherlock Holmes and the King's Governess." Publishers Weekly 252, no. 24 (2005): 36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "Sherlock Holmes and the King's Governess," by Barrie Roberts.
4771. Hall, John. "Review--'Sherlock Holmes & the Devil's Grail' by Barrie Roberts." The Musgrave Papers, no. 8 (1995): 108-110.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4772. Hobbs, Don. "Review--Sherlock Holmes and the Man From Hell by Barrie Roberts." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 3 (2000): 12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4773. Klett, Rex E. "Keeping with Tradition." Library Journal 130, no. 12 (2005): 56-56.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Introduces a list of several mystery books reviewed in this issue of the "Library Journal." Author's view that traditional private investigator literary characters are still big with readers despite the introduction of a recent wave of unusual sleuths; Reference to Barrie Roberts's "Sherlock Holmes and the King's Governess" and "Sandra Scoppettone's "This Dame for Hire."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4774. ———. "Sherlock Holmes and the King's Governess." Library Journal 130, no. 12 (2005): 57.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "Sherlock Holmes and the King's Governess," by Barrie Roberts.
4775. Melton, Emily. "Sherlock Holmes and the American Angels." Booklist 103, no. 17 (2007): 38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Sherlock Holmes and the American Angels,' by Barrie Roberts. "A mysterious coded message in the newspaper draws Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson into their latest adventure. Holmes believes the message indicates a dangerous plot involving the Scottish pretender to the throne is afoot in London. A dead body in Regents Park and another in a London hotel--both stabbed to death by the same Scottish knife--underscore Holmes' suspicion. Then he and Watson are visited by a representative of President Roosevelt who asks Holmes to find the killer of the two murdered men. The killer, the representative explains, is likely after a hoard of gold reputed to have been hidden in Scotland during the American War of Independence. The gold, if found, could be used by a subversive group plotting to overthrow the American government. Holmes and Watson immediately head to Scotland to unmask the killer and save America. Watson is initially as puzzled as readers are likely to be by the convoluted plot, but the story is cleverly resolved and will delight fans of the fictitious British sleuth, who is at his supercilious, brilliant best."
4776. Skoyles, Lesley. "Review--'Sherlock Holmes and the Railway Maniac' by Barrie Roberts." The Ritual, no. 13 (1994): 51-52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES -- RYBOLT, THOMAS R. (13)

4777. "News & Announcements." Journal of chemical education 84, no. 4 (2007): 593-595.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article offers news briefs related to chemistry in the U.S. A compendium of 15 stories by Thomas G. Waddell and Thomas R. Rybolt titled "The Chemical Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" has been translated into French by Paul Depovere. The American Chemical Society (ACS) Division of the History of Chemistry (HIST) has been soliciting nomination for its award, Citation for Chemical Breakthroughs. The Department of Chemistry at the University of Michigan is commemorating its 150th anniversary.
4778. Waddell, Thomas G., and Thomas R. Rybolt. "The chemical adventures of Sherlock Holmes." Journal of chemical education 71, no. 12 (1994): 1049.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a story describing a chemical mystery with an emphasis on physical properties and balancing reaction equations.
4779. ———. "The chemical adventures of Sherlock Holmes: a Christmas story." Journal of chemical education 68, no. (1991): 1023-1024.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4780. ———. "The Chemical Adventures of Sherlock Holmes: Autopsy in Blue." Journal of chemical education 81, no. 4 (2004): 497-501.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A chemical problem is presented in the form of a mystery involving the fictional characters Sherlock Holmes and Doctor Watson. The mystery emphasizes qualitative inorganic analysis, forensic chemistry, and medicinal substances.
4781. ———. "The chemical adventures of Sherlock Holmes: The Baker Street Burning." Journal of chemical education 75, no. 4 (1998): 484.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a short story on chemical adventures of Sherlock Holmes, relative to chemistry and qualitative organic analysis.
4782. ———. "The Chemical Adventures of Sherlock Holmes: The Blackwater Escape." Journal of chemical

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

education 80, no. 4 (2003): 401-406.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A chemical mystery with an emphasis on qualitative inorganic analysis, laboratory observations, and oxidation-reduction processes is presented. In the hypothetical scenario, Sherlock Holmes solves the mystery of how a criminal was able to dissolve an iron bar and escape from his cell.

4783. ———. "The chemical adventures of Sherlock Holmes: the case of the screaming stepfather." Journal of chemical education 69, no. (1992): 999-1001.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4784. ———. "The chemical adventures of Sherlock Holmes: the case of the stoichiometric solution." Journal of chemical education 70, no. (1993): 1003-1005.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A scientific problem emphasizing the use of stoichiometry calculations is presented in the form of a mystery story involving the well-known characters Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson. A break in the story allows students and teachers to contemplate and solve the chemical mystery. This is followed by the Sherlock Holmes' solution.

4785. ———. "The chemical adventures of Sherlock Holmes: the ghost of Gordon Square." Journal of chemical education 77, no. 4 (2000): 471-474.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A chemical problem in mystery format in the context of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's characters Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson is presented. Holmes demonstrates that the activities of a "ghost" are actually the work of a disgruntled employee playing chemical tricks.

4786. ———. "The chemical adventures of Sherlock Holmes: the shroud of Spartacus." Journal of chemical education 78, no. 4 (2001): 470-474.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Part of a series of articles in which a scientific problem is presented in mystery format in the context of the popular and beloved characters Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson. The mystery centers on a blood protein test, qualitative analysis, and the properties of biological substances.

4787. ———. "Sherlock Holmes and the fraudulent ketone." Journal of chemical education 67, no. (1990): 1006-1008.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4788. ———. "Sherlock Holmes and the Nebulous Nitro." Journal of chemical education 73, no. 12 (1996): 1157.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Another in a series of chemical adventures featuring Holmes.

4789. ———. "Sherlock Holmes and the yellow prisms." Journal of chemical education 66, no. (1989): 981-982.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES -- S (19)

4790. "Calendar." Publishers Weekly 254, no. 48 (2007): 9-9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A calendar of events related to book publishing for December 9-15, 2007 is presented, including "Quirk's interactive Sherlock Holmes mystery The Crimes of Dr. Watson offers removable clues to solve a new who-dunit (featuring arson and murder) by Duane Swierczynski."

4791. "Forward into Fall." Publishers Weekly 254, no. 31 (2007): 45-124.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A list of several books. Includes an item from Quirk Books: The Crimes of Dr. Watson: An Interactive Sherlock Holmes Mystery (Nov., $24.95) by John H. Watson, M.D., edited by Duane Swierczynski, allows readers to solve the mystery when Holmes goes missing and Watson is framed for murder.

4792. "What the world is reading." Economist, no. (1996): 4/5p.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Looks at lists of bestselling books in Mexico and Brazil, with Holmes reference.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

"O Xango de Baker Street by Jo Soares transplants Sherlock Holmes to fin-de-siecle Rio de Janeiro in a comic detective tale."

4793. Cooper, Ilene. "Adult books." Booklist 90, no. 18 (1994): 1668.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'The Angel of the Opera: Sherlock Holmes Meets the Phantom of the Opera,' by Sam Siciliano.
4794. Gunson, Eilidh. "Review--'The Chronicles of Sherlock Holmes, Volume 2' by Denis O. Smith." The Ritual, no. 23 (1999): 60-61.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4795. Hall, John. "Review--'The Siam Question' by Timothy Francis Sheil." The Ritual, no. 25 (2000): 53-54.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4796. Hobbs, Don. "Review (as Dugan Hobbenstein)--Die Schale des Zodiakus by D. O. Smith." The Holmes & Watson Report 2, no. 5 (1998): 15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4797. ———. "Review--A Samba for Sherlock by Jo Soares." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 3 (2000): 10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4798. ———. "Review--Holmes Redux by David Scott." The Holmes & Watson Report 2, no. 6 (1999): 32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4799. ———. "Review--Mysteries Suspended: More Early Cases of Sherlock Holmes by Richard Stone." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 2 (2000): 9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4800. ———. "Review--Sherlock Holmes & the Titanic (sic) by William Seil." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 5 (2000): 24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4801. ———. "Review--The Case of the Devil's Hoofmarks by Allen Sharp." The Holmes & Watson Report 7, no. 2 (2003): 23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4802. ———. "Review--The Charters Affair by James R. Stephanie." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 6 (2001): 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4803. ———. "Review--The Diaries of Mrs. John H. Watson nee Morstan by Fraser Smyth." The Holmes & Watson Report 2, no. 2 (1998): 27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4804. ———. "Review--The Peshwar Lancers by S. M. Stirling." The Holmes & Watson Report 6, no. 1 (2002): 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4805. Moore, Claudia. "Book review: Adult books for young adults." School Library Journal 40, no. 12 (1994): 144.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Angel of the Opera: Sherlock Holmes Meets the Phantom of the Opera,' by Sam Siciliano.
4806. Pendleton, Elsa. "Book reviews: Fiction." Library Journal 119, no. 10 (1994): 164.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the novel 'The Angel of the Opera: Sherlock Holmes Meets the Phantom of the Opera,' by Sam Siciliano.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4807. Sullivan, Greg. "Review--The 20th Century Limited Mystery by Philip A. Shreffler." The Holmes & Watson Report 5, no. 1 (2001): 10, 20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4808. White, Kathryn. "Review--'Sherlock Holmes and the Titanic Tragedy' by William Seil." The Ritual, no. 17 (1996): 76-78.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES -- SPRINGER, NANCY (9)

4809. "The Case of Bizarre Bouquets." Kirkus Reviews 75, no. 22 (2007): 1205.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The Case of Bizarre Bouquets," by Nancy Springer. "In this third Enola Holmes mystery, the younger, teenage sister of Sherlock Holmes is determined to find the missing Dr. Watson on her own by deciphering the clues in the bizarre bouquets sent to his wife. As in the previous two titles, Enola uses disguises, codes, false names and her familiarity with London's seamy side to solve the case...."
4810. "The Case of the Left-Handed Lady." School Library Journal 54, no. (2008): 55-55.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the audiobook "The Case of the Left-Handed Lady," by Nancy Springer.
4811. "The Case of the Peculiar Pink Fan." Kirkus Reviews 76, no. 16 (2008): 203-203.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The Case of the Peculiar Pink Fan: An Enola Holmes Mystery," by Nancy Springer. "Although their own eccentricities are legendary, Mycroft and Sherlock Holmes fully expect their very much younger sister to take on the attributes of the stereotypical Victorian female. She will be schooled in womanly endeavors with an eye to a future as someone's wife--but 14-year-old Enola has ideas of her own...."
4812. "Children's Books for Spring." Publishers Weekly 255, no. 7 (2008): 27-116.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // List includes Nancy Springer's The Case of the Bizarre Bouquets (the Enola Holmes Mysteries) ($14.99, 9-up); The Boy Sherlock Holmes continues with Death in the Air by Shane Peacock ($19.95, 10-14); The Sherlock Files debuts with The 100-Year-Old Secret by Tracy Barrett ($15.95.8-12).
4813. "Read-Alikes: Victorian Mysteries for Youth." Booklist 104, no. 17 (2008): 50-50.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article reviews a number of books including The Case of the Missing Marquess: An Enola Holmes Mystery. By Nancy Springer. 2007. Philomel, $10.99 (9780399243042). "Clues and ciphers abound in true Holmesian fashion when Sherlock's younger sister, possessing keen powers of observation herself, is enmeshed in a double mystery after bicycling off to London to avoid boarding school and investigate the disappearance of her mother."
4814. Bilton, Karen T. "The Case of the Left-Handed Lady." School Library Journal 53, no. 12 (2007): 67-67.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the audiobook "The Case of the Left-Handed Lady," by Nancy Springer, the second title in a series featuring Enola Holmes, the famed detective's younger sister.
4815. Burkey, Mary. "The Case of the Bizarre Bouquets." Booklist 104, no. 17 (2008): 97.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the audiobook "The Case of the Bizarre Bouquets" by Nancy Springer. Read by Katherine Kellgren. 2008. 4hr. Recorded Books, CS, $30.75 (9781428182523); CD, $30.75 (9781428182578).
4816. Cooper, Ilene. "The Case of the Peculiar Pink Fan: An Enola Holmes Mystery." Booklist 105, no. 4 (2008): 36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "An Enola Holmes Mystery: The Case of the Peculiar Pink Fan"

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

by Nancy Springer. "Enola Holmes, the younger sister of Sherlock Holmes, returns in her fourth mystery.... A rousing read with plenty of terrific Victorian detail."

4817. Raska, Ginny. "Get 'Em While They're Hot!" Library Media Connection 27, no. 3 (2008): 24-25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article focuses on the most popular series books for teenagers in the U.S. Includes one with a Holmesian connection. "...Another series that appeals to girls is the great new Enola Holmes Mysteries by Nancy Springer, author of the popular Tales of Rowan Hood series. Based on the fictitious sister of Sherlock Holmes, the series kicks off with The Case of the Missing Marquess (Philomel, 2006), followed by The Case of the Left-Handed Lady (2007), and The Case of the Bizarre Bouquets (2008). The Case of the Peculiar Pink Fan is scheduled to appear in September...."

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES -- T
(7)

4818. "The Hellfire Conspiracy." Publishers Weekly 254, no. 21 (2007): 38-38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The Hellfire Conspiracy," by Will Thomas. Includes a reference to Holmes. "At the start of Thomas's well-crafted fourth Barker and Llewelyn mystery to feature a London detective duo clearly modeled on Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson (after 2006's The Limehouse Text), a distraught guardsman, Major DeVere, consults Cyrus Barker, a smugly intellectual private enquiry agent, and his young apprentice, ex-con Thomas Llewelyn. The major's 12-year-old daughter has disappeared, and DeVere fears she has fallen victim to white slavers, though the sleuths suspect a serial killer may be at work...."
4819. "Notes." Publishers Weekly 241, no. 29 (1994): 239.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Lists publications for August 1994. Ivan Concharov's 'The Precipice and 'An Ordinary Story'; 'Shuttered Heart,' by Meg Buchanan; 'Secrets in the Attic,' by Sita Mann; 'The Unopened Casebook of Sherlock Holmes,' by John Taylor; 'Highpockets,' by Douglas Savage; 'Personal Recollections of Joan of Arc; 'King of the World,' by Celia Fremlin.
4820. Barrett, Mike. "Review--Sherlock Holmes and the Masquerade Murders by Frank Thomas." The Ritual, no. 14 (1994): 54-55.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4821. Chapman, Paul M. "Review--'Sherlock Holmes and the Chinese Junk Affair and Other Stories' by Roy Templeman." The Ritual, no. 23 (1999): 62-63.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4822. Hobbs, Don. "Review--Lestrade and the Haunted House by M. J. Trow." The Holmes & Watson Report 3, no. 3 (1999): 17.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4823. McKuras, Julie. "Basil of Baker Street." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 5, no. 1 (2001): 1, 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights the recent acquisition of the original type-written manuscripts of Eve Titus, complete with Ms. Titus' hand-written notes, of her five books: Basil of Baker Street, 1958, Basil and the Lost Colony, 1964, Basil and the Pygmy Cats, 1971, Basil in Mexico, 1976, and Basil in the Wild West, 1982. These five books were illustrated by Paul Galdone, whose original drawings for Basil of Baker Street were previously donated to the Children's Literature Research Collection (also at the University of Minnesota). Includes an illustration from the CLRC collection.
4824. Olson, Kiki. "Murder on the seamy side of Atlantic City." St. Petersburg Times (Florida), June 5, 1994: 7D.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Brief review of Sherlock Holmes and the Maquerade Murders, by Frank Thomas, Otto Penzler Books, $21. 'When will writers follow the example of Arthur Conan Doyle and let Sherlock

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Holmes finally rest in peace and quit coming up with 'recently discovered memoirs' written by Dr. Watson? Just as the stories written by Conan Doyle after he 'resurrected' Holmes from the Reichenbach cataract were never as crisp as his earlier works, books written in the style of Doyle (pardon, Watson) are generally tired, stale and stilted. Sherlock Holmes and the Masquerade Murders is just another example...."

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES -- THOMAS, DONALD (8)

4825. "The Execution of Sherlock Holmes." Kirkus Reviews 75, no. 7 (2007): 312-312.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The Execution of Sherlock Holmes," by Donald Thomas.
4826. "The Execution of Sherlock Holmes and Other New Adventures of the Great Detective." Publishers Weekly 254, no. 11 (2007): 40-40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The Execution of Sherlock Holmes and Other New Adventures of the Great Detective," by Donald Thomas.
4827. "Forecasts: Fiction." Publishers Weekly 245, no. 18 (1998): 207.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'The Secret Cases of Sherlock Holmes,' by Donald Thomas.
4828. Conlon, John J. "The Execution of Sherlock Holmes." Magill Book Reviews, no. (2007): no page citation.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Writing in the person of Dr. Watson, Donald Thomas carries on the great tradition of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle by presenting five new cases featuring the world's most famous consulting detective, Sherlock Holmes. Sherlockians will revel in the level of accurate detail from the original stories while those who are not as familiar with the early cases will not be disadvantaged thanks to the clarity of Thomas's writing. The title case features the plot to destroy Holmes in which his would-be assassins appear to have thought of everything but Holmes's vast array of intellectual resources. Watson's earlier account of Holmes's death at Reichenbach Falls was erroneous: that four additional stories follow is a clue to this one's ending. 'The Case of the Greek Key' presents an ingenious exercise in code-breaking involving the British Admiralty, German spies, and Kaiser Wilhelm. 'The Case of the Peasenhall Murder' contains a seemingly impossible series of events and conflicting stories to untangle. 'The Case of the Phantom Parlor Maid' takes Holmes into the supernatural realm until he can reason out the problem, and 'The Queen of the Night' is a compelling tale of jewel thieves, duplicity, and the preparations for the coronation of Edward VII. In each of these cases Holmes and Watson live again exactly as they had in the writings of Conan Doyle but into a future Thomas, as a masterful story-teller, articulates splendidly. One could not hope for a better re-creation of the Baker Street duo."
4829. Hobbs, Don. "Review--Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of the Crypt and Other Tales by Donald Thomas." The Holmes & Watson Report 7, no. 5 (2003): 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4830. ———. "Review--The Secret Cases of Sherlock Holmes by Donald Thomas." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 3 (2000): 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4831. Scott, Whitney. "Adult books: Fiction." Booklist 94, no. 19/20 (1998): 1735.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'The Secret Cases of Sherlock Holmes,' by Donald Thomas.
4832. ———. "The Execution of Sherlock Holmes." Booklist 103, no. 15 (2007): 33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "The Execution of Sherlock Holmes," by Donald Thomas.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES --
THOMSON, JUNE (3)

4833. Auswaks, Alex. "Crime Briefs." The Jerusalem Post, July 2, 1999: 12B.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of The Secret Documents of Sherlock Holmes by June Thomson. London, Allison & Busby. 233 pp. 5.99. "Avid readers of the Sherlock Holmes canon used to bemoan the fact that Dr. Watson frequently referred to cases which he said were still secret or he hadn't got round to reporting to the fans. Out of this came the numerous Sherlock Holmes pastiches, each of which is an attempt to guess what happened in that particular case. The very best of such pastiches is the work of June Thomson, who has recreated so accurately the world of Baker Street....I have a personal confession to make. I was never ever a Conan Doyle fan, but I love these pastiches."
4834. Davies, David Stuart. "Review--'The Secret Journals of Sherlock Holmes' by June Thomson." The Musgrave Papers, no. 6 (1993): 110.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4835. North, John. "Beyond the formula." The Toronto Star, August 19, 1995: J15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Brief review. "...June Thomson has written excellent mystery novels and three collections of short stories whose central character is Sherlock Holmes, in the manner of the master, Conan Doyle. (Among crime fiction aficionados such stories are called pastiches.) Her latest book, Holmes And Watson, is that rare hybrid - the fictional biography. Thomson has winnowed the vast harvest of Holmesiana (both Conan Doyle's original material and the enormous output of critical and interpretive commentary) to produce a comprehensive account of the intertwined lives of detection's definitive duo...."

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES -- V
(2)

4836. Barrett, Mike. "Review -- 'The Seventh Bullet' by Daniel D. Victor." The Musgrave Papers, no. 7 (1994): 121-122.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4837. Leeper, Evelyn C. "Book Review--'The Seventh Bullet' by Daniel D. Victor." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 71 (1992): 44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES -- VANNEMAN, ALAN (3)

4838. "Fall 2003 Hardcovers." Publishers Weekly 250, no. 32 (2003): 144.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a listing of hardcover books published in the U.S. in fall 2003 including Carroll & Graf, Sherlock Holmes and the Hapsburg Tiara (Feb., $25) by Alan Vanneman. "Winston Churchill calls in Holmes and Watson, charging that Archduke Josef of Austria is an imposter."
4839. Connors, Theresa. "Sherlock Holmes and the Hapsburg Tiara." Library Journal 130, no. 4 (2005): 125.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the audiobook "Sherlock Holmes and the Hapsburg Tiara," by Alan Vanneman.
4840. Hobbs, Don. "Review--Sherlock Holmes and the Giant Rat of Sumatra by Alan Vanneman." The Holmes & Watson Report 6, no. 1 (2002): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES -- W
(6)

4841. Freeman, Judith. "Review -- The Science of Sherlock Holmes From Baskerville Hall to the Valley of Fear: the Real Forensics Behind the Great Detective's Greatest Cases by E. J. Wagner." The Serpentine Muse 22, no. 3 (2006): 20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4842. Greenfield, Daniel P. "The Science of Sherlock Holmes. From Baskerville Hall to the Valley of Fear, the Real Forensics Behind the Great Detective's Greatest Cases." Journal of Psychiatry & Law 36, no. 1 (2008): 117-120.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of the book. "The reader of this Journal who is interested in the history of science--forensic science, in this case--as well as in Sherlock Holmes--will find this book both informative and entertaining...."
4843. Hall, John. "Review--'Dr. Mortimer and the Aldgate Mystery' by Gerard Williams." The Ritual, no. 25 (2000): 58-60.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4844. Hobbs, Don. "Review--Dr. Mortimer & the Aldgate Mystery by Gerald Williams." The Holmes & Watson Report 7, no. 4 (2003): 20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4845. Hunter-Purvis, Mark. "Review--'The Singular Case of the Duplicate Holmes' by Jan Walker." The Ritual, no. 14 (1994): 60.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4846. Roden, Barbara. "Review--'Sherlock Holmes: Travels in the Canadian West' by Ronald C. Weyman." The Ritual, no. 18 (1996): 65.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

11F PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- OTHER STORIES -- WADDELL, THOMAS G. (17)

4847. "News & Announcements." Journal of chemical education 84, no. 4 (2007): 593-595.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article offers news briefs related to chemistry in the U.S. A compendium of 15 stories by Thomas G. Waddell and Thomas R. Rybolt titled "The Chemical Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" has been translated into French by Paul Depovere. The American Chemical Society (ACS) Division of the History of Chemistry (HIST) has been soliciting nomination for its award, Citation for Chemical Breakthroughs. The Department of Chemistry at the University of Michigan is commemorating its 150th anniversary.
4848. Rybolt, Thomas R., and Thomas G. Waddell. "The chemical adventures of Sherlock Holmes." Journal of chemical education 72, no. 12 (1995): 1090.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Describes a chemical mystery with an emphasis on scientific observation and the criminal use of chemistry. Presentation of a problem in the form and context of the characters of Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson; Problem of Woolthshrap prison concerning an alleged conspiracy that enabled one of the prisoners to communicate with the outside world; Solution to the mystery.
4849. ———. "The chemical adventures of Sherlock Holmes: the case of three." Journal of chemical education 79, no. 4 (2002): 448-453.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A scientific problem involving simple physical and chemical properties of metals is presented in mystery format in the context of the popular characters Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson.

4850. ———. "The chemical adventures of Sherlock Holmes: the death puzzle at 221B Baker Street." Journal of chemical education 76, no. 4 (1999): 489-493.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A chemical mystery story featuring the detective Sherlock Holmes is presented. The mystery is focused on medicinal chemistry and qualitative analysis and revolves around lead poisoning caused by a ceramic teapot.
4851. ———. "The Chemical Adventures of Sherlock Holmes: The Problem of Woolthsharp Prison." Journal of chemical education, no. (1996): 1090.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A chemical mystery story featuring the detective Sherlock Holmes is presented.
4852. Waddell, Thomas G., and Thomas R. Rybolt. "The chemical adventures of Sherlock Holmes." Journal of chemical education 71, no. 12 (1994): 1049.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a story describing a chemical mystery with an emphasis on physical properties and balancing reaction equations.
4853. ———. "The chemical adventures of Sherlock Holmes: a Christmas story." Journal of chemical education 68, no. (1991): 1023-1024.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4854. ———. "The Chemical Adventures of Sherlock Holmes: Autopsy in Blue." Journal of chemical education 81, no. 4 (2004): 497-501.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A chemical problem is presented in the form of a mystery involving the fictional characters Sherlock Holmes and Doctor Watson. The mystery emphasizes qualitative inorganic analysis, forensic chemistry, and medicinal substances.
4855. ———. "The chemical adventures of Sherlock Holmes: The Baker Street Burning." Journal of chemical education 75, no. 4 (1998): 484.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a short story on chemical adventures of Sherlock Holmes, relative to chemistry and qualitative organic analysis.
4856. ———. "The Chemical Adventures of Sherlock Holmes: The Blackwater Escape." Journal of chemical education 80, no. 4 (2003): 401-406.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A chemical mystery with an emphasis on qualitative inorganic analysis, laboratory observations, and oxidation-reduction processes is presented. In the hypothetical scenario, Sherlock Holmes solves the mystery of how a criminal was able to dissolve an iron bar and escape from his cell.
4857. ———. "The chemical adventures of Sherlock Holmes: the case of the screaming stepfather." Journal of chemical education 69, no. (1992): 999-1001.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4858. ———. "The chemical adventures of Sherlock Holmes: the case of the stoichiometric solution." Journal of chemical education 70, no. (1993): 1003-1005.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A scientific problem emphasizing the use of stoichiometry calculations is presented in the form of a mystery story involving the well-known characters Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson. A break in the story allows students and teachers to contemplate and solve the chemical mystery. This is followed by the Sherlock Holmes' solution.
4859. ———. "The chemical adventures of Sherlock Holmes: the ghost of Gordon Square." Journal of chemical education 77, no. 4 (2000): 471-474.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A chemical problem in mystery format in the context of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's characters Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson is presented. Holmes demonstrates that the activities of a "ghost"

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

are actually the work of a disgruntled employee playing chemical tricks.

4860. ———. "The chemical adventures of Sherlock Holmes: the shroud of Spartacus." Journal of chemical education 78, no. 4 (2001): 470-474.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Part of a series of articles in which a scientific problem is presented in mystery format in the context of the popular and beloved characters Sherlock Holmes and Dr Watson. The mystery centers on a blood protein test, qualitative analysis, and the properties of biological substances.
4861. ———. "Sherlock Holmes and the fraudulent ketone." Journal of chemical education 67, no. (1990): 1006-1008.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4862. ———. "Sherlock Holmes and the Nebulous Nitro." Journal of chemical education 73, no. 12 (1996): 1157.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Another in a series of chemical adventures featuring Holmes.
4863. ———. "Sherlock Holmes and the yellow prisms." Journal of chemical education 66, no. (1989): 981-982.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

11G PARODIES, PASTICHES, BURLESQUES, TRAVESTIES AND SATIRES -- CHILDREN'S LITERATURE, STORIES, PICTURE BOOKS AND PUZZLES (65)

4864. "The 100-Year-Old Secret: The Sherlock Files, Book 1." Kirkus Reviews 76, no. 7 (2008): 352-352.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The 100-Year-Old Secret: The Sherlock Files," vol. 1, by Tracy Barrett.
4865. "2001 Selected Videos, DVDs, and Audiobooks for Young Adults." School Library Journal 47, no. 4 (2001): 59.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the winners of the 2001 Selected Videos, DVD and Audiobooks for Young Adults, selected by the Young Library Services Association. Includes Sherlock's Secret Life, by Ed Lang. Read by Karl Malden and performed by N.Y. State Theatre Institute. 2 cassettes. 1:43 hrs. ISBN 1-892613-03-4. 1999. $16.95. New York State Theatre Institute. "The young Sherlock Holmes, and his familiar cohorts, Dr. Watson and Professor Moriarty, are portrayed in this original and fully dramatized story about an early case that brought the detective to the brink of lovelorn heartbreak."
4866. "2004: Best, Notable & Recommended." Teacher Librarian 31, no. 4 (2004): 8-18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a list of recommended books, software online subscription service, videos and sound recordings for children and young adults. Lists The Great Adventures of Sherlock Holmes. Arthur Conan Doyle. Penguin Putnam. 0-14-036689-X.
4867. "ALA Book Picks 2004." School Library Journal 50, no. 3 (2004): 58-66.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The American Library Association's book picks for 2004 are listed, including: Doyle, Arthur Conan. The Great Adventures of Sherlock Holmes. Puffin. 1991. $5. ISBN 0-14-036689-X.
4868. "Bookmarkit." Teacher Librarian 34, no. 5 (2007): 9-56.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews several books, including The fall of the amazing Zalindas: Sherlock Holmes and the Baker Street Irregulars. Tracy Mack, Orchard Books, 2006, $16.99. 978-0-439-82836-9. Grades 4-6. "Sherlock Holmes owed much of his success to the Baker Street Irregulars (the ragged gang of neighborhood kids that ran his errands and collected information for him), as this collection of stories demonstrates."
4869. "Books, Multimedia, and Web Sites: Grades 4-8." School Library Journal 3, no. 1 (2006): 49-52, 54-6, 58-60, 62, 64, 66-9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An annotated directory of books, multimedia products, and Web sites for students in grades 4 to 8 is provided. Includes a number of entries with Holmes or Doyle connections. Down the Rabbit Hole: An Echo Falls Mystery (unabr.). 6 cassettes. Stirs. Recorded Books (recordedbooks.com). 2005. ISBN 1-

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- 4193- 5747-6. $37.75; read-along pack: $59.95."...Peter Abrahams's splendid mystery (Laura Geringer, 2005) is ripe with allusions to Lewis Carroll's Alice's Adventures in Wonderland, Arthur Conan Doyle's stories about Sherlock Holmes, and Alfred Hitchcock's Dial M for Murder...."; SPRINGER, Nancy. The Case of the Missing Marques: An Enola Holmes Mystery. 213p. Philomel/Sleuth, 2006. Tr $10.99, ISBN 0-399-24304-6. "When her mother mysteriously disappears on her 14th birthday, Enola Holmes reluctantly turns to her adult brothers, Sherlock and Mycroft, for help, but soon learns that she must take charge of her own destiny. The clever girl heads for London where she dons different disguises, solves a mystery or two, and gets herself into and out of a number of sticky situations. An appealing and resilient heroine takes the Victorians by storm."
4870. "Books, Multimedia, and Web Sites: Grades 9-12." School Library Journal 2, no. 2 (2005): 81.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A directory of print, multimedia, and online resources for grades 9-12 is provided. Includes Abrahams, Peter. Down the Rabbit Hole: An Echo Falls Mystery. 375p. CIP. HarperCollins/A Laura Geringer Bk. 2005. Tr $15.99. ISBN 0-06-073701-8; PLB $16.89. ISBN 0-06-073702-6. LC 2004014778. Gr 6-9 "Thirteen-year-old Ingrid, an avid fan of Sherlock Holmes mysteries, is drawn into a murder investigation. Plot twists, building tension, and riveting adventures combine to make this a first-rate story."
4871. "The Case of Bizarre Bouquets." Kirkus Reviews 75, no. 22 (2007): 1205.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The Case of Bizarre Bouquets," by Nancy Springer. "In this third Enola Holmes mystery, the younger, teenage sister of Sherlock Holmes is determined to find the missing Dr. Watson on her own by deciphering the clues in the bizarre bouquets sent to his wife. As in the previous two titles, Enola uses disguises, codes, false names and her familiarity with London's seamy side to solve the case...."
4872. "The Case of the Left-Handed Lady." School Library Journal 54, no. (2008): 55-55.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the audiobook "The Case of the Left-Handed Lady," by Nancy Springer.
4873. "The Case of the Missing Marquess: An Enola Holmes Mystery." Kirkus Reviews 73, no. 24 (2005): 1328-1328.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article reviews the book "The Case of the Missing Marquess: An Enola Holmes Mystery," by Nancy Springer.
4874. "The Case of the Peculiar Pink Fan." Kirkus Reviews 76, no. 16 (2008): 203-203.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The Case of the Peculiar Pink Fan: An Enola Holmes Mystery," by Nancy Springer. "Although their own eccentricities are legendary, Mycroft and Sherlock Holmes fully expect their very much younger sister to take on the attributes of the stereotypical Victorian female. She will be schooled in womanly endeavors with an eye to a future as someone's wife--but 14-year-old Enola has ideas of her own...."
4875. "Children's Bookbag." Publishers Weekly 246, no. 32 (1999): 213.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents news briefs on children's books as of August 1999. Features the book series called Aladdin Classics which includes The Hound of the Baskervilles.
4876. "Children's Books for Fall." Publishers Weekly 254, no. 28 (2007): 34-127.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A list of children's books for fall 2007 is presented. Included is one related to Holmes. "The Boy Sherlock Holmes debuts with His 1st Case: Eye of the Crow by Shane Peacock ($19.95, 10-14)."
4877. "Children's Books for Spring." Publishers Weekly 245, no. 7 (1998): 128.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an extensive listing of books planned for publication in spring, 1998, according to publisher, title, and author. Brief summaries of each book.
4878. "Children's Choices for 1999." Reading Teacher 53, no. 2 (1999): 169.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents lists of children's and young adult's trade books selected by school children in the United States for the year 1999. Includes an anthology of werewolf and vampire stories

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

collected by Alan Durant. Included are stories by popular authors such as Arthur Conan Doyle, Bram Stoker, Woody Allen, and Jane Yolen.

4879. "Comprehensive Bibliography." Book Links 17, no. 3 (2008): 61-63.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A list of books that appear in the articles published in this issue is presented. The list includes "Eye of the Crow: The Boy Sherlock Holmes, His First Case." By Shane Peacock. 2007.
4880. "Comprehensive Bibliography." Book Links 17, no. 4 (2008): 61-63.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // References for the articles published in the March 1, 2008 issue of "Book Links" are presented. Under "Best New Books for the Classroom" is listed Eye of the Crow: The Boy Sherlock Holmes, His First Case. By Shane Peacock. 2007.
4881. "Fall 2006 Sneak Previews." Publishers Weekly 253, no. 8 (2006): 120-129.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Note on Scholastic/Orchard publication of Sherlock Holmes and the Baker Street Irregulars, Casebook No. 1: The Fall of the Amazing Walendas by Tracy Mack and Michael Citrin, "a new series about Holmes and his young band of ragtag assistants..."
4882. "I So Don't Do Mysteries." Publishers Weekly 255, no. 42 (2008): 50-51.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "I So Don't Do Mysteries," by Barrie Summy. Includes a reference to Holmes. "About to be shipped off to San Diego while her widower dad goes on his honeymoon, seventh-grader Sherry (short for Sherlock) Holmes Baldwin prepares to put up a fight when she is contacted by her mother's ghost. Killed in the line of duty, her cop mother is flunking out of an afterlife law-enforcement academy, and she needs Sherry's help to crack a case at the San Diego Wild Animal Park...."
4883. "I so Don't do Mysteries." Kirkus Reviews 76, no. 22 (2008): 1208-1208.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "I So Don't Do Mysteries," by Barrie Summy. Delacorte (272 pp.) $15.99 PLB $18.99. Dec. 9, 2008. ISBN: 978-0-385-73602-2 PLB: 978-0-385-90583-1. "In life, Sherry and her work-obsessed cop mother weren't much of a team, but when Sherry's deceased mom returns as a spirit several months after her death, Sherry can't deny her request to join forces in her quest to move on in the spirit world. It seems she's in danger of flunking out of the Academy of Spirits, a ghostly institution that trains the departed to watch over the living. Despite being named after Sherlock Holmes, Sherry feels more comfortable hanging out at the mall and generally shies away from mysteries and challenges, but as she gets drawn into her mother's task, Sherry finds that she can persevere under pressure, be incredibly resourceful and even shine in the limelight...."
4884. "Notes." Publishers Weekly 245, no. 16 (1998): 68.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Offers brief reviews of some children's books. Includes Doyle in Detective Stories, compiled by Philip Pullman (Kingfisher) 244p. ISBN 0-7534-5157-3
4885. "Popular Paperbacks for Young Adults." School Library Journal 50, no. 3 (2004): 64-66.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a list of paperback books for young adults. Includes Doyle, Arthur Conan. The Great Adventures of Sherlock Holmes. Puffin. 1991. $5. ISBN 0-14-036689-X.
4886. "Selected videos, DVDs and audiobooks for young adults 2001." School Library Journal 47, no. 4 (2001): 59-61.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Annotated reviews of notable young adults' videos, DVDs, and audiobooks, compiled by the Young Adult Library Services Association, are presented. Included is Sherlock's Secret Life. By Ed Lange; read by Karl Malden and performed by N.Y. State Theatre Institute. 2 cassettes. 1:43 hrs. ISBN 1-892613-03-4. 1999. $16.95. New York State Theatre Institute. "The young Sherlock Holmes, and his familiar cohorts, Dr. Watson and Professor Moriarty, are portrayed in this original and fully dramatized story about an early case that brought the detective to the brink of lovelorn heartbreak."
4887. "Sherlock Holmes and the Baker Street Irregulars: The Fall of the Amazing Zalindas, Casebook No. 1." Kirkus Reviews 74, no. 17 (2006): 907-907.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Sherlock Holmes and the Baker Street Irregulars:

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

The Fall of the Amazing Zalindas, Casebook No.1," by Tracy Mack and Michael Citrin and illustrated by Greg Ruth.

4888. "YALSA awards." Journal of Youth Services in Libraries 14, no. 3 (2001): 63-68.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An annotated list of recipients of Young Adult Library Services Association awards is provided. Included in the list is Sherlock's Secret Life, by Ed Lange, narrated by Karl Malden and performed by the New York State Theatre Institute, New York State Theatre Institute, 1999, 2 cassettes, 1 hour and 43 mins., 1-892613-03-4. "The young Sherlock Holmes, and his familiar cohorts Dr. Watson and Professor Moriarty, are portrayed in this original and fully dramatized story about an early case that brought the detective to the brink of lovelorn heartbreak."

4889. Andronik, Catherine M. "Fiction--grade 5 & up." Library Talk 11, no. 1 (1998): 24.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews fiction for children in the intermediate grades. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Chinese-American Ellen tanks like Sherlock Holmes, whose stories she loves, much to the (understandable) ridicule of her classmates...."

4890. Bilton, Karen T. "The Case of the Left-Handed Lady." School Library Journal 53, no. 12 (2007): 67-67.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the audiobook "The Case of the Left-Handed Lady," by Nancy Springer, the second title in a series featuring Enola Holmes, the famed detective's younger sister.

4891. Burns, Connie Tyrrell. "The Faceless Fiend: Being the Tale of a Criminal Mastermind, His Masked Minions and a Princess with a Butter Knife, Involving Explosives and a Certain Amount of Pushing and Shoving." School Library Journal 53, no. 11 (2007): 139.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The Faceless Fiend: Being the Tale of a Criminal Mastermind, His Masked Minions and a Princess with a Butter Knife, Involving Explosives and a Certain Amount of Pushing and Shoving," written by Howard Whitehouse and illustrated by Bill Slavin. Includes a reference to Holmes. "In this sequel to The Strictest School in the World (Kids Can, 2006), 14-year-old Emmaline and Princess Purnah have escaped from St. Grimelda's School for Young Ladies and are living in Yorkshire in the autumn of 1894 with batty but lovable Aunt Lucy. Princess Purnah is heir to the throne of Chiligrut, a tiny, savage, mountainous place in the middle of Asia. The girls, along with Rubberbones, the indestructible errand boy, spend their days with the lunatic Professor Bellbuckle, trying to fly, since Emmaline aspires to design a flying machine. But trouble awaits. A terrifying master criminal who works for the Russian secret police and whose face below his eyes is a white mass of scar tissue wants to kidnap the princess. With the help of Aunt Lucy, the professor, the butler Lal Singh, and Sherlock Holmes and the Baker Street Irregulars, the villainous schemes are foiled, but not before things go wrong-a lot. The gothic overtones and menacing situations are all goofy, over-the-top, and humorously handled. The author's voice slips in with sly, wry humor. Think Lemony Snicket meets Roald Dahl. Slavin's frequent pen-and-ink sketches add just the right touch of whimsy. Princess Purnah is particularly bloodthirsty (even with just a butter knife) and her lack of mastery of the English language and her own exclamations ('Glekk!' 'Porok!') add to the fun. While many references are made to the previous novel, they are explained in context, allowing this book to stand alone."

4892. Carhart, Jo-Ann, and Phyllis Levy Mandell. "Down the Rabbit Hole: An Echo Falls Mystery." School Library Journal 52, no. 1 (2006): 80-81.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Down the Rabbit Hole: An Echo Falls Mystery," by Peter Abrahams. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "Peter Abrahams' splendid contemporary mystery... is ripe with allusions to Lewis Carroll's Alice's Adventures in Wonderland, Arthur Conan Doyle's stories about Sherlock Holmes, and Alfred Hitchcock's Dial M for Murder...."

4893. Craig, Amanda. "World of wonders." New Statesman 128, no. 4438 (1999): 49.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several children's books, with a passing reference to Holmes. "...The new genius of children's fiction, Philip Pullman, seemed to spring fully formed out of nowhere with Northern Lights. Yet he has been writing for years -- his books, thanks to Penguin, were not so much published as concealed from the public. The Ruby in the Dust, The Shadow in the North and The Tiger in the Well (all reissued by Scholastic, GBP 5.99), are violently enjoyable, displaying a dark foretaste of the visionary who blossoms in Northern Lights. The heroine, Sally, is beautiful, brave, uneducated and a crack shot. Her battles against the criminal powers of Victorian London read like a cross between Sherlock Holmes, Wilkie Collins and Jack London's masterpiece, People of the Abyss...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4894. Donovan, Lori E. "Whodunit?: Detective Stories." School Library Journal 53, no. 11 (2007): 135.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Whodunit?: Detective Stories," edited by Philip Pullman. "Pullman's love of the genre is obvious in this collection of 16 stories by authors from around the world. In his introduction, Pullman briefly outlines the history of the detective story from the Bible to its rise in popularity 60 years after the first Sherlock Holmes story and the advent of movies as well as why he likes this particular genre. Readers who enjoy whodunits from such classic writers as Arthur Conan Doyle and Agatha Christie will love more contemporary selections from Damon Runyon, whose story 'Butch Minds the Baby' has a funny side, in contrast to the normally dark stories that are so prevalent now. Those who like logic puzzles with a police theme will appreciate Raymond Smullyan's selections 'From the Files of Inspector Craig,' in which readers are given a scenario and encouraged to determine who the culprit is (answers are provided at the back of the book). Each selection comes with a brief introduction setting the stage and an interesting fact about the author and/or the story."
4895. Dunn, Dave, Trevor S. Raymond, and Clifford S. Goldfarb. "Bookshelf: Reviews of Forensic Detective: How I Cracked the World's Toughest Cases, Joe Sherlock: Kid Detective, and Conan Doyle and the Parson's Son: The George Edalji Case." Canadian Holmes 30, no. 1 (2006): 9-12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4896. Freeman, Judy. "Point of view." Instructor 109, no. 2 (1999): 24-27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An annotated bibliography of children's books that look at life from the perspective of an entertaining blend of characters is presented. Includes one entry with a reference to Holmes. Bunnica Stikes Again, by James Howe, illustrated by Alan Daniel; 116 pages; Atheneum, 1999; $16. Grades 3-6. "Narrators come in all types and species. Harold the dog narrates the latest installment of the Bunnica series. As usual, misunderstandings and wild assumptions abound as Harold and the other animals in the Monroe household jump to their own conclusions about what is happening and why. Fans will be sated with this canine's-eye view of the latest intrigue. First off, vampire bunny Bunnica, who, you may recall, gets his nourishment from sucking the juices out of unsuspecting vegetables, seems to be growing weaker. Harold and friends suspect Chester the cat has been drinking the rabbit's carrot juice. Might Chester be trying to finish off Bunnica once and for all? Howie, the dachshund, fuels the frenzy of fear. He has been reading countless titles in the Flesh Crawlers series, scaring himself silly. Fans of the horror genre will get a kick out of his spoofing, off-the-wall plot recitations of the giant of kids' horror series, Goosebumps. Mutt Harold is in rare form, and his narrative is packed with puns and language misunderstandings. A sidesplitting plot parallels Sherlock Holmes's deadly encounter with archvillain Moriarty. Your students will have a fine time picking out and explaining the wordplay, as well as examining how each character's specific (and limited) point of view contributes to the mayhem...."
4897. ———. "Uncovering Mysteries." Instructor 113, no. 3 (2003): 73-74.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An annotated bibliography of mystery stories suitable for children in preschool through grade 8 is provided. The bibliography includes a suggested activity for each book. Includes an entry with a Holmes reference. The Case of the Cat With the Missing Ear (Gr. 4-7) by Scott Emerson, illustrated by Viv Mullett. Simon & Schuster, 2003; 237 pages; $15.95. "In the first book of a ripping new series (The Adventures of Samuel Blackthorne), we meet Yorkshire terrier detective Samuel Blackthorne as seen through the eyes of his friend and fellow canine, Edward R. Smithfield. Elegant greyhound Molly Kirkpatrick seeks their help to find out why her brother failed to return from a pub the night before. In the style of Sherlock Holmes's Dr. Watson, Smithfield describes Blackthorne's 'uncanny ability to see things other dogs couldn't and to smell things other dogs wouldn't' as he prowls the streets of San Francisco."
4898. Giorgis, Cyndi, and Nancy J. Johnson. "Text sets." The Reading Teacher 56, no. 2 (2002): 200-208.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An annotated bibliography of titles that can form text sets, sets of between five and ten books that address a particular topic or theme, is provided. The bibliography covers text sets on living creatures, pirates, physical appearance, natural disasters, and the Irish potato famine. Includes a reference to Doyle. "Michael Hague has selected 11 classic stories and poems by such noted writers as Robert Louis Stevenson, Arthur Conan Doyle, and Washington Irving for inclusion in The Book of Pirates. 'Oh, better far to live and die/Under the brave black flag I fly,/Than play a sanctimonious part/With a pirate head and a pirate heart' (p. 15). Gilbert and Sullivan's words begin this swashbuckling collection of stories that tells of a time when pirates ruled the seas and intimidated many a nervous sailor. Hague accompanies each tale with lush, vivid paintings in dark, ominous tones that portray the book's topic splendidly. Through both text and illustration, readers are invited into a world filled with adventure, excitement, and danger. So ahoy matey, raise the Jolly Roger and come aboard..."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4899. Gray, B. Allison. "The Book Review: Grades 5 & Up." School Library Journal 52, no. 2 (2006): 137.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a review of Springer, Nancy. The Case of the Missing Marquess: An Enola Holmes Mystery. 213p. Philomel/Sleuth, Feb. 2006. Tr $10.99. ISBN 0-399-24304-6. Gr 4-8 "In what is hopefully the start of an exciting new series, Missing Marquess features the intriguing, much younger sister of Sherlock and Mycroft Holmes. Enola was a late-life baby, causing something of a scandal in society. Her rather vague mother is a 64-year-old widow who disappears on Enola's 14th birthday. It takes the girl a short time to realize that her mother left her some ciphers that indicate why she went away and how she is faring. The teen reluctantly enlists the services of her adult brothers, who quickly determine that Lady Holmes has been padding the household accounts for years. When they decide that their sister belongs at a boarding school, Enola escapes and heads for London dressed as a widow. There she is able to solve a mystery involving the disappearance of young Viscount Tewksbury. She decides to stay in the city, adopting a number of disguises, and become a 'Perditorian,' or finder of lost things or people. Springer focuses a great deal on the restrictions placed on Victorian females by Showing how unusual Enola's bravery and common sense are, even as she often struggles with conventional reactions. She wants her brothers' affection, or indeed anyone's, but knows that a socially accepted life will strictly limit her freedom and learning. Enola's loneliness, intelligence, sense of humor, and sheer pluck make her an extremely appealing heroine who hopefully will one day find the affection for which she so desperately longs."
4900. Herman, Emily. "The Poddington Peas." School Library Journal 45, no. 3 (1999): 144.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The Poddington Peas ($14.95), from Poddington PLC., is a 55-minute video for preschoolers that presents entertaining stories about pea people with an emphasis on friendship and caring. This video contains some British English that may confuse children, as well as an inappropriate scene with a gun and one story that is a little too similar to The Grinch Who Stole Christmas. However, the pea characters will still charm and entertain younger viewers and act as a basis for discussion about friendship, honesty, and looking out for one another." Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Although somewhat lacking in originality, the stories are entertaining with an emphasis on friendship and caring. This British import features such "pea-ple" as Dump Pea, who is a little overweight; Zip Pea, a speedy little fellow; Snoop Pea, a Sherlock Holmes detective; and Hip Pea, a long-haired rocker..." 4901. Hugill, P. J. "Imperialism and manliness in Edwardian boys' novels." Ecumene 6, no. 3 (1999): 318-340.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "After 1870 mass education and the rise of mass literacy began to create a huge market for juvenile literature in the industrial world in the form of weekly papers and novels. Sales in the tens of millions were realized by some authors. By the early twentieth century this market had matured, gendered, segmented, and regionalized. British boys' juvenile novels from such authors as Henty stressed the link between manliness, sports, communal and Christian responsibility and empire. The empire was the dominant site of individual social advancement. Sexuality was to be deferred until marriage. American juveniles from such authors as Stratemeyer stressed manliness, individuality, teamwork, the Anglo-Saxon compact and technology. Technology was the dominant site of individual social advancement. With the Spanish-American War American boys' juveniles started to teach that, contrary to America's past stand against imperialism, America had a moral right to become an imperial power and should learn such behaviour from Britain. From 1898 to 1912 American juveniles taught that, as Britain declined, America was shifting from the junior to the senior partner in the Anglo-Saxon compact." Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.
4902. James, Elizabeth. "Secret Scribbles." Family Life, no. (2001): 40.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents Swingset Press' My Ultra Secret Spy Stuff kit for children ages seven to nine years, used for writing and reading secrets. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "A must-have for growing gumshoes: Swingset Press's My Ultra Secret Spy Stuff kit. It includes a lockable message book, invisible-ink pen, ultraviolet black light, and a code sheet that young sleuths can use to write and read secrets. Move over, Sherlock Holmes: There's a new detective in town!"

4903. Johnson, Nancy J., and Cyndi Giorgis. "Children's Books Relationships." Reading Teacher 55, no. 6 (2002): 600.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Evaluates several children's books. Content of 'Roots & Flowers: Poets and Poems on Family'; Theme of the book 'We Rode the Orphan Trains' by Andrea Warren; Characters of the book 'Meet the Bakers: Morgan and Moffat Go to School. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...David is surprised to discover that his aunt is an excellent teacher who brings history to life. Whether the two are rescuing Napoleon from Elba, solving a mystery that perplexes Sherlock Holmes, or inspiring Leonardo da Vinci to finish the Mona Lisa, they never have to leave Aunt Annie's comfortable armchair...."
4904. Jones, Trevelyn E., and Luann Toth. "SLJ's best books 1994. (Cover story)." School Library Journal 40, no. 12 (1994): 20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Lists many books chosen by School Library Journal's editors as the best of 1994 chosen from among more than 3,700 new titles reviewed during 1994. Includes Laurie R. King's Beekeeper's Apprentice: Or on the Segregation of the Queen. St. Martin's Pr. 1994. Tr $21.95. ISBN 0-312-10423-5.
"Humming interaction between elderly mysogynist Sherlock Holmes and a bookish, orphaned heiress leads to a hive of intellectual activity and mentoring. A strong female protagonist invades Baker Street's most famous address. (July)" 4905. Kurkjian, Catherine, and Nancy Livingston. "Learning to read and reading to learn: Informational series books." The Reading Teacher 58, no. 6 (2005): 592-600.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The writer reviews a number of well-written and visually exciting children's informational series books. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...It is not hard to figure out where the author stands on the basis of the prologue of The Unexplained, Hoaxes: She quotes P.T. Barnum who famously said, 'There's a sucker born every minute.' And 'suckers' may even be very intelligent and well-educated people. For example, in the opening episode of this book, we find out how Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the celebrated author of the Sherlock Holmes series, gets duped by 'actual' photographs of fairies and gnomes...."
4906. Larson, Jeanette. "A Baker's (Street) Dozen: Recommended New Mysteries for Young Readers." Library Media Connection 25, no. 5 (2007): 28-29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews several mystery books for children, including "Behind the Curtain: An Echo Falls Mystery," by Peter Abrahams, "The Irregulars: In the Service of Sherlock Holmes," by Steven-Elliott Altman and Michael Reaves, and "Secrets, Lies, Gizmos, and Spies: A History of Spies and Espionage," by Janet Wyman Coleman.
4907. ———. "Case Closed: Tracking Down New Mysteries." Book Links 16, no. 3 (2007): 16-19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews several mystery books for elementary students including "Behind the Curtain," by Peter Abrahams, "Room One: A Mystery or Two," by Andrew Clements, and "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes," Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.
4908. ———. "Mysteries for Young Detectives." Book Links 10, no. 1 (2000): 57.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents mystery books and stories for children. 'Freddy the Detective,' by Walter Brooks; 'Mysteries of Sherlock Holmes,' by Arthur Conan Doyle; 'Double Trouble Squared,' by Kathryn Lasky.
4909. ———. "The Scene of the Crime." Book Links 17, no. 3 (2008): 24-28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews several children's and young people's books including titles with Holmesian connections: The Faceless Fiend: Being the Tale of a Criminal Mastermind, His Masked Minions, and a Princess with a Butter Knife, Involving Explosives and a Certain Amount of Pushing and

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- Shoving. By Howard Whitehouse. Illus. by Bill Slavin. 2007. 272p. Kids Can, (9781554531301); (9781554331806); Horrible Harry Cracks the Code. By Suzy Kline. Illus. by Frank Remkiewicz. 2007. 80p. Viking, $13.99 (9780670062003); The Case of the Left-Handed Lady. By Nancy Springer. 2007. 192p. Philomel/Sleuth, $12.99(9780399245176); Eye of the Crow: The Boy Sherlock Holmes. His First Case. By Shane Peacock. 2007. 260p.Tundra, SI9.95 (9780887768507).
4910. Lodge, Sally. "Children's Books for Fall." Publishers Weekly 252, no. 28 (2005): 77-138.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides information on several children's books. "Babar's World Tour," by Laurent de Brunhoff; "The Atlas of Ancient Egypt," by Delia Pemberton; "The Big Ball of String," by Ross Mueller, illustrated Craig Smith; "And You Can Come Too," by Ruth Ohi. Includes a reference to a title with a Sherlockian angle: Sherlock Holmes' Mini-Mysteries (6.95) by Tom Bullimore is a companion to Sherlock Holmes' Puzzles of Deduction. (12-up) (Sterling).
4911. ———. "Children's Books for Fall." Publishers Weekly 251, no. 29 (2004): 78-131.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on several children's books for fall 2004. "That Blessed Christmas Night," by Dori Chaconas; "Space Pirates," by Scoular Anderson; "Two Left Feet," by Adam Stower; "The Silly Book," by Stoo Hample. Includes a listing for a Holmes/Doyle title. "Scholastic Classics/Junior Classics issues The Jungle Book by Rudyard Kipling, retold by Jane B. Mason and Sarah Hines Stephens; and Doctor Dolittle by Hugh Lofting, retold by Ellen Miles ($3.99 each, 7-10); and Jane Eyre by Charlotte Bronte, The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, The Invisible Man by H.G. Wells and The Best Ghost Stories Ever, ed. by Christopher Krovatin ($3.99 each, 9-up)...."
4912. ———. "Children's Books for Fall." Publishers Weekly 247, no. 29 (2000): 102.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a list of children's book to be released in fall 2000. Children's books from August House; Some of the children's books written by celebrities; 'The Lion's Crown' from the Chicken Soup Press; 'Your Are So Special' from Crossway. INSETS: Celebrities Take Center Stage on Fall Lists; Cinderella's Numerous New Faces; Favorite Characters Return; A Lighthearted Awards Ceremony. Includes Doyle/Holmes entries. "...And Dover Juvenile Classics continues with Favorite North American Indian Legends by Allan A. Macfarlan, A Little Princess by Frances Hodgson Burnett, Favorite Sherlock Holmes Detective Stories by Arthur Conan Doyle and Heidi by Johanna Spyri ($2 each, 8-up)....Scary Classics: Stories from the Greatest Horror Writers of All Time ($9.95) includes tales by Edgar Allan Poe, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and others. (10-up)..."
4913. ———. "Children's Books for Fall. (Cover story)." Publishers Weekly 249, no. 29 (2002): 89.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a list of children's books to be launched in fall 2002 in the U.S. Book titles from Abrams; 'Willowbe Woods Campfire Stories,' by Ila Wallen; 'The Woman Who Fell From the Sky: The Iroquois Story of Creation,' by John Bierhorst; Titles from Pleasant Co. Includes a reference to Doyle. "Fingerprint Classics continues with Jewel Cases: Five Classic Mysteries of Theft by Arthur Morrison, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and others ($6.49, 12-up)."
4914. ———. "Children's Books for Spring." Publishers Weekly 247, no. 7 (2000): 102.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Lists several children's books in the United States as of February 14, 2000. 'Swan Lake,' by Nancy Ellison; 'Max the Minnow,' by William Boniface; 'Night School,' by Loris Lesynski. INSETS: Seuss Character Goes from Screen to Page; A Quartet of Spring Celebrations; Teen Poets Speak Out; An Impressive Output by Phyllis Reynolds Naylor. Includes Holmes/Doyle entry. "...New Aladdin Classics are Treasure Island by Robert Louis Stevenson, foreword by Avi; Alice's Adventures in Wonderland by Lewis Carroll, foreword by Nancy Willard; and The Hound of the Baskervilles by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, foreword by Bruce Brooks ($3.99 each, 8-12);..."
4915. ———. "Children's Books for Spring. (Cover story)." Publishers Weekly 248, no. 7 (2001): 107.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a list of children's books for spring 2001. Titles of children's books from Akadine Press; Books from Chelsea House; Publisher of 'Midnight Babies' by Margaret Wild. Includes a Sherlockian entry. "Baker Street Whodunits: Puzzles of Deduction by Bullimore ($6.95). Kids help Sherlock Holmes solve brainteasers and logic puzzles. (10-up)"

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4916. ———. "The Vampire Bunny Strikes Again." Publishers Weekly 246, no. 38 (1999): 31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Recounts how the book 'Bunnacula: A Rabbit-Tale of Mystery' by James and Deborah Howe was written. Where James and Deborah got the idea of a vampire bunny; Characters of the story; How James and Deborah evolved as writers; When the book 'Bunnacula Strikes Again!' will be released. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...A character that has become well-known to many kids over the years--there are more than eight million Bunnacula books in print--this eccentric rabbit and his pals, Harold and Chester, reached the printed page as the result of a collaboration between Howe and his late wife, Deborah Howe. 'I truly don't have a memory of the exact moment Bunnacula came alive' Howe explained, 'but I suspect that he was the result of my watching too many old vampire movies on late-night TV--combined with my fondness for the Marx Brothers and Sherlock Holmes.'" 4917. Miller, Jessica. "Death in the Air: His Second Case." School Library Journal 54, no. 7 (2008): 106-106.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Death in the Air: His Second Case" by Shane Peacock. 254p. (The Boy Sherlock Holmes Series). 2008. $19.95. ISBN 978-0-88776-851-4. LC C2007-902739-3. "This sequel to Eye of the Crow (Tundra, 2007) continues as Sherlock Holmes, 13, tries to prove his worth to Scotland Yard and become 'a new sort of London detective, the scourge of every villain.'..."
4918. Moore, Denise. "The Book Review: Grades 5 & Up." School Library Journal 52, no. 4 (2006): 133.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Holmes reference in one of the entries. Abrahams, Peter, Behind the Curtain: An Echo Falls Mystery. 346p. CIP. HarperCollins/A Laura Geringer Bk. Apr. 2006. Tr $15.99. ISBN 0-06-073704-2; PLB $16.89. ISBN 0-06-073705-0. LC 2005017774. "Gr 5-8-Ingrid Levin-Hill, the eighth-grade Sherlock Holmes lover introduced in Down the Rabbit Hole (HarperCollins, 2005), is back for another adventure. She quotes her hero quite often as she tries to sort out details that she observes around her. In trying to figure out why her brother is so moody, why her dad is in jeopardy of losing his job, and why her grand father's property is so valuable, the teen stumbles upon some of her town's secrets. Then, when she is kidnapped but is able to escape, she can't get anyone to believe her. This is a fast-paced mystery with well-defined characters and a plausible plotline and ending. Although a few references are made to the earlier book, this enjoyable story stands on its own."
4919. Peters, John. "Travel Far, Pay No Fare." School Library Journal 3, no. 1 (2006): 18-21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An annotated bibliography of summer reading titles for middle grade students that deal with travel and adventure is provided. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...In Nancy Springer's The Case of the Missing Marquess (Philomel, 2006), naive but brilliant Enola Holmes matches wits with her overbearing older brothers Sherlock and Mycroft. She slips away from the peaceful country estate on which she's lived since birth to tackle the unsuspected perils of Victorian London in search of both her vanished mother and a supposedly kidnapped child. Readers will be strongly tempted to visit (or revisit) Sherlock's better known exploits, which resemble this one in language, atmosphere, and supporting cast, while waiting for Enola's next case...."
4920. Phelan, Carolyn. "The 100-Year-Old Secret." Booklist 104, no. 17 (2008): 50.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "The 100-Year-Old Secret" by Tracy Barrett. 160p. Holt, $15.95 (0-8050-8340-5). "After moving from Florida to London with their parents, 12-year-old Xena Holmes and her younger brother, Xander, are surprised when a mysterious stranger presses a note into Xena's hand, mutters 'It fades fast,' and hurries away....Although not always completely convincing, the first book in the Sherlock Files is a fastpaced, entertaining mystery."
4921. Rodman, Blake Hume, and Jennifer Pricola. "Beware the Wisdom of Teachers." Teacher Magazine 13, no. 3 (2001): 48.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews two children's books. 'The Tale of Tricky Fox,' retold by Jim Aylesworth and illustrated by Barbara McClintock; 'The Gawgon and the Boy,' by Lloyd Alexander. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...David has always been somewhat of an author/illustrator-pirate adventures starring the 'Sea-Fox' and the 'Sea-Vixen,' being his specialty. After just a few afternoons with Aunt Annie, however, he finds himself captivated by her history and literature lessons, and his tales begin to feature new characters: The

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Gawgon and The Boy. The duo's escapades include saving Napoleon from exile, climbing the Matterhorn, and assisting a dumbfounded Sherlock Holmes...."

4922. Rosenfeld, Shelle. "Eye of the Crow: The Boy Sherlock Holmes, His First Case." Book Links 17, no. 4 (2008): 10-10.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Eye of the Crow: The Boy Sherlock Holmes, His First Case," by Shane Peacock.

4923. Sherman, Dina. "Preschool to Grade 4: Fiction." School Library Journal 44, no. 10 (1998): 93.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Aunt Eater's Mystery Halloween,' by Doug Cushman. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Cushman continues his series about the clever anteater detective, this time on Halloween night. The simple chapter book has just a few sentences per page. Each episode continues the story, but can also stand on its own. Dressed as Sherlock Holmes, Aunt Eater heads to a costume party and encounters several mysterious occurrences throughout the evening. She handily solves all but one of them and readers are given a visual clue to its resolution on the last page. The cartoon illustrations are funny and capture the wacky side of Halloween nicely, with costumes ranging from ghosts to turnips."

4924. Shiffman, Stu. "Review--The Gawgon and the Boy by Lloyd Alexander." The Holmes & Watson Report 8, no. 5 (2004): 15-19.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4925. ———. "Review--The Werewolf Club #5: The Werewolf Club Meets Oliver Twist by Daniel and Jill Pinkwater." The Holmes & Watson Report 6, no. 6 (2003): 23-27.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4926. Tan, Teri. "Publishers Seeking The Right Title Mix." Publishers Weekly 251, no. 35 (2004): S6-S20.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the market performance of children's book publishers in Asia as of August 2004. Sun Ya Publishing; Kodansha; Shufunotomo Co. Inset: Selling Asia: An American Publishers Story. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...One of the oldest publishing houses around, Kodansha -- established in 1914 -- is certainly one of the largest as well. However, its children's book division, which started way back in 1936, contributes less than 2% to the company's bottom line. Says editor-in-chief of picture books Eisuke Otake, 'Our biggest translations include Marcus Pfister's The Rainbow Fish --which has sold over 500,000 copies since its 1995 release--and Dick Bruna's Miffy titles. With classics getting more popular, especially those out of print back in the U.S., Kodansha is reissuing titles such as Clare Turlay Newberry's Mittens and Barkis, which were published in 1936 and 1938, respectively. We have also translated titles by Margaret Wise Brown, as well as the Agatha Christie and Sherlock Holmes series.' At the same time, Otake says, children's paperbacks are becoming more popular as well. 'Mystery and thriller titles in pocket-sized format are the most successful.'..."

4927. Welton, Ann. "Lupe Vargas y su súper mejor amiga./Lupe Vargas and Her Super Best Friend." Criticas 6, no. 7 (2006): 47-47.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Lupe Vargas y su súper mejor amiga/Lupe Vargas and Her Super Best Friend," written and translated by Amy Costales, illustrated by Alexandra Artigas. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Lupe and Maritza are best friends, largely because they have equally vivid imaginations. Given a tree and a toilet-paper tube, they create a pirate ship; a couple of magnifying glasses and some talcum powder, they become Sherlock Holmes..."

4928. Wildner, Kristine. "Great Heroes: The Legend of King Arthur/Don Quixote/The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes/Great Stories of Courage: The Call of the Wild/The Red Badge of Courage/Treasure Island/Historical Adventures: A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court/Around." Library Media Connection 26, no. 3 (2007): 81.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews several graphic children's books including two Doyle/Holmes titles from Gareth Stevens Publishing: Great Heroes: The Legend of King Arthur/Don Quixote/The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes. ISBN 978-0-8368-7925-4; Murder and Mystery: The Hound of the

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Baskervilles/Macbeth/The Legend of Sleepy Hollow. ISBN 978-0-8368-7928-5

12 CARTOONS, COMICS AND JOKES(12)

4929. Hobbs, Don. "Review--It Is Always a Joy by Jean-Pierre & Christilla Cagnat." The Holmes & Watson Report 5, no. 1 (2001): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4930. Vernet. "Cartoon--Sherlockian Misprints." The Ritual, no. 11 (1993): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4931. ———. "Cartoon--Sherlockian Misprints." The Ritual, no. 12 (1993): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4932. ———. "Cartoon--'Sherlockian Misprints'." The Musgrave Papers, no. 6 (1993): 30, 91.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4933. ———. "Cartoon--Sidelights on Sherlock." The Ritual, no. 14 (1994): 7, 53, 57.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4934. ———. "Cartoon--Sidelights on Sherlock." The Ritual, no. 11 (1993): 21, 27, 33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4935. ———. "Cartoon--Sidelights on Sherlock." The Ritual, no. 12 (1993): 21, 48, 52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4936. ———. "Cartoon--'Sidelights on Sherlock'." The Musgrave Papers, no. 6 (1993): 5, 52, 88.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4937. Vogelsang, Jim. "'Olmes 'm Watso'." Shoso-In Bulletin 8, no. (1998): 12, 40, 52, 57, 92, 108, 138, 154, 175, 185.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4938. ———. "'Olmes 'n Watso'." Shoso-In Bulletin 14, no. (2004): 13, 30, 65, 79, 84, 89.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4939. ———. "'Olmes 'n Watso'." Shoso-In Bulletin 7, no. (1997): 31, 38, 45, 56, 84, 89, 102.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4940. ———. "'Olmes 'n Watso'." Shoso-In Bulletin 6, no. (1996): 20, 43, 74, 90, 117, 128.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

12 CARTOONS, COMICS AND JOKES -- COMIC BOOKS AND COMIC STRIPS (12)

4941. "The Extraordinary Gentlemen." School Library Journal 49, no. 8 (2003): 26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the comic-book series created by Alan Moore and Kevin O'Neill in which the film 'The League of Extraordinary Gentleman,' starring Sean Connery, is based. "Set during the waning days of the Victorian era, the original series tells the story of five disenfranchised agents charged with saving England. Who the group works for is uncertain. But the team's leader, Miss Murray, believes it's the famed detective Sherlock Holmes, back from the dead. Moore and O'Neill have created a drama that is inviting and suspenseful."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4942. "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Faithful Fusilier." PS: Preventive Maintenance Monthly, no. 647 (2006): 27-34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The comic strip "Sherlock Holmes and the Adventure of the Faithful Fusilier" is presented.
4943. Castle, Mort. "Comic books grow up." Writer 115, no. 12 (2002): 27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the growth of comic books and comic-book writing. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Classic stories by Arthur Conan Doyle and Edgar Allan Poe have recently been published by Rosebud Graphic Classics and illustrated by such noted artists as Gahan Wilson, Spain Rodriguez, Matt Howarth and Mark A. Nelson..."
4944. Chapman, Paul M. "Review--'The League of Extraordinary Gentlemen' by Alan Moore and Kevin O'Neill." The Ritual, no. 24 (1999): 65-67.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4945. Dekoning, Ivo A. "A Sketch of Belgian Sherlockian Comics." Shoso-In Bulletin 13, no. (2003): 100-105.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4946. Lavin, Michael R. "Comics publishers in decline: A tale of two companies." Serials Review 24, no. 3/4 (1998): 94.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines the publishing problems of Acclaim Comics and Awesome Entertainment. Problems resulting to the curtailment of publishing activities; Company history; Position in the comic book publishing industry; Review of selection of the publisher's best-known titles. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Moore uses this plot device not only to introduce the Extreme characters, but also to usher in a delightful series of homages to various comic book genres of the past, from westerns to war comics. He also manages to interweave another of his own interests, pulp fiction and classic adventure heroes, with nods to Arthur Conan Doyle's 'Professor Challenger,' Robert E. Howard's 'Bran Mak Morn' and 'Solomon Kane,' Lester Dent's 'Doc Savage,' and Burroughs' 'Tarzan,' to name a few...."
4947. ———. "A librarian's guide to Dark Horse Comics." Serials Review 24, no. 3/4 (1998): 76.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles Dark Horse Comics, a comic book publisher in the United States. Brief history of Dark Horse Comics; Focus on licensed characters and creator-owned characters; Use of limited series; List of trade paperback compilations; In-dept review of the company's representative titles. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. "...Raised by apes, Tarzan, the lord of the jungle, is now the sworn protector of the deep jungles and all the creatures therein. Along with Superman and Sherlock Holmes, Tarzan is one of the most recognizable characters in modern fiction. Like Superman and Holmes, the Tarzan character has spawned a legion of imitators, but none has come close to matching the popularity and majesty of the original. Tarzan, who first appeared in All-Story magazine in 1912, was the creation of Edgar Rice Burroughs, a failed businessman turned author....As in Burroughs' novels, the Dark Horse adventures stretch from the turn of the century to the 1940s, though the stories are not told in chronological fashion. In one issue, Tarzan battles mind-controlled Nazis in the jungles of Africa; in the next he tackles the Phantom of the Opera in 1909 Paris. The writers also have fun with the historical settings, using the opportunity for Tarzan to meet such luminaries as Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Thomas Edison, and Nikola Tesla...."
4948. ———. "A librarian's guide to Marvel Comics." Serials Review 24, no. 2 (1998): 47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides critical reviews of thirty of Marvel Comics' most popular comic book titles. History of Marvel Comics' development and its contributions to the medium; Financial problems encountered throughout the company's history; X-Men titles; Spider-Man titles; Fantastic Four; Captain America; Avengers; Iron Man; Daredevil; Incredible Hulk; Silver Surfer; Alpha Flight; Thunderbolts; Quicksilver. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Ka-Zar, Goodman's low-rent version of Tarzan, ran first as the hero of his own short-lived pulp fiction magazine, then as a recurring character in early Timely comics. Stan Lee revived the character in a 1965 issue of Uncanny X-Men, but with a twist. Lee combined the Tarzan-like jungle lord with one of his favorite fictional themes: a hidden land of living dinosaurs, reminiscent of Arthur Conan Doyle's The Lost World. Lee's Ka-Zar is Lord Kevin Plunder, the son of a British explorer who discovered the Savage Land, a mysterious tropical valley hidden in the polar wastes of Antarctica...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4949. MacDonald, Heidi. "Comics Go to the Movies." Publishers Weekly 250, no. 24 (2003): 30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights films based on comic books in the U.S. Titles of Marvel comic books made into films; Remarks from Marvel marketing manager Michael Moran regarding films based on comic books; Basis of the film produced by DC Comics. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...In contrast to this tangled web, over at DC Comics, their movie offering this year has a single product. The League, starring Sean Connery, is based on The League of Extraordinary Gentlemen by Alan Moore and Kevin O'Neill, a fiendishly clever story that teams various Victorian fictional characters in a plot that ties in everything from H.G. Wells to Sherlock Holmes to Jules Verne to James Bond...."
4950. Mason, Bill. "The Automation of Baker Street: Sherlock Holmes as Robot in Canon and Comics." The Holmes & Watson Report 5, no. 4 (2001): 25-30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4951. Spring, Greg. "Pax animates afternoons." Electronic Media 18, no. 15 (1999): 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports that American network Pax TV has ordered two animated children's strips from DIC Entertainment for airing in the fall of 1999. Airing of 'Archie's Weird Mysteries' and 'Sherlock Holmes in the 22nd Century'; Scheduling for the programs.
4952. Sullivan, Greg. "Comic Strip--'Profeye'." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 5 (2000): 13-16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

12 CARTOONS, COMICS AND JOKES -- EDITORIAL CARTOONS (2)

4953. Bergquist, John. "50 Years Ago." Friends of the Sherlock Holmes Collections Newsletter 4, no. 2 (2000): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses John Bennett Shaw's 1950 notebook that contains a political cartoon that appeared that year in the January 27 Chicago Tribune. "The White House Sleuth" depicts President Harry S. Truman in Sherlockian garb peering through a magnifying glass. Truman is standing in a coal field atop a lit stick of dynamite labeled "miners' revolt" while saying in effect "What coal crisis?" Additional information is given on the coal crisis and President Truman. Also includes a photo of the cartoon.
4954. Bond, Scott. "Art in the Blood." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 1 (1994): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Cartoon, linked to editorial, with caption "Si monumentum quaeris, circumspice"

12 CARTOONS, COMICS AND JOKES -- GENERAL CARTOONS (42)

4955. Bond, Scott. "Art in the Blood." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 2 (1994): 68.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A cartoon with the caption "Better get your service revolver, Watson! I have a feeling this adventure isn't over yet."
4956. ———. "Art in the Blood." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 3 (1994): 132.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Cartoon with the caption "Astounding, Holmes! Your most impenetrable disguise yet!"
4957. ———. "Art in the Blood." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 4 (1994): 196.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Cartoon with the caption "I say, Holmes, what time is it?" "1895, Watson, same as last year."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4958. Brousch, John. "Cartoons." The Holmes & Watson Report 4, no. 6 (2001): 23-24, 38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4959. ———. "Cartoons." The Holmes & Watson Report 5, no. 3 (2001): 4, 10, 24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4960. Burr, Robert C. "Review--Commanding Views From the Empty House edited by William R. Cochran and Gordon R. Speck." The Holmes & Watson Report 1, no. 1 (1997): 15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A delightful anthology of essays, puzzles, cartoons, and even a play, by the members of one of the most active and dedicated Sherlockian societies, The Occupants of the Empty House.
4961. Cagnat, Jean-Pierre. "For John Bennett Shaw, 7th October 1994." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 4 (1994): 244.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Memorial cartoon for Shaw with the caption "How are you John? You have been in Sante Fe, I perceive."
4962. Decker, Jeff. "Cartoon--'Deep Waters'." Baker Street Miscellanea, no. 76 (1994): 49.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4963. ———. "Cartoons." The Musgrave Papers, no. 11 (1998): 14, 20, 30, 40, 48, 56, 62, 70, 78, 84, 92, 102.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4964. ———. "Tales from Dartmoor." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 1 (1994): 33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Cartoon by Jeff Decker.
4965. ———. "Tales from Dartmoor, with apologies to Claude Rains." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 2 (1994): 97.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Cartoon with the caption "Sherlock Holmes investigating the Invisible Man for cheating at poker.
4966. ———. "Tales from Dartmoor: 'A Night at the Opera'." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 3 (1994): 161.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Cartoon featuring two characters arguing between Verdi and Wagner...and Brett or Rathbone.
4967. ———. "Tales from Dartmoor: John Bennett Shaw, 1913-1994." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 4 (1994): 245.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Memorial cartoon for John Bennett Shaw.
4968. Klinger, Leslie S. "You're quite too funny!: Interview with Gahan Wilson." The Musgrave Papers 8, no. (1995): 58-70.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4969. Margolin, Jerry. "Sherlock Holmes & the Cartoon World." Shoso-In Bulletin 5, no. (1995): 102-105.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4970. Shackelford, Lee Eric. "From the Doctor's Diary." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 2 (1994): 108.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Cartoon with the caption "As always, Holmes had planned for every contingency."
4971. ———. "From the Doctor's Diary." Baker Street Journal: An Irregular Quarterly of Sherlockiana 44, no. 4 (1994): 225.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Cartoon with the caption "There seemed to be no depth to which the Professor would not stoop."

4972. Shiffman, Stu. "Cartoon." The Holmes & Watson Report 5, no. 6 (2002): 8.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4973. ———. "Cartoon." Canadian Holmes 22, no. 2 (1998): 26-27.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4974. ———. "Cartoon, 'Sherlock Holmes the Law West of the Thames'." Baker Street West 1 2, no. 2 (1996): 32.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4975. ———. "Cartoon, Sir Hugo Baskerville." Canadian Holmes 25, no. 1 (2001): 25.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4976. Shiojima, Chika. "Cartoon (Untitled)." The Nezire Zanmai International 1, no. (1991): 4.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4977. Stinson, Sam. "Cartoon." The Holmes & Watson Report 5, no. 3 (2001): 25, 29.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4978. Vernet. "Cartoon--Sherlockian Misprints." The Ritual, no. 15 (1995): 2.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4979. ———. "Cartoon--Sherlockian Misprints." The Ritual, no. 13 (1994): 10.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4980. ———. "Cartoon--Sherlockian Misprints." The Ritual, no. 14 (1994): 31.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4981. ———. "Cartoon--'Sherlockian Misprints'." The Musgrave Papers, no. 7 (1994): 21, 71.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4982. ———. "Cartoon--Sidelights on Sherlock." The Musgrave Papers, no. 10 (1997): 6, 30, 76.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4983. ———. "Cartoon--Sidelights on Sherlock." The Ritual, no. 19 (1997): 2, 60.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4984. ———. "Cartoon--Sidelights on Sherlock." The Ritual, no. 20 (1997): 2, 61.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4985. ———. "Cartoon--Sidelights on Sherlock." The Ritual, no. 17 (1996): 2, 47, 70.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4986. ———. "Cartoon--Sidelights on Sherlock." The Ritual, no. 18 (1996): 2, 26.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4987. ———. "Cartoon--Sidelights on Sherlock." The Ritual, no. 15 (1995): 30, 46, 58.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

4988. ———. "Cartoon--Sidelights on Sherlock." The Ritual, no. 16 (1995): 44, 50.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

4989. ———. "Cartoon--Sidelights on Sherlock." The Ritual, no. 13 (1994): 2, 21, 31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4990. ———. "Cartoon--'Sidelights on Sherlock'." The Musgrave Papers, no. 13 (2000): 6, 118.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4991. ———. "Cartoon--'Sidelights on Sherlock'." The Musgrave Papers, no. 12 (1999): 6, 38, 94.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4992. ———. "Cartoon--'Sidelights on Sherlock'." The Musgrave Papers, no. 11 (1998): 6, 108.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4993. ———. "Cartoon--'Sidelights on Sherlock'." The Musgrave Papers, no. 9 (1996): 6, 119, 130.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4994. ———. "Cartoon--'Sidelights on Sherlock'." The Musgrave Papers, no. 8 (1995): 6, 11, 94, 106.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4995. ———. "Cartoon--'Sidelights on Sherlock'." The Musgrave Papers, no. 7 (1994): 5, 42, 60, 91, 119.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
4996. ———. "Cartoon--Vernet's Gallery: A Collection from Thirteen Years of 'Sidelights on Sherlock'." The Musgrave Papers, no. 13 (2000): 121-122.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

12 CARTOONS, COMICS AND JOKES -- GRAPHIC NOVELS (5)

4997. Feigelman, Jennifer. "Graphic Novels." School Library Journal 51, no. 11 (2005): 177.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a review with a reference to Holmes and Doyle. Pomplun, Tom, ed. Graphic Classics: Arthur Conan Doyle. vol 2. 2nd ed. illus. by Rick Geary, et al. 144p. Eureka. 2005. pap. $11.95. ISBN 0-9746648-5-5. Gr 8 Up "Doyle's prose and poetry are brought to life in this exciting volume. It has some overlap from the first volume (Eureka, 2002), but also includes some truly outstanding new tales. In 'The Ghosts of Goresthorpe Grange,' a man believes that his house is occupied by spirits and seeks out the help of a medium. Ultimately, he is drugged and swindled, and the dreamlike style of the art reinforces this mood. In 'Two Great Brown-Pericord Motor,' two men create an invention and become fiercely jealous and protective of it, until disaster erupts. This volume also contains two Sherlock Holmes stories and thrilling tales of sea adventures. Though each one is illustrated by a different artist, the writing ties the collection together nicely. Unlike the earlier volume, this one utilizes a consistent comic format throughout. The artists have deftly captured the themes and moods of each piece in the black-and-white illustrations done in a wide range of styles and techniques. This assortment of tales may attract new readers to Doyle's work."
4998. Kapalka, Jeff. "Sherlock Holmes is Revisited in Graphic Novel." The Post - Standard, Mar 1, 2009: 21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Written by [Holmes] radio-scripser Edith Meiser and drawn by Silver Age stalwarts Gil Kake, Mike Sekowski and Frank Giacoia, the strip is a faithful rendition of an assortment of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's detective's most unusual stories. (Tales include 'The Sussex Vampire,' 'The Adventure of the Thumbless Man' and, of course, 'The Hound of the Baskervilles.'" 4999. Leighton, John. "The Book Review: Graphic Novels." School Library Journal 52, no. 1 (2006): 167.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews of graphic novels including one with a Doyle reference. Pom Plun, Tom, ed. Adventure Graphics Classics. vol. 12. 144p. Eureka. 2005 pap, $11.95. ISBN 0-9746648-4-7. Gr 6 Up-- "Taking stories from Alexander Dumas, O. Henry, Arthur Conan Doyle, and others and turning them into comics provides some very entertaining pieces. Colonial explorers, treasure-mad eccentrics, and mysterious figures in seedy taverns populate each tale, with the language mostly updated but still referring to natives as

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

'brutes.' Each tale is drawn differently, from caricature to stark, matching the tenor of the plot. Settings such as a desert, a jungle, and the American West plus plenty of strange characters bring the adventures alive. This is a thoroughly satisfying affirmation of the magic of reading, taking readers anywhere they want to go."

5000. Shiffman, Stu. "Review--Rosebud Graphic Classics: 2 Arthur Conan Doyle edited by Tom Pomplun." The Holmes & Watson Report 6, no. 5 (2002): 21-25, 28-30.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

5001. Wildner, Kristine. "Great Heroes: The Legend of King Arthur/Don Quixote/The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes/Great Stories of Courage: The Call of the Wild/The Red Badge of Courage/Treasure Island/Historical Adventures: A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court/Around." Library Media Connection 26, no. 3 (2007): 81.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews several graphic children's books including two Doyle/Holmes titles from Gareth Stevens Publishing: Great Heroes: The Legend of King Arthur/Don Quixote/The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes. ISBN 978-0-8368-7925-4; Murder and Mystery: The Hound of the Baskervilles/Macbeth/The Legend of Sleepy Hollow. ISBN 978-0-8368-7928-5

12 CARTOONS, COMICS AND JOKES -- JOKES (11)

5002. "Back Page." Professional safety 48, no. 8 (2003): 64.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes short piece My Dear Watson that reads in full: "A stockbroker received notice from the IRS that he was to be audited. He showed up at the appointed time with all his financial records, then sat for what seemed like hours as the accountant pores over them. Finally, the IRS agent looked up and said, 'You must have been a tremendous fan of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.' 'Why would you say that?' the broker replied. 'Because you've made more brilliant deductions on your last three returns than Sherlock Holmes made in his entire career.'"

5003. "Competition." New Statesman 125, no. 4301 (1996): 52.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents humorous captions and anecdotes submitted by readers. References to both Doyle and Holmes.

5004. "Heard the one about." The Press (Christchurch, New Zealand), December 21, 2001: 1.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A joke about Sherlock Holmes and Dr Watson, submitted by Geoff Anandappa, from Blackpool, emerged the over-all winner, with a top rating from 47 per cent of those taking part.

5005. "It's the way he tells them!; Mail reporter Tony Collins hits the streets with Britain's funniest joke." Birmingham Evening Mail, December 20, 2001: 23.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "I say, I Say, I Say...have you heard the one about Britain's funniest joke? Scientists investigating the psychology of laughter today revealed the comic tale most likely to tickle the ribs of the nation's population. A total of 100,000 people were invited both to submit and rate jokes as part of a huge experiment called 'Laughlab'. From a collection of 10,000, one joke emerged the winner, with a top rating from 47 per cent of those taking part. The joke, submitted by Geoff Anandappa, from Blackpool, goes like this: Sherlock Holmes and Dr Watson go camping, and pitch their tent under the stars. During the night, Holmes wakes his companion and says: 'Watson, look up at the stars, and tell me what you deduce....'" 5006. "This joke is low on festive cheer." Birmingham Evening Mail, December 20, 2001: 23.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Shoppers in Birmingham were hardly rolling about with laughter after we tried out the UK's so-called funniest joke on the city's streets [i.e. Holmes and Watson camping.]

5007. Anderson, Carol M. "An Update for the Real New Millennium." Family process 40, no. 1 (2001): 1.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Editorial. Focuses on articles in the March 2001 issue of the 'Family Process' journal. Includes the Holmes joke that begins: "On a camping trip, Mr. Holmes and Dr. Watson set up their tent and fall asleep..."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5008. Andreae, Christopher. "The Case of the Tricky, Scene-Stealing Spouse." Christian Science Monitor, Nov 12, 1998: 9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Recounts the author's experiences trying to tell a joke to his wife. Joke about Sherlock Holmes on a camping trip; Questions his wife asks to interrupt the joke; Her analysis of the joke.
5009. Hall, John. "Review--'The Sherlock Holmes Joke Portfolio' by P. V. Rochford and H. S. Scullion." The Musgrave Papers, no. 9 (1996): 131.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
5010. Martin, Peter. "Funny* Joke from a Beautiful Woman." Esquire 149, no. 1 (2008): 26-26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A joke (rather well known among Sherlockians) is presented about a camping trip with Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson.
5011. Mirsky, Steve. "Divining Comedy." Scientific American 286, no. 3 (2002): 103.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the author's thoughts on the project of the British Association for the Advancement of Science to discover the world's funniest joke. Way that they polled people over the Internet; Criticism of the joke that they selected as the winner; Ideas on laughter and humor. Includes a reference to Holmes and the joke that begins "Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson are going camping. They pitch their tent under the stars and go to sleep. Sometime in the middle of the night Holmes wakes Watson up...."
5012. Sheldon, Deborah. "Is this the Best Joke in Britain?; a Study Says Yes." The Mirror, December 20, 2001: 24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes and Dr Watson go camping and pitch their tent under the stars. During the night, Holmes wakes his companion and says: 'Watson, look up at the stars and tell me what you deduce.' Watson says: 'I see millions of stars, and even if a few of those have planets, it's quite likely there are some planets like Earth, and if there are a few planets like Earth out there, there might also be life.' Holmes replies: 'Watson, you idiot. Somebody stole our tent....' Heard the one about how the joke that was voted Britain's funniest...The Sherlock Holmes gag came top in a laughter experiment involving 10,000 quips. Nearly half of those quizzed said the old joke got them laughing the loudest - which doesn't say much about the others. The study, by Dr Richard Wiseman from the University of Hertfordshire, was the largest ever on laughter psychology...."

13 PASSING REFERENCES -- BOTH DOYLE AND HOLMES (98)

5013. Phillips, Lynn. "Can this science be saved?" Nation 262, no. 20 (1996): 25-28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents an analysis of three books on science. These books are "Democracy and DNA: American Dreams and Medical Progress," by Gerald Weissmann; "The Demon-Haunted World: Science As a Candle in the Dark," by Carl Sagan; and "Dinosaur in a Haystack: Reflections on Natural History," by Stephen Jay Gould. In his book Gerald Weissmann claims that modern DNA research ascends in a direct line from the nineteenth-century Anglo-American tradition of meliorism. According to Weissmann, humanitarian rationalism is the main source of the sanitary, bacteriological and molecular revolutions in medicine and now the proliferation of genetic research. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Weissmann's ideal meliorist is Oliver Wendell Holmes, the nineteenth-century doctor, essayist and abolitionist. In the original Dr. Holmes, Weissmann finds an ur-detective whose deductive leaps were far more splendid than those of that coke-hearted bloodhound, Sherlock. Sherlock's detective work may send a shiver up a reader's spine, but Oliver's saved the lives of thousands of flesh-and-blood women, because he solved the real-life mystery of how doctors and nurses spread the germs that still cause childbed fever. It's a nice point about how we construct culture heroes; but A. Conan Doyle was so much better at creating the myth of Sherlock than Weissmann is at resuscitating the memory of Oliver Wendell that the reader only ends up feeling hectored for preferring the wrong Holmes...."
5014. Picker, John M. "The Victorian Aura of the Recorded Voice." New Literary History 32, no. 3 (2001): 769-786.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Contains multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5015. Plain, Gill. "From 'The Purest Literature We Have' to 'A Spirit Grown Corrupt': Embracing Contamination in Twentieth-Century Crime Fiction." Critical Survey 20, no. 1 (2008): 3-16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses the theme of contamination in crime fiction. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Examples of the proximity between detective and 'master criminal' can be found as far back as the formative works of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, but the particularly visceral or corporeal relationship characterising the bond in current fiction is based as much on instinct as on the intellectual parity that linked Holmes and Moriarty...."
5016. Postman, Neil. "The error of our ways." Teacher Magazine 6, no. 9 (1995): 32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Criticizes the teaching approach adapted by the educational system of the United States. Omission of the discussion of errors in the curriculum; Dogmatism and narrow-mindedness of textbooks; Elimination of packaged truths from the classroom; Retraining of teachers and refocusing of the purpose of teaching; Attitude of the educational system to errors and its impact on the students. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "I am not sure who said it (possibly Northrop Frye, but it has been remarked that there are three characters from literature who are known all over the world: Hamlet, Alice, and Sherlock Holmes. I don't know how Shakespeare and Lewis Carroll felt about their creations, but it is known that Arthur Conan Doyle believed Holmes to be something of a nuisance and thought that his stories about Holmes did not represent his best work. The irony, of course, is that no one reads what Doyle regarded as his best work, but everybody reads about Holmes...."
5017. Poyer, David. "Bring your hero back for more." Writer 115, no. 8 (2002): 30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Offers tips for writing a successful series of books. Chronology of books; Technique for avoiding the book to become formulaic; Ways to build stress-releasers. Includes passing references to Doyle and Holmes. "...4 Develop supporting characters. Don Quixote had Sancho Panza. Shrek had Donkey. Supporting characters provide alternate takes on events. They can be played for comedy. They allow you to appeal to different audiences; in the Harry Potter books, Hermione Granger gives girls someone to relate to. If you have a continuing antagonist, a formula-breaker would be to write from the point of view of that antagonist. For example, I wonder what Professor Moriarty would have had to say about the great Sherlock Holmes!...12 Keep in mind that you need a graceful exit strategy. Just as every creature dies and every piece of fiction has a natural end, so does every series. If sales are good, the publisher may pressure you to keep on after you've said all you have to say. We've all read the result: tired, half-hearted, regurgitated work. The solution? Plan for the end from the beginning. The simplest ending to a series is the death of the protagonist (though Conan Doyle couldn't make it stick, it landed him in such hot water with his fans)...."
5018. Price, Leah. "Reader's Block: Response." Victorian Studies 46, no. 2 (2004): 231-242.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Contains a reference to Doyle and multiple references to Holmes.
5019. Psomiades, Kathy Alexis. "Detecting the Nation: Fictions of Detection and the Imperial Venture (review)." Victorian Studies 48, no. 1 (2006): 155-157.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Detecting the Nation: Fictions of Detection and the Imperial Venture, by Caroline Reitz; pp. xxv + 123. Columbus: The Ohio State University Press, 2004, $19.95. Contains multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.
5020. Puente, Maria. "Fans' teary eyes are all on 'Potter'." USA Today, July 12, 2007: D6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...James Krasner, a Harry Potter fan and specialist in Victorian literature at the University of New Hampshire, says the amount of grieving will depend on whether Harry is a goner, in which case readers will be both traumatized and angry. In reading literature in the-hero-must-survive genre, 'you're used to certain story lines, and you know how it will end, that Harry will survive and be happy, so (if he dies), that would not only be an emotional break but a break in the genre, which is disturbing,' says Krasner, who will teach a course next year examining how the Potter saga synthesizes scores of literary themes. Krasner traces the phenomenon of 'hysterical fan culture' back to Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes stories from the late 19th century. 'It's the first instance when readers get nutty' and obsessive, he says. 'Today, the Internet really helps that. It allows people to exchange predictions

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

and trivia and interact."

5021. ———. "For crying out loud, these storied characters are tough to forget." USA Today, July 12, 2007: D7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "Sherlock Holmes, in four novels and dozens of short stories (1887-1930) by Arthur Conan Doyle. Weary of Holmes, Conan Doyle knocked him off by knocking him over Switzerland's Reichenbach Falls, then succumbed to reader and commercial pressure to revive him."
5022. P'Yetsukh, Vyacheslav. "Me and the sea." Virginia Quarterly Review 75, no. 1 (1999): 164.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Narrates the author's meditations at the sea. Reflections on solitude; Activities of the author; Reflections on life. Includes passing references to Doyle and Holmes. "...After dinner, as most Russians do, I would take a nap. I lay on my bunk, situated by the window, took up 'Notes Concerning Sherlock Holmes,' but at once the lines would begin interweaving into figures; my head filled with involuntary images, my body fell into a state of weightlessness; in a word, a sweet lassitude descended on me and I slept like a log....At that time I felt a bit uncomfortable; somehow I felt a kind of unpleasant expectancy, was on the alert, and I imagined someone might peek in from outside through my little window any moment. On top of that, at that time the surf would begin its threatening mechanical work, rats would scrape under the floor, the light from the candle streamed an antiquated light, and furthermore, I was reading a frightening work by Conan Doyle: 'It was in the spring of the year 1894 that all London was interested, and the fashionable world dismayed, by the murder of the Honourable Ronald Adair, under most unusual and inexplicable circumstances. The public has already learned those particulars of the crime which came out in the police investigation; but a good deal was suppressed on that occasion....'--my god, what nonsense! Putting the book aside, I couldn't take my eyes from the rectangle of the night sky..."
5023. Rabin, Staton. "How to get past writer's block." Writer 121, no. 4 (2008): 42-45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article introduces Staton Rabin, a writing coach, who offers his advice to writers on finding ways around writer's block. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...I was sure I had painted myself into a corner. How on earth would I get 11 people out of an impregnable fortress? Just when I was about to fall into a tortured sleep that night, the solution came to me. The answer could be found in the Sherlock Holmes story 'A Scandal in Bohemia.' In Conan Doyle's 'Bohemia' tale, Holmes and Watson concoct an elaborate scheme to build a 'smoke rocket' and toss it through someone's window to flush out the whereabouts of a hidden, compromising photograph of their client, the king of Bohemia...."
5024. Raczkowski, Christopher T. "From Modernity's Detection to Modernist Detectives: Narrative Vision in the Work of Allan Pinkerton and Dashiell Hammett." MFS Modern Fiction Studies 49, no. 4 (2003): 629-659.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. "...The field of American popular detective fiction that Hammett encountered in the twenties, however, was heavily influenced by Conan Doyle and the British tradition of 'drawing-room mysteries.' From 1926 to 1939, William Huntington Wright's 'Philo Vance' novels, written under the pseudonym of S. S. Van Dine, presided over the literary detective marketplace, outselling all competition. Wright's highly formalized novels of detection--replete with a list of characters, maps of crime scenes, and drawings of critical evidence--record the investigative virtuosity of Philo Vance, an erudite New York aristocrat and amateur detective. Vance even has his own admiring Watson-like narrator to dote on his genius, but that is where the obvious comparisons with Doyle end. When in The 'Canary' Murder Case, Vance states plainly, 'If you could distinguish between rationality and irrationality . . . you'd be a god,' he effects a distinct break with a Holmesian tradition of detective fiction that posited absolute explanatory authority to the detective's rational method (160). While this critique of rationality marks quite an advance over reductive tendencies in Doyle, a substitution takes place in Wright's novels that allows him to introduce a different type of idealized explanatory authority. Vance refers to this technique in The 'Canary' Murder Case as putting the suspects under 'the psychological microscope, as it were' (312). According to Van Dine, his Watson-like narrator, Vance exercises an expert psychological gaze that penetrates to the 'hidden truth beneath misleading exteriors' (Bishop 8). Wright's rejection of the epistemological certainty of Holmesian ratiocination then is premised on its substitution with the (qualified) epistemological certainty of an expert psychological vision penetrating the criminal psychoses of his suspects...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5025. Reeves, W. J. "Lies and literature." USA Today Magazine 127, no. 2642 (1998): 38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses literary works which focus on lying. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...British author A. Conan Doyle may have created the world's most famous detective in Sherlock Holmes, but the American writer Dashiell Hammett brought forth a new type of sleuth--the hard-boiled private detective-in The Maltese Falcon...."
5026. Reider, Noriko T. "Onmyōji: Sex, Pathos, and Grotesquery in Yumemakura Baku's Oni." Asian Folklore Studies 66, no. 1 (2007): 107-124.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes passing references to Doyle and Holmes (p. 115). "...A major factor in the popularity of Onmyoji is Yumemakura's modernization of classic stories as well as his characterizations of Abe no Seimei and Minamoto no Hiromasa. His invention of the Seimei-Hiromasa pairing bears a remarkable resemblance to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson, where Holmes, the sharp observer and logical thinker, is balanced by Watson, the man of action. Yumemakura states that he was conscious of the conversational styles and patterns of Holmes and Watson...."
5027. Revill, John. "A Life in Pursuit of Murderers; the Midlands' Top Murder Detective is Retiring After 30 Years of Hunting Down Killers and Bringing them to Justice. as Barrie Simpson Embarks on a New Challenge in the War-Torn Balkans, He Speaks to Crime Reporter John Revill." Birmingham Post, November 6, 2000: 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Above Det Supt Barrie Simpson's desk is a quotation from a Sherlock Holmes novel. The man who investigated more than 70 murders during his stint in West Midlands Police's murder squad still looks on Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's fictional detective as the best. 'I like watching Morse and Taggart, they are good entertainment and some elements of them do ring true. But a lot of it is unrealistic. Nobody would investigate murders on their own, and they get their forensic results far too quickly. The best is Sherlock Holmes. He is the master. He was written when most of the tools we use now were not invented, but Conan Doyle was well ahead of his time and incorporated them into his novels.'..."
5028. Rigney, Ann. "The untenanted places of the past: Thomas Carlyle and the varieties of historical ignorance." History & Theory 35, no. 3 (1996): 338.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Studies the works of Thomas Carlyle to demonstrate the limitedness of historical writing. Selectivity or incompleteness of historical writing with respect to the real world; Historians' tendency to thematize what has been left out of historical text; Limitedness of historical writing as source of its distinct aesthetic effect. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes.
5029. Riippa, Laurele, and Lynn Andreani. "Trade Paperbacks." Publishers Weekly 247, no. 4 (2000): 233.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Lists several paperback books including: Salvo Press, (dist. by Seven Hills) Houdini and the Seance Murders (Aug., 12.95) by Christopher Farran. "Houdini joins forces with Arthur Conan Doyle to solve a murder." Eagle Publishing/Gateway. The Adventures of Inspector Lestrade (Apr., $9.95) by M.J. Trow "continues the adventures of the character from the Sherlock Holmes series."
5030. Riippa, Laurele, and Robert Dahlin. "Fall 1999 Hardcover." Publishers Weekly 246, no. 32 (1999): 216.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a list of books available in fall 1999 including Trafalgar Square's The Coming of the Fairies (Sept., $14.95) by Arthur Conan Doyle" revisits the Cottingly Fairy photographs hoax." Gateway, Lestrade and the Brother of Death (Sept., $19.95) by M.J. Trow "is the latest Sherlock Holmes pastiche."
5031. Rios-Font, Wadda C. "El crimen de la calle de San Vicente : Crime Writing and Bourgeois Liberalism in Restoration Spain." MLN 120, no. 2 (2005): 335-354.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Criminal fiction thus appears hand in hand with a new language of legislation, of scientific criminology, of crime journalism; advances in any of these areas are both reflected in and influential on the others. For example, as Garland states, in the two decades following the publication of Cesare Lombroso's L'uomo delinquente (1876), Lombroso himself was featured 'in the fiction of Tolstoy, Musil, Bram Stoker, and Conan Doyle, as well as in countless journalistic essays and scientific reports' (26). In the case of Spain, if one looks only at the recognized history of crime literature, it seems that the nineteenth-century movement toward the establishment of a modern juridical field lacks the corresponding body of imaginative writing to contribute to its ideological diffusion. Scholars generally consider Spanish crime fiction a twentieth-century phenomenon, exception made of Pedro Antonio de Alarcón's short story 'El clavo' (1853), broadly hailed as the first native detective story. The next milestone commonly acknowledged is Emilia Pardo Bazán's 1911 story 'La gota de sangre,' a parodic comment on Doyle's Sherlock Holmes narratives..."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5032. Roessner, Jeffrey. "Unsolved Mysteries: Agents of Historical Change in John Fowles's 'A Maggot'." Papers on Language & Literature 36, no. 3 (2000): 302.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Asserts that John Fowles' prologue to 'A Maggot' novel redefined history literature as he promotes his democratic, feminist vision of social change. Metahistorical questions raised by the story; Sense of mystery established by Fowles from the beginning of the narrative. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Holmes does not consider that Fowles's existential vision of a mysterious event without solution is just as much a construct as the well-made detective plot. In other words, Fowles knows from the beginning that his mystery will not be solved, just as Conan Doyle--carefully planting the evidence Sherlock Holmes discovers in his investigation--knows the crime will be solved...."

5033. Roisman-Cooper, Barbara. "A Master of Crime." British Heritage 21, no. 4 (2000): 52.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles detective novelist H.R.F. Keating. Crime novels which have turned into motion pictures; Award for the book 'The Perfect Murder,' which introduced the character Inspector Ganesh Ghote; Trips to India; Books about dilemmas police detectives face. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. "...Keating, however, is delighted that readers have actually given their own imaginary life to his character. 'They have created an ambience around him that I never thought would be there...details of his life,' rather like people have done with Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes. Over the last several decades, the author has continued to set new challenges for himself. These included writing the screenplay for The Perfect Murder for the production team of Merchant-Ivory in 1990. Keating even had a small role in it. 'I may be a frustrated actor,' he laughs. He also wrote Sherlock Holmes: The Man and His World, part of a series. 'It was fascinating not only to read the stories again, but also to read about the history--the philosophical history--of that time and to see how often Doyle's creation reflected the late Victorian Age and vice versa.'..."

5034. Rose, Jonathan. "Was Capitalism Good for Victorian Literature?" Victorian Studies 46, no. 3 (2004): 489-501.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews Literature, Money and the Market from Trollope to Amis, by Paul Delany; pp. iii + 243. Basingstoke and New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2002, GBP44.00, $49.95; The House of Blackwood: Author-Publisher Relations in the Victorian Era, by David Finkelstein; pp. viii + 198. University Park: Penn State University Press, 2002, $55.00; Oscar Wilde's Profession: Writing and the Culture Industry in the Late Nineteenth Century, by Josephine M. Guy and Ian Small; pp. x + 314. Oxford and New York: Oxford University Press, 2000, GBP55.00, $85.00; George Newnes and the New Journalism in Britain, 1880-1910: Culture and Profit, by Kate Jackson; pp. xi + 293. Aldershot and Burlington: Ashgate, 2001, GBP47.50, $84.95; Macmillan: A Publishing Tradition, edited by Elizabeth James; pp. xxvii + 273. Basingstoke and New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2002, GBP50.00, $69.95. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. "...That last statistic should have been a warning to Blackwood's: it was relying too much on its backlist rather than actively seeking new talent. The firm passed up the chance to sign on Shaw, Thomas Hardy, Arthur Conan Doyle, H. G. Wells, and Robert Louis Stevenson--one of the most impressive streaks of missed opportunities in publishing history....Strand Magazine, Newnes's most famous periodical, has been written off as quintessentially middlebrow, and so it was. But middlebrow journals, far from marginalizing avant-garde culture, can serve the vital role of broadcasting that culture to a mass audience. As early as 1913, the Strand was explaining Sigmund Freud's The Interpretation of Dreams (1900) to suburbanites. The magazine pioneered innovative black-and-white illustration techniques, publishing artists such as Sidney Paget (the Sherlock Holmes mysteries) and H. R. Millar (Edith Nesbit's stories)...."

5035. Rosenberg, Norman. "More Than Just a Judge: The Legacy of Oliver Wendell Holmes, Jr." Reviews in American History 23, no. 3 (1995): 482-487.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of G. Edward White. Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes: Law and the Inner Life. New York: Oxford University Press, 1993. xii 488 pp. Illustrations, appendix, notes, bibliographical essay, and index. $37.50. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "When a series of improbable

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

political events brought Oliver Wendell Holmes, Jr. to the U.S. Supreme Court in 1903, he was not the most famous person named Holmes. His own author-father and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's fictional detective both merited more acclaim, and even the mass murderer known as 'Dr. H. H. Holmes' still likely attracted more notoriety. Holmes Jr. often worried that his legal talent, for which he himself had the highest regard, would never be recognized properly...."

5036. Ross, Stephen. "Modern England: Police State, Empire, Cosmopolis." Studies in the Novel 40, no. 3 (2008): 351-366.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews several books including "Detecting the Nation: Fictions of Detection and the Imperial Venture," by Caroline Reitz, "New Woman and Colonial Adventure Fiction in Victorian Britain: Gender, Genre, and Empire," by LeeAnne M. Richardson, and "Cosmopolitan Style: Modernism Beyond the Nation," by Rebecca L. Walkowitz. Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...This move marks the larger shift by which England came increasingly to be understood as imperial, as identified with its empire, and thus as interpenetrated by foreignness as well. As the century progressed, the sheer number of crimes whose solution depended upon tracing the criminal, an object, or even a tactic back to an origin on the periphery rose steeply as the detective gradually fused his local knowledge of the criminal population with encyclopedic knowledge of the exotic. The final exemplars of this move for Reitz are Arthur Conan Doyle and Rudyard Kipling. The latter's Kimball O'Hara is the ultimate figure of the Englishman with local (imperial) knowledge who works in the service of the empire as a spy/policeman. His natural curiosity, intellectual superiority to the natives he encounters, and love of the Great Game of policing and colonial administration completes the transition from the brutes of Peterloo to the almost ethereal intelligence of Sherlock Holmes...."

5037. Roth, Wolff-Michael, and Gervase Michael Bowen. "Professionals read graphs: a semiotic analysis." Journal for Research in Mathematics Education 32, no. 2 (2001): 159-194.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to Holmes. "...The following analogy may help the reader understand the two processes of structuring and grounding: Graph reading is an activity not unlike that in which Sherlock Holmes engages. Sherlock does not know a priori whether some cigarette butt refers him to the criminal or if its presence is coincidental; initially, he may not even notice a cigarette butt so that it does not exist in his lifeworld. He engages in structural analysis to separate signs (i.e., to cluster matter) that come to stand as figure against an unstructured ground; he then relates the ensemble of signs to events in the world. In the course of a novel, our protagonist may have to restructure his perception of a situation so that something that he first constructed as a sign does not fit in his unfolding understanding of the events that led to the cigarette butt's being where it is. He may have to construct new signs (structure) or relate already constructed signs to new contexts c (e.g., brand of the cigarette). He may understand signs from within different sets of conventions (within a transvestite culture, there are cigarette butts with lipstick that was worn by a male) or construct additional interpretants (e.g., the butt as a sign originating from an unrelated event)...."

5038. Rothenberg, Shiela, and Robert S. Rothenberg. "Westward Ho!" USA Today Magazine 128, no. 2658 (2000): 36.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Describes a travel to the South West Coast Path in England. Buildings and structures at Saint Mawes town; Dinner and dining at Saint Mawes; Description of the Penzance town; Travel to the city of Exeter. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes, along with a photograph of the figure mentioned in the hotel. "...Nearby is Princetown and the Duchy Hotel, where author Arthur Conan Doyle once stayed. Intrigued by the Moors, he put his fertile imagination to work and created one of Sherlock Holmes' most gripping adventures, the case of 'The Hound of the Baskervilles.' The hotel is now a visitors center and museum. As we walked in, we were startled by the wax figure of Holmes posed jauntily descending the stairs. It was uncannily lifelike...."

5039. Rothman, Roger. "The Cubist Detective, or the Eclipse of the Flâneur." Contemporary French & Francophone Studies 10, no. 4 (2006): 499-514.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article portrays viewing methods in respect to historicity of audience. Viewing of cubist paintings in not only pictorial but also in visual reception including Pablo Picasso's "Portrait of Artdealer Ambroise Vollard," and Georges Braque's "The Portuguese Man," are discussed. The article focuses of visual perception and relates to Ernst Junger. Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5040. Ruhl, Sarah. "Six Small Thoughts on Fomes, the Problem of Intention, and Willfulness." Theatre Topics 11, no. 2 (2001): 187-204.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Here, I'd like to make a distinction between murder mysteries and detective novels. The point of a murder mystery is to intellectually discover intention, whereas the point of a detective novel, as in The Maltese Falcon, is to physically get the bird. Detective novels are about willful behavior over and above psychology--they depend on allegory and a world gone wrong. (Read: a tradition of nonnaturalistic theatre, starting with medieval cycle plays.) Murder mysteries, on the other hand, depend on the intentions of specific, psychologized characters in the context of a conventional world. (Read: a tradition of naturalistic drama, starting in the nineteenth century). The murder mystery has the effect of making death hygienic and amenable to psychological, scientific explanation. (Arthur Conan Doyle got his idea for Holmes's methodology by observing grand rounds in a hospital.) It is in the land of the hyper-real that death loses its consequence, which is why the murder mystery appeals to many readers--it stimulates their intellect rather than their fear. In detective novels, death is less scientific and explicable. It is, instead, brutal and absurd--a bullfight without the ritual--simple slaughter...."

5041. Rutledge, John. "You're a Fool If You Buy Into This." Forbes 159, no. 7 (1997): 43-45.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Opinion. Explains why intellectual capital (IC) should not be a part of a company's financial statement. Leif Edvinsson as the leading advocate of balance sheet adjustment to account for IC; Why proponents of IC want a financial accounting of IC; Noting change in the capital markets; The ratio of the market value of companies to the market value of their physical or tangible assets, having increased since 1981; The importance of IC in exploring how to manage companies. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Nor is the speed at which information flows a new phenomenon. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle wrote about five daily mail deliveries in greater London in the 19th century, not to mention the telegraph and Holmes's real-time messenger boys, who were human precursors to the Internet...."

5042. Ryan, Marie-Laure. "Truth Without Scare Quotes: Post-Sokalian Genre Theory." New Literary History 29, no. 4 (1998): 811-830.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes passing references to Doyle and Holmes. "...Richard Rorty's position is less radical than Smith's. His ambition is not to do away with the notion of truth altogether, but only with the correspondence theory. While he recognizes that with certain types of statements 'the world decides the competition between alternatives' (for example, 'red wins' versus 'black wins') (C 6), he points out the insufficiency of this criterion for statements about fictional entities, such as 'Sherlock Holmes lived on Baker Street.' (He means the sentence as a comment by the reader, not as an authorial or narratorial speech act.) In this case there is nothing 'out there' in the world that makes the statement true or false, yet all people familiar with Conan Doyle's stories agree to the truth of this statement. Since for many philosophers reference and correspondence presuppose the existence of material entities, Rorty claims that we have two alternatives to deal with Sherlock Holmes statements: 'a 'pure' language-game approach which dispenses with [reference and correspondence] altogether, or a rigidly physicalist approach which interprets them in terms of physical causality.' (18) While the physicalist approach (the position toward which Russell was leaning) denies truth-value to all statements that do not refer to material objects, the language-game approach 'separates semantics from epistemology so drastically that semantics will have no interesting distinctions to make between truth about fact and about fiction' (IT 127). As already mentioned, the kind of language-game proposed by Rorty is a form of consensus theory according to which truth is a matter of 'warranted assertibility.' All it takes to make a statement true is for people to find motivations to believe it, and all there is to say about truth is that it is 'made' and not 'found.' Rorty sees no need to probe further into the various reasons that lead members of a culture to accept 'Sherlock Holmes lived on Baker Street' and 'The earth revolves around the sun.'..."

5043. Saar, Doreen Alvarez. "Writing Murder: Who is the Guilty Party?" Journal of Modern Literature 31, no. 3 (2008): 150-158.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This review of two books from McFarland ( Julie H. Kim, ed., Race and Religion in the Postcolonial British Detective Story; Gillian Mary Hanson, City and Shore: the Function of Setting in the British Mystery Novel) sets the stage by exploring the contemporary popular debates about the exclusion of detective fiction from serious literary attention and looking at the history of the reception of detective fiction. It finds some praiseworthy work in Race and Religion's essays, with their focus on contemporary characters such as John Mortimer's Rumpole of the Bailey. It is less satisfied with the critical usefulness of City and Shore." [Abstract from author] Includes a passing reference to Doyle, Holmes, and Howard Haycraft. "...In Murder for Pleasure, Howard Haycraft gleefully reminds us that Twain's Pudd'nhead Wilson may contain the first use of fingerprints (Haycraft 100). By the late nineteenth century, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes stories, considered by many critics to be the quintessential detective fiction, had captured a large readership...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5044. Sachs, David M. "Reflections on Freud's Dora Case After 48 Years." Psychoanalytic Inquiry 25, no. 1 (2005): 45-53.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "I revisit Freud's case of Dora from the vantage point of current literary and psychoanalytic perspectives. Mahony (this issue) argues that Freud's understanding of Dora is unconvincing to the modern reader because Dora is a victim of trauma rather than sexual repression. I extend Mahony's ideas in terms of the development of psychoanalytic ideas, place Freud's view in the context of my psychoanalytic education in the mid-20th century, and suggest that modern contributions to trauma theory and memory further support the thesis that Dora was a victim of trauma rather than of conflicted libidinal desires." [Abstract from author] Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. "...Or, consider how similar Freud's work with Dora is to Sherlock Holmes's deductions. Both Freud and Holmes seem to find hidden targets with unerring accuracy. Freud deduced the unconscious meaning of Dora's symptoms from a few surface clues; Holmes deduced that Watson had been in Afghanistan from the ashes of his cigarette! That Watson could have been somewhere else, Turkestan, say, was not mentioned by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. If we do not suspend disbelief, we would know that Holmes could have been wrong many times, just as Freud could have misinterpreted Dora's symptoms. Our need to accept authorial omniscience in order to believe in the infallibility of the conclusions of both Freud and Holmes allows us to accept them. Instead of finding the answer to the cause of Dora's symptoms, Freud found what he had in mind in the first place. Suspending disbelief in reading detective fiction leads to a satisfactory experience; suspending disbelief when treating human beings is not safe. So we can extend some compassion to the candidates of my generation and the next who learned psychoanalysis from idealized figures. We wanted Freud to be right, just as we want Holmes to defeat Moriarty every time, and we were easily persuaded that Freud's connections from the surface to the depths were correct...."

5045. Saint-Amour, Paul K. "Modernist Reconnaissance." Modernism/modernity 10, no. 2 (2003): 349-380.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This essay...is concerned neither with the airplane itself nor with the views its pilots and passengers enjoyed, but rather with the photographic genres, techniques, and discourses that developed in tandem with early aviation, and with their relation to avant-garde representation in the first decades of the twentieth century. Though some of the photo interpretation methods I discuss here were also deployed in interwar civil contexts, the essay is principally devoted to the techniques and technical discourse of aerial reconnaissance photography during World War I...." Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Given the stereoscope's vaunted power of peering around corners, making the minutest photographic details betray the concealed intentions of the enemy, one is hardly surprised to find the wartime aerial photographic interpreter hailed repeatedly as a detective. In his 1920 textbook on Airplane Photography, Herbert Ives describes military photo interpretation as 'a task of minute study and deduction worthy of Sherlock Holmes.' Harold Porter writes that once an interpreter has scaled a photograph, 'there are only two steps--to see what is on the photograph, and to make your conclusions. Sherlock Holmes would have adored it.' (21) Arthur Conan Doyle's detective, we should recall, straddles the threshold between a form of realism and a natural supernaturalism. In his self-representations, he is merely a practitioner-advocate of simple veridical technologies (observation, deduction) that allow him to restore dislodged objects and deranged subjects to their proper domains, proportions, and narrative functions. But at the same time, he is one in whom these technologies are so extremely realized--sometimes through his willingness to distort or even reject 'normal' scopic and deductive regimes--that they become 'powers,' giving him a hotline to the real so direct that it appears magical...."

5046. Saler, Michael T. "Clap if you believe in Sherlock Holmes': Mass culture and the re-enchantment of modernity, c.1890-c.1940." Historical Journal 46, no. 3 (2003): 599-622.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Explores the reenchantment of modernity in the context of Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes. Forms of contemporary cultural practice; Form of enchantment and rationalism; Defining element of modernity; Use of animistic reason and ironic imagination.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5047. ———. "Modernity, Disenchantment, and the Ironic Imagination." Philosophy and Literature 28, no. 1 (2004): 137-149.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Contains multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.
5048. Salzani, Carlo. "The City as Crime Scene: Walter Benjamin and the Traces of the Detective." New German Critique, no. 100 (2007): 165-187.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses the taste of Walter Benjamin for crime and detective novels. Benjamin's quasi-sociological account of the birth and development of the detective story in the nineteenth century as another phantasmagoric description of the city is analyzed. An account of the historian as detective and of the city as crime scene is given as a conclusion. The political importance of the detective pursuit is stressed by Benjamin's "theory of the trace." Doyle and Holmes mentioned in notes 3 and 46.
5049. Sampaio, Maria De Lurdes. "The Disquiet of Archaeology: Fernando Pessoa's Detective Writings." Portuguese Studies 24, no. 2 (2008): 128-167.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- M3: Article // "In this article I aim to demonstrate that Fernando Pessoa's interest in detective fiction is not marginal to the so-called 'major' works but is deeply rooted in his concern with epistemological questions and his obsession with 'abnormality' (crime, madness, degeneration...)." Unknown reference to Doyle or Holmes 5050. Sante, Luc. "Rereading." American Scholar 73, no. 3 (2004): 121-125.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an article about author Arthur Rimbaud. Information on Enid Starkie's biography of Rimbaud; Overview of Rimbaud's works; His characteristics. Includes passing references to Doyle and Holmes. "...I read indiscriminately, Sherlock Holmes and hotrod novels, UFO exposés and accounts of the Civil War, Dickens and Bob Hope, Horatio Hornblower and Worlds in Collision. All of it was literature, and all of it was good. I imagined a worldwide communion of writers past and present seated at their desks, assembling words at the gratifying potential rate of ten cents per, C. S. Forester and Immanuel Velikovsky and Arthur Conan Doyle and Franklin W. Dixon all stamping self-addressed envelopes, filing away carbon copies, letting the steel jaw of the mailbox slap shut while murmuring a little prayer...."
5051. Santianez-Tio, Nil. "Poéticas del modernismo. Espiritu ludico y juegos de lenguaje en la incognita 1889." MLN 111, no. 2 (1996): 299-326.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Contains multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.
5052. Scholar, Richard. "Strange Case of Dr Jekyll and Mr Hyde: A Case-Study in Translation?" Translation & Literature 7, no. 1 (1998): 42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses translations of Robert Louis Stevenson's novel 'Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde.' Need for the translator to determine what kind of case is the strange one in which Jekyll and Hyde are implicated; Emergence of the novel from translations as a psychological case-history of Jekyll with a wider social significance. Contains multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.
5053. Schroth, Raymond A. "The case of the beautiful corpse." National Catholic Reporter, March 12, 2004: 16-17.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Compares the television crime dramas and crime novels of yesteryears. Manifestation of the rise in sadism, power-worship and totalitarianism; Portrayal of of scientific advancement in "Crime Scene Investigation" television show; Documentation of forensic anthropology. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. "...A traditionalist like myself prefers the classic Sir Arthur Conan Doyle-Agatha Christie murder mystery format where Sherlock Holmes or Hercule Poirot is summoned to an old country mansion where Sir Bottomley has been found on the library floor with his head bashed in....Or consider what Holmes says to Dr. Watson in 'The Speckled Band,' where the obvious culprit is the violent Dr. Grimesby Roylott of Stoke Moran, who tries to kill his step-daughters with a poisonous snake to protect his inheritance: 'When a doctor does go wrong, he is the first of criminals.'..."
5054. ———. "Empty, dull, phony and popular." National Catholic Reporter, July 14, 2000: 17.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the television program 'Survivor,' aired by CBS Inc. Includes passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "When CBS's sensational series 'Survivor' -- about 16 volunteers isolated for 39 days on an off-Borneo island, allegedly living off the land and eliminating their weaker members until only one is left -- is studied in graduate school English courses and deconstructed at the annual meetings of the Modern Language Association, the scholars will focus on its literary antecedents. Like Mark Twain's story 'The Man That Corrupted Hadleyburg,' a satire of the Gilded Age, wherein a stranger promises a sack of gold to the unknown townspeople who aided him some years before, if the benefactor can identify himself. The competition for the gold reveals a town full of liars....Or my favorite, Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes story, 'The Five Orange Pips' -- on film, 'The House of Fear' -- where members of a club who meet in a Scottish mansion on a cliff are horribly murdered one after the other until only one is left....I'm told that the last survivor with a conscience on the CBS board of directors had a visitation from the ghost of Edward R. Murrow, granted leave from Great Correspondents Heaven to stop this show before it got worse. As a result, the editors and producers have re-scrambled the footage for the final episode, based on 'The House of Fear.' In that film, Sherlock Holmes deduces that the murdered club members faked their deaths in an ingenious insurance fraud. They're all alive in a cave under the cliff...."

5055. ———. "Sopranos' end." National Catholic Reporter, June 22, 2007: 15-18.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the television program "The Sopranos," starring James Gandolfini, Edie Falco and Robert Iler. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. "This closed the book on 'The Sopranos,' a show critics said was the best TV drama in history, to media culture what The Great Gatsby is to literature, and in crime fiction, the most fully realized character since Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes. But, while Gatsby's crimes were buried in the past and while Holmes' sins were limited to an occasional cocaine injection, Tony Soprano was a bad man, having killed or ordered the deaths of dozens, sometimes two or three persons a week, over eight years...."

5056. Schu, Bill. "RNAi Provides Clues, Yet Remains a Mystery." Genomics & Proteomics 5, no. 2 (2005): 19-22.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the attempts of scientists to understand the mechanism of RNA interference (RNAi). Exploration of ways to chemically modify messenger RNA; Citation of the short-term potential of RNAi therapeutics; Potential of linking small interfering RNA to different genes in a pathway. Inset: "T" Time for RNAi. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "Mystery writers throughout history have followed a classic storytelling pattern, from Arthur Conan Doyle's sly, indefatigable detective Sherlock Holmes to Agatha Christie's shrewd spinster Miss Marple, to John D. MacDonald's knight-errant Travis McGee...."

5057. Seshagiri, Urmila. "Modernity's (Yellow) Perils: Dr. Fu-Manchu and English Race Paranoia." Cultural Critique 62, no. (2006): 162-194.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Contains multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.

5058. Sharp, Chris. "Wandering in Literary Hampshire." British Heritage 26, no. 3 (2005): 34-40.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article focuses on Hampshire County in England. "Given the county's size and numerous places to visit, it is difficult to know where to begin, though a reasonable starting place would be the tiny hamlet of East Worldham near the market town of Alton. A few miles south of East Worldham is Selborne, a place of pilgrimage for lovers of natural history. This village of thatched cottages was home to 18th-century naturalist Gilbert White, whose observations were collated into The Natural History and Antiquities of Melbourn in 1789...." Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.

5059. Sherrill, Charles A., Laura J. Viau, Pamela Brown, Carol Smallwood, and Rosemary S. Feeney. "Methods of Work for Librarians." Library Journal 114, no. 4 (1989): 29-29.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article presents tips, techniques and rules of thumb for librarians. Various types of author identification games can be played with a bulletin board set up by student assistants in a highschool library. For example, a picture of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, accompanied by a map of England can get students started. Each day another clue such as the deerstalker cap or pipe can be added until students guess the author spotlighted.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5060. Shokoff, James. "What Is an Audiobook?" Journal of Popular Culture 34, no. 4 (2001): 171.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article comments on the emergence of audio books in the United States. In 1995, American consumers paid more than 1.4 billion dollars for audio books, and the rise to that figure had been steady since the mid 1980s. Virtually every major publisher of print books has established an audio book connection, and Publishers Weekly reported in July of 1996 that booksellers were eager to expand their audio sections. Yet despite this implied attention, audio books continue to be the stepchildren of American letters, confined to the scullery of respectability and being scornfully denied any status. Publishers Weekly has long recognized the emergence of this sub-literary phenomenon with brief discussion of what is new, bestseller lists, and annual citations for high achievement, and some newspapers and magazines also skim the surface of the more than 55,000 titles produced annually to guide their readers to ways of filling their commuting or jogging time, when they cannot keep printed material still enough to read. Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...In other productions than Welles's, Lionel Barrymore's performance of a highly compacted, half-hour adaptation of Charles Dickens's A Christmas Carol was broadcast annual for many years to a wide audience, and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes stories were adapted frequently and performed by, among others, Basil Rathbone, Nigel Bruce, Sir John Gielgud, Sir Ralph Richardson, and Welles...."
5061. Simini, Bruno. "Reading and writing." Lancet 357, no. 9273 (2001): 2066.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on why medical papers are written and why they are read. View that short papers are more likely to appeal to readers than long ones; Comments on efforts of authors to write short papers; Views on why medical papers are written, including to foster a clinical or academic career; View that writing is ultimate introspective exercise. Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Now, one step back-- why are medical papers written? Perhaps to foster a clinical or academic career? Honestly, does anybody still believe it does? Are authors perhaps pushed by the narcissism behind seeing their names in print? Are papers written to report results or to share concerns? Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, after completing his medical studies (and before giving birth to Sherlock Holmes), wrote to his mother that his plans were to 'observe cases minutely, improve in [his] profession, and write to a medical journal'; he hardly ever did so...."
5062. Sinclair, Neil. "Propositional Clothing and Belief." Philosophical Quarterly 57, no. 228 (2007): 342-362.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes passing references to Doyle and Holmes. "...To take the case of fiction, suppose on reading The Sign of Four I come to entertain the idea that Sherlock Holmes took cocaine. This state of mind is expressible by the propositionally clothed sentence 'Sherlock Holmes took cocaine'. Yet the state expressed by this sentence does not represent the world as having any particular nature, at least not unless I am under the delusion that Conan Doyle was a biographer. Similar remarks apply to imaginative entertainings which are not guided by extant works of fiction, such as suppositions entertained for the sake of argument, or mere imaginative fancies. This is not to deny, of course, that these states of mind have content -- there is a difference between entertaining the idea that Sherlock Holmes took cocaine and entertaining the idea that he was a violinist. But this content is not representational in the relevant sense, since it is not taken to be a representation of how the world is...."
5063. Sirabian, Robert. "The Conception of Science in Wells's The Invisible Man." Papers on Language & Literature 37, no. 4 (2001): 382.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the conception of science in the novel 'The Invisible Man,' by H.G. Wells. Film adaptations of the novel; Significance of the novel; Discussion of the first section of the novel. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...In this first section of his novella, Wells links the phenomenon of the unknown to scientific investigation, reconstructing the nineteenth-century debate over Baconian methodology. As the villagers are initially confronted with the strange looking and mysterious Griffin, they attempt to formulate a conclusion about his identity, relying on a form of deductive reasoning in the spirit of the scientific approach popularized by Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes in the late part of the nineteenth century. In the absence of any facts, however, their hypotheses fail to reveal anything concrete about him...."
5064. Skelton, John R., and Phil Hammond. "Medical narratives and the teaching of communication in context." Medical teacher 20, no. 6 (1998): 548-551.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The use of narrative for teaching has power and validity. The medical curriculum

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

lends itself well to a narrative approach, given the tradition of story-telling in medicine, and the ability of an individual story to act as the starting-point for problem-based study. The course reported here builds on these narrative traditions to teach medical communication skills and to illustrate some common problems encountered in primary care. The paper reports on the dramatization over four sessions of the stories of a young couple who separately seek medical advice. One is a young woman seeking the 'morning after pill', the other a young man-the partner of the woman, though students do not know this-presenting with a urethral discharge. The couple are played by professional role-players who interact with second-year students playing the doctor. Students are given extensive notes on the presenting issues, and on how they might be managed. [Abstract from author] Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...The use of narrative in medical education and the sharing of medical knowledge has a long and distinguished history. The output of the leading medical journals, indeed, was, until well into the present century, largely a matter of single, well-constructed case histories, told chronologically and with regard to the rhetoric of suspense. Many of them read like Sherlock Holmes mysteries--Conan Doyle was a nineteenth-century doctor educated in this tradition--from the introduction of the patient at the outset..."

5065. Smith, Abby. "Authenticity and Affect:When Is a Watch Not a Watch?" Library Trends 52, no. 1 (2003): 172-182.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Authenticity -- the verifiable claim that an object is what it purports to be--is crucial for the value of an artifact as evidence, cultural object, research source, and object worthy of collecting, curating, and preserving. This essay explores another aspect of authenticity in artifacts, one rooted in subjective experience and less amenable to verification but often equally important for meaningful use of retrospective resources--the ability of an artifact, through its physical presence, to create an experiential and affective response in the researcher. The essay further explores the implications for collectors and special collections librarians of the fact that digital objects can be likened to physical artifacts because they also claim experiential and affective authenticity." [Abstract from author]. Includes reference to Doyle and multiple references to Holmes.

5066. Smith, Chris. "Art & literature." British Heritage 20, no. 5 (1999): 38.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on British art and literature. Examples of early British works of art; Popularity of drama during the Renaissance period; Expression of the fascination with discovery and scientific experiment in the Age of Enlightenment. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes with a photograph of Doyle. "...Wilkie Collins is also credited with writing the first detective novel, The Moonstone. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle expanded this idea in the later 19th century. In his tales of Sherlock Holmes, Conan Doyle created one of the most popular characters in fiction and provided material for hundreds of adaptations this century in film, television, and radio. Prolific writers including Agatha Christie, Dorothy L. Sayers, Ngaio Marsh, and, more recently, P.D. James, Ruth Rendell, and Colin Dexter have assured the continuing popularity of the genre...."

5067. Snider, Adam. "Thinking Sidewise." School Library Journal 50, no. 4 (2004): 41-42.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Considers the alternate history genre for collection development. History of the genre; Contributions of authors H. B. Piper and Harry Turtledove to the genre; Range of audio-visual materials that can be added to the collection; Tips on building an alternate history collection. Recommended titles include: Bear, Greg. Dinosaur Summer. Aspect. 1999. "A sequel to Arthur Conan Doyle's Lost World, in which the captured dinosaurs return and 15-year-old Peter Belzoni is involved in the problems that arise with trying to relocate them. (Gr 7 Up)"; Garret, Randall. Lord Darcy. Baen. 2002. "Today's England is ruled by magic that has been developed as a science, and Lord Darcy and his forensic sorcerer assistant use a combination of magic and Holmesian logic to solve crimes. (Gr 9 Up)"

5068. Somigli, Luca. "The Realism of Detective Fiction: Augusto De Angelis, Theorist of the Italian Giallo." Symposium 59, no. 2 (2005): 70-83.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an article about the influence of author Augusto De Angelis on the intrusion of the foreign genre of detective fiction in the Italian literature in the 1930s. Factors that contributed to the existence of such fiction; Impact of the social conditions in Italy during the era on the development of detective novels in the country; Importance of Anglo-American traditions to the novels. Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5069. Spake, Amanda. "It's no mystery." U.S. News & World Report 124, no. 3 (1998): 58.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Looks at the history of crime fiction. The booming sales in mystery fiction; The popularity of P.D. James, and others; How the success of crime fiction threatens its future; Editors and writers suggesting that publishers tried to cash in on crime; The glut on the market; The mystery bookstores that have a tradition of making the reputations of local writers; What mystery writing provides the reader. Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes as well as Otto Penzler. "...A few of mystery's grandmasters: The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes by Arthur Conan Doyle; a gentleman and his sidekick...."
5070. St. Antoine, Theodore J. "How the Wagner act came to be: A prospectus." Michigan law review 96, no. 8 (1998): 2201.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the origin of the National Labor Relations Act or the Wagner Act of 1935 enacted by the United States (US) Congress. Goals of the law concerning industrial relations; Examination on the US Supreme Court's interpretation of the law; Details on the law. Footnote 41 includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "My knowledge of scientific method is rudimentary. It is largely derived from popularizers like Issac Asimov, see, e.g., Isaac Asimov, Asimov's New Guide to Science 13 (rev. ed. 1984.) ('[N]o matter how many times a theory meets its tests successfully, there can be no certainty that it will not be overthrown by the next observation.'). Perhaps Sherlock Holmes in A Scandal in Bohemia best summed up my attitude: 'It is a capital mistake to theorize before one has data.' Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, A Scandal in Bohemia, in The Complete Sherlock Holmes 161, 163 (1930). I must concede, however, that sophisticated scientific thinkers take a considerably more complex view of the respective roles of theory and observation. See, e.g., Karl R. Popper, The Logic of Scientific Discovery 107 (Karl R. Popper et al. trans., rev. ed. 1968) ('Theory dominates the experimental work from its initial planning up to the finishing touches in the laboratory.'). But see id. at 109 ('[W]hat ultimately decides the fate of a theory is the result of a test, i.e. an agreement about basic statements.'); see also Thomas S. Kuhn, The Structure of Scientific Revolutions 97" 5071. Stavans, Ilan. "A Brief (Happy) Talk with Paco Ignacio Taibo II." Literary Review 38, no. 1 (1994): 34-37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an interview with Latin American writer Pablo Ignacio Taibo II. Beginnings as a writer; First encounter with fictional character Hector Belascoarian Shayne; Relationship between Shayne and Philip Marlowe; Cause of popularity; Comments on other writers. Includes a question with reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Arthur Conan Doyle, tired of his character Sherlock Holmes, once killed him, only to bring him back later on upon the petitioning of his readers. Belascoaran Shayne seems also to have been resuscitated in your novel Return to the Same City and Under the Rain (Planeta, 1989). Does he control you or vice versa? We control each other. I didn't kill him, dramatic logic killed him, the progression of facts. Then the readers protested. I decided that the saga wasn't finished and revived it. White magic!..."
5072. ———. "Introduction: Private Eyes & Time Travelers." Literary Review 38, no. 1 (1994): 5-20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents and essay on the quality and characteristics of Latin American detective stories and science fiction. Predominant characteristics; Cultural factors; Styles; Influences; Social significance; Notable writers. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes.
5073. Stefaniuk, Walter. "Sales tax burden." The Toronto Star, June 20, 1996: A7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Passing reference to Doyle, Holmes, and Watson. "In Sherlock Holmes stories, what was Dr. Watson's first name? Dr. John Watson...."
5074. Sternberg, Meir. "Omniscience in Narrative Construction: Old Challenges and New." Poetics Today 28, no. 4 (2007): 683-794.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes passing references to Doyle and Holmes.
5075. Stetz, Margaret D. "Oscar Wilde at the Movies: British Sexual Politics and The Green Carnation (1960)." Biography 23, no. 1 (1999): 90-107.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- (Margaret Diane) // Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "In her 1990 study Sexual Anarchy: Gender and Culture at the Fin de Siècle, Elaine Showalter notes, 'The 1980s and 1990s .

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

. . . compulsively tell and retell the stories of the 1880s and 1890s, in contemporary versions of Victorian novels, in film and TV adaptations, in ballets and musicals, and in all the myriad forms of popular culture. . . . Yet in retelling these stories we transmit our own narratives, construct our own case histories, and shape our own futures.' But this phenomenon is in fact nothing new. For the whole of the twentieth century, popular culture in general, and film in particular, has repeatedly turned to the creations of the late-Victorian literary imagination--to Robert Louis Stevenson's Jekyll and Hyde, to Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes, to Bram Stoker's Dracula, to Oscar Wilde's Salome--and embodied these characters in ways that have both reflected and furthered particular social or political agendas of the present day, far more than those of the past.

5076. Stewart, Garrett. "The Mind's Sigh: Pictured Reading in Nineteenth-Century Painting." Victorian Studies 46, no. 2 (2004): 217-230.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.

5077. Stoneman, Colin. "Cataract." Journal of Biological Education 32, no. 3 (1998): 166-171.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The writer discusses whether high school biology can or should provide students with sufficient knowledge to understand cataracts, a relatively simple defect of the eye, and to appreciate the latest complex remedies. He concludes that if a sufficient amount of video recordings of surgical operations are obtained and appropriately edited, teachers should be able to teach by enabling students to see into the eye like a surgeon and introducing the eye's anatomy through visual encounter." Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Traditionally the treatment of cataract has been the removal of defective lenses by surgical operation. Many ways have been devised, some of them known in the East for more than a thousand years. Most methods involve cutting into the eye with a specially made knife. Devotees of Sherlock Holmes will recall (from 'Silver Blaze', in The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle) the description of a knife found in a dead man's hand: 'Watson, this knife is surely in your line.' 'It is what we call a cataract knife', said I. 'I thought so, a very delicate blade devised for very delicate work.'..."

5078. Swain, John W., and Matthew L. Duke. "Recommendations for Research on Ethics in Public Policy from a Public Administration Perspective: Barking Dogs and More." International Journal of Public Administration 24, no. 1 (2001): 125-136.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Suggests several recommendations for ethics research in public policy based on the experience of public administration. Basic meaning of ethics in public administration literature; Purpose of pursuing ethics in public administration; Common problems in public policy. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. "We make recommendations for ethics research in public policy based on the experience of public administration. In many ways, literature in public administration on ethics relates appropriately to public policy, albeit with specific gaps and specific peculiarities. The specific gaps apply particularly to aspects of public policy that are not especially emphasized in public administration (e.g., ethics in policy formulation and evaluation). Peculiarities include the tendency to avoid empirical and practical hands-on issues in ethics in favor of dealing with them from a theoretical and normative perspective and to assume a cohesive self-identification of public administrators with public organizations. After appropriate preliminaries, including a brief review of public administration literature on ethics, we recommend concrete and reality-oriented ethics research after the manner of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes, who took an empirical and practical hands-on approach to investigations."

5079. Tally Jr, Robert T. "Graphs, Maps, Trees: Abstract Models for a Literary History." Modern Language Quarterly 68, no. 1 (2007): 132-135.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Graphs, Maps, Trees: Abstract Models for a Literary History," by Franco Moretti. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...For example, a particular genre 'dies off' when it lacks a necessary trait. As in biological evolution, it is not always clear in advance what will survive (e.g., Arthur Conan Doyle's rivals certainly would have liked to produce works sharing the Sherlock Holmes tales' popularity and canonicity)...."

5080. Tapply, William G. "Create a sleuth for the long haul." Writer 121, no. 7 (2008): 24-27.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The author offers strategies for writing a long-running mystery series that features a series character. The author notes that publishers and literary agencies are drawn to writers who can establish fan bases and display staying power and one way to develop these traits is to have a popular series character. The author notes that these characters should be likable, have the potential for growth and change over time. He discusses the importance of establishing voice, career path and flaws. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5081. ———. "Point of view." Writer 115, no. 8 (2002): 26.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the importance of point of view in writing mystery novels. Universal requirements of the mystery novel; Reasons mystery novelists write from the single, intimate point of view; Problem with multiple point of views. Includes passing references to Doyle and Holmes. "...Mystery fiction is famous for its sleuths, both professional and amateur. Its enduring popularity, in fact, can be attributed to the power of reader identification with heroes and heroines as diverse as Sherlock Holmes, Hercule Poirot, Nero Wolfe, Sam Spade, Travis McGee, Kinsey Millhone, Kay Scarpetta and Stephanie Plum....Suppose your sleuth is restricted by a wheelchair or confined to a prison cell. Maybe he's a wealthy, sedentary orchid grower who refuses to leave his Manhattan apartment. A passive sleuth such as Rex Stout's Nero Wolfe makes a brilliant detective--but a poor POV character. Stout solved this dilemma by giving Archie, Wolfe's caustic sidekick, the job of doing the legwork--and narrating his novels, much the same way as Conan Doyle made Dr. Watson, not Sherlock Holmes, his narrator...."

5082. Tennenhouse, Mary Ann. "Golden Blonde." Publishers Weekly 250, no. 16 (2003): 42.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Interviews Loren D. Eldman, author of the book 'Poison Blonde.' Plot of story; Information on the design of the book's logo; His plans as president of the Western Writers of America. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...PW: He smokes, do you? LE: Only the occasional cigar. It's a nice piece of business for punctuation and bits of dialogue, a throwback to a certain kind of detective. A surgeon suggested that I should have Amos quit because kids read the books. If I gave him completely clean habits he'd be a bore. There's a reason Conan Doyle gave Holmes a cocaine habit, something dark. Amos is one of the lepers, having to go outside to smoke. It gives him an everymannish edge that I enjoy...."

5083. Teraoka, Arlene A. "Detecting ethnicity: Jakob Arjouni and the case of the missing German detective novel." The German Quarterly 72, no. 3 (1999): 265-289.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Since they arrived on the scene in 1987, Jacob Arjouni, a writer of hard-boiled detective fiction, and his remarkable protagonist, the Turkish-German private eye Kemal Kayankaya, have been critically acclaimed by fans of crime fiction. With his economical style, urban realism, and wisecracking protagonist, Arjouni has been received as the long-awaited German heir of Raymond Chandler and Dashiell Hammett. Having shown how Arjouni's novels relate to the extremely mediocre history of German detective fiction, the writer explores issues of authenticity and identity arising from Arjouni's work and its use of a Turkish-German protagonist." Contains references to Doyle and Holmes.

5084. Thomas, Ronald R. "Double Exposures: Arresting Images in Bleak House and The House of the Seven Gables." Novel: A Forum on Fiction 31, no. 1 (1997): 87-113.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Investigates the function of portraiture in the detective novels 'Bleak House,' written by Charles Dickens and 'The House of the Seven Gables,' by Nathaniel Hawthorne in the nineteenth century. Link between the history of photography and the history of the detective novel in nineteenth century America and England; Limitation and power of photographs as depicted in the detective novels. Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.

5085. Tomaiuolo, Nicholas G. "Books in the Web Library." Searcher 10, no. 4 (2002): 28.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the business operations of electronic text Web sites. Types of texts that Web sites offer; Copyright issues involved; Evaluation of some Web sites. Includes passing references to Doyle and Holmes. "...None of the online texts found through the IPL actually originate there. The texts emanate from different sites and exist in different formats. For example, you may click on the IPL's entry for Mary Shelley's Frankenstein and go to the University of Virginia's Electronic Text Library, but clicking on an entry for H. G. Well's Invisible Man will transport you to Bartleby.com, and for some Sherlock Holmes your browser will point to the Adelaide University in Australia at <http://www.library.adelaide.edu.au/etext/>. Wherever you arrive, you can download the book to your own machine for offline reading....As you visit these sites or perform your own searches, you also may find some newer copyrighted works available. Although this will not occur frequently, free electronic texts exist in most subject areas and genres. So if you enjoy the contemporary writers Robert Parker, Dick Francis, and Ellis Peters, your desire for mysteries may be fulfilled by Edgar Allen Poe, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, and Agatha Christie....Although Moynihan originally planned to distribute pulp fiction, horror stories, and mysteries over the site, he began to see that his e-texts of classic literature by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the Bronte sisters, and Joseph Conrad were among his site's most popular e-texts!..."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5086. Tonkin, Boyd. "Watching the detectives." New Statesman 125, no. 4301 (1996): 45.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews Michael Dibdin's book 'Cosi Fan Tutti' and Colin Dexter's 'Death Is Now My Neighbor.' Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...For example: what's the difference between Protestant and Catholic detection in the classic English whodunit? To Gramsci, Sherlock Holmes -- with his iron chains of deduction linking the tiniest of clues -- embodies 'the scientism and positivistic psychology of the Protestant Conan Doyle'. By contrast, G K Chesterton's Father Brown broods and bumbles towards truth with all the intuitive wisdom of a Roman priest 'trained to know all the wrinkles of the human soul'...."

5087. Torgovnick, Marianna. "Supporting Roles." Chronicle of Higher Education 54, no. 20 (2008): B14-B15.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the novels "The Scandal of the Season," by Sophie Gee, "Loving Frank," by Nancy Horan, and "Hotel de Dream: A New York Novel," by Edmund White. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...A flurry of notable books since 1998 have included famous authors as characters, among them Michael Cunningham's The Hours, a commercially successful re-creation in contemporary terms of Virginia Woolf's Mrs. Dalloway; Colm Toibin's The Master, about Henry James from the time he wrote Guy Domville (a play that failed) through his closest female friend's suicide; and Julian Barnes's Arthur & George, about a real-life mystery solved by the creator of Sherlock Holmes. They differed from books like The Agony and the Ecstasy in their choice of artist and, even more, in their temporal scope and plot. Virginia Woolf, Henry James, and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle are big names, to be sure. But they are not names like Michelangelo or Van Gogh (the subject of Stone's Lust for Life), synonymous in the public mind with genius...."

5088. Towheed, Shafquat. "Science, Time and Space in the Late Nineteenth-Century Periodical Press: Movable Types." Victorian Studies 50, no. 2 (2008): 344-346.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Science, Time and Space in the Late Nineteenth-Century Periodical Press: Movable Types," by James Mussell. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. "...Mussell's reading of the serialisation of Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes stories in the pages of the Strand is both original and liberating in its implications. Mussell sees the runaway success of Doyle's stories as evidence of a popular appetite for a scientific methodology that allows for guilt-free reading of the narrative plots of detective fiction: Holmes's exposition of scientific method is translated and mediated by Watson, who embeds the narrative in the cultural hinterland of the Strand's resolutely middle-class (and middle-brow) readership. It would have been fascinating here to compare the Strand's successful (and populist) espousal of scientific method with the failure of other periodicals to benefit from an explicitly antiscientific position. The serialisation of Joseph Conrad's parable of scientific method gone astray, The Secret Agent (1907), in the pages of the American journal Ridgway's a decade later offers a chastening reminder of the importance of placing a text within an established readership context...."

5089. Tsiplakov, Georgii. "Evil Arising on the Road and the Tao of Erast Fandorin." Russian Studies in Literature 38, no. 3 (2002): 25.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a historico-philosophical analysis of the content of bestsellers written by Russian author Boris Akunin. Reasons why Akunin's texts interest specialists in various branches of the humanities; Conceptual and philosophical base of some of Akunin's works which derives from those of the German romantics of the first third of the 19th century. Includes passing references to Doyle and Holmes.

5090. Underhill, William. "Hoist One Last Glass." Newsweek 152, no. 16 (2008): 60-60.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article offers information about the effect of rising beer prices on pubs in

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- England. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "William Ward lives only a few steps from one of London's favorite drinking spots, a venerable pub called the Museum Tavern. Its clientele has reputedly included Karl Marx, the impoverished exile who spent his days studying at the British Museum Reading Room just across the street, and Arthur Conan Doyle, the struggling young doctor who had an office nearby and created Sherlock Holmes to occupy his idle hours between patients...."
5091. van Inwagen, Peter. "McGinn on existence." Philosophical Quarterly 58, no. 230 (2008): 36-58.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "I compare the theory of existence and being (and of non-existence and non-being) presented in Colin McGinn's Logical Properties with those of well known predecessors such as Quine, Frege and Meinong." Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.
5092. Viswanathan, Byravan. "Diagnosing the doctor." Cortlandt Forum 13, no. 2 (2000): 88.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Relates how the author diagnosed his friend to be suffering from acromegaly, significant elevations of human growth, melanocyte-stimulating and adrenocorticotrophic hormones which resulted to a large pituitary adenoma. Symptoms of the disease. Includes passing references to Doyle and Holmes. "...Since the diagnosis, my patient, friend, and colleague has been acutely aware of the need for keen observation in medicine, and he has put his formidable detective skills to great use in his own specialty. He reminds me, in fact, of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's classic gumshoe, Sherlock Holmes. It could be that doctors have an innate talent for sleuthing. We must never let laboratory tests replace that talent. After all, Conan Doyle was a physician before he became an author...."
5093. Wagner, Doug. "Reconsidering drugs (Book Review)." Journal of Alcohol and Drug Education 45, no. 3 (2000): 57-60.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Reconsidering Drugs: Mapping Victorian and Modern Drug Discourses by Lawrence Driscoll. Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...For the literary foundation of our beliefs about cocaine and the opiates Driscoll draws from the writers, Wilkie Collins, Robert Louis Stevenson, and Conan Doyle. Initial reactions from Collins' and Doyle's novels indicate negative interpretations. Collins' novel Moonstone, which deals with opiate use, as argued by Driscoll shows the very reverse. Following its publication in 1868, a time when controls were being instituted through legislation, Collins spoke of how laudanum, a mixture of wine and opium, actually helped him to finish the work. In Doyle's stories of Sherlock Holmes, he points out how Holmes too spoke favorably of his drug experiences. In one of the stories, his colleague Mr. Watson turns down Mr. Holmes's offer to use--though not because of any moral reason. Here Holmes speaks of the drug's help in clarifying and stimulating the mind...."
5094. Walker, Joseph S. "A Kink in the System: Terrorism and the Comic Mystery Novel." Studies in the Novel 36, no. 3 (2004): 336-351.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses several literary works about terrorism. Analysis of the essay "In The Ruins of the Future" and the book "Mao II," by Don DeLillo; Information on the book "Operation Shylock," by Philip Roth; Details of the novel "Leviathan," written by Paul Auster. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. "...If Friedman's strategy here is reminiscent of texts of high postmodernism such as Operation Shylock (where Roth's real-life friendship with novelist Aharon Appelfeld becomes 'Roth's,' just as Friedman's friendship with Nelson becomes Kinky's, for example) it is no less indebted to the history and traditions of the mystery field. Any number of minor celebrities have written (or, more frequently, had ghost-written) mysteries drawing upon their lives and work, though only Friedman, to my knowledge, has extended such a series beyond a few books and met with such a degree of success. A more significant influence may be the Ellery Queen mysteries, which, though written under a pseudonym by a pair of authors, purported to be narrated by a real-life detective using his own name. Beyond these specific examples, however, there has been a tradition in mystery fiction, dating back at least to Sherlock Holmes, to treat the stories as real occurrences, albeit disguised out of necessity or carelessness. Holmes fans in particular have for more than a century made a game out of finding ways to explain the inconsistencies and obvious errors in their canon, perpetuating the playful illusion that Arthur Conan Doyle was merely Watson's literary agent. It is the central assumption of such fan readings (that the stories point to an historical 'truth' which can be uncovered) that, I think, Scanlan would point to as placing them firmly in the realm of the popular; surely no reader of Operation Shylock has believed that such an unveiling is possible or desirable. Holmes's continuing presence throughout Friedman's series is acknowledgement of the connection; a hollow bust of the great detective's head sits on Kinky's desk and holds his cigars, Kinky frequently quotes from or parodies Doyle in his dialogue, and the central plot of the book preceding The Mile High Club, Spanking Watson, concerns his efforts to determine which of his friends is truly his 'Watson.' Friedman also follows the tradition, familiar in mystery series going back to 221B Baker Street, of lavishly furnishing the books with recurring images, items and settings that encourage the continuing reader's sense of familiarity and comfort. Kinky's loft on Vandam Street, with the aloof and cynical cat, the espresso machine supplied by grateful mobsters, the black wooden puppet head atop the refrigerator, the two red telephones, and the perpetually noisy 'lesbian dance class' in the loft above, has become as comfortable to fans as Nero Wolfe's brownstone or Travis McGee's houseboat, the Busted Flush...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5095. Weinberg, Louise. "The power of Congress over Courts in nonfederal cases." Brigham Young University Law Review 1995, no. 3 (1995): 731.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the power which Congress has over courts in nonfederal cases. Ways in which Congress can impact on the jurisdiction of states over nonfederal business. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "We really have no clear idea about what the power of Congress is over the jurisdiction of courts. This obscurity may even lend the subject an uncanny interest, like the London fog in one of Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes stories. But as long as good theory eludes us we will be stumbling along like so many Dr. Watsons, without a clue...."

5096. Weinman, Jaime J. "Happy Birthday Mr. Playboy." Maclean's 119, no. 12 (2006): 44-47.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article describes Hugh Hefner's life and his development of "Playboy" magazine and its spinoffs. Hefner will be turning 80 soon and plans to celebrate with a party at his mansion. He started the magazine in 1953 and it immediately appealed to those men who dreamt the male fantasy that Hefner was living. During the glory years of the 60s, Hefner expanded his business to include the Playboy Clubs. The Women's Lib movement hit Hefner's businesses hard and they began to decline for nearly 2 decades. In the 90s Hefner saw a resurgence of popularity. Includes passing references to Doyle and Holmes. "...For over 40 years, Hefner has carefully preserved that fantasy as part of the Playboy culture. Even his clothes and mannerisms are taken from fantasy and escapism: he came up with his much-copied, much-parodied way of dressing, with his smoking jacket and oversized pipe, partly based on the movies of his childhood and partly on mystery stories: 'I was reading Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes, and Sherlock Holmes hung out at his apartment all the time in a smoking jacket and smoked a pipe, so there may be a connection there.' But Playboy wasn't a magazine for monastic intellectual types like Sherlock Holmes...."

5097. Wellington, Darryl Lorenzo. "Uncle Tom's Shadow." Nation 283, no. 22 (2006): 26-31.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The Annotated Uncle Tom's Cabin" by Harriet Beecher Stowe, edited by Henry Louis Gates. Includes passing references to Doyle and Holmes. "...Much more than Twain's Huckleberry Finn, Poe's fiction and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes stories, Uncle Tom's Cabin remains frozen in the past, a blurry childhood memory. Many adults will have the experience of weighing their youthful impressions of Twain, Poe and Conan Doyle against their mature understanding. Not so with the tale of Uncle Tom, Eliza, Little Eva, Topsy and Simon Legree...."

5098. Whaley, Bart, and Jeffrey Busby. "Detecting Deception: Practice, Practitioners, and Theory." Trends in Organized Crime 6, no. 1 (2000): 73.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Explores how detectives ascertain deception within the society and within the government. Practice of military and intelligence deception in the U.S. in the 1941 attack of Pearl Harbor in Hawaii; Information on the counterdeception strategies in the government; Cost-effectiveness of deception and counterdeception. Article and notes contain multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.

5099. Whelan, David. "Policy-Minded Globe-Trotter's Path Leads to MacArthur." Chronicle of Philanthropy 14, no. 14 (2002): 30.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Interviews Lukas Haynes, a program officer in International Peace and Security at the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation in Chicago, Illinois. Overview of his duties and responsibilities at the company; Information on the MacArthur Foundation's grant-making approach; Response to the September 11, 2001 terrorist attacks in the U.S. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

"Favorite books and magazines: Amazing Grace: The Lives of Children and the Conscience of a Nation, by Jonathan Kozol; The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle; and Powder, a skiing magazine."

5100. Whittington-Egan, Richard. "The Edwardian Literary Afternoon Part Two: Now Came Still Evening on." Contemporary Review 276, no. 1612 (2000): 244.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides information on the literature of the Edwardian era. Popularity of lady novelists like Ellen Price and Mrs. W. Desmond Humphrey; Quality of the period's poetry; Detective stories; Mark of writers E.M. Forster and Joseph Conrad. Includes passing references to Doyle and Holmes. "It has in bitter truth to be admitted that a disconcertingly sizeable majority of Edwardian library readers rested content with the romantic scrivenings of Victorian lady writers of the calibre of Mrs. Henry Wood, nee, in 1814, Ellen Price -- 'Dead! and ... never called me mother.' (East Lynne, dramatised version), and M.E. Braddon, otherwise Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Maxwell (1837-1915), and the books published by the celebrated authors of the day sold better in post-Edwardian times. For example: those of Conrad's novels which appeared in the Edwardian era sold notoriously badly. While those of the late-Victorian romantic Anthony Hope sold well. Galsworthy did not, until the First World War imported a mood of nostalgia for the good old days. E.M. Forster's sales were woefully slow, and, surprisingly, Conan Doyle did not begin to sell really well until Neo-Georgian times. Equally surprising, Morley's, from every standpoint ponderous, three-volume life of Gladstone (1903) had huge numbers of Edwardian readers delving deep into their purses.... Sherlock Holmes was, of course, essentially a figure of the 1880s and 90s, but his foothold in the Edwardian period was assured by the appearance in the Strand Magazine, in 1901-2, of The Hound of the Baskervilles, and in 1903-4 of The Return of Sherlock Holmes...."

5101. ———. "Literary supplement: Laurence Binyon remembered. (Cover story)." Contemporary Review 270, no. 1572 (1997): 54.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Laurence Binyon: Poet, Scholar of East and West,' by John Hatcher. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Binyon's influence and scholarship in the matter of Oriental art was both pioneering and immense. He was fortunate in that he contrived to spend his life doing what he liked--exploring Japanese, Chinese, Indian arts, as well as art in general; writing poems and plays; savouring a calm home life in the bosom of the loving family of his own creation. For all the reams and reams of verse he wrote, it was his fate to be haunted--like Elgar by 'Land of Hope and Glory' and Conan Doyle by Sherlock Holmes--by the central quatrain of 'For the Fallen'. Not the best thing I ever did, he would repine in dry Eliotean fashion...."

5102. Wiegmann, Mira. "Re-visioning the spider woman archetype in Kiss of the Spider Woman." Journal of Analytical Psychology 49, no. 3 (2004): 397-412.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article examines the transformation of spider woman archetype from Manuel Puig's adaptation of his novel to a play, and other adaptations into a film and a musical. The paper examines how the archetype's image and function shift when 're-visioned' by various artists and performed in disparate social contexts. [Abstract from author] Footnote 2 contains a reference to Holmes: Puig also modified the spider woman role in the 1944 movie The Spider Woman and the 1946 The Spider Woman Strikes Back. In the first an evil femme fatale, played by Gale Sondergaard, vies with Sherlock Holmes (Millhauser 1944; Crowther 1944). Molina, like the Spider Woman in this film, may believe that he has caught Valentin in a web of relatedness, but he has also become caught in the net of Valentin's social responsibility. Sondergaard reprises the Spider Woman role in the second film, but duels with an innocent heroine rather than the famous detective (Bartnett 1946). Valentin is repeatedly drugged like the young heroine in this film, but the protagonists in both films survive the Spider Woman's machinations. The references at the end of the article include one with a mention of Doyle: Millhauser, B. (1944). The Spider Woman (Universal Pictures movie). Screenplay based on a story by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Produced and directed by Roy William Neill. With Basil Rathbone, Nigel Bruce, and Gail Sondergaard. 1988 video: CBS/Fox Co.

5103. Willemen, Paul. "For a comparative film studies." Inter-Asia Cultural Studies 6, no. 1 (2005): 98-112.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The paper argues that the comparative approach to the study of modern cultural forms should be founded on the common experience but divergent histories of the development of a capitalist

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- mode of production and the impact of its reformatting dynamics on social, including cultural, relations. The paper then goes on to explore and propose a number of probably inevitable theoretical frameworks and tools to implement a comparative approach to the study of a thoroughly industrialized cultural form, such as cinema and films. [Abstract from author]. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...In short, different aspects of the text acquire, through their expressive-indexical dimension, value for something that could be called a forensic or an archaeological reading. That is to say, a kind of reading that Conan Doyle attributed to Sherlock Holmes and is currently most widely practised in medicine, both regular and forensic, although Kosambi also mobilized it for the purposes of historiography...."
5104. Wilson, Bee. "Peasoupers." New Statesman 127, no. 4411 (1998): 40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several books on food. Mentions 'The Adventure of the Bruce-Partington Plans'; 'The Hound of the Baskervilles'; 'The Sign of Four.'
5105. Wilson, Bee, and Frances Stonor Saunders. "Cold turkey." New Statesman 129, no. 4518 (2000): 80.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Deals with the enjoyment of Christmas food which according to the literature of childhood, comes only out of hunger. Several Christmas foods; Overview of the book 'Little House on the Prairie,' by Laura Ingalls; Percentage of poor people in Great Britain according to the Joseph Rowntree Foundation; Literatures on Christmas food. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Christmas also presents the frightening spectre of living way beyond one's means, of splurging in one go on unenjoyable luxuries and accumulating the plastic debt that will make the next year as burdensome and worry-laden as the last. Much better to swap your weekly Lottery spend for a stake in a goose club, as described in the marvelous Sherlock Holmes story The Adventures of the Blue Carbuncle...."
5106. Wilson, Robert. "Narrative Innovation in Lorian Macchiavelli's Sarti Antonio Stories." Romance Studies 25, no. 4 (2007): 309-321.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Recently described as the 'padre vivente del giallo italiano', Lorian Macchiavelli is responsible for the longest-running Italian detective story series with his Sarti Antonio books. The status of the genre is still in question, especially in Italy, and Macchiavelli's books have been published in some of the less prestigious, more popular collections." Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. "...In 1987 Macchiavelli did attempt to introduce a pause in the Sarti stories by killing off his protagonist, only to have him brought back again under commercial pressure, very much alla Conan Doyle....For all the framing around the discovery of a manuscript which prefaces Il nome della rosa, the identification of Eco's Adso with Conan-Doyle's Watson character extends to his narrative function....Sarti is no sbirro nato, nor is he Sherlock Holmes. He is not an anti-intellectual, simply a non-intellectual...."
5107. Winckler, Martin. "Martin Winckler." Lancet 363, no. 9414 (2004): 1082-1082.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the author's thoughts on being a physician writer in France. The link between writing and medicine; Type of books that he has published; His medical training; View that physician writers are respected in the English-speaking world; A list of his favorite literature; Idea that writing is a tool for doctors. His list includes The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes and mention is made of Doyle in the article.
5108. Woods, Gregory. "Queer London in Literature." Changing English: Studies in Culture & Education 14, no. 3 (2007): 257-270.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...The rest of the time, it [queer] means something like 'strange' or 'odd', even if the homosexual connotation is never entirely absent. (One can play with the word 'gay' in a similar manner when retrospectively narrating mid-century events.) It is worth recalling that earlier Londoner, Sherlock Holmes, who was first introduced by Arthur Conan Doyle, in A Study in Scarlet (1887), with the same word. No better epithet occurs to Stamford when he mentions the sleuth to Doctor Watson: 'He is a little queer in his ideas'..."
5109. Wren, Celia. "Whodunit? The Impresario in the Wings." American Theatre 24, no. 7 (2007): 46-49.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article presents a review of the inaugural RiverPark International Mystery Writer's Festival in Owensboro, Kentucky. The festival was created in order to revive and introduce new audiences into the genre of the whodunit mysteries. The festival, created by RiverPark president and chief executive officer Zev Buffman, features productions including "Death by Darkness," starring actress Kelly Sears. Inset: Get a Clue. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5110. Wringer, Bill. "Making the Lightness of Being Bearable: Arithmetical Platonism, Fictional Realism and Cognitive Command." Canadian Journal of Philosophy 38, no. 3 (2008): 453-487.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The author defends a minimalist version of arithmetical Platonism from an allegation that an advocate of such minimal Platonism is committed to an unduly capacious ontology. His objection, which he calls "Lightness of Being," is based on his proposition that a Platonist should embrace the capacious ontology which the objector takes her to be committed to. He explains that the Platonist should have no objection to claiming that fictional characters are abstract objects." Holmes and Doyle appear in the course of this philosophical argument.

13 PASSING REFERENCES -- BOTH DOYLE AND HOLMES -- BIBLIOGRAPHY (1)

5111. "35-Year Index, Part 2: Book Reviews." Studies in Short Fiction 36, no. 2 (1999): 121-198.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This section presents an index of book reviews published in Studies in Short Fiction since 1963 and listed alphabetically by the name of the author, editor, or translator of the book reviewed. Includes entries under: Cox, Don Richard: Arthur Conan Doyle. (George Monteiro, rev.) 23: 218-19; Doyle, Sir Arthur Conan: Tales of Terror and Mystery. (Howard Lachtman, rev.) 15: 117-19; Paul, Robert S.: What Ever Happened to Sherlock Holmes?: Detective Fiction, Popular Theology, and Society. (A. Nicholas Fargnoli, rev.) 29: 405-06.

13 PASSING REFERENCES -- BOTH DOYLE AND HOLMES -- CHRONOLOGY (2)

5112. "125 years of MTNA." The American Music Teacher 51, no. 1 (2001): 16-55.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A special section celebrating 125 years of the Music Teachers National Association (MTNA). The section focuses on MTNA presidents and MTNA chief staff executives through the years, the MTNA Scholarship Foundation, the MTNA Professional Certification Program, the MTNA Competitions Program, and the MTNA Composer Commissioning Program. The section includes a timeline of notable or historical events that took place during the 125-year history of the MTNA. Included in this timeline is a reference for 1892--Conan Doyle: Adventures of Sherlock Holmes.

5113. "Archive: on this Day." Birmingham Post, July 7, 2001: 8.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // 1930: Death of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, creator of Sherlock Holmes: Born in Edinburgh in 1859, Doyle had completed his medical studies at the the University of Edinburgh before Holmes appeared for the first time in 1887 in the story A Study in Scarlet in Beeton's Christmas Annual....

13 PASSING REFERENCES -- BOTH DOYLE AND HOLMES -- CODES AND CIPHERS (1)

5114. Bandrapalli, Suman. "Secret signals." Christian Science Monitor, Jan 7, 1997: 16.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on the origins of secret messages. Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "For some fictional stories that involve secret codes, try "The Gold Bug," a short story by Edgar Allen Poe; "The Adventure of the Dancing Men," by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle (a Sherlock Holmes story); or "Journey to the Center of the Earth," a science-fiction novel by Jules Verne."

13 PASSING REFERENCES -- BOTH DOYLE AND HOLMES -- COMPUTERS (6)

5115. Arnow, Paul, and William Chamberlin. "Debugging computer-assisted antibiotic prescribing." Lancet 345, no. 8944 (1995): 207.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Opinion. Focuses on the use of computers in prescribing antibiotics, with a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "In the framework of Conan Doyle's fictional world, computer systems will not turn the pedestrian Inspector Lestrade into another Sherlock Holmes but can nevertheless sharpen Lestrade's reasoning so that he does not so often go astray."

5116. Felix, Kathie. "Net watch." Multimedia Schools 6, no. 5 (1999): 14.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents news briefs related to Web sites in the United States, as of November 1999. Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "More than 60,000 complete books, periodicals, education games, encyclopedias, dictionaries, maps, atlases, and Web sites with appropriate K-12 content are accessible at the INET Library. The subscription site developed for K-12 education includes 11,000 full-text books such as collections of Hans Christian Andersen's fairy tales and Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes stories, college/career information, lesson plans organized by grade level and subject, and a searchable database of more than 54,000 schools. New information is added daily...."

5117. Goldsborough, Reid. "The Brave New World of Book Research." Teacher Librarian 33, no. 3 (2006): 49-49.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents an update on the plans of Yahoo! and Google to digitize books and make them searchable through search engines as of February 2006. Several book-archiving efforts that were introduced online prior to Google and Yahoo! are presented. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...The first widely accessible effort to place the full text of a large number of books online was Project Gutenberg (www.gutenberg.org), where you can currently download, read, or search through more than 16,000 books. These are primarily out-of-copyright volumes published before 1923, from Shakespeare's work to the Sherlock Holmes stories of Arthur Conan Doyle. You can also find interesting odds and ends, such as the Human Genome Project and pictures of prehistoric cave paintings from the south of France--all free of charge...."

5118. ———. "Searching the Full Text of Books." Information Today 23, no. 1 (2006): 29-30.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reports on the accessibility of Internet search for the full text of books. Users can find a listing of more than 20,000 books accessible through On-Line Books Page, available at <http://onlinebooks.library.upenn.edu>. Users can search by title and author and they can link to banned books such as "Ulysses" and "Fanny Hill." Google is collaborating with several universities to digitize all or portions of their collections. While Yahoo! is working with universities and learned institutions to create the Open Content Alliance. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...The first widely accessible effort to put the full text of a large number of books online was Project Gutenberg (<http://www.gutenberg.org>), which has more than 16,000 books that can be downloaded, read, or searched through. These primarily are out-of-copyright volumes published before 1923, from Shakespeare to the Sherlock Holmes stories of Arthur Conan Doyle. You'll also find interesting odds and ends such as the human genome and pictures of prehistoric cave paintings from the south of France. All of them are free...."

5119. Hane, Paula J. "Autonomy with StoryServer 4 Provides Personalized Web Experience." Information Today 16, no. 3 (1999): 37.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Announces that Autonomy Inc.'s Content Server supports Vignette's StoryServer 4 as of early 1999. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...The intelligent pattern-recognition technology that fuels Autonomy's software was originally developed by Autonomy's sister company, Neurodynamics, for use in intelligence and defense applications. That technology is at the heart of the British police force's Holmes2 system, named after Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's legendary detective. The Holmes2 system helps the police solve crimes by matching fingerprints or by finding similarities and connections in disparate crime witness statements or police reports. The same technology is now being used to find connections in commercial data...."

5120. Olson, Eric T. "The ontological basis of strong artificial life." Artificial Life 3, no. 1 (1997): 29.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Analyzes claims on the possibility of creating living organisms by programming computers. Description of computer-generated organisms; Ability to abstract complexes of pure information; Physical processes inside the computer. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. "...At any rate, I can think of no reason to suppose that running a computer program that represents a living organism thereby produces a real organism 'in another world' that is not also a reason to suppose that telling a story about a living organism thereby produces a real organism. You might think that there is such a reason, namely that fictional stories, unlike computer programs, are 'incomplete': they fail to specify all of the details of the world they purport to describe. Did Sherlock Holmes have a mole in the middle of his back? Doyle does not tell us, and therefore it is neither true nor false in the Sherlock Holmes stories that Holmes has a mole in the middle of his back. Thus, Doyle could not have created a world like our own by writing his stories, for there are many possible worlds, differing in the details Doyle is silent about, in which those stories would be true chronicles. An alive program, on the other hand, specifies all the details of the world it represents (or so we are told). Important though this difference may be, however, it provides no reason to think that computer programs but not stories represent other universes. Suppose we take the Sherlock Holmes corpus and laboriously add details, such as the number of hairs on Watson's head and Miss Morstan's shoe size. Imagine that we continue making the story more and more specific until all questions that can be asked about it are settled, and the story can be true in only one possible universe. This may not be possible (the description might have to be infinitely long); but if a computer program can answer all questions about a possible situation, I see no reason why a story cannot do so as well. It should be obvious, however, that adding details to the Sherlock Holmes stories does not make those stories any more likely to be true of anything. On the contrary: a more specific story is less likely to be true than a less specific one...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

13 PASSING REFERENCES -- BOTH DOYLE AND HOLMES -- EDUCATION (1)

5121. Middleton, J. "The overpressure epidemic of 1884 and the culture of nineteenth-century schooling." History of Education 33, no. 4 (2004): 419-435.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the link between the child overpressure epidemic of 1884 and the culture of 19th century schooling in England. Context of child overpressure; Exaggerated accounts of overpressure in parliamentary and media discussions; Limitations of the cultural narrative. Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...In contrast, Conan Doyle, a great advocate of popular education, would use the new educational environments as emblems of progress: 'Look at those big, isolated clumps of building [said Holmes] rising up above the slates, like brick islands in a lead-coloured sea.' 'The Board Schools.' 'Lighthouses, my boy! Beacons of the future! Capsules, with hundreds of bright little seeds in each, out of which will spring the wiser, better England of the future.'..."

13 PASSING REFERENCES -- BOTH DOYLE AND HOLMES -- FILM (5)

5122. "2003: The Crap So Far." Rolling Stone, no. 916 (2003): 68.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several motion pictures released in the year 2003. Includes "Shanghai Knights" with the following remark: "The sequel moves the boys to London, where they do the same shtick (Chan somersaults, Wilson wisecracks). They also try to catch the killer of Chon's father with the help of the young Charlie Chaplin and police inspector Artie Doyle, who likes Roy's name for a fictional detective: Sherlock Holmes."

5123. Burke, Ken. "Charting relationships in American popular film. part II." International Journal of Instructional Media 25, no. 1 (1998): 87-109.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // As an elaboration of Part I on the confluence between American history and popular film genres, this section explores Schatz's concept of genre evolution through the experimental, classic, refinement, and deconstructivist phases. Includes reference to Doyle and Holmes. "... I hope are fairly clear based on the films that constitute my understanding of the periods, although there are a few interesting wrinkles: (1) TV shows of the late 1950s to present either continue the classic phase of the detective, or they may well bring about a real classic II period in that so many of the TV protagonists reassert the older Sherlock Holmes 'sleuth' tradition (although the hardboiled model, such as 'Magnum, P. I.,' is still to be found); (2) although almost all of the genres (except musicals) have precursors in literature and many (including musicals) come from theatre as well, the detective genre is unique in taking its classic antecedents so effectively from novels (from Arthur Conan Doyle's Holmes to Dashiell Hammett's Nick and Nora Charles and Sam Spade) into film that we must look to the printed page for this genre's experimental phase..."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5124. Givens, John. "Editor's Introduction." Russian Studies in Literature 40, no. 2 (2004): 3-6.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on cinema to be the most important of the arts in 1919 in Russia. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...In the end, Goscilo argues for a more rigorous approach to analyzing film adaptations, one that takes into account not only broader questions of intertextuality and directorial intent but also the details of the material circumstances of the filming, from its budget to its casting, targeted audience, and publicity. She closes with a discussion of Igor' Maslennikov's adaptations of Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes stories for Russian viewers...."

5125. McCormick, Patrick. "Too smart for their own good?" U.S.Catholic 68, no. 2 (2003): 42.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the portrayal of geniuses in U.S. motion pictures. 'A Beautiful Mind'; 'Good Will Hunting'; 'Shine.' Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. "...Vincent D'Onofrio is a homicide cop with a Holmesian I.Q. on Law and Order: Criminal Intent....Hollywood has long loved to cast geniuses as detectives or evil masterminds. Ever since Basil Rathbone and George Zucco brought Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes and Professor Moriarty to the screen, audiences have loved the cat-and-mouse play between these good and bad brainiacs....INSET: McCormick's Quick Takes also includes reference to Holmes. "Zero Effect" (Columbia, 1998). Super sleuth Daryl Zero (Bill Pullman) and his able assistant Steve Arlo (Ben Stiller) resemble Quixote and Sancho more than Holmes and Watson in writer director Jake Kasdan's zany comedy thriller about a blackmail investigation. With observational powers that make Holmes, Wolfe, and Morse look like three blind mice, millionaire recluse Zero solves mysteries instantaneously...."

5126. New, Elisa. "Good-bye, Children; Good-bye, Mary, Mother of Sorrows: The Church and the Holocaust in the Art of Louis Malle." Prooftexts 22, no. 1/2 (2002): 118.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Explores the Catholic Church's culpability in the Holocaust in Louis Malle's film 'Au revoir, les enfants.' Description of the sculpture 'A Lady of Sorrows'; Other films directed by Malle; Details on Malle's treatment of his characters. Includes passing references to Doyle and Holmes. "...On the other hand, Julien's mirror reading is also the kind of act that a boy learns from Sherlock Holmes, a copy of which he spots on Jean's nightstand the night that the Jewish boy arrives....From hiding, from lying, from all feeling under wraps, Jean and Julien depart together into the spiritually richer world of the undercover. For instance, the fact of Jean's Jewishness is a secret that the boys share in deadly, terrified earnest--but also with a certain derring-do. It is, for example, in an exchange of cryptic signs straight out of Dupin or Conan Doyle or the hugger-mugger of detective cinema, that Julien lets Jean know that he knows his true identity..."

13 PASSING REFERENCES -- BOTH DOYLE AND HOLMES -- FORENSICS (3)

5127. "An ounce of prevention. (Cover story)." Canada & the World Background 62, no. 3 (1996): 28.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses crime detection and prevention in Canada, including references to Doyle and Holmes. "Sherlock Holmes, the great fictional detective, could study a single footprint and declare that the person who left it was bald, left-handed, spoke with a Russian accent, had recently eaten a supper of mutton curry, and carried a pearl-handled pocket knife in his blue, Harris tweed jacket. Such power of deduction may have been elementary in the make-believe world of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle who created Holmes; in real life, crime detection is a bit more complicated. Today's detectives have high-tech wizardry available to them that would amaze even Mr. Holmes. The venerable old detective might also disapprove of the way in which police sometimes rely on this technology."

5128. "Whose body of evidence?". Economist 348, no. 8076 (1998): 78-80.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses forensic science's place in the courtroom and the need for better scientific methods. Reference to Doyle and Holmes. "Forensic science has a lot of romantic literature behind it, with many fictional detectives stalking the pages of whodunnits-magnifying glass in hand and nicotine-source in mouth. One pertinent early example is in Conan Doyle's 'The Sign of Four', in which Sherlock Holmes reveals to the admiring Dr Watson that he has written several monographs on technical subjects, one of them entitled 'Upon the distinction between the ashes of various tobaccos'. In this work (complete with colour plates), Holmes shows how to identify the ash of 140 forms of tobacco from pipes, cigars and cigarettes-information, he says, that may sometimes be of supreme importance in solving a crime."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5129. Edmondston, Joanne. "What would Sherlock Holmes have thought of forensic DNA profiling?" Australian Science Teachers Journal 45, no. 1 (1999): 11.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides information on the use of DNA analysis in crime-solving. History of forensic DNA profiling; Possibility of similarity of DNA profiles of two individuals; Paternity testing; Identification of bodies damaged beyond recognition; Establishment of DNA banks. Includes reference to Doyle and Holmes. "So much has changed since the Victorian era of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, when crime-solving involved Sherlock Holmes and Dr Watson piecing together evidence in the study of 221B Baker Street. Today crimes are solved through the collaborative efforts of a wide range of experts including police and lawyers in the simplest cases, through to pathologists, forensic scientists, psychiatrists, dentists and even geologists and engineers in more complicated cases....So have molecular crime-solving techniques (and what they promise to deliver in the future) made the deliberations and conclusions of sleuths such as Sherlock Holmes and Dr Watson obsolete? Will DNA technology and powerful computer databases ensure every criminal is caught soon after committing a crime? It's unlikely...."

13 PASSING REFERENCES -- BOTH DOYLE AND HOLMES -- FREUD (1)

5130. Dufresne, Todd. "The making of a Freud Skeptic." Skeptic 7, no. 3 (1999): 42.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Interviews writer and skeptic Frederick Crews about his critical work on psychoanalyst Sigmund Freud. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Not surprisingly, Freud was an avid reader of Arthur Conan Doyle. His case histories are cast in the same mold, with you-know-who playing the role of the infallible Holmes...."

13 PASSING REFERENCES -- BOTH DOYLE AND HOLMES -- GENERAL AND MISCELLANEOUS (83)

5131. "Can an attribution assessment be made for Yellow Rain?: Systematic reanalysis in a chemical-and-biological-weapons use investigation." Politics & the Life Sciences 26, no. 1 (2007): 24-42.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes (p. 27). "...We also tested our ability to evaluate evidence and successfully choose correct explanations using a series of cases analyzed fictionally by Sherlock Holmes, as described in the short stories of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle; we repeated this exercise using evidence and story lines in multiple episodes of the American television drama series, Law and Order. In each case, our methodology proved successful, even when evidence led the reader or viewer down a false inferential path prior to a twist in story line and a surprise ending...."

5132. "Chronology." CQ Researcher 13, no. 38 (2003): 927-927.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents chronology of events regarding serial killers. First modern-age serial killer; Publication of first modern scientific account of sexual serial murder; Arthur Conan Doyle's publication of 'Sherlock Holmes'; Preparation of first modern profile by psychiatrist James Brussel of bomber suspect George Metesky; Popularity of the term serial killer; DNA Identification Act; Trial for sniper John Allen Muhammad.

5133. "The Content of Our (Textual) Characters or Who's Afraid of Postmodern Ethics?". Humanist 54, no. 1 (1994): 29-31.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes, with an opening quote from The Hound of the Baskervilles.

5134. "Contributors." Victorian Studies 43, no. 4 (2001): 843-848.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes reference to Doyle under contributor note. "Edward S. Lauterbach is Professor Emeritus of English at Purdue University. His interests include Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and the Sherlock Holmes stories."

5135. "Contributors." Victorian Studies 42, no. 4 (1999): 877-881.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes Doyle reference in contributor note. "Edward S. Lauterbach is Professor Emeritus of English at Purdue University. His interests include Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and the Sherlock Holmes stories."

5136. "The History & Traditions of Fact-Based Crime Literature." Legal Studies Forum 29, no. 2 (2005): 957-999.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Addresses the history and traditions of fact-based crime literature. Varieties of fact-based crime literature; Background of the strong British interest in true crime; Advantages of the study of criminal cases by historian or novelist. Includes passing references to Doyle and Holmes.

5137. "Il pasticciaccio di gadda e l'imbroglione di germi: letteratura e cinema noir a confronto. (Italian)." Symposium 59, no. 2 (2005): 84-99.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // In Italian. Reference to "sherlockholismo," and "conandoyliano."

5138. "Individual Authors." Journal of Modern Literature 22, no. 3 (1999): 489-544.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes reference to Doyle and Holmes. Otis, Laura. "The Empire Bites Back: Sherlock Holmes as an Imperial Immune System." Studies in Twentieth Century Literature XXII:1 (Winter 1998), 31-60.

5139. "Internal Medicine, Psychiatry." SciTech Book News 29, no. 3 (2005): 79-100.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Lists books on internal medicine and psychiatry. Two references are made in the reviews to Holmes and Doyle, first in Michael Fitzgerald's The Genesis of Artistic Creativity: Asperger's Syndrome and the Arts, and secondly, in the Visual Ergonomics Handbook, edited by Jeffrey Anshel.

5140. "Locating haunting: a ghost-hunter's guide." Cultural Geographies 15, no. 3 (2008): 297-312.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes passing references to Doyle and Holmes.

5141. "Robert Ludlum." Economist 358, no. 8215 (2001): 83-83.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an obituary for United States mystery writer Robert Ludlum, who died on March 12, 2001, at the age of 73. Includes references to both Doyle and Holmes. "His apocalyptic messages were a part of the thriller tradition that dates back at least to Sherlock Holmes. Conan Doyle was rather more sparing with the exclamation marks, but like Robert Ludlum he was a persuasive storyteller. And he too made his readers feel they were getting a privileged glimpse into how the real world was run. In 'A Scandal in Bohemia' the enthralled reader learns that the problem challenging Holmes 'is of such weight that it may have an influence on European history.' It is possible that Robert Ludlum once played Sherlock Holmes. He did not take up writing until he was 40. For some 20 years before that he was cast in many roles in the theatre and on television. He appeared in some 200 television dramas...."

5142. Adams, James Eli. "Recent Studies in the Nineteenth Century." SEL Studies in English Literature 1500-1900 41, no. 4 (2001): 827-879.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.

5143. Alleva, Richard. "I Read the Book." Commonweal 128, no. 5 (2001): 23.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Hannibal,' by Thomas Harris. Includes reference to Doyle and Holmes.

5144. Alspector-Kelly, Marc. "Pretending to See." Philosophical Psychology 19, no. 6 (2006): 713-728.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "There are three distinct projects--ontological, phenomenological, and conceptual--to pursue in the philosophy of perception. They are, however, rarely distinguished. Failure to distinguish them has resulted in their being pursued as one. Their completion then requires that they admit of the same solution,

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- while accommodating the existence of misperception and the scientific facts concerning the perceptual process. The lesson to learn from misperceptions and those facts is, however, that no such common solution is possible, and that the projects must, and can, be pursued separately. Pursuit of the phenomenological and conceptual projects then requires a context in which discourse concerning objects of perception is permitted without ontological commitment to such objects. This is supplied by treating certain uses of perceptual locutions as within a context of pretense." [Abstract from author] Includes references to Doyle and Holmes.
5145. Arendt, Dieter. "Günter Grass: Hundejahre oder La diabolica commedia germanica. (German)." Orbis Litterarum 61, no. 6 (2006): 461-476.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Hundejahre- der Titel ist beredt: Jahre der Not und des Elends, etwa Kriegsjahre oder Nachkriegsjahre. Hunde spielen ihren Part, nicht zuletzt ein Hund, ein schwarzer deutscher Schäferhund. Assoziationen sind vielfältig: Rannte nicht ein schwarzer Hund durch Saat und Koppeln und entpuppte sich als diabolischer Scholastikus? Hält nicht ein schwarzer Hund Wache vor den Toren des Orkus? Und hatte nicht ein oberster Kriegsherr einen schwarzen Schäferhund? Die Hysteron-Proteron-Erzählweise ist ein adäquater Kunstgriff für die schleichende Dämonisierung des kleinbürgerlichen Alltags an der Weichsel. Die Rollen-Erzähler waren dort Kinder und kennen sich bestens aus hinter den Deichen und als Gymnasiasten in der nahen Stadt - und hinter ihnen steht ein orts- und zeitkundiger Autor. An den Fäden des halbjudischen Redakteurs und Regisseurs Brauxel oder Brauchsel - wie Weichsel - hängen und agieren die tagblinden Primaner-Soldaten und die bramarbasierenden Partei-Bonzen. Sie erinnern sich genau, aber ihr Gedächtnis ist ein blinder Spiegel. Brauxel fabriziert in seinem Bergwerk - wie als Junge schon an der Weichsel - Scheuchen als gespenstische Karikaturen der historischen und zeitgenössischen Heroen. Erst als er im Bergwerk seinen Scheuchen-Reigen vor Augen führt, dämmert im Zwielficht der Karbidlampe die deutsche Historie als Karneval der Welt-Geschichte. Dem Titel Hundejahre korrespondiert in spiegelbildlicher Analyse der wortkarge Epilog: „Der Orkus ist oben.“ [Abstract from author] Note 15 includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "Zur Farbe schwarz des Ho"llenhundes vgl. etwa: A. Conan Doyle: Sherlock Holmes. Der Hund von Baskerville. Ubs. V. H. Kotthaus. 1959. S. 43: „Ein Hund war's, ein riesiger kohlpechschwarzer Hund, wie ich ihn noch nie gesehen hatte. Feuer brach aus seinem weit offenen Maul, die Augen glu"hten, von Leffzen, Nackenhaaren und der Wamme zu"ngelten Flammen. Es war ein Gescho"pf wie aus den Fiebertra"umen eines Wahnsinnigen. Die Nase dicht am Boden folgte die Bestie der Spur des Barouets.“ 5146. Barry, Rebecca Rego. "The Neo-Classics: (Re)Publishing the "Great Books" in the United States in the 1990s." Book History 6, no. (2004): 251-275.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Mentions Doyle's The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes.
5147. Bassett, Karey L. "Spring events." Florist 27, no. 12 (1994): 12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on events about floriculture in the United States scheduled in May and June 1994, including Doyle's birthday. "Observe the birthday of the creator of Sherlock Holmes, literature's most famous detective. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, an English physician and novelist, was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, in 1859. Appeal to book-worms and Sherlock Holmes fans with a shop display fashioned after an English study. Display antique copies of Holmes' mysteries with men's accessories and silk arrangements suitable for offices and dens. Such a display encourages customers to plan Father's Day gift purchases."
5148. Boehmer, Elleke. "Global and textual webs in an age of transnational capitalism; or, what isn't new about Empire." Postcolonial Studies 7, no. 1 (2004): 11-26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses three representative instances of cross-continental or globalized contact circa 1900 and the political, cultural, and metaphoric exchanges constituted through them. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes.
5149. Breit, William, and Kenneth G. Elzinga. "Economics as detective fiction." The Journal of Economic Education 33, no. 4 (2002): 367-376.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes. "Almost all good economic analysis is structured like classical detective fiction. This relationship goes well beyond the obvious fact that both detective fiction and economic analysis involve puzzles. The economist's epistemology, presented in the form of scientific narratives, runs parallel to the puzzle-solving processes of the mastermind sleuth presented in the form of fictional narratives. The family resemblance between economic analysis and the classic whodunit becomes even more transparent by noticing another important characteristic they share: the concept of equilibrium. Examples chosen from recent economic literature bring the argument into sharper focus. In each instance, the solution to the puzzles that lie at the heart of their respective domains must be ingenious and surprising in order to be persuasive."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography

Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5150. Budiansky, Stephen. "One more leap for nuttiness." U.S. News & World Report 119, no. 16 (1995): 14.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the derailment of an Amtrak passenger train in Arizona in October 1995. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. "In Arthur Conan Doyle's first Sherlock Holmes mystery, A Study in Scarlet, the murderer scrawls in blood upon the wall beside his victim the word rache -- German for "revenge." His aim is to cloak a simple act of personal vengeance in shadowy suggestions of political intrigue and secret socialist societies. Needless to say, the press and the police, eager to blame 'foreigners' and sucked in by the drama of the murder scene, fall for it. No matter whether the person who derailed an Amtrak passenger train in Arizona last week, killing one and injuring more than 100, was a psychopath, a disgruntled employee or someone trying to make a bizarre political statement, the eagerness of everyone from the local sheriff to the president of the United States to label the tragedy an act of 'terrorism' bespeaks a human foible that too many these days share with Doyle's flat-footed officials and sensation-seeking journalists...."
5151. Burke, James. "Survivals." Scientific American 283, no. 5 (2000): 126.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Traces the influence of Victorian adventurer Edward Burnett Tylor, considered to be the father of cultural anthropology, on later events. Includes reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes turned into such a cult that to this day thousands fetch up at his 'home' (now a museum) on Baker Street, London, where he 'lived' with his medical straight man, Dr. Watson. Later in life Doyle dreamed up another winner: Professor Challenger, explorer-anthropologist hero of The Lost World, who finds a mysterious, isolated plateau in the South American jungle that is inhabited by living prehistoric animals and half-ape, half-human 'missing links.'" 5152. Bush, Ronald. "T.S. Eliot and the Cultural Divide (review)." Modernism/modernity 12, no. 1 (2005): 198-200.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of T. S. Eliot and the Cultural Divide . David E. Chinitz. Chicago, IL: University of Chicago Press, 2003. Pp. x + 264. $35.00 (cloth). Doyle and Holmes mentioned in quotation. "...He was always promising to attempt a serious critical evaluation of the detective story, but he probably failed, as he did in his essay on Kipling, to find the right tools for dissecting what, being merely good, was the enemy of the best. He admired Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes stories but did not see how they could be literature . . . . From popular art he did not expect too much...."
5153. Carrió, Ignasi. "Highlights of the annual meeting of the European Association of Nuclear Medicine: Glasgow 1997: The Flowering of Science and Art of Nuclear Medicine in Europe." European Journal of Nuclear Medicine 24, no. 12 (1997): 1527.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights the annual meeting of the European Association of Nuclear Medicine in Glasgow, Scotland. Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...One of the great Scottish writers, Arthur Conan Doyle, wrote in The Valley of Fear (1914) something that seems to apply to nuclear medicine: Watson: The temptation to form premature theories upon insufficient data is the bane of our profession. Holmes: Brilliant Watson, you are scintillating this morning!..."
5154. Chapman, Felicity. "The Game is Afoot." Teaching PreK-8 35, no. 2 (2004): 60-61.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a classroom activity which allows students to explore the world of mystery through projects in the areas of reading, writing, art and research. References to Doyle and Holmes.
5155. Chipuk, Jerry E., and Douglas R. Green. "Opinion: Do inducers of apoptosis trigger caspase-independent cell death?" Nature Reviews Molecular Cell Biology 6, no. 3 (2005): 268-275.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes in the text and notes, under the section "The curious case of the mutant mice."
5156. Clayton, Mark. "The joys of reading aloud." Christian Science Monitor, July 7, 1998: B1.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the benefits of reading aloud, with a reference to Doyle and Holmes.

5157. Cook, William. "Overdrawn." New Statesman 135, no. 4785 (2006): 40-42.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article reviews the art exhibition "The Man Who Hated Pooh!" at the Political Cartoon Gallery, London, from March-May, 2006. Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.

5158. Czarniawska, Barbara. "Management She Wrote: Organization Studies and Detective Stories." Studies in Cultures, Organizations & Societies 5, no. 1 (1999): 13.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes. The author notes "It has been postulated that social sciences in general and organization theory in particular can profit from parallels and analogies with fiction literature. As the main form of expression in social sciences, like in literature, is a written product, inspired imitation can visibly improve the literary forms of organization theory, without diminishing its specificity. This essay argues that one genre in fiction literature is especially suitable for such comparisons. This is the genre of the detective story, where the detective, much like the researcher, must untangle the social tissue to arrive at an explanation."

5159. Danford, Natalie. "Publishing the Write Stuff." Publishers Weekly 250, no. 50 (2003): 33-33.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents writing advice for aspiring authors, from several reference books. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Know your history. It Takes a Certain Type to Be a Writer: Facts from the World of Writing and Publishing (Red Wheel/Weiser/ Conari Press, Aug. 2003) by Erin Barrett and Jack Mingo offers tidbits, from filmmaker Lawrence Kasdan's assertion that "Being a writer is like having homework every night of your life" to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's original name for his detective: Sherrinford Hope...."

5160. Daniels, Anthony. "The man who made Scouting." New Criterion 22, no. 10 (2004): 22-27.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines the life of Robert Baden-Powell, founder of the Boy Scout world-wide movement. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "Boy Scouts were to observe so that they might serve in the fashion of Sherlock Holmes's Baker Street Irregulars. Baden-Powell repeatedly recommends the close study of Conan Doyle's stories as a means of training."

5161. Davenport, Gary. "Taking crime seriously." Sewanee Review 104, no. 3 (1996): 461.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on crime story books. Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.

5162. Davis, J. Madison. "The 10 Greatest Crime Novels of All Time?" World Literature Today 80, no. 1 (2006): 6-8.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Offers information on several crime novels with reference to Doyle and Holmes.

5163. ———. "Thoughts on a New Grandmaster." World Literature Today 81, no. 3 (2007): 16-19.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reports on fiction author Stephen King's reception of the National Book Award's "Distinguished Contribution to American Letters" award and the Mystery Writers of America's "Grandmaster" award. The article also discusses King's lack of respect as a writer, the nature of mystery writing, and several of King's books. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes.

5164. de la Torre, J. C. "Alzheimer's disease: How does it start?" Journal of Alzheimer's Disease 4, no. 6 (2002): 497.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...What is 'smoking gun' evidence? It is a term we will borrow from Arthur Conan Doyle's usage in a Sherlock Holmes story, and more recently, from American political 'speak', meaning, evidence that is hard to refute...."

5165. DeFino, Dean. "Lead Birds and Falling Beams." Journal of Modern Literature 27, no. 4 (2005): 73-81.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Considering the heavy damage done to Great Britain in that war, it isn't surprising so many writers turned their gaze back to the genre that Conan Doyle had popularized in the nation's Victorian ascendancy, looking for some source of redemption...." "...Their heroes are odd looking (obese Nero Wolfe, Professor Van Dusen with the tiny body and the size-eight head) and eccentric (Auguste Dupin enshrouding himself in continual darkness, Philo Vance affecting strange accents), with habits that run from the quaint (Miss Marples' constant knitting) to the corrupting (Sherlock

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- Holmes' addiction to cocaine), but these features only attest to their genius (like the unkempt scientist with the tangled explosion of hair) and their charm. Readers of the classic detective story do not want to nurse Holmes back from his addiction or chastise Wolfe for his absurd eating habits, since these are the charms against which their own wits define the challenge of the story, which is solving the puzzle before these extraordinary analysts do....Fitzstephan takes the novelistic/aesthetic view, where "truth" is the revelation of order, a position that mimics such classic detectives as Sherlock Holmes and Philo Vance." Note 3 also mentions Doyle. "Poe's 'Murders in the Rue Morgue' does away immediately with 'preternatural' suppositions, as does Doyle's Hound of the Baskervilles and hundreds of other stories that might be cited."
5166. DeLamotte, Eugenia. "'Collusions of the Mystery': Ideology and the Gothic in Hagar's Daughter." Gothic Studies 6, no. 1 (2004): 69-79.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Delamotte examines the representation of race in Pauline Hopkins's 'Hagar's Daughter' (1901/2). She argues that the novel provides a revision of the Female Gothic and also exploits narrative devices familiar from detective fiction. The solving of the 'mystery' that lies at the heart of the novel is one which explodes the ideological 'mystery', and the national crime of slavery, which separates Black and White, masculine and feminine, home and state, and African American and Euro-American families." Includes references to Doyle and Holmes.
5167. Diamond, Edwin, and Stephen Bates. "Law and order comes to cyberspace. (Cover story)." Technology Review (1899) 98, no. 7 (1995): 22.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the issues arising from efforts to impose rules and regulations on the Internet. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Laws and moles differ among towns, states, and countries. Whose rules apply in cyberspace? Say that a New York City user downloads a favorite Sherlock Holmes story from a London computer. The works of Arthur Conan Doyle are in the public domain in the United Kingdom but some are still under copyright in the United States. Which country's law prevails?..."
5168. Diemert, Brian. "The pursuit of justice: Graham Greene's refiguring of the detective story in 'It's a battlefield'." Papers on Language & Literature 30, no. 3 (1994): 285.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Describes Graham Greene's 'It's a Battlefield' as evidences of his attempts to make the thriller the vehicle of both entertainment and 'serious' purpose. Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.
5169. ———. "The Waterworks: E. L. Doctorow's Gnostic Detective Story." Texas Studies in Literature & Language 45, no. 4 (2003): 352.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses E.L Doctorow's use of the metaphysical detective story to meditate upon the questions of humanity's relationship to the cosmos in his 1994 novel 'The Waterworks.' Includes multiple references to Holmes and Doyle. Presentation of a vision that is heavily marked by gnostic thinking; Suggestion that gnosticism has become the basic religion of 20th-century America; Ways in which Doctorow uses the genre of the detective story to explore metaphysical and spiritual issues.
5170. Dillon, Steve. "Victorian Interior." MLQ: Modern Language Quarterly 62, no. 2 (2001): 83-115.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Contains multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.
5171. Dingus, Anne, and Mary Willis Walker. "Whodunit? Who Cares?" Texas Monthly 28, no. 11 (2000): 134.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Criticizes modern mystery novels. Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.
5172. Dolezel, Lubomir. "Possible Worlds of Fiction and History." New Literary History 29, no. 4 (1998): 785-809.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.
5173. Dowling, Linda C. "Recent Studies in the Nineteenth Century." SEL Studies in English Literature 1500-1900 39, no. 4 (1999): 791-825.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes passing references to Doyle and Holmes. "...Laurie Langbauer's Novels of Everyday Life: The Series in English Fiction, 1850-1930 begins by telling us how reading nineteenth-century

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

novels beguiled the 'empty Illinois summers' of her 'lonely and uncertain adolescence' (p. 1). Her argument explores the notion of 'the ordinary' both as a political category used to confine and demean women and as it plays out (no less politically) in a group of mostly late-Victorian and Edwardian series novels. Among her more predictable choices for analysis are Anthony Trollope's Palliser and Barsetshire series, Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes stories, Margaret Oliphant's Carlingford chronicles, Dorothy Richardson's Pilgrimage series, and John Galsworthy's Forsyte saga; more surprising selections are the novels of Charlotte Yonge and Virginia Woolf....Carole G. Silver's Strange and Secret Peoples: Fairies and Victorian Consciousness announces itself as an 'archaeology,' but it is obviously and attractively a labor of love. The dreariness of the compulsory race-class-gender organization into chapters on dwarves, changelings, the fairy host or slaugh, and the swan-maiden or fairy-bride is, as it were, magically dispelled as soon as one realizes that these are merely occasions for discussing the choicest discoveries--from the agogwe, the mysterious man-faced monsters from Africa (p. 141) to the all-but-suburban English wood sprites--Silver has culled from her vast reading in fairy lore and the Victorian folklorists. The book is handsomely illustrated. A concluding chapter bids 'Farewell to the Fairies' by recounting the curiously pathetic story of a celebrated hoax, the Cottingley fairy photographs of 1917. Defended by Doyle, undone by their too-fashionable frocks, and betrayed by one of their two creators, these fairies, like all fairies, according to Silver, are 'never quite believed in.' They are 'always leaving but never gone' (p. 192)...."

5174. Duncan, Ian. "The Afterlife of Character, 1726-1825." Modern Philology 104, no. 3 (2007): 452-455.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article reviews the book "The Afterlife of Character, 1726-1825," by David A. Brewer. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes (pp. 453, 455). "...Writing about Charles Dickens's Pickwick Papers, W. H. Auden commented on the phenomenon of literary characters who transcend the works in which they originate and go on to lead separate lives in sequels, spin-offs, and (sometimes) radically new cultural contexts, attaining a mythic or archetypal currency in the public imagination: Don Quixote, Falstaff, Faust, Dracula, Sherlock Holmes...One thinks of those nineteenth-century cases in which a character's runaway success became a battleground between author and public, as in readers' complaints when Dickens abandoned the provision of detachable characters like Mr. Pickwick in order to compose more 'artistic,' symbolically integrated works, or in Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's vain attempt to kill off Sherlock Holmes when he threatened to usurp his creator's career. Copyright remains crucial to the possibilities of character migration. Holmes and Watson, for example, are now back on a tight leash since a speculative acquisition of the Conan Doyle literary estate coincided with the extension of UK copyright under European Union law in the late 1990s...."
5175. Durham, Carolyn A. "Modernism and Mystery: The Curious Case of the Lost Generation." Twentieth Century Literature 49, no. 1 (2003): 82-102.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses modernism and mystery in American detective novels about France. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...In contrast, Beaumont, who narrates Masquerade in the first person, nonetheless bears no further resemblance either to Dupin's American companion or to such British descendants as Christie's Hastings (The Mysterious Affair at Styles) or Conan Doyle's Dr. Watson. Indeed, although Ledoq, disguised as Sherlock Holmes, suggests that Phil might like to accompany him to the masquerade ball in the guise of Watson (263), traditional roles are, if anything, reversed, as Ledoq alternately puzzles and marvels over Beaumont's mind, manners, language, and behavior...."
5176. Ebach, Malte C., and Christopher J. Humphries. "Cladistic biogeography and the art of discovery." Journal of Biogeography 29, no. 4 (2002): 427-444.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes. "Cladistic biogeography is about discovering geographical congruence. The agreement of several taxon-area cladograms (TACs) rarely yields a perfect result. Areas may overlap, taxa may not be evenly distributed, and thus, ambiguity may be prevalent in the data. Ambiguity is incongruence and may be resolved by reducing paralogy and resolving potential information. Recently, several new approaches in cladistic biogeography [i.e. Brooks parsimony analysis (BPA), Assumption 0] interpret ambiguity as congruence. These methods are problematic, as they are generational....Finding one common biogeographical pattern from several unrelated groups is a qualitative approach to interpret the positions of continental margins through time...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5177. Emilsson, Wilhelm. "Ian Sinclair's Unsound Detectives." Critique 43, no. 3 (2002): 271.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Introduces readers to a metaphysical detective story. Discussion on the work of Iain Sinclair, author of detective fiction stories; Reasons for attending to a metaphysical detective story; Focus on the book 'White Chappell, Scarlet Tracings,' by Iain Sinclair. Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.
5178. Ephron, Hallie. "'The Deadly Dozen' mistakes in mystery writing." Writer 121, no. 10 (2008): 26-29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Overlong flashback: Even Sir Arthur Conan Doyle made a hash of this in A Study in Scarlet. The novel takes a five-chapter detour from Holmes' murder investigation to tell a melodramatic tale involving Brigham Young and the early Mormon Church. Yawn. If you have a long flashback to reveal, dramatize it in shorter segments and layer them into the novel, as and when each piece connects with the main plot...."
5179. Evans, Randolph W., and James W. Lance. "The Red Ear Syndrome: An Auriculo-Autonomic Cephalgia." Headache: The Journal of Head & Face Pain 44, no. 8 (2004): 835-836.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents information on the red ear syndrome. The article discusses a case of a 54-year-old white female who was seen with a 10-year history of episodes of a burning sensation of the left ear. The episodes are preceded by nausea and a hot feeling for about 15 seconds and then the left ear becomes visibly red for an average of about 1 hour, with a range from about 30 minutes to 2 hours. About once every 2 years, she would have a flurry of episodes occurring over about a 1-month period during which she would average about five episodes with a range of 1 to 6. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes at the opening of the article. "'The mystery of one red ear' might have been the title of a Sherlock Holmes novel by Dr. Doyle rather than a real life medical mystery uncovered and solved by a neurological sleuth, Prof. Lance."
5180. Forbes, Steve. "History As Mystery." Forbes 175, no. 8 (2005): 32-32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the books "Isabella and the Strange Death of Edward II" and "The Death of Alexander the Great: What or Who Really Killed the Young Conqueror of the Known World?," by Paul Doherty. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "With his two books, Isabella and the Strange Death of Edward II (Carroll & Graf, $25) and The Death of Alexander the Great: What or Who Really Killed the Young Conqueror of the Known World? (Carroll & Graf, $25), distinguished British historian Paul Doherty proves that if he ever took to writing detective novels, he'd quickly establish an Agatha Christie or Arthur Conan Doyle-class reputation. Neither Miss Marple nor Sherlock Holmes could've done better in unearthing evidence and resolving two historic mysteries: Was England's King Edward II really murdered, as has been supposed for centuries; and did Alexander the Great die prematurely from his allegedly excessive fondness for wine, or was he poisoned?..."
5181. Freisner, Esther M. "King of the Cyber Trifles." Fantasy & Science Fiction 92, no. 4 (1997): 109.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the short story 'King of the Cyber Trifles,' by Esther M. Friesner which is about the experiences of a cop. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...I was no sooner gliding down the strands than I had company. *Knightly?* It was Hoxie. I'd know those teeth anywhere, and that long, pink, naked tail. A zillion forms you can take in the 'scape and my captain's the giant rat of Sumatra. He says it's because he's a big Arthur Conan Doyle fanboy and all of the other shapes in the Holmes universe were already taken by the time he could tag one. I say that when a man knows himself that well, who am I to ask questions?..."
5182. Friedman, Kinky. "It's No Mystery." Texas Monthly 30, no. 5 (2002): 248.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents tips for writers to maximize their chances of getting their books on the best-seller list. Importance of creating a catchy title; Information on creating the storyline for the book; Selection of a genre. Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "... One of the hardest things about being a writer is selecting a genre and then remembering to use the word 'genre' as often as possible in your interviews. As a mystery writer, I have drawn inspiration from the great Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the man who gave us Sherlock Holmes and Doctor Watson, two characters who maintained the most enduring latent homosexual relationship in all of literature. Holmes once observed, 'What you do in this world is a matter of no consequence. The question is what can you make people believe you have done.' In other words, great artists never reveal their methods. If you stumble upon a great artist someday lying in a gutter or sleeping under a bridge, the most he will probably ever tell you is that talent is its own reward...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5183. Frumkes, Lewis Burke. "A conversation with... David Baldacci." Writer 110, no. 6 (1997): 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an interview with author David Baldacci. Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "LF: Who were some of the writers who inspired you when you were growing up? DB: John Updike, John Irving, Mark Twain, Conan Doyle (not just Sherlock Holmes, but a lot of the other things he wrote) were the writers I admired. Mysteries with Agatha Christie, her plotting was so meticulous. I try to read a lot of different types of writers. I don't just read thrillers. I read everybody from Ludlum to Joyce Carol Oates because I feel that you can learn from good writers regardless of what they write about."
5184. Ganguly, Sayanti. "Crime Fiction by John Scaggs." Journal of Popular Culture 39, no. 5 (2006): 903-905.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article reviews the book "Crime Fiction," by John Scaggs. Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.
5185. Gary, Alice. "Singing Nuns, Flying Reindeer, and More." Biography 4, no. 12 (2000): 34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides facts and figures on famous people, places and things. Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. Also includes a picture of Rathbone as Holmes. "Q: Did Sherlock Holmes ever say 'Elementary, my dear Watson?' A: Surprisingly, he didn't. At least not in the four novels and 56 short stories written by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Basil Rathbone, the British actor who took on the role of Holmes in 14 films, uttered the well-known line."
5186. Gourley, Catherine. "'The Mystery of the Locked Room'." Writing 24, no. 1 (2001): 10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides the use of story 'Rue Morgue,' by Edgar Allan Poe as a writing model for a descriptive writing of a crime scene. Feature of the Madame L'Espania murder in the Gazette evening edition; Clues of the crime description by Allan Poe; Activity in creating a description of a crime scene. "For Further Research" section includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Encourage students to pursue other famous literary sleuths. Some examples include Agatha Christie's Miss Marple and Hercule Poirot, Dorothy L. Sayers' Lord Peter Wimsey, and Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes...."
5187. Green, Peter. "Drink and the Old Devil." New Republic 236, no. 16 (2007): 55-61.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A review is offered of the book "The Life of Kingsley Amis," by Zachary Leader. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Until young Amis came along, Norbury's nearest approach to literature was as the setting for one of Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes stories...."
5188. Greenfield, Daniel P. "Sexual Harassment. Psychiatric Assessment in Employment Litigation." Journal of Psychiatry & Law 36, no. 1 (2008): 107-110.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of the book by Liza H. Gold. Includes an opening quote from Doyle and a passing reference to Holmes. The quote is: 'What one man can invent, another can discover' from The Adventure of the Dancing Men. The passing reference is: "As much of a Sherlock Holmes buff as this reviewer is, I respectfully cannot agree with the sentiments expressed by the Great Detective in the third quote at the beginning of this review: While many readers of this Journal may from time to time 'discover' in piecemeal fashion some of the facts, concepts, and principles painstakingly organized and presented in this book, these same readers will not likely have been able to assimilate and apply the information as organized, 'invented,' and presented in this useful handbook...."
5189. Griffith, Jane. "A Q&A on Lifestyle Assessment." Journal of Individual Psychology 59, no. 4 (2003): 488-500.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Interviews Robert L. Powers about his approach to lifestyle assessment. Includes reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...In my teaching of lifestyle assessment, I regularly make mention of Arthur Conan-Doyle's Sherlock Holmes stories. Dr. Watson, Holmes's special friend and learned assistant is, of course, a literary foil for the portrayal of the great detective's brilliance. It is Watson's part to ask, 'How did you get that, Holmes?' regarding some interpretive leap Holmes has made. To this Holmes replies, 'Elementary, my dear Watson.' He then proceeds to explain how the clay on the boot is of a particular kind found only in a particular county that has a particular geological formation. The example of Watson and Holmes is misunderstood by most beginning counselors. They have the idea they are to take Holmes's position, impressing the client with their knowledge and acumen. In fact, it's the other way around. As an experienced psychologist, I think I manage to keep in mind that my client is Holmes, who, as the author of his or her life, is therefore the authority, and that it's my job to be Watson, a person with a learned curiosity, but an imperfect knowledge of how clients got those ideas or those understandings of themselves, of others in their world, of their particular situation, and of the meaning of life...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5190. Harvie, Christopher. "Where tectonic plates collide." New Statesman 128, no. 4453 (1999): 32.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Argues that Scotland lies on the fault line between European social marketism and Atlantic neoliberalism. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "At a drinks party just after the Scottish Parliament election, Ian Rankin & remarked that the Scottish crime novel -- which he and Frederic Lindsay, Christopher Brookmyre and William McIlvanney have made into a growth genre -- was post-imperial. Discuss, and don't write on both sides of the paper at the same time. Rankin meant that the evil-doing investigated by Inspectors Rebus, Laidlaw, and so on, arose from the 'permeability' of the state, flowing along labyrinthine links formed in an earlier and perhaps more melodramatic epoch. The English murder was parochial -- body in the library, isolated village, detective off the London train; continentals like Maigret sleuthed in known, even stiflingly familiar, environments. But the Scottish gumshoe went down mean streets with something quite outre at the end of them, the Giant Rat of Sumatra or whatever -- reminding one that Edinburgh's Conan Doyle was the son of an Irish Catholic immigrant, and Sherlock Holmes operated at the heart of Empire, with Adam Smith's 'luxury and corruption' all around him...."

5191. Hunter, Kathryn Montgom. "Paradigms and the patient-doctor encounter." Advances: The Journal of the Institute for the Advancement of Health 10, no. 1 (1994): 51.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the difference in stories narrated by the patient and the physician about the same events. Motives and themes; Transformed account of illness. Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.

5192. Jakovljevic, Branislav. "Daniil Kharms, the Hunger Artist: Toward Eden, and the Other Way Around." Theatre Journal 57, no. 2 (2005): 167-189.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes reference to Doyle and Holmes. "This is the last photograph of Daniil Ivanovich Yuvachev Kharms, taken in the fall or winter of 1941, in an unidentified psychiatric clinic in the besieged city of Leningrad, only weeks before he died of starvation on 2 February 1942. It is hard to recognize in this emaciated figure the flamboyant young man who burst onto Leningrad's vibrant avant-garde scene in the late 1920s. His contemporaries remember a striking figure who stood in stark contrast to the politics and culture of his time: a thin, tall, blond man, with a pipe in hand, often dressed like Sherlock Holmes. He not only wrote verses in the best tradition of Russian symbolist and futurist poetry, but also developed an entire poetic persona. At times, this persona reached such levels of complexity that it threatened to become an entire poetic society. From the very outset of his literary career, he adopted the pseudonym 'Kharms' (derived, most probably, from Holmes and the English words charm and harms), which became the most prominent in a series of pseudonyms. The adoption of literary names was paralleled with the adoption of literary 'poses,' from Conan Doyle's legendary private eye, to the obscure figure of the private-docent at St. Peterburg University, to his own fictional brother, Ivan Ivanovich Kharms...."

5193. James, Frank A. J. L., and Anthony Peers. "Constructing Space for Science at the Royal Institution of Great Britain." Physics in Perspective 9, no. 2 (2007): 130-185.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Those who have worked in the Royal Institution of Great Britain have, since its foundation in 1799, made significant contributions to scientific knowledge, to its practical application, and to its communication to a wide variety of audiences. Such work cannot be carried out in an architectural vacuum, and in this paper we examine how the buildings of the Royal Institution, 20 and 21 Albemarle Street in central London, have shaped the work undertaken within its walls and how, on a number of occasions, the buildings have been reconfigured to take account of the evolving needs of scientific research and communication. [Abstract from author]. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Tyndall's scientific work included showing why the sky is blue, establishing a theory of glaciers, and attacking theories of spontaneous generation. But his most notable work was in the popularization of science. He coined the phrase 'the scientific use of the imagination' which Arthur Conan Doyle (1859-1930) had Sherlock Holmes use in The Hound of the Baskervilles (1902)...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5194. Jenkins, Diana R. "The Case of the Simple Sentence." Writing 24, no. 1 (2001): 21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides tips for developing an effective paragraph. Inclusion of the types of simple sentences; Textual criticisms of the given paragraphs; Definitions and examples of the sentence types. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "What do the following paragraphs have in common?... Why was Sherlock Holmes based on a real person? How did A. Conan Doyle choose Joseph Bell as the model? Did he admire the professor's reasoning ability? Did he want to make him immortal?... It's really no mystery. Each paragraph is composed of only one type of simple sentence, and that makes each less effective than it could be.... The third uses only questions. How annoying is that for readers?... Watch out for sentences like these: Authorities asked Christie why she left without telling anyone. Experts wonder why Doyle believed in seances. These may seem like questions, but they aren't. They're declarative. They state something about a question; they don't directly ask one...."
5195. ———. "Treat Titles Right!" Writing 25, no. 6 (2003): 16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses how to provide titles to English comprehension. Ways of providing titles to a work that is full length and complete in itself; Steps to be followed while giving titles to books, newspapers, magazines, poetry collections, plays, movies and television serials; Tips on usage of quotation marks in the titles. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "A possessive can sound awkward in front of titles that begin with the, a, or an. In those situations, eliminate the first word of the title. Millions have read Twain's Adventures of Huckleberry Finn. (The omitted at beginning of title) Arthur Conan Doyle's Study in Scarlet introduced the character Sherlock Holmes. (A omitted at beginning of title)."
5196. Johanningsmeier, Charles. "How Real American Readers Originally Experienced James's 'The Real Thing'." The Henry James Review 27, no. 1 (2006): 75-99.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "Why would McClure pay such an exorbitant sum for one of James's stories? It certainly wasn't because he himself enjoyed this type of fiction. As McClure famously put it in his autobiography, 'I judged a story with my solar plexus rather than my brain; my only measure of it was the pull it exerted upon something inside of me' (204). 'The Real Thing' was unlikely to satisfy this criterion. Instead, McClure may have read the story as a 'high-class' commodity that he could place alongside his other features of late 1891-early 1892 in order to earn more prestige and credibility for the syndicate. Among these features were William Dean Howells's The Quality of Mercy, Twain's The American Claimant, Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes stories, Twain's letters from Europe, various Kipling stories, and Kipling's letters about America...."
5197. Jones, Anne Hudson. "Literature and medicine: Narrative ethics." Lancet 349, no. 9060 (1997): 1243.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses literature and medicine. The primary focus on literature as part of the formal curriculum of some medical schools in the United States; The interest in the centrality of narrative to the work of medicine; Comparison of methods utilized by the detective and diagnostician; Exploration of alternative approaches to medical ethics that are referred to as narrative ethics. Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes (and Joseph Bell).
5198. Jordan, Thomas E. "Down's (1866) essay and its sociomedical context." Mental retardation 38, no. 4 (2000): 322-329.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The inaccuracy of J. L. H. Down's formulation of the syndrome that now bears his name is recognized widely. The basis for his ideas are not, however, because they are to be found in the concepts of human development prevalent in his day. In this paper Down's essay is de-constructed, and his key concepts are related to the scientific literature of the era. The ideas within which Down developed his thoughts are found, for example, in contemporary writings on medicine, ethnography, public health, and genetics." Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...At the same time, there was another possible contemporary trigger. In an era of largely palliative medicine, the juice of the white poppy in several forms--tinctures, poppy tea, laudanum, and Godfrey's Cordial (Jordan, 1987a, 1987b)--constituted a major source for alleviating pain.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Sold indiscriminately, for the most part it became a standard remedy for fussy infants, and in some districts it was named 'Mother's friend.' The novelist, Conan Doyle, it will be recalled, ascribed opium addiction to his creation, Sherlock Holmes. The Victorians viewed opium and other derivatives of the juice of the white poppy as generally benign, and addiction and its consequences were not fully appreciated outside the experience of physicians...."

5199. Kanfer, Stefan. "Rhinestones and Diamonds." New Leader 82, no. 13 (1999): 22.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews two stage plays. 'Dame Edna: The Royal Tour,' starring Barry Humphries; 'Dinner With Friends,' by playwright Donald Margulies. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...But Humphries is no drag queen. Over the decades he has acquired an acute sense of timing, and an ability to make standard jokes seem like ad libs plucked out of the air. His costumier, Stephen Adnitt, has added his own spectacular vulgarities, as has set designer Kenneth Foy, who gives Miami Beach a good name. Also in on the gag are the legion of Edna fans, who pretend that the Dame is real and that Humphries is merely her avaricious manager. The setup is not very different from that of the Baker Street Irregulars, who insist that Sherlock Holmes is an actual personage and that Sir Arthur Conan Doyle was merely Dr. Watson's literary agent...."

5200. Kestner, Joseph. "Bridge of dreams." Opera News 59, no. 8 (1995): 8.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Deals with cultural revolution called japonisme in United States art, literature, drama and music. Study of art and genius of Japan; Mysticism and impenetrability of Japan; Pursuance of Japanese policy to exclude Westerners and Western influences; Determination of Commodore Matthew C. Perry to break the isolation policy; Treaty of Kanagawa in March 1854; Manifestations of interest in the Orient. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...At the same time, the sinister Orient appears in the inclusion of opium as a subject in works like Wilkie Collins' mystery The Moonstone (1868), Dickens' unfinished The Mystery of Edwin Drood (1870), Wilde's The Picture of Dorian Gray (1891) and Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes tale The Man with the Twisted Lip of 1891, where the detective disguises himself to enter a London opium den. (Doyle was to write the non-Holmes tale The Japanned Box in 1899.)..."

5201. King, Robert D. "Treason and Traitors." Society 35, no. 2 (1998): 329-338.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This article examines the changes in the climate of thinking about treason and traitors since the end of World War II. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...In place of Sherlock Holmes and Professor Moriarty grappling at Reichenbach Falls, we have Smiley meeting Karla on the Warschauer bridge in grayest Berlin (in Smiley's People)--the "distance" between Holmes and Smiley spanning exactly the difference in self-confidence between the robust romantic sensibilities of the late Victorian age and the exhausted emotional impulses of our world. Le Carré is the whimper to Conan Doyle's bang. Le Carré's is a world in which good and bad are evenly distributed: Smiley is both good and bad, so is Karla, so is everybody--you, me, everybody. No one is innocent, and there is enough blame to go around...."

5202. Krasner, James. "Accumulated Lives: Metaphor, Materiality, and the Homes of the Elderly." Literature and Medicine 24, no. 2 (2006): 209-230.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Contains multiple references to Doyle and Holmes. "...In the following essay I will investigate these metaphors and relate them to theories of spatialized memory promulgated by philosophers and novelists. Novelists such as Doris Lessing, Pat Barker, Muriel Spark, and Barbara Pym, who portray the daily lives of the elderly, dwell on the operation of self-defining metaphor in domestic space and demonstrate the perils associated with environmental self-representation. Domestic fiction that dwells on the investigation of personal history, like Charles Dickens's Bleak House or Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes stories, demonstrates the power of space to place material limitations on memory and thus on the representation of life stories. This interchange between memory and environment is always at work in the home, but it is particularly apparent, and particularly critical, in the homes of the elderly. Because elderly people tend to lean more heavily on their home environment, and because they are often forced to choose between leaving this memory-laden space behind or becoming debilitated by caring for it, these metaphorical dynamics assume crucial, and often painful, significance for them...."

5203. Krausz, Tibor. "A pen, a passport, a mission for Laos." Christian Science Monitor, Aug 21, 2008: 20-20.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "Colin Cotterill has little in common with his alter ego. For starters, he's no 'ghost doctor.' Nor has he ever performed an autopsy. And yet what would good old Dr. Siri Paiboun do without him? Mr. Cotterill's relationship to the wise septuagenarian coroner/medium/sleuth resembles that of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle to Sherlock Holmes. Together, author and protagonist make for a memorable team in unraveling the murder mysteries that haunt their land. Except in Cotterill's case, the land is Laos. A small communist holdout between Thailand and Vietnam, it's a country where books are curiosities: Homegrown literature is almost nonexistent in Laos, and publishing is mostly limited to textbooks. But now the London-born author is putting Laos on the literary map as a backdrop for his mystery novels featuring an all-Lao cast of characters. He's also lending a hand in a campaign to distribute children's books to Lao kids...."

5204. Krystal, Arthur. "At Large and at Small." American Scholar 68, no. 2 (1999): 7.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides information on the book 'Cultural Literacy: What Every American Needs to Know,' by E. D. Hirsch, James Trefil and Joseph Kett which deals with shared knowledge of literate Americans. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "Arthur Conan Doyle, in the voice of Sherlock Holmes, once likened the mind to an attic, a storeroom requiring the occasional clearing out in order to make room for more information. If that is the case, then what useful niche does Barbara Walters occupy? What important fact has she replaced or is she keeping out? Most likely the mental attic can comfortably hold all the junk we can lug up, but there is something to be said for deciding what is well made, well thought out, or notable in the story of mankind, and thus best learned and best remembered...."

5205. Leddy, Chuck. "120 Years Ago, a Writing Tradition Began." Writer 120, no. 4 (2007): 8-9.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article offers context for 1887, the year the magazine "The Writer" was first published in offices out of Boston, Massachusetts. The author notes authors were hugely popular as speakers and forums were common. Mark Twain published "Huckleberry Finn" that year along with Leo Tolstoy's "War and Peace" and Arthur Conan Doyle's detective, Sherlock Holmes, was introduced.

5206. Lewis, Mack. "The Baltimore Plot." Plays 61, no. 4 (2002): 41.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the play 'The Baltimore Plot,' for middle and lower grade students. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...English writer Sir Arthur Conan Doyle used some of Pinkerton's cases to create his Sherlock Holmes mysteries...."

5207. Lutz, John. "Beyond good and evil." Writer 107, no. 12 (1994): 9.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Gives pointers for writing a mystery novel. Summing, catharsis and tying of loose ends in the final chapter; Good versus Evil; Insights; Importance of character; Situation, setting and theme; Examples. Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.

5208. McAleer, Michael. "Sherlock Holmes and the Search for Truth: A Diagnostic Tale." Journal of Economic Surveys 8, no. 4 (1994): 317-370.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Unknown references to Holmes or Doyle beyond title.

5209. McLean, Alison. "This Month in History." Smithsonian 38, no. 9 (2007): 24.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents news items related to historical events which took place in the month of December. Includes this notation under the heading "120 Year Ago Case Study." "Arthur Conan Doyle publishes his first Sherlock Holmes story, A Study in Scarlet, in 1887's Beeton's Christmas Annual. The detective hero of 60 Doyle works, Holmes--who never uttered the phrase 'Elementary, my dear Watson'--is so popular that after readers protest his death, the author brings him back to literary life. In 2007, an 1887 Beeton's sells at auction for $156,000."

5210. Menon, Anil, and Nadhamuni Nerella. "Communicating Tabular Data Using ORACLE." Pharmaceutical Development & Technology 5, no. 3 (2000): 423.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Passing reference to Doyle and Holmes in opening quotation of the article: "You see but you do not observe." Sherlock Holmes to Watson Arthur Conan Doyle A Scandal in Bohemia.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5211. Murphy, Rex. "Bah, humbug! to political correctness." The Globe and Mail (Toronto), December 11, 2004: A31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Passing references to Doyle and Holmes. "...The latter half of the 19th century is somewhat remarkable in the history of English fiction for the number of authors who wrote stories or created characters that tapped the properties of myth: Robert Louis Stevenson with Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, Mary Shelley with Frankenstein, Arthur Conan Doyle and his immortals, Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson. To the fertility and imagination of the ordinary novelist, these writers, and others, added the gift of encapsulating an archetype, of drawing in strong and vivid colours, figures who became enduring and emblematic. Most especially, they had the gift of creating characters who escape the story they inhabit, who seem either to live on, independent of the fictions in which they were created (Sherlock Holmes), or stand for the perfect individual representation of an already-present myth or legend (Count Dracula). Most of the writers I've named claim their standing among the immortals of fiction on the basis of a single work or character. But there is a writer of the same period who stands in creative pre-eminence to them all. Charles Dickens is the king of English novelists....Dickens was also the greatest of namers, the very Adam of English fiction. The naming of 'Sherlock Holmes' was not a lucky hit. Doyle worried mightily over what to call his rationalist sleuth, and only after much trial, and many unhappy attempts, settled upon his hero's now seemingly inevitable moniker. Doyle had a few other fine hits -- Moriarty was a great find for a fiendish villain -- but his capacity here was a talent, not genius. Dickens, by contrast, was inexhaustibly clever and sure when it came to parcelling out names...."
5212. Stefaniuk, Walter. "Fuel costs sky high." The Toronto Star, December 17, 1996: A7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "In an old movie, my hero Sherlock Holmes was using a flashlight. Were flashlights readily available in days of horse-drawn carriages? The dry-cell flashlight, patented by an electrical novelty company in the United States, appeared on the market in 1898...."
5213. Taylor, Bill. "Hidden Highway of Hertfordshire Beckons." The Toronto Star, June 3, 2000: L14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Still, the precipitation doesn't hurt the sinister atmosphere. You can see how such sensitive souls as Oldfield and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle (who convinced himself that there were fairies at the bottom of his garden) could be moved to creativity. Doyle was a frequent visitor to the area and is said to have based one of his best Sherlock Holmes stories, The Hound of The Baskervilles, on the ghostly canine that was known (though its real name was probably Woofums) either as the Hound of Hell or the Black Dog of Hergest...."

13 PASSING REFERENCES -- BOTH DOYLE AND HOLMES -- GINZBURG (2)

5214. Briefel, Aviva. "Sacred Objects/Illusory Idols: The Fake in Freud's 'The Moses of Michelangelo'." American Imago 60, no. 1 (2003): 21-40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reference to Doyle and Holmes in note 4. "For a further discussion of the analogy between the techniques of connoisseurship and psychoanalysis, see Ginzburg (1989, 96-125). Ginzburg compares the methods of three of the most famous 'detectives' of the period, Freud, Morelli, and Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes. He writes that, in 'The Cardboard Box' (1892), Holmes 'morellizes' to Watson when he is faced with a case involving severed ears sent by mail to an innocent woman: 'Each ear is as a rule quite distinctive, and differs from the other ones. . . . I had, therefore, examined the ears in the box with the eyes of an expert, and had carefully noted their anatomical peculiarities. Imagine my surprise then, when, on looking at Miss Cushing, I perceived that her ear corresponded exactly with the female ear which I had just inspected. . . . There was the same shortening of the pinna, the same broad curve of the upper lobe, the same convolution of the inner cartilage' (quoted in Ginzburg 1989, 98)...."
5215. Elkins, James. "Why Are Our Pictures Puzzles? Some Thoughts on Writing Excessively." New Literary History 27, no. 2 (1996): 271-290.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. "...The picture puzzle model of meaning has been explored in a different way by Carlo Ginzburg, especially in the essay on Morelli, Freud, and Sherlock Holmes.(15) It is Ginzburg's thesis that what art history knows as iconology operates according to an investigative method that is also shared by Conan Doyle (whose strategies were admired by Erwin Panofsky),

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

by Morelli, the connoisseur of the overlooked form, and by Freud, who ascribed his method of 'despised details' to Morelli in the essay on Michelangelo's Moses. Ginzburg identifies all of these as participants in a 'lower,' empirical method, which he sees as an intermittently subterranean alternate to Western scientific methodology. There are many problems with the essay, which has arguably been overused and undercritiqued: one might question the stifling of the autobiographical voice throughout the essay, so that the implied author himself becomes a 'despised detail' and his works become unreflective examples of the 'lower' method rather than controlled applications of it; and one might want to inquire into the meaning of Ginzburg's curious, unscientific attempt to exclude from the domain of science what he describes as the intention to observe without theorizing. But I do not want to read Ginzburg as much as I want to collect this second way of construing puzzles. If a picture is a puzzle in Ginzburg's sense, then its meanings need not be completed the way a picture puzzle's are, and in fact they would usually not be, since a puzzle in Ginzburg's sense is solved by the kind of wandering eye that Doyle and Morelli exemplify--an eye that looks for a single crucial fact, instead of a mosaic of all possible facts. Murder mysteries do not maintain a one-to-one correspondence between facts named in the narrative (and therefore 'given' but not necessarily seen by the protagonists) and facts that are interpreted by the protagonist and perhaps declared to be significant. Instead characters in murder mysteries sleuth the 'obvious' within the hidden (as Sherlock Holmes is fond of instructing Dr. Watson), or the hidden within the obvious (as in Poe's 'Purloined Letter'). For these reasons murder mysteries can be read as partial deconstructive critiques of the picture puzzle model of meaning--but I underline partial, since they retain the notion of final, unalterable solution. Writing on Piero della Francesca, Ginzburg remarks that 'the best solution fits together as many puzzle pieces as will convincingly fit with as few hypotheses as possible.' (16) If the first model of pictures as picture puzzles has affinities with the kind of iconography that seeks entire systems and 'programs' of symbols, Ginzburg's more selective 'lower' method is closer to art historical narratives that focus on isolated 'keys' or central symbols. In that sense his model is present in virtually every art historical essay, at those moments when the reader's attention is drawn to something hidden, misinterpreted, marginal, suppressed, or overlooked, or to something so obvious it has not been seen. As such, Ginzburg's model (which I suppose should be called the Morelli/Doyle/Freud/Panofsky/Ginzburg model) is seldom absent from art history's interpretive strategies or epistemological ideals...."

13 PASSING REFERENCES -- BOTH DOYLE AND HOLMES -- JOKES (1)

5216. Craig, Gregory B. "Defending The President." Vital speeches of the day 66, no. 19 (2000): 598.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a speech by Gregory B. Craig, the chief counsel for the President of the United States, including an extended reference to Doyle and Holmes. "... In an early draft [sic] of the Hound of the Baskervilles, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle had Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson camping out on the Dartmoor for the night. In the middle of the night, Holmes woke up and shook Watson declaring: 'Look at the sky Watson. What do you see?' Watson replied, 'I see stars, millions and millions of stars.' 'And what does that tell you, Watson?' Dr. Watson paused for a moment. 'Astronomically, it tells me that there are millions of galaxies and countless planets in them. Horologically, it tells me that the time is a quarter past three. Astrologically, it tells me that Saturn is in Leo: Theologically, it tells me that God is all powerful and that we are small and insignificant. Meteorologically, it tells me that we will have a nice day tomorrow.' Holmes said nothing. Watson finally asked, 'Well Holmes, what does all this beauty and grandeur tell you?' The detective snapped, 'Watson, you idiot, it tells me that someone has stolen our tent.'"

13 PASSING REFERENCES -- BOTH DOYLE AND HOLMES -- LAW (3)

5217. Gray, W. Russel. "Supralegal justice: Are real juries acting like fictional detectives?" Journal of American Culture 21, no. 1 (1998): 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the role and responsibilities of the juries and its relation to fictional detectives. Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.
5218. Kadish, Sanford H. "Criminal Law." Journal of Criminal Law & Criminology 87, no. 2 (1997): 369.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This article presents information on a study conducted on the law of complicity in relation to crime." Footnote 19 includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes: [19]See Glanville Williams, Criminal Law: The General Part 185 (2d ed. 1961); Wayne R. Lafave and Austin W. Scott, Jr., Criminal Law 410 (2d ed. 1986). The origin of this doctrine is apparently the medieval canon law doctrine "versari in re illicita imputantur omnia quae sequuntur ex delicto." (One who traffics in the illicit is responsible for all wrongs that ensue). See Stephan Kuttner, Kanonistische Schuldlehre 185 (Citta Del Vaticano, Biblioteca Apostolica Vaticana 1935); Hans-Neinrich Jescheck, Lehrbuch des Strafrechts 235 (1988). It plainly responds to a widely shared moral viewpoint. Cf. Arthur Conan Doyle's story, The Adventure of the Priory School involving the murder of an innocent person by a ruffian while kidnapping the Duke's younger son at the behest of the Duke's elder son. Speaking of the liability of the elder son, who meant no harm to the deceased, Holmes stated: "I must take the view, your Grace, that when a man embarks upon a crime, he is morally guilty of any other crime which may spring from it." The Duke: "Morally, Mr. Holmes. No doubt you are right. But surely not in the eyes of the law. A man cannot be condemned for a murder at which he was not present, and which he loathes and abhors as much as you do." Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, The Return of Sherlock Holmes 131 (Berkley Medallion ed. 1963). Under the common purpose doctrine, of course, his elder son would be legally liable as well.

5219. Lipinski, Tomas A. "Legal Reform in an Electronic Age: Analysis and Critique of the Construction and Operation of S. 487, the Technology, Education and Copyright Harmonization (Teach) Act of 2001." Brigham Young University Education & Law Journal, no. (2003): 70p.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Analyzes the Technology, Education and Copyright Harmonization Act of 2001, a copyright law of the U.S. Information on the Digital Millennium Copyright Act of 1998; Provisions of the copyright act. Note 17 on page 100 includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Unless the expression is completely ad lib or spontaneous, sound recordings are often based on a pre-existing work, and are therefore a form of derivative work. For example, a CD of Basil Rathbone reading a Sherlock Holmes story is a sound recording, and thus by its nature, derivative of a literary work, i.e., the original Arthur Conan Doyle tale...."

13 PASSING REFERENCES -- BOTH DOYLE AND HOLMES -- LISTS (8)

5220. "Books for Summer Reading." Phi Delta Kappan 85, no. 10 (2004): 777-781.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Brief reviews and suggestions for books to read during the summer. Includes one book with a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Unlike Albom's tranquil little book, The Da Vinci Code (Doubleday, 2003), by Dan Brown, is an unsettling and frenetically paced big book. Set aside a day and an entire night to read this blockbuster. You will not sleep until you finish. I'm a sucker for conspiracy theories, and Brown's fiction is so intricately researched and crafted that I am still convinced that the secrets he reveals about some of the greatest thinkers of our time, ancient Christian relics and societies, and Jesus Christ Himself are completely and utterly ... true. While the novel is steeped in Western theological history, Brown is careful to make the subject matter effortlessly accessible. He ingeniously and cleverly makes his readers feel as smart as, and sometimes smarter than, his Dynamic Duo. Until The Da Vinci Code I had always felt more like Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's Watson whenever attempting to solve riddles and puzzles. However, Brown leaves just enough clues for the semi-careful reader to figure out various cryptic codes, sometimes just a hair's breadth before Langdon and Neveu. I found myself racing them through the pages, racing them through Paris and London to the next clue and solution. Sometimes, I was Holmes, and sometimes ... well, you know, the other fellow." -- Shana Brown, English teacher, Shorecrest High School, Shoreline, Wash.

5221. "A century of good books." Library Journal 123, no. 14 (1998): 147.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Requests alternatives to the July 1998 Random House Modern Library list of the 100 Best Novels of the Century. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "Why James Dickey but not Flannery O'Connor? Where were Zora Neale Hurston's Their Eyes Were Watching God and Harper Lee's To Kill a Mockingbird? Dashiell Hammett's Sam Spade made it while Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's sleuth was forgotten?..."

5222. "Majestic mystery novels: Are you a fan of murder and intrigue?". The Gazette (Montreal), July 19, 1998: C4.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The Top 50 Mystery Novels of All Time (as selected by Mystery Writers of America members in The Top 100 Mystery Novels of All Time, published by Crown Trade Paperbacks): 1) The Complete Sherlock Holmes, 1887-1927, by Arthur Conan Doyle. Considered the most consistently brilliant mystery works ever, this collection includes his most popular four - The Hound of the Baskervilles; A Study in Scarlet; The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes; and The Sign of Four...."

5223. "Notes on current books: Fiction." Virginia Quarterly Review 74, no. 2 (1998): 59.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'The Best American Mystery Stories, 1997,' edited by Robert B. Parker. Reference to Doyle and Holmes. "Series editor Otto Penzler reminds us that the short story, not the novel, is the natural form of the traditional mystery and, when Parker observes that Conan Doyle's invention of Sherlock Holmes created the very category of the mystery, he validates Penzler's claim, since the best Holmes fiction comes in the form of the short story."
5224. "Subject Index." College Literature 31, no. (2004): 32-46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Doyle and Holmes listed in the index.
5225. "What Are You Reading This Summer?". Imagine 6, no. 5 (2003): 23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Included in this summer reading list is The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes by Arthur Conan Doyle.
5226. Brainard, Dulcy, and Sybil Steinberg. "Forecasts: Fiction." Publishers Weekly 244, no. 47 (1997): 57.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Mentions the release of two mystery books for December 1997. 'The Mammoth Book of New Sherlock Holmes Adventure,' by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle; 'The Clark Gable and Carol Lombard Murder Case,' by George Baxt.
5227. Cooper, Natasha. "Crime fiction." The Times (London), November 19, 2003: 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A poll designed to test the nation's taste in crime fiction has put Conan Doyle's The Hound of the Baskervilles at the top of the list, although Sherlock Holmes could make only third place among the detectives. It's an odd result. I don't like Holmes myself, finding his arrogance and bullying of Watson a turn-off, but then I'd never pick any of Conan Doyle's stories as my favourite....A glance through The Penguin Complete Sherlock Holmes will tell you whether you'll like the brilliant eccentric who stalks its thousand pages. If you don't, you should skip quickly on...."

13 PASSING REFERENCES -- BOTH DOYLE AND HOLMES -- LITERARY COMPARISONS (20)

5228. "Brief reviews: Books." Fantasy & Science Fiction 92, no. 1 (1997): 23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Otherwhere,' edited by Laura Anne Gilman and Keith R. A. DeCandido, with a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Esther M. Friesner's 'The Strange Case of Ludwig the Unspeakable' is a spectacularly loony homage to Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes stories."
5229. "Discount the body count." Economist, no. (1997): 2p.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several mystery stories. Reference to Doyle and Holmes in the review of 'Unnatural Exposure,' by Patricia Cornwell. "If Sir Arthur Conan Doyle were writing today, Sherlock Holmes would surely share Scarpetta's obsession with forensic detail, her enthusiastic meanderings down the Internet and her flashes of intuitive insight. But Sir Arthur, like Ms Cornwell, would be aware of the danger in this writing: the use of technology becomes so overpowering that it destroys the human element."
5230. Allington, Daniel. "How to Do Things with Literature: Blasphemous Speech Acts, Satanic Intentions, and the Uncommunicativeness of Verses." Poetics Today 29, no. 3 (2008): 473-523.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Literature has at times been theorized in terms of a message passing from author to reader, and this has often been done by reference to general theories of language use: the work is the vehicle of intentions that are realized (or not) in the reader's responses; the work is a "speech act" that operates on the reader and causes his or her responses. Although this article argues that such theorizations mistake the role of communication in literature, it suggests that they nonetheless reflect prevalent ways of talking about literary texts, which should be investigated as tactically useful techniques employed in discourse between readers (and nonreaders) of those texts...." Footnote 1 makes the following mention of Doyle and Holmes: "...All works of fiction, verse, and drama will here be referred to as 'literary works,' regardless of distinctions that might be made between 'literary' and 'nonliterary' fiction, verse, and drama. (Cf. Searle [1979: 59-60]: 'The Sherlock Holmes stories of Conan Doyle are clearly works of fiction, but it is a matter of judgement whether they should be regarded as a part of English literature.')

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5231. Andronik, Catherine M. "A profile: Philip Pullman: his wonderful materials." Book Report 20, no. 3 (2001): 40-45.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A profile of British writer Philip Pullman is presented. Pullman established himself as a master of historical thrillers in the 1980s with his trilogy featuring Sally Lockhart, which is set primarily in Victorian London. Pullman's remarkable trilogy, His Dark Materials, fantasies on an epic scale that create an entire mythology and cosmology, has captured the attention, imagination, and admiration of young readers and critics. These novels, as well as Pullman's shorter works, are rich in intricate plotting, vivid in visual detail, and overflowing with references to sources ranging from classical mythology to penny-dreadfuls, providing examples of a true storyteller's craftsmanship." Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Pullman is a devotee of that greatest of Victorian mystery mongers, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, and his creation Sherlock Holmes. Pullman has even penned a play featuring that ultimate sleuth. Called Sherlock Holmes and the Limehouse Horror, it's about the Giant Rat of Sumatra, one of Holmes's investigations for which Dr. Watson felt 'the world was not yet ready.'..."

5232. Bershad, Harold. "Detectives Stories and City Life." Society 44, no. 5 (2007): 70-76.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Detective stories take place mainly in two settings, constantly changing, many faceted big cities filled with strangers, and stable, fairly homogeneous, innocent small towns whose members know one another. The differences in each clarify the qualities of the other. In solving the mystery of the small town, the detective provides moral instruction and restores the town's innocence. In solving the mystery in the big city the detective reveals the city as part of the mystery and provides the reader with temporary orientation to the city. Mysteries have grown with the growth of the cities and now appear in every country of the world." [Abstract from author]. Contains one reference to Doyle and multiple references to Holmes.

5233. Blum, Jonathan. "The Tell-Tale Heart." Scholastic Scope 51, no. 4 (2002): 13.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the short story 'The Tell-Tale Heart' and includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "Poe invented the first detective story with 'The Murders in the Rue Morgue.' Sir Arthur Conan Doyle used Poe's brilliant detective, C. August Dupin, as a model to create Sherlock Holmes."

5234. Burns, Barbara. "Adolf Müllner's Der Kaliber: The First German Detective Story?" German Life & Letters 58, no. 1 (2005): 1-12.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article examines Adolf Müllner's novel Der Kaliber and includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...The literary establishment has broadly united on the view that the first detective story as a discrete genre was Edgar Allan Poe's The Murders in the Rue Morgue of 1841, while at the same time highlighting the landmark qualities of Francois Eugene Vidocq's Memoires of 1829, Emile Gaboriau's L'Affaire Lerouge of 1866 and Arthur Conan Doyle's The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes of 1892. Nowhere, except in the most detailed works of German scholarship on the subject, is there any mention of a German precursor of all these prominent works, namely Adlof Müllner's novel of 1828, Der Kaliber...."

5235. Clausen, Christopher. "Up and down with Stephen and Jack." New Leader 79, no. 9 (1997): 22.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features Captain John Aubrey and Dr. Stephen Maturin, co-protagonist of Patrick O'Brian's novels about life on the seas during the Napoleonic War. How Aubrey and Maturin were compared with the characters in Sherlock Homes by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle; Why the turn of events in the novel were tragic and comical; Disadvantages of a historical novel following the chronology of events.

5236. ———. "Up and down with Stephen and Jack." New Leader 79, no. 9 (1996): 22.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features Captain John Aubrey and Dr. Stephen Maturin, co-protagonist of Patrick

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- O'Brian's novels about life on the seas during the Napoleonic War. Includes reference to Doyle and Holmes.
"...Another antecedent is Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes. In this case the Holmes character is Dr. Maturin, whose position as a brilliantly overqualified naval surgeon of ambiguous origins provides cover for a career in espionage. Like Holmes, he suffers from wild swings of mood and takes drugs; in times of leisure he practices "natural philosophy" (high-class amateur biology) and delivers papers at the Royal Society. Captain Aubrey is a more developed Watson: a man of action whose intellectual attainments are lower than Maturin's, yet is unrivaled as a commander of naval vessels in time of war...."
5237. Fisher, Benjamin Franklin. "James Kirke Paulding's Gothicism and American Literary Nationalism." Gothic Studies 1, no. 1 (1999): 31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Argues on the attention to Gothicism in the writings of James Kirke Paulding, a writer from the United States in the 19th century. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes.
"...Although the spectral hound and an insect-chasing character in 'Cobus Yerks' may foreshadow those in The Hound of the Baskervilles, Arthur Conan Doyle's amalgam of Dartmoor legend and Gothic horrors, Paulding's tale is far less terrifying than the Sherlock Holmes novelette in its implications about the relationship between man and beast...."
5238. ———. "The Poets of the Nineties." Victorian Poetry 38, no. 3 (2000): 432-436.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "This year's survey involves no great quantity of materials--just four--albeit the quality in that quartet is high....Natural companion reading appears in Jad Adams's Madder Music, Stronger Wine: The Life of Ernest Dowson, Poet and Decadent (Tauris)...Two caveats concerning Adams' scholarship. Ironically, in a biography of one who died at a very early age, a misprint of 1990 for 1890 (p. 32) would extend Dowson's lifespan incredibly or else imply that his shade walks. A second questionable remark is Adams' crediting M. P. Shiel's work as an influence upon Arthur Conan Doyle, presumably, from the context, of Doyle's work in crime-detective fiction (p. 175). Sherlock Holmes, however, appeared eight years before Shiel's Prince Zaleski, in a volume, with the chief character's name for title, which appeared in John Lane's Keynotes Series (1895), although Adams does remark that the popularity of Holmes has long outlasted and outshone that of Shiel's weird sleuth...."
5239. Fleming, Colin. "Stop Making Sense." Nation 284, no. 22 (2007): 36-40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the books "The Last Soviet Avant-Garde: Oberiu- Fact, Fiction, Metafiction," by Graham Roberts and "Oberiu: An Anthology of Russian Absurdism," edited by Eugene Ostashevsky. Includes references to Holmes and Doyle. "...The name Kharms, one of more than thirty pseudonyms he used, was an oblique homage to Sherlock Holmes, Kharms's favorite literary character--which makes one wonder if the fictitious brother Kharms would sometimes 'impersonate' was supposed to be Mycroft....Kharms's notebooks reveal a man of a similarly devout religious passion, though one far more inclined to caprice and whimsy: Besides Doyle, his favorite authors included Edward Lear and Lewis Carroll, madcap orchestrators of comic dreams like Kharms himself, and Goethe, Blake, Gustav Meyrink and the more macabre--and decidedly attuned to black humor--Knut Hamsun..."
5240. Frumkes, Lewis Burke. "A conversation with...Clive Cussler." Writer 109, no. 9 (1996): 15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an interview with author Clive Cussler. Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...When I decided to write, my wife was working nights at the local police department. I'd put the kids to bed and have nothing to do. What was I going to write? I didn't have the 'Great American Nove'" burning inside me. So, I decided on a series. I was working in advertising then, and I looked at writing from a marketing angle. I went out and researched all the series' heroes, beginning with Edgar Allan Poe's Inspector Dupont, who was really the first one. Then, of course, Doyle's Sherlock Holmes, Ian Fleming's James Bond, and Matt Helm's Mike Hammer. In the sixties, Bond was so big. I thought, 'What can I do that is a little different?' Then it hit me--a continuing villain....When I started writing adventure yarns years ago, I was told, 'Adventure won't sell.' Then, a big publisher said to me, 'You're a fool for using a continuing hero.' If I changed the names of the characters people would say, 'Oh, he wrote a different book.' So, I just use the same names over and over as a series. What's so fascinating to me is that when Fleming wrote a new book, it was a new James Bond book. In my case, even though Dirk Pitt has been in twelve books, it is always a new Cussler book. I have always been surprised that Pitt never took over. It would have been all right with me. Fleming hated Bond and tried to kill him off; Doyle hated Holmes and tried to kill him off. But I think Pitt is O.K...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5241. Gordon, John. "T. S. Eliot's Head and Heart." ELH 62, no. 4 (1995): 979-1000.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...In 'Through the Magic Door,' Arthur Conan Doyle could describe Edward Gibbon as 'a cold-blooded man, with a brain which seemed to have grown at the expense of his heart.'(54) In Sherlock Holmes ('I am a brain, Watson'), Doyle creates someone who starves himself so that the 'blood supply' will not be diverted from the head...."

5242. Gubar, Marah. "Partners in Crime: E. Nesbit and the Art of Thieving." Style 35, no. 3 (2001): 410.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the literary presentation of children and the art of thieving in the books written by E. Nesbit. Criticisms drawn by Nesbit with such literary style; Characteristics of Nesbit's child characters; Famous works of Nesbit. Includes passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Nesbit portrays young people as irrepressible mimics who shape their games, ideals, behavior, and even speech around texts created by adults. In The Story of the Treasure Seekers, for example, the Bastable children swipe scenarios for their activities from Kipling, Conan Doyle, Marryat, Edgeworth, de la Motte Fouquet, Pope, and the Arabian Nights, as well as assorted picture books, newspaper stories, and advertisements....The Bastables' many efforts to garner funds derive from ideas they have taken from various texts; for example, they decide to try 'Being Detectives' after "read[ing] Mr. Sherlock Holmes, as well as the yellow-covered books [... by] Gaboriau."

5243. Hargrove, Nancy D. "T.S. Eliot and Popular Entertainment in Paris, 1910-1911." Journal of Popular Culture 36, no. 3 (2003): 547.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article describes the popular entertainment in Paris as prevailing during poet T. S. Eliot's sojourn there in 1910-1911, and their impact on his literary works. Elements from and specific references to detective literature are evident in Eliot's poetry and plays; murders, dead bodies, unsavory characters, mystery, and suspense appear frequently. Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.

5244. Hatcher, Brian A. "Saradindu Bandyopadhyay - Introduction and Two Short Stories." Critical Asian Studies 34, no. 3 (2002): 465-470.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents two short stories by Saradindu Bandyopadhyay. 'The New Man'; 'The Taste of Freedom.' Includes passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Like Arthur Conan Doyle, to whom he looked for occasional inspiration, Saradindu was fascinated with both positivism and the occult...Equally memorable, and even more popular is Saradindu's crafty private detective Byomkesh Bakshi (a Sanskritized Sherlock Holmes, if you will), who made his debut in the 1930s and who was to figure in over two dozen stories--some of which were eventually serialized for Indian television...."

5245. Wroe, Nick. "Zen and the art of serial thrilling; A life in writing." The Guardian (London), April 29, 2000: 11.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The crime writer Michael Dibdin is an unlikely adornment to the Irish literary tradition. He was born in Wolverhampton, lives in Seattle and made his name writing about a detective in Italy. But his formative years were spent in 1950s and 1960s Lisburn in Northern Ireland, where he received an early crash course in narrative skills. 'Most people then didn't have televisions, and pubs didn't even have jukeboxes. So people would talk and tell stories and try to top the last story with a better one. If your story was no good you would find out real fast. It was a great education.' As for crime fiction, the decisive discovery was 'the inevitable Conan Doyle'. Dibdin was given a 1930s set of Sherlock Holmes stories owned by his grandfather when he was 14. 'It's the absolute best age to read to them,' he says. 'I believed it all, and for months I lay trembling in bed at the thought that murderous Mormons would come into the room and write 'Two more days to go' on the wall in blood or something.' His grounding in the minutiae of Baker Street ultimately fed into his first novel, The Last Sherlock Holmes Story, in which Holmes takes on the Jack the Ripper case."

5246. Young, Howard. "Game of Circles: Conversations Between Don Quixote and Sancho." Philosophy and Literature 24, no. 2 (2000): 377-386.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes passing references to Doyle and Holmes. "...Sainte-Beuve called it [Don Quixote] 'The Bible of Humanity'; one of the world's most translated books, its quick popularity inside and outside of Spain caused Franco Moretti to term it a precocious international bestseller (2); the home of two of literature's most famous characters, whose ability to acquire a life of their own would only be surpassed by

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Holmes and Watson...The appearance of Sancho is a stroke of genius. 'Put him and his master together,' said Coleridge, 'and they form a perfect intellect.'(6) Theirs is a great literary relationship with a virtual reality as commanding as that of Holmes and Watson, who overshadow Conan Doyle as much as Don Quixote and Sancho eclipse Cervantes...."

5247. Zaleski, Jeff. "PW Talks with Robert B. Parker." Publishers Weekly 248, no. 41 (2001): 46.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Interviews author Robert B. Parker on the novels he is writing. His motivations in writing for screen; Factors contributing to the success of his books; Information on his surgery. Includes passing references to Doyle and Holmes. "...The writer takes the brown leather armchair behind his desk, also leather. He's stocky yet looks small in the room, which isn't large but which has high ceilings made higher by flowing burgundy drapes. Bookshelves cover a third of the wall space. Some hold editions of Parker's 30-odd books, nearly all bestsellers. One supports his Edgar Award (for Promised Land, 1976) and a bust of Sherlock Holmes. Parker's influence on the detective novel is, arguably, nearly as great as Poe's or Conan Doyle's. Through his primary hero, Spenser, introduced in The Godwulf Manuscript (1973), Parker has modernized the American private eye novel beyond its pulp roots, bringing to it psychological realism and sociopolitical awareness...."

13 PASSING REFERENCES -- BOTH DOYLE AND HOLMES -- LITERARY CRITICISM, REVIEWS
(62)

5248. Blackwell, Bonnie. "The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Narrative." College Literature 31, no. 1 (2004): 1-26.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...This article will trace the connections between narrative and mortality as propounded by Mark Renton to show that the film's social critique is not a facile pro- or anti-drug statement, but an intricate proposal for resacralizing language outside exhausted narrative templates...." Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.

5249. Bredin, Hugh. "Onomatopoeia as a Figure and a Linguistic Principle." New Literary History 27, no. 3 (1996): 555-569.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Who has not experienced a frisson of horror at learning that Arthur Conan Doyle considered naming his detective Sheridan Holmes?..."

5250. Bruckner, Martin, and Kristen Poole. "The Plot Thickens: Surveying Manuals, Drama, and the Materiality of Narrative Form in Early Modern England." ELH 69, no. 3 (2002): 617-648.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "...In this essay, we will consider the ways in which the terminology and practice of narrative plot developed out of early modern geodetic discourse...." Includes reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Brooks, for instance, singles out a case of Sherlock Holmes in which the sleuth, recovering the missing crown of Charles I, 'literally plots out on the lawn the points to which the ritual, read as directions for plotting points, refers him, thus realizing the geometrical sense of plotting and the archaic sense of plot as a bounded area of ground.' But while theorists recognize the relationship of plot and plot (here graphically realized in Arthur Conan Doyle's tale), the connection they instinctively perceive is often considered as no more than coincidental or the clever alliance of etymological cousins...."

5251. Callen, Anthea. "Doubles and Desire: Anatomies of masculinity in the later nineteenth century." Art History 26, no. 5 (2003): 669-699.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article focuses on anatomies of masculinity in the later nineteenth century. Contains references to Doyle and Holmes.

5252. Carter, Ian. "The lady in the trunk: railways, gender and crime fiction." Journal of Transport History 23, no. 1 (2002): 46.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Endnotes contain references to Doyle and Holmes.

5253. Childers, Joseph W. "Recent studies in the Nineteenth Century." Studies in English Literature (Rice) 38, no. 4

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- (1998): 761.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Talks about studies on nineteenth-century English literature. Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.
5254. Cohen, William A. "Trollope's Trollop." Novel: A Forum on Fiction 28, no. 3 (1995): 235-256.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines the overt sexuality in Anthony Trollope's book 'The Eustace Diamonds.' Includes references to Doyle and Holmes.
5255. Daly, Nicholas. "That Obscure Object of Desire: Victorian Commodity Culture and Fictions of the Mummy." Novel: A Forum on Fiction 28, no. 1 (1994): 24-51.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Studies the use of mummy fiction to articulate the changes in the material culture in late 19th and early 20th century Great Britain. Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.
5256. Fisher, Susan. "An Allegory of Return: Murakami Haruki's The Wind-Up Bird Chronicle." Comparative Literature Studies 37, no. 2 (2000): 155-170.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...While proper nouns that evoke American pop culture are the most noticeable 'Western' feature of Murakami's fiction, there are also many references to Western 'high' culture. For example, in Hard-Boiled Wonderland there are explicit allusions to Bruckner, Bach, Proust, H. G. Wells, Conan Doyle, Lewis Carroll, Borges, Balzac, Stendhal, Turgenev, Dostoevsky, Conrad, Camus, and Somerset Maugham. These allusions, it should be noted, are usually delivered in an ironic manner: for example, the protagonist complains of his Turgenevo-Stendhalian gloom, (12) and prides himself on being one of the few Tokyo residents who can remember the names of all of the brothers Karamazov. (13) In Hear the Wind Sing (Kaze no uta o kike, 1979; tr. 1987), the protagonist's old friend, known only as the Rat, is writing a novel 'about a comedy team loosely based on The Brothers Karamazov.' (14) Throughout A Wild Sheep Chase (Hitsuji o meguru boken, 1982; tr. 1989), a mock-detective story, the protagonist is reading The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes...."
5257. Ford, Russell. "Deleuze's Dick." Philosophy and Rhetoric 38, no. 1 (2005): 41-71.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes reference to Doyle and Holmes. "The hack. The salesman. The fired cop. The drifter. The betrayed criminal. Each of these constitutes a novel literary invention; each gives a new sense to the investigative character. They are not modifications of the classical model, stamped with the rational imprimatur of Sherlock Holmes, C. Auguste Dupin, or Joseph Rouletabille--there is no line of filiation from these to Vachss's Burke, Pelecanos's Nick Stefanos, or Himes's Coffin Ed Johnson and Grave Digger Jones...The content of La Serie Noire may be loosely categorized as hard-boiled detective fiction where 'hard-boiled' serves to distinguish this sort of detective fiction from what Deleuze refers to as 'English' detective fiction. In English detective fiction, exemplified by the works of such authors as Agatha Christie, John le Carre, and Arthur Conan Doyle, as well as the contemporary genre of police procedurals, the narrative is generally composed of the work of a detective (either by profession or behavior) who gathers evidence in order to compose a solution to a crime that has occurred. The reader is placed in the position of knowing all of the evidence that the detective knows, but without being privy to the internal reasoning of the character...."
5258. Furjan, Helene. "Dressing down: Adolf Loos and the politics of ornament." Journal of Architecture 8, no. 1 (2003): 115.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This paper begins to suggest what might happen to ornament under the Modernist reign of abstraction and rationality. Rather than accepting the usual understanding of ornament as a category outside of modernist aesthetics, rejected by its criticism, it suggests that within the development of Modernism (and a 'pre-Modernist' position to which Loos would belong), ornament was a much more complicated and knotty question. The ideological motivations for a reform of the role of ornament, played out by Loos through clothing and objects of everyday use as well as architecture, and appropriated by Le Corbusier, had a significant effect on the history of architecture." Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...The late nineteenth-century detective, who himself wore a dark suit, specialised in reading those traces. Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes, for instance, was able to read the traces of the upper middle classes through a complex knowledge of apparently useless information (train time-tables, and so on) and could deduce the tailor of a suite merely from the cut, thereby tracing the identity of its wearer. For Holmes, the suit in these terms was not undifferentiated, and therefore did not guarantee anonymity in the crowd...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5259. Garcia-Carpintero, Manuel. "Fiction-Making as a Gricean Illocutionary Type." Journal of Aesthetics & Art Criticism 65, no. 2 (2007): 203-216.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This article discusses propositions that constitute the content of fiction literature. The article claims that an author can unsuccessfully intend to make fictional content a proposition that the author considers in its total specificity and that an author can wrongly deny that a proposition is part of the fictional content. The article criticizes and attempts to improve upon literary proposals by U.S. university professors Gregory Currie, David Lewis, and Kendall Walton." Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.

5260. Goldberg, Michael E. "The synchronic series as the origin of the modernist short story." Studies in Short Fiction 33, no. 4 (1996): 515.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on the synchronic series of short stories and their role in the origin of the modernist collection of short stories. What the synchronic series refers to; Outline of stories that resemble the synchronic series; What led to the origin of the synchronic series of short stories. Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.

5261. Goscilo, Helena. "Moving Images, Imagination, and Eye-deologies." Russian Studies in Literature 40, no. 2 (2004): 7-19.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on moving images, imagination and eye-ideologies in Russia. Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.

5262. Gosselin, Adrenne Johnson. "The World Would Do Better to Ask Why is Frimbo Sherlock Holmes?: Investigating Liminality in Rudolph Fisher's The Conjure-Man Dies." African American Review 32, no. 4 (1998): 607.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Evaluates the novel The Conjure-Man Dies, by Rudolph Fisher. Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.

5263. Goulet, Andrea. "The Yellow Spot: Ocular Pathology and Empirical Method in Gaston Leroux's Le Mystere de la chambre jaune." SubStance 34, no. 2 (2005): 27-46.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.

5264. Graham, Peter W. "Membranes: Metaphors of Invasion in Nineteenth-Century Literature, Science, and Politics (review)." Journal of the History of Medicine and Allied Sciences 55, no. 3 (2000): 323-324.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes references to Doyle and Holmes.

5265. Gray, W. Russel. "Hard-Boiled Black Easy: Genre Conventions in 'A Red Death.'" African American Review 38, no. 3 (2004): 489-498.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the revival of an African American literary strategy of adapting popular cultural forms to critique racial hypocrisy in "A Red Death," a novel about the character of Easy Rawlins written by Walter Mosley. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...End-runs around the law were familiar detective genre elements even before such characters were called 'detectives.'...Furthermore, in 'The Purloined Letter' Dupin steals a stolen letter after staging a peace-disturbing distraction outside, as Sherlock Holmes does in 'A Scandal in Bohemia.' Indeed, Holmes commentator Erik Routley observes that Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's sleuth disregards the letter of the law in 11 of his 60 cases, shielding perpetrators of theft, abduction, and even homicide (Appendix I)...."

5266. Gross, Sabine. "Reading in Style: Visual Text from a New Angle." Poetics Today 29, no. 3 (2008): 565-593.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "The Look of Reading: Book, Painting, Text," by Garrett Stewart. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...From what Stewart presents as the Victorian polar tendencies to either marginalize the book or render it as 'full-scale melodrama' (187), he proceeds to a short digression about depictions of that most famous reader of traces, Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes (192-94)...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5267. Gunning, Tom. "The Exterior as Intérieur: Benjamin's Optical Detective." Boundary 2 30, no. 1 (2003): 105.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Explores the depiction of interior space in the book of Walter Benjamin 'The Arcades Project.' Meaning of arcades as manifested in the book; Consequences with the optical transformation of the interior; Assessment on the detectives created by writers Anna Katharine Green and Gaston Leroux. Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.
5268. ———. "From the Kaleidoscope to the X-Ray: Urban Spectatorship, Poe, Benjamin, and Traffic in Souls (1913)." Wide Angle 19, no. 4 (1997): 25-61.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...In the nineteenth century the comparison of the ever changing urban spectacle to a kaleidoscope quickly became a commonplace. Baudelaire had in fact described the urban spectator as: 'a kaleidoscope gifted with consciousness, responding to each one of its movements and reproducing the multiplicity of life and the flickering grace of all the elements of life.'(28) Decades later Conan Doyle described an urban stroll taken by Dr. Watson and Sherlock Holmes with this image: 'For three hours we strolled about together, watching the ever-changing kaleidoscope of life as it ebbs and flows through Fleet Street and the Strand.'(29) The devices of commercial culture dedicated to attracting and dazzling passersby were frequently described as kaleidoscopic..."
5269. Hancock, Ralph C. "Book reviews." Perspectives on Political Science 23, no. 3 (1994): 152.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book Liberalism, by Harry Neumann. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...In the most brilliant essay of this volume, the author--not Neumann but Harry Jaffa--employs an ingenious reflection on the Socratism of Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes to question the very possibility of nihilism: 'How can stories be possible if they originate with masks and are told only to masks? The nihilist account of reality asks us to believe that no account of reality is possible!' (68)."
5270. Hanley, R. "Much Ado About Nothing: Critical Realism Examined." Philosophical Studies 115, no. 2 (2003): 123-147.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Critical realism is the view that fictional characters are contingent, actual, abstract individuals, ontologically on a par with such things as plots and rhyme schemes, and quantified over in statements such as 'A character in Hamlet is a prince.'" A strong contender for the correct account of fictional characters, critical realism nevertheless has difficulty satisfying all that we intuitively require of such an account." Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.
5271. Harding, Anne. "Total recall." Lancet 366, no. 9493 (2005): 1258-1258.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book Memory: The Key to Consciousness, by Richard F. Thompson and Stephen A. Madigan. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "Sherlock Holmes advised stocking the 'little empty attic' of our brain with care, lest it become overcrowded and we forget where to find something important. With a quadrillion synaptic connections, our brain is far more capacious than Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's hero thought, but as Richard Thompson and Stephen Madigan's entertaining review of the current science of memory illustrates, our capacity is certainly not limitless...."
5272. Harweg, Roland. "Are Fielding's Shamela and Richardson's Pamela One and the Same Person? A Contribution to the Problem of the Number of Fictive Worlds." Style 38, no. 3 (2004): 290-301.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article examines the problem of the number of fictive worlds in the books Shamela by Henry Fielding and Pamela by Samuel Richardson. Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.
5273. Henderson, Rick. "Looking for clues." Reason 26, no. 7 (1994): 52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the books 'Dixie City Jam,' by James Lee Burke, 'Free Fall,' by Robert Crais, 'K' is for Killer,' by Sue Grafton, 'Black Betty,' by Walter Mosley, 'Walking Shadow,' by Robert B. Parker and 'Tunnel Vision,' by Sara Peretsky. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "In his 1950 essay, 'The Simple Art of Murder,' Raymond Chandler showed nothing but contempt for the 'logic and deduction' model of detective stories made famous by Arthur Conan Doyle, Agatha Christie, and Dorothy Sayers. Chandler savaged the literary pretensions of those writers, mostly of British descent, who relied upon

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

'the same incomprehensible trick of how somebody stabbed Mrs. Pottington Postlethwaite III with the solid platinum poniard just as she flatted on the top note of the 'Bell Song' from Lakme in the presence of fifteen ill-assorted guests.'...Although Sherlock Holmes, Hercule Poirot, and their literary descendants retain a large following, there are dozens of contemporary writers keeping the realistic crime novel alive....With August Dupin, Edgar Allan Poe created the private 'consulting detective' in literature; Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes immortalized the character type. But contemporary society is much removed from 1830s France or Victorian London. The early detectives were brought in after some chaotic event--usually a murder or robbery--disrupted the stable order of that time's proper society. For the most part, Dupin and Holmes, although technically private citizens, worked for the police or some other government agency...."

5274. Hopley, Jay. "Watching the Detectives: Reading Dime Novels and Hard-Boiled Detectives Stories in Context." Journal of Social History 36, no. 2 (2003): 459-466.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes multiples references to Doyle and Holmes.

5275. Huntley, Dana. "The Victorian Novel." British Heritage 22, no. 4 (2001): 50.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the development of the English novel in the 19th century. Writers that influenced the novel into the form recognized around the world; Historical romances of Sir Walter Scott; Portrayal of gentry life by Jane Austen; Change in English society upon the accession of Victoria to the throne. Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.

5276. Kadonaga, Lisa. "Strange countries and secret worlds in Ruth Rendell's crime novels." Geographical Review 88, no. 3 (1998): 413.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Mystery novels and academic geography have not often intersected. Yet crime fiction can incorporate spatial relationships and real-life regional characteristics. In recent decades mysteries have been freed from the long tradition of presenting elaborate puzzles, and now they feature human interactions in realistic settings. Writers like Ruth Rendell integrate place into their character development and plot lines. Rendell depicts changing urban landscapes in late-twentieth-century England and effectively explores contemporary British culture. Keywords: England, landscape change, literary geography, mysteries, place, territoriality." Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.

5277. Kappel, Andrew J. "Presenting Miss Moore, Modernist: T.S. Eliot's Edition of Marianne Moore's Selected Poems." Journal of Modern Literature 19, no. 1 (1994): 129.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the editing and compilation of Marianne Moore's poetry in one book by poet T.S. Eliot. Moore's collection of poems that are appearing in the book; Eliot's literary works that are reviewed by Moore; Chronology of the poems in the book. Note 35 on page 149 includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "In proof, Eliot removed the one footnote which he had included in the Introduction. The note was appended to the sentence with which he closed his defense of Moore's choice of subjects: 'We all have to choose whatever subject matter allows us the most powerful and most secret release; and that is a personal affair' (Selected, p. xi), and it read: 'We all have our professional secrets. Cf. Sherlock Holmes, The Second Stain.'...Eliot's reference is to Arthur Conan Doyle's 'The Adventure of the Second Stain.' In the story, Holmes recovers a stolen diplomatic letter of potentially disastrous import but does not reveal the identity of the thief--the wife of the diplomat to whom the letter was addressed--in order to protect her. When pressed at the end of the episode for a full explanation, he reinvokes the principle of diplomatic secrecy which the diplomat in question had tried to invoke with Holmes early in the mystery when the detective asked to know the contents of the letter. In the last line of the story, Holmes avoids the question of the thief's identify [sic] by asserting that 'We also have our diplomatic secrets.'" Earlier in the article (page 132) reference is made to Frank Morley, Eliot's friend and colleague at Faber and Faber.

5278. Karp, Andrew. "Oz and Beyond (Book Review)." Utopian Studies 9, no. 2 (1998): 307.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book Oz and Beyond: The Fantasy World of L. Frank Baum, by Michael O. Riley. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Michael O. Riley's new study continues this resurgence, presenting a lucid if somewhat uninspired account of the development of L. Frank Baum's 'imaginary continent' (54) through a chronological study of all his fantasy writings. Arguing that Oz, like Doyle's Sherlock Holmes, has developed an independent existence 'quite apart from the stories' (229),

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Riley endeavors to provide an 'accurate picture of Baum's entire Other-world' (7) by focusing on the 'growth of Oz and Baum's other imaginary countries through all the stages of their development' (12)...."

5279. Katz, Marc. "The Hotel Kracauer." differences: A Journal of Feminist Cultural Studies 11, no. 2 (1999): 134-152.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes passing references to Doyle and Holmes. "...Kracauer, like Benjamin, begins his investigation of detective fiction by tracing the practices of traditional detective figures such as Dupin and Holmes....Kracauer shares in this typologization: the retrospective and therefore self-sustaining reading of the crime scene as found in Conan Doyle or Leblanc is, he says, a 'mere legality,' or an exercise in formalism (1.119)...."

5280. Kawamoto, Koji. "The Use and Disuse of Tradition in Basho's Haiku and Imagist Poetry." Poetics Today 20, no. 4 (1999): 709-721.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...As Pound himself says in 'Chinese Poetry' (To-Day, April 1918) of his 'The Jewel-Stairs' Grievance,' the translation of a Chinese poem in exactly the same vein, 'we find everything there, not merely by 'suggestion' but by a sort of mathematical process of reduction. . . . You can play Conan Doyle if you like' (cited in Brooker 1979: 139). He is perfectly right here. While granting that the large white margins surrounding the three short lines do intensify the overall effect, however, we must recognize that Sherlock Holmes has little to do with 'an intellectual and emotional complex in an instant of time.'..."

5281. Kawana, Sari. "Mad Scientists and Their Prey: Bioethics, Murder, and Fiction in Interwar Japan." The Journal of Japanese Studies 31, no. 1 (2005): 89-120.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. "...Just as Thorndyke squared off with Sherlock Holmes on the pages of The Strand, Freeman's meticulous barrister-doctor boasted a popularity comparable to Sherlock Holmes among Japanese readers, as the works of Freeman and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle reached Japanese audiences at roughly the same time...The case is only put to rest when the doctor dies from his own error (he starves to death when he mismanages the equipment that attaches the artificial limbs to his body), and his wicked scheme is exposed by the able private eye Homura Sōroku (Unno's clever play on Sherlock Holmes).

5282. Keating, Patrick. "The Fictional Worlds of Neorealism." Criticism 45, no. 1 (2003): 11-30.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...This last point draws on a well-known article by philosopher David Lewis, who has applied a theory of 'overt beliefs' to the practice of fiction. Writing about the Sherlock Holmes stories, Lewis writes: 'Suppose Conan Doyle was a secret believer in purple gnomes; thinking that his belief in them was not shared by anyone else, he kept it carefully to himself for fear of ridicule. In particular, he left no trace of this belief in his stories. Suppose also that some of his original readers likewise were secret believers in purple gnomes. Suppose also that everyone alive at the time was a secret believer in purple gnomes, each thinking that his own belief was not shared by anyone else. Then it is clear (to the extent that anything is clear about such a strange situation) that the belief in purple gnomes does not 'generally prevail' in quite the right way, and there are still no purple gnomes in the world of Sherlock Holmes. Call a belief overt in a community at a time if more or less everyone shares it, more or less everyone thinks that more or less everyone else shares it, and so on. The proper background, we may conclude, comprises the beliefs that are overt in the community of origin of the fiction...."

5283. Kelly, George Armstrong. "Veils: The Poetics of John Rawls." Journal of the History of Ideas 57, no. 2 (1996): 343-364.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...The veil continued to have a power in English letters. Let us finish this part of the discussion with one brief example. At the end of the gripping detective novel The Valley of Fear, its narrator Dr. Watson relates: 'We all sat in silence for some minutes while those fateful eyes still strained to pierce the veil.' (41) Even the positivistic Sherlock Holmes, as rendered by his spiritualistic creator A. Conan Doyle, is captive to that ancient image while contemplating the criminal network of the incomparable Professor Moriarty (whose eclipse will be in the sublime setting and sublime moment of the struggle at Reichenbach Falls--a 'veil' or 'curtain' of water)...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5284. Kestner, Joseph A. "Detection and Its Designs: Narrative and Power in Nineteenth-Century Detective Fiction (review)." Victorian Studies 42, no. 3 (2000): 550-551.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of the book Detection and Its Designs: Narrative and Power in Nineteenth-Century Detective Fiction, by Peter Thoms; pp. xii + 176. Athens: Ohio University Press, 1998, $32.95. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes.
5285. LaGrand, Virginia, and Craig E. Mattson. "Peter Wimsey and Precious Ramotswe: Castaway Detectives and Companionate Marriage." Christianity & Literature 56, no. 4 (2007): 633-664.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents a depiction of the 18th century Enlightenment by Christian humanist Giambattista Vico and modern science philosopher Michael Polanyi in the detective stories created by Dorothy L. Sayers and Alexander McCall Smith. In Sayer's "Gaudy Night" and McCall Smith's "The No. 1 Ladies' Detective Agency," the author finds that resolving a mystery and pursuing a marriage seem like parallel activities. In addition, the author has observed that detective characters Precious Ramotswe and Lord Peter Wimsey heighten the readers' awareness that all detectives narrate a pattern of motive and means that determines the existence of bits of as yet undiscovered evidence. Polanyi argues that this kind of problem-solving is the way real problems are solved in all fields of human activity. Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.
5286. Leavis, L. R. "Reviews." English Studies 88, no. 1 (2007): 108-117.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews several books related to English literature including "Twentieth-Century Crime Fiction," by Lee Horsely. Includes passing references to Doyle and Holmes (pp. 114-15). "...And in his most stereotyped 'socio-political' account of Sherlock Holmes, Horsley misses that while Conan Doyle wanted to see fairies at the bottom of his garden, he also (the creator of Professor Challenger) had a sense of humour--one that does not entail Horsley's horse-play about Freudian 'penis envy' and pocket pistols."
5287. Lesjak, Carolyn. "A Modern Odyssey: Realism, the Masses, and Nationalism in George Eliot's Felix Holt." Novel: A Forum on Fiction 30, no. 1 (1996): 78-97.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines George Eliot's 'Felix Holt' as an industrial novel, showing the development of the concept of nationalism as a process through a series of displacements. Raymond Williams' view of the industrial novel; Symbolic resolution of conflict; division between work and culture; Link between English culture and imperial power; National identification as a notion of wholeness and continuity. Note 5 makes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "There are any number of examples later in the century of the thematic of the colonial invading England's island, ranging from Sherlock Holmes detective stories (see especially Doyle, The Sign of Four [107-205]) to narratives of the Englander 'gone native.' Like representations of the working class in the industrial novel, they reflect a palpable sense of cultural anxiety over the breaking down of clearly demarcated internal/external social and spatial boundaries."
5288. Malmgren, Carl D. "Anatomy of Murder: Mystery, Detective, and Crime Fiction." Journal of Popular Culture 30, no. 4 (1997): 115-135.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This article discusses the interrelations and differences between mystery, detective and crime fiction." Includes references to Doyle and Holmes.
5289. Martin, Jorge Hernandez, and Jeffrey Crespi. "On the case." Americas 47, no. 2 (1995): 16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features Mexican master of the popular detective novel Paco Ignacio Taibo II. Contribution to the Latin American literary scene; Personal background; Career record; Literary style; Notable works; Views on the art of crime writing. INSET: Mystery in Gijon. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. "...However, unlike Sam Spade, Belascoaran is not alone; he has a family--a sister, Elisa, and a younger brother, Carlos Brian, which also helps to define him. His brother is like an ideologically conscious Mycroft (Sherlock Holmes's brother)....'I am a detective because I like people,' says Belascoaran to a writer named Paco Ignacio in Algunas nubes [Some Clouds] (1985). In fact, in contrast to a detective who reasons his cases abstractly--Holmes, for example--Belascoaran, with his working class and democratic sensibilities, relies on becoming personally involved in other peoples' lives....In contrast to the earlier examples of the genre, Taibo

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

describes his detective as 'a character whose understanding of the crime comes about through his direct involvement in the circumstances of the criminal act and not by means of an external perception of the event. There is no application of formal logic, rather there is a perverse cultural and anthropological logic in crime. That is the great conflict with the older generation who imitated Agatha Christie and Arthur Conan Doyle.'

5290. Martinez, Maria Jesus. "Astarte's game: Variations in John Fowles's 'The Enigma'." Twentieth Century Literature 42, no. 1 (1996): 124.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines the impact of art and the genre of detective fiction in John Fowles' novel entitled 'Enigma.' Character description; Basis of the novel; ideas prominent in Fowles' other works; Measure of irreverence; Role of closure in the realist text; Comparison with Fowles' other works. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. "...The Enigma' follows the detective-story genre which began with Poe and gained popularity with the work of Arthur Conan Doyle....According to Julian Symons, the Great Detective has certain strongly marked characteristics that fascinated Victorian and Edwardian readers because they were so alien to their own deep-seated respectability. He is egotistical, eccentric, and often anti-social. The Great Detective is also above, or at any rate outside, 'normal' emotions. Sherlock Holmes, for instance, takes drugs when we are first introduced to him and has fits of depression. Watson describes him as 'the most perfect observing and reasoning machine that the world has seen: but as a lover, he would have placed himself in a false position'...Jennings is now completely free to abandon the role of a Sherlock Holmes or a Nero Wolfe, eternally devoted to their cases and invariably successful in interpreting the clues and discovering the solution to the enigma...."

5291. McCaffery, Larry, Sinda Gregory, and Takayuki Tatsumi. "A Meaning in Art That's No Longer Possible: An Interview With Kiyoshi Kasai." Review of Contemporary Fiction 22, no. 2 (2002): 53.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Interviews Japanese author Kiyoshi Kasai. Educational and career background; Books written; His views on the popularity of classical detective novels in Japan; Comparison between science fiction and detective fiction; Reason for using the vampire motif. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. "...SG: Are classical detective novels--the kind you associate with Conan Doyle and Agatha Christie--popular in Japan?"

5292. McCormick, Patrick. "Public morality from a private eye." U.S.Catholic 60, no. 10 (1995): 45.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the moral underpinnings of detective fiction in contemporary American literature. Gravitation of religious scholars to detective fiction; Detective as personification of need for solidarity with the world's poor and oppressed; Allusions to original sin in detective fiction. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. "...It doesn't seem odd that detective stories would be such a hit with a group of academic theologians. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes brought an empirical analysis, deductive logic, and scientific method to his work that would have been the envy of any academic researcher....For the four decades before ex-Pinkerton agent Hammett began writing stories for Black Mask magazine in 1929, murder mysteries had been held hostage by British puzzle masters and their slavish American imitators. Beginning with Conan Doyle's 1887 A Study in Scarlet, British creations, such as Sherlock Holmes, G. K. Chesterton's Father Brown, and Agatha Christie's Hercule Poirot and Miss Marple, set the standard for crime fiction: employing brilliant ratiocination to solve brainteasing parlor murders. 'Elementary, my dear Watson' became the voice of the detective....Along with being a pervasive presence in these stories, evil is also a daunting force to be reckoned with, one that will test much more than the detective's powers of deduction. Again, in the British parlor puzzlers, crime is a brainteasing enigma that requires cool brilliance to be solved. Sherlock Holmes, Miss Marple, and Hercule Poirot -- who are more like clinicians than cops -- may have courage or physical strength, but they do not often need them to vanquish the villain. In their world it is brain power that will destroy evil. This is not the case for Spade and his descendants...."

5293. McDonough, Tom. "The Crimes of the Flaneur." October, no. (2002): 22p.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines the nature of the flaneur according to an essay written by Walter Benjamin on the French poet Charles Baudelaire. Description of a flaneur; Significance of the reception accorded the essay at the time of its publication; Discussion on the U.S. aesthetic practice of adopting and exploring the codes of criminal behavior; Implications for the representation of the metropolis in literature. Footnote 13 includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "Raymond Williams would restate this argument

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

succinctly for the slightly later English tradition of the detective story, epitomized in the Sherlock Holmes tales of Arthur Conan Doyle. The urban detective emerged there 'as a significant and ratifying figure: the man who can find his way through the fog, who can penetrate the intricacies of the streets. The opaque complexity of modern city life is represented by crime; the explorer of a society is reduced to the discoverer of single causes, the isolable agent and above all his means, his technique.' The chaos and variety of London were juxtaposed with 'this eccentric sharp mind, this almost disembodied but locally furnished intelligence, which can unravel complexity, determine local agency, and then, because there the inquiry stops, hand the matter over to the police and the courts: the clear abstract system beyond all the bustle and fog' (Raymond Williams, The Country and the City [New York: Oxford University Press, 1973], p. 227).

5294. Mertens, Joost. "Book reviews." AMBIX 54, no. 2 (2007): 201-220.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews several books including "Sky in a Bottle," by Peter Pesic. Pp. 262, illus., index. The MIT Press: Cambridge, Mass. and London. 2005. GBP16.50 (hbk). ISBN: 0-262-16234-2 (hbk). Includes passing references to Doyle and Holmes. "How often have I said to you," Sherlock Holmes told Dr Watson in 1888, "that when you have eliminated the impossible, whatever remains, however improbable, must be the truth?" This central precept of Holmes's proto-popperian eliminative methodology could be the motto of Peter Pesic's study on blue entitled Sky in a bottle. Its subject is the history of a branch of physics that might be called cyanology, the more poetic bluesology having been coined by Milt Jackson for a very different kind of science...."

5295. Meyers, Jeffrey. "George Orwell and the Art of Writing." Kenyon Review 27, no. 4 (2005): 92-114.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on George Orwell's art of writing. Influence of modern writer Somerset Maugham; Use of direct language and unambiguous expression; Preference for simplicity; Literary personality; Works of Orwell. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Despite Orwell's valiant attempt to revive interest in out-of-date popular fiction, only Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes, Bram Stoker's Dracula, Rider Haggard's She and perhaps Harriet Beecher Stowe's Uncle Tom's Cabin--all of which have been made into films--are still in print and read today...."

5296. Morace, Robert A. "Set in Darkness." Magill Book Reviews, no. (2001).

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The thirteenth installment in the series of detective fictions by Scotland's most popular contemporary writer. Includes passing references to Doyle and Holmes. "...Thanks to Ian Rankin, master of Scottish noir, Edinburgh has become the crime-fiction capital of the world. Edinburgh, which is where Sherlock Holmes's creator, Arthur Conan Doyle, was born, is Detective Inspector John Rebus's beat....The novel's several mysteries are all related, Rebus (as usual) believes, but the connections are not elementary, as Holmes would say...."

5297. Moretti, Franco. "The Slaughterhouse of Literature." MLQ: Modern Language Quarterly 61, no. 1 (2000): 207-227.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines the role of form in literary works. Structural analysis of the detective stories by Conan Doyle; Functionality of clues in the stories of Doyle; Important elements of literary text; Factors influencing the genre of literary works; Role of publishers in the marketing of literary works. "The history of the world is the slaughterhouse of the world, reads a famous Hegelian aphorism; and of literature. The majority of books disappear forever--and "majority" actually misses the point: if we set today's canon of nineteenth-century British novels at two hundred titles (which is a very high figure), they would still be only about 0.5 percent of all published novels. And the other 99.5 percent? This is the question behind this article, and behind the larger idea of literary history that is now taking shape in the work of several critics--most recently Sylvie Thorel-Cailleteau, Katie Trumpener, and Margaret Cohen...." Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.

5298. Moseley, Merritt. "Eminent Victorians." Sewanee Review 103, no. 2 (1995): 309.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Analyzes and interprets Richard Mullen's biography of 19th century British writer Anthony Trollope in 'Anthony Trollope: A Victorian in His World.' Fluctuation of Trollope's reputation as a novelist; Question about his fictional techniques; Qualities discovered; Posthumous award given. Contains multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5299. Munt, Sally R. "Grief, doubt and nostalgia in detective fiction or...'Death and the detective novel': A return."

College Literature 25, no. 3 (1998): 133.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Deals with the author's reassessment of her position in feminism and crime fiction. How the author's relationship to detective fiction has changed; Rising dominance of detective fiction in popular culture; Discussion on the novel 'Murder By the Book'; Relationship between psychoanalysis and crime fiction. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. "...Crime fiction offers us the Law of the Father; in its origins lies the fallacy of iconic masculinity--Sherlock Holmes transcended his human prototype, becoming a representation of the 'Nietzschean superior man.' Conan Doyle felt his readers needed 'a man immune from ordinary human weaknesses and passions' (Symons 1985, 66). Holmes exuded and exalted a specifically upper middle class Victorian masculinity based on cool rationality and intellect. As Joan Copjec has stated, linking detective fiction to the advent of rationalism: 'For it was statistics that formed the basis of classical detective fiction's narrative contract with its reader; the nineteenth century's fictional belief in the solubility of crime was specifically a mathematical expectation' (Copjec 1994, 167). Although the ur-detective, Holmes, has been tempered by the ravages of history, his reified masculinity reduced to a pale impression of its former potency, the detective hero--man or woman--persists in a ratiocinative practice. In spite of the intuitive claims of later female and feminist investigators, rationality remains the prime modus operandi of detection...."

5300. Myers, Tony. "The Postmodern Imaginary in William Gibson's Neuromancer." MFS Modern Fiction Studies 47, no. 4 (2001): 887-909.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Literary attempts to tame the concrete jungle vary, but one worth noting in this context is, as Williams observes, 'the new figure of the urban detective': 'In Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes stories there is a recurrent image of the penetration by an isolated rational intelligence of a dark area of crime which is to be found in the otherwise (for specific physical reasons, as in the London fogs, but also for social reasons, in that teeming, mazelike, often alien area) impenetrable city. This figure has persisted in the urban 'private eye' (as it happens, an exact idiom for the basic position in consciousness) in cities without the fogs.' (42)...We may note a certain equivocation in the social status of detectives, from Sherlock Holmes to Philip Marlowe, which stems from an involvement with marginalized activities and characters (opium and femmes fatales, for example) that is seemingly at odds with a more respectable pursuit of justice and the law...."

5301. Neff, D. S. "Anoedipal Fiction: Schizoanalysis and The Black Dahlia." Poetics Today 18, no. 3 (1997): 301.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the schizoanalysis of the anoedipal fiction 'The Black Dahlia,' by James Ellroy. Overview of the detective novel; Background of the basic schizoanalytic concepts; Information on the psychiatric aspect of the novel. Page 325 includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...While some famous detectives, such as Poe's C. Auguste Dupin, Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes, and Agatha Christie's Miss Jane Marple, are unquestionably eccentric, most likely neurotic, and possibly mildly schizophrenic, each of them has a relatively stable sense of self and uses Aristotelian logic to solve crimes...." The note at the bottom of that page states: "Sherlock Holmes, another 'schizoid,' whose cocaine use is perhaps self-medication for spells of melancholia, displays a strong paranoid streak, characterizing, with the barest thread of evidence, his seemingly unconquerable archrival, Professor Moriarty, in The Valley of Fear, as the ultimate architect and beneficiary of any significant criminal activity in England...."

5302. Neubauer, John. "Membranes: Metaphors of Invasion in Nineteenth-Century Literature, Science, and Politics (review)." Comparative Literature Studies 40, no. 3 (2003): 334-337.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Membranes. Metaphors of Invasion in Nineteenth-Century Literature, Science, and Politics. By Laura Otis. Baltimore: The Johns Hopkins University Press, 1999. x + 210 pp. $45.00. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes.

5303. New, Christopher. "A note on truth in fiction." Journal of Aesthetics & Art Criticism 55, no. 4 (1997): 421.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Opinion. Offers views on the practicality of truth in fiction. Comparison of a variety of fictional pieces to ascertain reasons for disagreement; Consequence of considering truth-value of prepositions in fictional pieces. Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5304. Ossar, Michael. "Christoph Hein's Das Napoleon-Spiel and the Ludic Principle." German Quarterly 73, no. 3 (2000): 253.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Explores the theme of acte gratuit in the novels 'Les Caves du Vatican' by Andre Gide and 'Das Napoleon-Spiel' by Christoph Hein. Acte gratuit in 'Les Caves du Vatican'; Form of Hein's novel; Differences between the novels; Role of the nature of the meta-motives in the novels; Kinship of Worle, lead character of 'Das Napoleon-Spiel' with Lafcadio of 'Les Caves du Vatican.' Includes passing references to Doyle and Holmes. "...For Holquist, the traditional detective story as exemplified by Arthur Conan Doyle or Edgar Allan Poe differs from the post-modern, metaphysical one (RobbeGrillet) in its sense of the accessibility of truth. Sherlock Holmes confronts a complex and difficult world, but it is a world that yields to the application of logic and reason....For Robbe-Grillet, for Borges, and for the post-modern detective story in general the world contains no such certainty as that revealed by Holmes, no such order, no matter how acute the detective's powers of deduction...."
5305. Patten, Robert L. "British Literary Culture and Publishing Practice, 1880-1914 (review)." Victorian Studies 42, no. 2 (2000): 323-325.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of British Literary Culture and Publishing Practice 1880-1914, by Peter D. McDonald; pp. xii + 230. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1997, GBP40.00, $59.95. Contains multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.
5306. Pearl, Nancy, and Sarah Nagle. "Beyond Sherlock Holmes: British Crime Fiction." Library Journal 131, no. 7 (2006): 128-128.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews books of the British crime fiction genre. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. "The American writer Edgar Allan Poe is often considered the father of crime fiction as we know it. But starting with Sherlock Holmes, the fictional character created by Arthur Conan Doyle at the end of the 19th century, British writers soon took the genre to great heights, peaking in the 1920s and 1930s, mystery's 'Golden Age,' with Agatha Christie and Dorothy L. Sayers as the chief purveyors of detective fiction. Today, there is a new golden era of high-quality traditional mysteries, authored by both UK and U.S. writers, that feature atmospheric and historical British settings, as well as strong characters and sophisticated plots. Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes was a confirmed bachelor. However, Laurie R. King has created a 'fictitious' wife for Holmes's later years, the intrepid Mary Russell, who, at an early age, becomes an informal student of Holmes and later his independent and scholarly spouse. Together, the two sleuths sharpen their considerable deductive powers through conversation and battles of intellect...." 5307. Penzler, Otto. "Anatomy of a Mystery." Publishers Weekly 252, no. 16 (2005): 30-32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the mystery literary genre. Brief history of crime literature; Overview of different categories and sub-genres of mystery fiction; Difference between crime stories and mystery stories; Description of psychological suspense novels; Overview of various authors of detective and mystery stories. Includes passing references to Doyle and Holmes. "...The literature of crime goes back at least as far as the Bible, where Cain slew Abel. Today, mysteries come in many different shades. The category caters to different tastes, and is the haven for a host of storytelling approaches, many with their own traditions. Although the categories and subgenres below have their borders shrouded in fog, let's recall Arthur Conan Doyle's reminder that 'there is nothing more deceptive than an obvious fact.'...While it is common to credit Dashiell Hammett with creating the PI story, he was, in fact, preceded by Sherlock Holmes a half-century earlier...."
5308. Peters, Elizabeth. "Series characters: Love 'em or leave 'em." Writer 107, no. 4 (1994): 9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses some aspects of series characters. The author's Barbara Michaels novels and series that feature the same characters; Disadvantages to a series; Creating realistic characters; Establishing characters through actions rather than words. Includes passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "Conan Doyle learned to loathe Holmes so intensely, he tried to murder him. At the opposite end of the spectrum are such writers as Dorothy Sayers, whose affection for Lord Peter Wimsey has prompted a certain amount of rude speculation. What is it about series characters? Is there a happy medium between loving and loathing them? Do the advantages of series characters outweigh the disadvantages? Should you, if you haven't done so already, consider starting a series? In addition to the non-series Barbara Michaels novels, I write three different series, featuring Jacqueline Kirby, librarian; Vicky Bliss, art historian; and the notorious Amelia Peabody, Victorian gentlewoman Egyptologist. None of the novels in which these three characters first appeared was intended to be the beginning of a series. The reason the series developed is simple and crass: There was a demand. I don't know why publishers suddenly decided that series characters were 'in.' They had always been popular, as witness Holmes, Poirot, Wimsey, et al., but it was not until ten or fifteen years ago that interest resurfaced. Now, many mystery writers have a series character, and those who do not are being pressured to create one...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5309. Peterson, Britt. "The Case of the Defective Detective." American Scholar 77, no. 2 (2008): 138-140.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A review of The Suspicions of Mr. Whicher: Murder and the Undoing of a Great Victorian Detective By Kate Summerscah, Walker, $24.95. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "His eyes, of a steely light grey, had a very disconcerting trick, when they encountered your eyes, of looking as if they expected something more from you than you were aware of yourself," wrote Wilkie Collins, introducing Sergeant Cuff, the detective-hero of his 1868 suspense novel. The Moonstone. Arthur Conan Doyle would use similar language introducing Sherlock Holmes in A Study in Scarlet (1883)[sic]: 'His eyes were sharp and piercing . . . and his thin, hawk-like nose gave his whole expression an air of alertness and decision.'..."

13 PASSING REFERENCES -- BOTH DOYLE AND HOLMES -- LOST WORLD (1)

5310. Cahill, Tim. "Modern immaturity." Men's Health 12, no. 8 (1997): 60.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a narrative about the maturity of an adolescent with passing references to Doyle and Holmes. "...About the same time, I came upon The Lost World, a book by Arthur Conan Doyle, the man who created Sherlock Holmes. The book was about an area of Venezuela where great coffinlike mountains rose several thousand feet above the surrounding grassy plain. Conan Doyle's character, Professor Challenger, travels to this area--the lost world--because he believes dinosaurs may have survived atop the highest of these mountains. Hey, wait a minute: It occurred to me that Angel Falls plummets from the flat-topped summit of one of those dinosaur mountains. The local Indians call these mountains tepuis, and the highest waterfall in the world forms near the summit of Ayan Tepui, which was, hey again, not far from Mount Roraima, the tepui Conan Doyle probably wrote about in The Lost World. And so my dream, one rainy afternoon in my 15th year, was to travel to Mount Roraima. and climb that bugger...."

13 PASSING REFERENCES -- BOTH DOYLE AND HOLMES -- MAPS(1)

5311. Katchor, Ben. "Literary Legends." Civilization 7, no. 1 (2000): 66.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides information on literary maps. What is an ideal literary map; Two categories of literary map; Information on the Ancient Mappe of Fairyland, Newly Discovered and Set Forth map. Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Also included in this first category are maps of fictitious lands that happen to coincide at many points with the terrain of actual cities--Sherlock Holmes's London, for example. The beauty of such maps lies in the way they remind us not to confuse the two cities, real and fictional. The counterman in a contemporary delicatessen on Baker Street may be sick of musing with us about the mystery stories of Arthur Conan Doyle, despite having read them avidly as a child...."

13 PASSING REFERENCES -- BOTH DOYLE AND HOLMES -- MEDICINE (1)

5312. Bradley, Paul, and Pamela Bradley. "The case of the missing lawyer (as if anyone cares), with apologies (this time) to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle." Medical education 36, no. 12 (2002): 1155-1159.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a short story related to medical education, with reference to Doyle and Holmes.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

13 PASSING REFERENCES -- BOTH DOYLE AND HOLMES -- MORIARTY (1)

5313. Moyer, Albert E. "Simon Newcomb: Astronomer with an attitude." Scientific American 279, no. 4 (1998): 88.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Analyzes the work of 19th century astronomer Simon Newcomb. His use of the scientific method in areas outside of science; How he first achieved recognition; Commentator on social and cultural reforms; His personality; Background; His study of asteroid belts; Work in mathematical astronomy; Study of orbital motions of the planets, especially Mercury; His popularity among the public; His relation of science to other areas of life. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Tongue in cheek, Newcomb included a British character named 'W. K. Constant,' who was the fictional counterpart of Lord Kelvin. (At least one character based on Newcomb may have appeared in fiction as well: evidence suggests that Arthur Conan Doyle picked him as the model for particular biographical features of Professor James Moriarty, the canny arch rival of Sherlock Holmes.)..."

13 PASSING REFERENCES -- BOTH DOYLE AND HOLMES -- MUSIC (2)

5314. Barker, John W. "Guide to Records: Lassus." American Record Guide 66, no. 1 (2003): 144.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several music recordings composed by Orlandus Lassus, with a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "Commentators have tended to stress the superiority of Lassus' motets over his masses. (Lovers of the Sherlock Holmes stores will recall that Conan Doyle had his versatile detective write a definitive monograph on 'The Polyphonic Motets of Lassus'!)" 5315. Maus, Fred Everett. "Narrative, drama, and emotion in instrumental music." Journal of Aesthetics & Art Criticism 55, no. 3 (1997): 293.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Summarizes aspects of essays which deal with the comparison of music to prose narrative or drama. Who wrote the essays; Inclusion of some compositions in the essays; Emphasis of these essays on music criticism; Traditional linking of music to issues about human emotion in philosophical discussions; Details on the different essays. Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.

13 PASSING REFERENCES -- BOTH DOYLE AND HOLMES -- OTIS (9)

5316. Ayoub, Nina C. "New Scholarly Books." Chronicle of Higher Education 45, no. 30 (1999): A25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews scholarly books including Membranes: Metaphors of Invasion in Nineteenth-Century Literature, Science, and Politics, by Laura Otis (Johns Hopkins University Press; 248 pages; $45). "Uses examples from literary, political, and scientific texts to argue that the biological cell became a major metaphor in 19th-century culture; focuses on works by four physician-writers: Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, S. Weir Mitchell, Santiago Ramon y Cajal, and Arthur Schnitzler."
5317. Beidler, Paul Gorman. "Membranes: Metaphors of Invasion in Nineteenth-Century Literature, Science, and Politics (review)." Literature and Medicine 19, no. 2 (2000): 297-300.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Otis calls Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes 'an imperial leukocyte' who 'succeeds so often in reaching his target because he moves freely throughout the imperial body' (p. 110)...."
5318. Bell, Ian F. A. "Membranes: Metaphors of Invasion in Nineteenth-Century Literature, Science, and Politics (review)." Modernism/modernity 8, no. 2 (2001): 375-377.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.
5319. Cohen, Edward H. "Victorian Bibliography for 1999." Victorian Studies 43, no. 4 (2001): 699-839.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes Doyle references. --Baccolini, Raffaella, Carla Comellini, & Vita Fortunati, eds. Culture di lingua inglese a confronto. Bologna: CLUEB, 1998. 256 pp. Includes Barrie, Doyle, and Stevenson; --Baxter, Kent B. "Identity in Crisis: Modernism and the Texts of Adolescence." DAIA

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- 59:2972. Includes Doyle and Kipling; --Calanchi, Alessandra. Quattro studi in rosso: I confini del privato maxchile nella narrativa vittoriana. Cesena: Societa Editrice "Il Ponte Vecchio," 1997. 216 pp. Includes Collins, Doyle, and Stevenson; --Cockerell, Hugh. "Tobacco and Victorian Literature," in IIIsc, Lock, Reynolds, & Tansey, pp. 89-99. Includes Dickens, Doyle, and A. Trollope; --Drever, Tiffany E. "Medical Mysteries: Dragging the Victorian Hysteria into the Machine Age." DAIA 59:3827. Includes Collins, Dickens, and Doyle; --Fraser, Robert W. Victorian Quest Romance: Stevenson, Haggard, Kipling, and Conan Doyle. Plymouth: Northcote, 1998. 93 pp.; --Hendershot, Cyndy. The Animal Within: Masculinity and the Gothic. Ann Arbor: U of Michigan P, 1998. 281 pp. Includes C. Bronte, Conrad, Doyle, Stevenson, and Stoker; --Hennessey, Rosemary, & Chrys Ingraham, eds. Materialist Feminism: A Reader in Class, Difference, and Women's Lives. London: Routledge, 1997. 430 pp. Includes Doyle; --Krebs, Paula M. Gender, Race, and the Writing of Empire: Public Discourse and the Boer War. Cambridge UP. 205 pp. Includes Doyle, Haggard, Kipling, and Schreiner; --Otis, Laura. Membranes: Metaphors of Invasion in Nineteenth-Century Literature, Science, and Politics. Baltimore: Johns Hopkins UP. 210 pp. Includes Doyle; --Ramirez, Luz E. "Empire and Americanism: British Representations of Latin America." DAIA 59: 3468. Includes Conrad and Doyle; --Reitz, Caroline W. "The Necessary Detective: Police, Empire and Victorian National Identity." DAIA 60:1576. Includes Burton, Collins, Dickens, Doyle, and Kipling; --Baker Street Inventory." BSJ Mar:59-63; Jun:53- 55; Sep:58-61; Dec:59-61. --Calanchi, Alessandra. "'Others Will Follow': Lo strano caso di Jekyll, Hyde e Sherlock Holmes." RdSV 3, 5(1998):133-43. --Calanchi, Alessandra. "Rovinare le sacre simbiosi: Rosencrantz, Guildenstern e Sherlock Holmes." Poetiche: Letteratura ed Altro 4/5(1996):145-55. --Edwards, Owen Dudley. "Arthur Conan Doyle," in V, Winks & Corrigan, pp. 301-30. --Frank, Lawrence. "The Hound of the Baskervilles, the Man on the Tor, and a Metaphor for the Mind." NCL 54:336-72. --Genis, Aleksandr. "Zakon i poriadok: Moi Sherlock Holmes." Znamia Dec:195-201. --Goldfarb, Clifford. The Great Shadow: Arthur Conan Doyle, Brigadier Gerard and Napoleon. Ashcroft, BC: Calabash, 1997. 232 pp. Rev. by N. Dames in VPR 32:181-82. --Hennessey, Rosemary, & Rajeswri Mohan. "The Construction of Women in Three Popular Texts of Empire: Toward a Critique of Materialist Feminism," in V, Hennessey & Ingraham, pp. 186-206. Includes "The Speckled Band." --Holland-Toll, Linda J. "Holmes the Prole: Or, a Marxist, Definitely Manque." Clues 20, 1:37-48. --Jenkins, William D. The Adventure of the Detected Detective: Sherlock Holmes in James Joyce's 'Finnegan's Wake'. Westport, CT: Greenwood, 1998. 149 pp. --Jurkowska-Krupa, Beata. "Modes of Storytelling: A Rhetorical Analysis of Film and Television Adaptations of Arthur Conan Doyle's The Hound of the Baskervilles and Leo Tolstoy's Anna Karenina." DAIA 59:3265. --Keep, Christopher, & Don Randall. "Addiction, Empire, and Narrative in Arthur Conan Doyle's The Sign of Four." Novel 32:207-21. --Kestner, J. Sherlock's Men. . . . See VB 1997, 794. Rev. by E. Lauterbach in ELT 42:212-16; by R. Jann in VS 42:314-16. --McConchie, R. W. "Privileged and Displaced Persons: Henry Lawson in Sherlock Holmes's England." CE&S 21, 2:83-100. --Otis, Laura. Membranes: Metaphors of Invasion in Nineteenth-Century Literature, Science, and Politics. Baltimore: Johns Hopkins UP. 210 pp. Includes Doyle. --Schumacher, Hans. "Sherlock Holmes und der Höllenhund: Mythologie der Detektivgeschichte," in V, Chiarini, Kruse, & Todini, pp. 265-84. --Stashower, Daniel. Teller of Tales: The Life of Arthur Conan Doyle. London: Pan; NY: Holt. 512 pp. Rev. by A. Lejeune in NRev 31 May:68-69.
5320. Graham, Peter W. "Membranes: Metaphors of Invasion in Nineteenth-Century Literature, Science, and Politics (review)." Journal of the History of Medicine and Allied Sciences 55, no. 3 (2000): 323-324.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes references to Doyle and Holmes.
5321. Laubichler, Manfred D. "Membranes: Metaphors of Invasion in Nineteenth-Century Literature, Science, and Politics (review)." Journal of Interdisciplinary History 32, no. 2 (2001): 287-288.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews Membranes: Metaphors of Invasion in Nineteenth-Century Literature, Science, and Politics. By Laura Otis (Baltimore, Johns Hopkins University Press, 1999) 210pp. $45.00. Includes references to Doyle. "...Consciously ignoring the disciplinary identities of science and literature, Otis analyses the work of several nineteenth-century 'physician-authors' (S. Weir Mitchell, Santiago Ramón y Cajal, Arthur Conan Doyle, and Arthur Schnitzler), as well as the work of the pathologist and cell theorist Rudolf Virchow, the bacteriologist Robert Koch and the novelist Thomas Mann. 'Studying these authors' work in parallel, simply as writing, one can learn more about what identity meant during these years than one can by studying the works of bacteriologists or novelists alone (3).'. . . In comparing the work of nineteenth-century physician-authors and looking for literary representations of cell and germ theory as manifestations of imperialistic anxieties, she tends to overlook the diachronic history of scientific, political, and philosophical notions of identity, as well as the specific cultural and historical context of each of her subjects. Little is said, for example, about the different contexts of a nineteenth-century American protestant (Mitchell), a Catholic supporter of the British empire (Doyle), an assimilated Jew in fin-de-siècle Vienna (Schnitzler), and a Protestant representative of Wilhelminian Germany (Mann)...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5322. Neubauer, John. "Membranes: Metaphors of Invasion in Nineteenth-Century Literature, Science, and Politics (review)." Comparative Literature Studies 40, no. 3 (2003): 334-337.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Membranes: Metaphors of Invasion in Nineteenth-Century Literature, Science, and Politics. By Laura Otis. Baltimore: The Johns Hopkins University Press, 1999. x + 210 pp. $45.00. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes.

5323. Rachman, Stephen. "Membranes: Metaphors of Invasion in Nineteenth-Century Literature, Science, and Politics (review)." Perspectives in Biology and Medicine 44, no. 3 (2001): 446-449.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Membranes: Metaphors of Invasion in Nineteenth-Century Literature, Science, and Politics. By Laura Otis. Baltimore: Johns Hopkins Univ. Press, 1999. Pp. x + 210. $45. Contains multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.

5324. Wiltse, Ed. "Membranes: Metaphors of Invasion in Nineteenth-Century Literature, Science, and Politics (review)." Victorian Studies 43, no. 2 (2001): 328-330.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Membranes: Metaphors of Invasion in Nineteenth-Century Literature, Science, and Politics, by Laura Otis; pp. x + 210. Baltimore, MD and London: Johns Hopkins University Press, 1999, $45.00, GBP35.00. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. "...While Mitchell and Cajal are better known today for their medical than their literary careers, Doyle is largely forgotten as a physician--in part, perhaps, because Doyle himself seemed to forget about medicine for long periods once the Sherlock Holmes stories took off. One exception, on which Otis rightly focuses, occurred during the Boer War, when Doyle, at the age of forty-one and over the objections of practically everyone, volunteered and took command of a field hospital. Otis's reading of Holmes as 'imperial leukocyte' against the backdrop of Doyle's experience in Africa, particularly her connection between Boer guerilla tactics (the cover and concealment, the adoption of enemy strategies) and Holmes's infamous "method," is original and insightful. However, her analysis of the many crimes and criminals that move from the imperial periphery to the metropolis, there to be expunged by Holmes, retraces ground covered by Jon Thompson (Fiction, Crime and Empire: Clues to Modernity and Postmodernism [1993]) and Ronald R. Thomas (Victorian Literature and Culture [1991], and ELH [Fall 1994]), and her subsequent discussion of counterfeiting and the instabilities of bourgeois identity might have been enriched by consulting Audrey Jaffe's related analysis of 'The Man with the Twisted Lip' (Representations [Summer 1990])...."

13 PASSING REFERENCES -- BOTH DOYLE AND HOLMES -- PHILOSOPHICAL ASPECTS (9)

5325. Bittner, Thomas. "Consciousness: Essays from a Higher-order Perspective - By Peter Carruthers." Philosophical Books 48, no. 1 (2007): 84-86.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Consciousness: Essays From a Higher-Order Perspective," by Peter Carruthers. Includes passing references to Doyle and Holmes. "...In what sense can we say that non-being has a determinate structure? Priest's answer seems to be that, insofar as nonexistent objects can be characterized in distinct ways, they have distinctive qualities. But, of course, this is just to say that they have some qualities solely by virtue of being objects of thought. Where, in the end, does Sherlock Holmes use cocaine: in his rooms at 221b Baker Street, on p. 227 of my edition of Conan Doyle's stories, or in my representations of him? Certainly he is described as doing so on the page and he does so in my mind; and, if Holmes had existed, also at Baker Street. Now, according to Priest, 'non-existent objects do not have some inferior mode of being, such as 'subsistence'. They have no mode of being whatever...."

5326. Blatner, Adam. "Perspectives on Wisdom-ing." ReVision 28, no. 1 (2005): 29-33.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses components of wisdom. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Holmes. "...what needs to be known as basic knowledge in one field is fairly irrelevant in another. For example, in one of the Conan Doyle stories about Sherlock Holmes, this legendary detective expressed his indifference as to whether the sun went around the earth or vice versa, as it did not really have an impact on his interest in solving crimes...."

5327. Brogaard, Berit O. "Span operators." Analysis 67, no. 1 (2007): 72-79.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses the use of span operators in tensed statements. Span operators, a type of tense operator, are discussed in regards to presentism and eternalism. David Lewis has claimed that span operators cause problems for presentists. This author believes that presentist can use span operators to address ambiguities in sentences with embedded contradictions. Includes passing references to Doyle and Holmes (p. 75). "...However, the standard modal operators do not exhaust the realm of intensional operators to which the span operators could be likened. Story prefixes, such as according to the Conan Doyle stories, are hyperintensional: the intension of 'according to the Conan Doyle stories, Sherlock Holmes lives on Baker Street' is not a function of the intension of 'Sherlock Holmes lives on Baker Street'. The former expresses a (complete) proposition, the latter does not. The presentist who likens her span operators to story prefixes can thus wholeheartedly buy into their hyperintensionality...."

5328. ———. "Two Modal-isms: Fictionalism and Ersatzism." Philosophical Perspectives 20, no. 1 (2006): 77-94.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article offers information on two modalisms, which are fictionalism and ersatzism. Ersatzism or ersatz modal realism is a bundle of views which have in common the fact that they deny that there is plurality of concrete worlds. Fictionalism is a collection of views denying that there is a plurality of concrete worlds. Charges against the modalisms are discussed. Includes passing references to Doyle and Holmes. "...Talk of merely possible worlds and their inhabitants is to be treated on a par with talk of fictional objects, such as Sherlock Holmes. Both kinds of talk are literally untrue but true according to a certain fiction. For example, it is literally false, but true in the Conan Doyle stories, that there is a brilliant detective at 221b Baker Street....Fictionalism, as Gideon Rosen originally formulated it, maintains that modal claims can be explicated in terms of talk of possible worlds. But rather than taking possible world talk at face value, fictionalists treat it on a par with talk of fictional objects, such as Sherlock Holmes. Both kinds of talk are untrue but true according to a certain fiction. For example, it is literally false, but true in the Conan Doyle stories, that there is a brilliant detective at 221b Baker Street...."

5329. Coulson, Seana. "Constructing Meaning." Metaphor & Symbol 21, no. 4 (2006): 245-266.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This article reviews cognitive neuroscience research on visual and language processing to suggest an analogy between the neural interpolation mechanisms in perceptual processing and the constructive processes that underlie meaning construction in language." Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. "...Similarly, Sinha (2005) argued that real world knowledge is an important prerequisite for understanding fictional discourse such as Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes stories. Quoting an excerpt in which Holmes asks Watson to bring his service revolver along on an expedition, Sinha noted that a proper understanding of this fictional discourse relies on the reader's knowing that it was quite common in 19th century England for retired military officers, such as Watson, to retain their guns for use in civilian life. Readers are not troubled by the interleaving of fact and fiction in stories about Sherlock Holmes. On the contrary, this forms an important component of their aesthetic appeal....In the case of detective stories, one blends fictional characters such as Watson and Holmes from the story space with information in the 19th century England space...."

5330. Cross, Charles B. "Max Black on the identity of indiscernibles." Philosophical Quarterly 45, no. 180 (1995): 350.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the opinion of Max Black on the 'Principle of the Identity of Indiscernibles.' Contains multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.

5331. Look, Brandon C. "Towards Non-Being: The Logic and Metaphysics of Intentionality - By Graham Priest." Philosophical Books 48, no. 1 (2007): 83-84.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Towards Non-Being: The Logic and Metaphysics of Intentionality," by Graham Priest. Includes passing references to Doyle and Holmes. "...In what sense can we say that non-being has a determinate structure? Priest's answer seems to be that, insofar as nonexistent objects can be characterized in distinct ways, they have distinctive qualities. But, of course, this is just to say that they have some qualities solely by virtue of being objects of thought. Where, in the end, does Sherlock Holmes use cocaine: in his rooms at 221b Baker Street, on p. 227 of my edition of Conan Doyle's stories, or in my representations of him? Certainly he is described as doing so on the page and he does so in my mind; and, if Holmes had existed, also at Baker Street. Now, according to Priest, 'non-existent objects do not have some inferior mode of being, such as 'subsistence'. They have no mode of being whatever...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5332. Mart, J. J. C., and J. J. C. Smart. "A form of metaphysical realism." Philosophical Quarterly 45, no. 180 (1995): 301.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on the description of 'metaphysical realism,' given by Hilary Putnam. Putnam's contrast with internal realism; Discussion on Putnam's book, Renewing Philosophy. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Conan Doyle, if he had been conversant with logical notation, could have said that '( $\exists x$ ) x -- Sherlock Holmes' was part of a pretence history of goings-on in London in the late nineteenth century...."

5333. Zalta, Edward N. "Deriving and Validating Kripkean Claims Using the Theory of Abstract Objects." Nous 40, no. 4 (2006): 591-622.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article examines the hypotheses of Saul Kripke. Kripke presented ideas on the topics of the metaphysical and semantic axioms. Kripke often stated that his positions could probably be construed as ideas that are part of a larger theory. The author states that Kripke's hypotheses can be explained by the theory of "abstract objects" or "object theory." Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.

13 PASSING REFERENCES -- BOTH DOYLE AND HOLMES -- PLAYS (1)

5334. Berkove, Lawrence I. "The Psychoscope: Frontier realism." Atq 11, no. 1 (1997): 7.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Offers insights into 'The Psychoscope,' a play composed by Joseph Thompson Goodman and Rollin Mallory Dragett and produced in Virginia City, Nevada. Includes reference to Doyle and Holmes. "In its use of detective, science fiction, and psychological motifs, as well as of realism, The Psychoscope was clearly in the forefront of American literary trends, anticipating by a decade or more their popularization. Written in 1871, the play stands between Poe, who might be said to have invented the ratiocinative detective story in the 1840s, and Arthur Conan Doyle, who greatly popularized it beginning with the publication of 'A Study in Scarlet' (1887). Captain McNabb in this play is somewhere between the kind of central character that C. Auguste Dupin and Sherlock Holmes are in the stories of Poe and Doyle, and the stock policeman who appears in most previous fiction and drama...."

13 PASSING REFERENCES -- BOTH DOYLE AND HOLMES -- PSYCHOLOGY (2)

5335. Krull, Douglas S., and Craig A. Anderson. "The Process of Explanation." Current Directions in Psychological Science 6, no. 1 (1997): 1-5.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The explanation process is initiated when an event occurs. The event may be an unexpected personal failure or success. It may be the headline of a newspaper, the peculiar behavior of a pet, or a piece of significant evidence in a trial. Before an event can be explained, however, it must first be noticed. Many factors influence whether a person will notice an event. Event features such as loudness and brightness are important. In addition, the importance or self-relevance of the event to the perceiver will influence its noticeability." Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "Many factors influence whether a person will notice an event...Characteristics of the person also play a role. Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes trained himself to notice details (or their absence) that other perceivers would overlook...."

5336. Manderson, Desmond. "Possessed." Cultural Studies 19, no. 1 (2005): 35-62.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "When our friends and family behave irrationally, indulging in fears and behaviours that even they agree are dysfunctional, eventually we stop reasoning with them and send them to an analyst instead. It is their irrational impulses that need to be understood if they are to change. After 50 years of prohibition, we know that banning heroin has not worked. Yet, still we persist. The question is why. It is time to psychoanalyse our drug policies, searching for the irrational fears and anxieties that lie at its heart. We find a surprisingly helpful parallel in another series of laws from long ago: the Witchcraft Laws of the sixteenth century. Entwining the two stories together, this essay argues that our drug laws are not intended to get rid of drugs, any more than the Inquisition wanted to ban the devil. The crime of possession is the sin of being possessed." [Abstract from author] Includes reference to Doyle. "What had previously been a question of science or habit (Freud 1953/1963, or Conan Doyle 1887$/1905/1987; and see especially Musto 1986) or of desire or shame (De Quincey 1822/1961) became reconceived as criminal...." Notes list two related works: Conan Doyle, A. (1887$/1905/1987) The Annotated Sherlock Holmes, CN Potter, New York; Musto, D. (1986) 'A study in cocaine: Sherlock Holmes and Sigmund Freud', JAMA, vol. 204, pp. 125$/130.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

13 PASSING REFERENCES -- BOTH DOYLE AND HOLMES -- QUOTATION (2)

5337. "Afterword(s): The Great Variety of Readers." Critical Survey 14, no. 1 (2002): 111.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Offers a perspective on the history of literacy in early modern England. Discussion on the use of plural nouns in literature; Characteristics of literacies; Reason behind the spread of literacy during the period. Opening quote at head of article: "You know my method. It is founded upon observation of trifles." (Sir Arthur Conan Doyle) 5338. "Selected Books." Southern medical journal 94, no. 6 (2001): 588.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Enumerates several books on osteoporosis, the list ending with an interesting quote: "I have no data yet. It is a capital mistake to theorize before one has data. Insensibly, one begins to twist facts to suit theories, instead of theories to suit facts." Arthur Conan Doyle, A Scandal in Bohemia, 1891.

13 PASSING REFERENCES -- BOTH DOYLE AND HOLMES -- RATIONAL METHODOLOGY (16)

5339. Balaban, Alexandru T. "Mathematical Chemistry: (3,g)-Cages with Girth g, Topological Indices, and Other Graph-Theoretical Problems." Fundamenta Informaticae 64, no. 1/4 (2005): 1-16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This essay contains personal views about mathematical chemistry -- mainly with nonnumerical and non-quantumflavor, including a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "Mathematical Chemistry (or the Sherlock Holmes Approach to Chemistry). Sir Arthur Conan Doyle created the well-known character of Sherlock Holmes, whose method consisted in the following principle that he stated repeatedly: 'when you have eliminated the impossible, whatever remains, no matter how improbably, must contain the truth.' This principle was applied in all the above graph-theoretical approaches to chemical problems."
5340. Balaguer, Mark. "Realistic Rationalism [1998]: Can We Know That Platonism is True?" Philosophical Forum 34, no. 3/4 (2003): 459-476.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Book reviewed: Jerrold J. Katz, Realistic Rationalism, including references to Doyle and Holmes.
5341. Blake, Anthony. "Helping young children to see what is relevant and why: supporting cognitive change in earth science using analogy." International Journal of Science Education 26, no. 15 (2004): 1855-1873.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This experimental study explores how 60 primary-age children's (9-11 years old) understanding of rocks was effected by instruction that used the conceptual structure of the rock cycle together with the analogy of aluminium can recycling. Includes opening quote and passing reference to Holmes. "'Not invisible, but unnoticed, Watson. You did not know where to look, and so you missed all that was important.' (A. Conan Doyle, A Case of Identity) Sherlock Holmes' gentle rebuke of Watson reminds us that children's progress towards understanding scientific concepts involves teachers directing their students' attention towards what is significant in a particular domain of knowledge..."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5342. Fetter, Bruce. "History and Health Science: Medical Advances across the Disciplines." Journal of Interdisciplinary History 32, no. 3 (2001): 423-442.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...McKeown took his guiding principle from Arthur Conan Doyle, as enunciated by his fictional character Sherlock Holmes, 'When we have eliminated the impossible whatever remains, however improbable, must be the truth.' This kind of approach, which does not depend on the verification of a putative cause, tends to raise historians' hackles...."
5343. Fitch, Gregory. "Discussion - On Logical Properties." Philosophical Studies 118, no. 3 (2004): 425-437.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents a discussion about the book "Logical Properties," by Colin McGinn. It is a collection of five essays on the topics of identity, existence, predication, necessity, and truth. Includes multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.
5344. Fletcher, Tom. "Ninth Circuit Expands Admissibility of Scientific Evidence." Ecology Law Quarterly 32, no. 3 (2005): 729-733.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The article discusses the case Clausen v. M/V New Carissa, wherein an admissible differential diagnosis was conducted to establish causation in the death of an oyster crop after an oil spill...." Note 18 includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "Differential diagnosis originally developed in the medical community as a way to identify the cause of a patient's symptoms. More generally, it is a method where one begins with all possible causes of the observed phenomenon. Once all possible cause are identified, the researcher then systematically eliminates the most unlikely causes until only the true cause remains. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle gave a more familiar explanation of differential diagnosis through the detective Sherlock Holmes, 'Once you have eliminated the impossible, whatever remains, however unlikely, must be the truth.'" 5345. Franklin, Allan. "Commentary 02 on Galison 1982." Centaurus 50, no. 1 (2008): 162-165.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents a commentary to the 1982 essay titled "The discovery of the muon and the failed revolution against quantum electrodynamics," by Peter Galison previously published in "Centaurus." Includes passing references to Doyle and Holmes. "...Hacking's strategies were later extended to include: 1) Experimental checks and calibration, in which the experimental apparatus reproduces known phenomena. If the check fails then we have good reason to question the results obtained with that apparatus; 2) Reproducing artifacts that are known in advance to be present; 3) Elimination of plausible sources of error and alternative explanations of the result (the Sherlock Holmes strategy);..." The second footnote reads: "As Holmes remarked to Watson, 'How often have I said to you that when you have eliminated the impossible, whatever remains, however improbable, must be the truth.'" 5346. Friedel, Robert. "Serendipity is no Accident." Kenyon Review 23, no. 2 (2001): 36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the significance of serendipity to modern science. Background on the inclusion of the word in the English language; Forms of serendipity; Role of serendipity in the discovery of the fullerene form of carbon by Harold Kroto of the University of Sussex in Brighton, England. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...What Walpole was referring to, however--the tale of the Princes of Serendip--does not actually describe what we would typically think of as accidental discoveries, but rather the insightful use of deduction--the sort of thing that any reader of the detective stories of Arthur Conan Doyle would recognize in the phrase of Sherlock Holmes, 'It's elementary, my dear Watson.'..."
5347. Gheradi, Silvia. "A Cultural Approach to Disasters." Journal of Contingencies & Crisis Management 6, no. 2 (1998): 80.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights the issues discussed in the book Man-Made Disasters by Barry Turner. Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...First, Turner was intrigued by the rhetoric of detective stories....Writing about the epidemiological model, he mentions a parallel between disasters and detective novels, reminding the reader that Sir Arthur Conan Doyle derived the Holmesian method from that used by the great Edinburgh diagnostician, Dr. Joseph Bell. But, he, himself, was intrigued by a rational model of intelligence-gathering, anticipation and control to explain the failure of foresight: his discussion of order and dis-order, or information, surprise and disaster displays a rhetoric reminiscent of Sherlock Holmes, and a form of analytical rationality which was widespread at the beginning of the century...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5348. Goel, Vinod, Brian Gold, Shitij Kapur, and Sylvain Houle. "Neuroanatomical Correlates of Human Reasoning." Journal of cognitive neuroscience 10, no. 3 (1998): 293-302.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "One of the important questions cognitive theories of reasoning must address is whether logical reasoning is inherently sentential or spatial. A sentential model would exploit nonspatial (linguistic) properties of representations whereas a spatial model would exploit spatial properties of representations. In general terms, the linguistic hypothesis predicts that the language processing regions underwrite human reasoning processes, and the spatial hypothesis suggests that the neural structures for perception and motor control contribute the basic representational building blocks used for high-level logical and linguistic reasoning. We carried out a [[sup 15]O] H[sub 2]O PET imaging study to address this issue...." Introductory section of article contains multiple references to Doyle and Holmes.
5349. Hinz, Helmut. "Equally suspended attention and the logic of abduction." Jahrbuch der Psychoanalyse, no. (1991): 146-175.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Compares Freudian evenly suspended attention and the logic of abduction as ways of approaching the object of psychoanalytic inquiry. Evenly suspended attention and the implicit logic of abduction are attitudes of perception and thinking that, as a regression in the service of the ego, attempt to make this reservoir useful in the psychoanalytic situation. Using excerpts from texts by E. A. Poe on his detective hero Dupin; A. Conan Doyle on Sherlock Holmes; and C. S. Peirce's own abduction-powers experiences, attitudes of perception and forms of conclusion are presented as a literary, philosophical, and psychoanalytic rediscovery of a lost epistemological model. Psychoanalytic contributions are exemplified by 2 clinical vignettes."
5350. Johnson, David W., Roger T. Johnson, and Karl Aldrich Smith. "Academic controversy: enriching college instruction through intellectual conflict." ASHE-ERIC Higher Education Reports 25, no. 3 (1996): 1-123.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Intellectual conflict must become part of the daily life of students in colleges and universities. Although there are theoretical and practical reasons that support intellectual conflict as one of the most important and powerful instructional methods available, college faculty are reluctant to use this method perhaps because of a cultural fear of conflict, a lack of knowledge of procedures, and cultural and pedagogical norms discouraging the use of conflict...." Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Inductive logic is used to establish general principles, deductive logic to apply a general principle to a specific case. Both are used to create a persuasive argument. Inductive reasoning. 'Has anything escaped me?' I asked with some self-importance. 'I trust there is nothing of consequence that I have overlooked?' 'I'm afraid, my dear Watson, that most of your conclusions were erroneous. When I said that you stimulated me I meant, to be frank, that in noting your fallacies I was occasionally guided towards the truth.' (Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, The Hound of the Baskervilles)...."
5351. Kerr, Norbert L. "HARKing: Hypothesizing After the Results are Known." Personality & Social Psychology Review 2, no. 3 (1998): 196.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines the practice of hypothesizing after the results are known (HARKing) in scientific communication. Several forms of HARKing; Reasons why scientists ought not to HARK; Recommendations for deterring the practice of HARKing. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes (p. 201): "This point of view turns Sherlock Holmes's oft-repeated dictum, 'it is a capital mistake to theorize in advance of the facts' (Conan Doyle, 1953, p. 770) on its head, becoming 'it is a capital mistake not to theorize, regardless of the knowledge, understanding, or even existence of the facts.'" 5352. Koellner-Clark, Karen, and Richard D. Lesh. "Whodunit? Exploring Proportional Reasoning Through the Footprint Problem." School Science & Mathematics 103, no. 2 (2003): 92.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Describes a proportional reasoning problem set within a real-life context and a complete analysis of a group discussion of this problem over the course of a 90-minute block. Development of proportional reasoning; Background of the footprint problem; Role of the teacher. Unknown reference to Doyle or Holmes.
5353. O'Meara, Stephen James. "Vanishing acts, part 2." Astronomy 36, no. 8 (2008): 20-21.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents information on the stars Mizar and Alcor which can be seen in the night sky during August of 2008. The two stars are apart of the Big Dipper constellation. During this month, the two stars appear together in such a way that they provide an example of how visual perception works for human beings. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Fans of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes mysteries probably are familiar with the fictional detectives observation techniques. Holmes usually begins by observing a scene, or a person, with 'one of his quick, all-comprehensive glances.' He then zeros in on certain details before scoping back out and making a logical deduction to explain what he has seen. When it comes to separating Alcor from Mizar, the devil is in the details. I've seen some observers, especially beginners, avert their gaze and fail at the task. The solution to that problem is elementary. Like Holmes at a crime scene, you simply have to know how to look before you can see...."

5354. Page, Grier P., Varghese George, Rodney C. Go, Patricia Z. Page, and David B. Allison. "'Are We There Yet?': Deciding When One Has Demonstrated Specific Genetic Causation in Complex Diseases and Quantitative Traits." American Journal of Human Genetics 73, no. 4 (2003): 711.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Although mathematical relationships can be proven by deductive logic, biological relationships can only be inferred from empirical observations. This is a distinct disadvantage for those of us who strive to identify the genes involved in complex diseases and quantitative traits. If causation cannot be proven, however, what does constitute sufficient evidence for causation? The philosopher Karl Popper said, 'Our belief in a hypothesis can have no stronger basis than our repeated unsuccessful critical attempts to refute it'. We believe that to establish causation, as scientists, we must make a serious attempt to refute our own hypotheses and to eliminate all known sources of bias before association becomes causation. In addition, we suggest that investigators must provide sufficient data and evidence of their unsuccessful efforts to find any confounding biases. In this editorial, we discuss what 'causation' means in the context of complex diseases and quantitative traits, and we suggest guidelines for steps that may be taken to address possible confounders of association before polymorphisms may be called 'causative'. [ABSTRACT FROM AUTHOR] Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...We believe that the best method to establish that polymorphisms are causative for complex diseases or quantitative traits is summarized by two quotations. The first is from Sherlock Holmes: '[W]hen you have eliminated all which is impossible, then whatever remains, however improbable, must be the truth'..."

13 PASSING REFERENCES -- BOTH DOYLE AND HOLMES -- RETURN OF HOLMES (8)

5355. "Arts, Briefly; Ms. Rowling Drops a Hint." New York Times, July 10, 2007: 2.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // J. K. Rowling, describing herself as "euphoric" and "devastated" after 17 years of writing seven novels devoted to the adventures and travails of the boy wizard Harry Potter, tantalized millions of fans by hinting that one day she may return to the magical realm of the Hogwarts School of Witchcraft and Wizardry, Reuters reported. In an interview with the BBC, Ms. Rowling said: "I think that Harry's story comes to quite a clear end in Book Seven. But I have always said that I wouldn't say never. I can't say I will never write another book about that world, just because I think, 'What do I know, in 10 years' time I might want to return to it.' But I think it is unlikely." Meanwhile, thousands of fans have signed a petition urging the author to keep the series going after the publication of "Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows" on July 21. Despite speculation that Harry might die in the novel, the Waterstone's book chain, which established the petition, said his demise would be no obstacle to further adventures. "Sir Arthur Conan Doyle famously killed off Sherlock Holmes, yet brought him back after years of demand from his fans and publishers," said Wayne Winstone of Waterstone's. "Couldn't the same happen for Harry Potter?" But at least one person said he was happy that the series is ending. Daniel Radcliffe, who portrays Harry on screen, described himself in an interview in the August issue of Details as "the only kid in the world who doesn't want an eighth Harry Potter book." [Abstract from publisher]

5356. "Come Together, Fall Apart." Texas Monthly 34, no. 4 (2006): 56-56.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Brief interview [on sidebar] with Susan Wittig Albert with question about retiring or killing off her character, China Bayles. "Like Conan Doyle and Sherlock? Push her over the falls because I get tired of her? I don't think so. I'd miss her."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5357. "Exit Music." Kirkus Reviews 76, no. 15 (2008): 26-26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Exit Music," by Ian Rankin. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...One can only hope that as Conan Doyle revived Holmes and John Harvey brought back Charlie Resnick, Rankin will allow Rebus (The Naming of the Dead, 2007, etc.) several encores. Meanwhile, he goes out with panache and his usual ability to see through flummery."
5358. "Susan Wittig Albert." Texas Monthly 34, no. 4 (2006): 56-56.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Brief interview [on sidebar] with Susan Wittig Albert with question about retiring or killing off her character, China Bayles. "Like Conan Doyle and Sherlock? Push her over the falls because I get tired of her? I don't think so. I'd miss her."
5359. Aslami, Zarena. "The Material Interests of the Victorian Novel." Modern Philology 104, no. 3 (2007): 455-459.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article reviews the book "The Material Interests of the Victorian Novel," by Daniel Hack. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. "...One thinks of those nineteenth-century cases in which a character's runaway success became a battleground between author and public, as in readers' complaints when Dickens abandoned the provision of detachable characters like Mr. Pickwick in order to compose more 'artistic,' symbolically integrated works, or in Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's vain attempt to kill off Sherlock Holmes when he threatened to usurp his creator's career. Copyright remains crucial to the possibilities of character migration. Holmes and Watson, for example, are now back on a tight leash since a speculative acquisition of the Conan Doyle literary estate coincided with the extension of UK copyright under European Union law in the late 1990s...."
5360. Bethune, Brian, and Patricia Treble. "But she can't kill Harry! (Cover story)." Maclean's 120, no. 26 (2007): 62-68.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The author reports on the book "Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows," the last book in the "Harry Potter" book series written by author J.K. Rowling which will be released on July 21, 2007. Questions have been raised whether or not a main character will be killed in the book. Ideas on how the series will end are given in the article. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. "...Paranooids range from novelist Stephen King, who pleaded with Rowling not to do a Sherlock Holmes with her character and shove him over the Reichenbach Falls as Arthur Conan Doyle did in 1891 with his over-mighty creation, to 10-year-old Kelly McKibbin of Ottawa. Evidently a close reader of the sacred text--known collectively, like the Holmes stories among their devotees, as 'the canon'--Kelly wants her hero to survive hut tears the worst....Horror master and fifth-grader have each zeroed in on one of the two commonly cited reasons--as opposed to pure, quasi-parental anxiety to fear for Harry. Conan Doyle killed Holmes essentially to keep his wildly popular character under control, because the demand for stories about him kept the author from his historical novels, which Conan Doyle--virtually alone in the world--valued over Holmes. Rowling evidently has control issues, too....'I can completely understand the mentality a fan author who thinks 'Well, I am going to kill them off because that means there can be no nonauthor written sequels, as they call them, so it will end with me.' [Otherwise] after I am dead and gone, they would be able to bring back the character and write a load of...' That, of course, is exactly what happened to Holmes after Conan Doyle's death. Since he entered the public domain, the Sleuth of Baker Street has flourished in a surreal Victorian world where he interacts with contemporaries both real (Sigmund Freud, Jack the Ripper) and fictional (Dr. Jekyll, Mr. Hyde, Dracula). Rowling must know the same will happen to Harry regardless of what she does with him, should the boy wizard's entrenchment in popular consciousness prove enduring...."
5361. Grace, Kevin Michael. "Mary Tyler Moore: TV revolutionary and a feminist icon--but passive aggressive." Alberta Report / Newsmagazine 25, no. 45 (1998): 30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on 'The Mary Tyler Moore Show' being named the greatest television show of all time by the editors of 'Entertainment Weekly.' The probable impact of 1970s nostalgia on why the program was chosen; 'Seinfeld' television show, which was chosen as the number two show, representing the 1990s; How the two programs compared in characters, which were good or evil, and final scenes. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Over the years it became obvious that this lovability factor was infuriating Larry Charles, Seinfeld's co-creator, and George's alter ego. No matter how far he pushed the boundaries of tastelessness, America still clasped Jerry's kids to its bosom. Finally, in an act unparalleled since Conan Doyle killed off Sherlock Holmes, Mr. Charles not only killed off his creations, he tried them, found them guilty, and then consigned them to Hell. This savage moralism went all but unnoticed. Critics and viewers alike shook their heads and asked, 'Hey! What happened to the jokes?'

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5362. Machan, Dyan. "Romancing the buck." Forbes 159, no. 11 (1997): 44-45.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article notes the decision of romance novelist Sandra Brown to stop writing romance novels. The article presents an insight into her desire to write more substantial works of fiction and various reasons cited by her for quitting novel writing. It further offers a look at the risk involved in her decision to quit romance novel writing. The article also offers a look at other novelists who switched genres and have experienced mixed results following their decision. INSETS: ROMANCE THEN AND NOW; Genre switchers. The Genre switcher inset includes a black and white photograph with reference to Doyle and Holmes. "PHOTO (BLACK & WHITE): Sir Arthur Conan Doyle Hated Sherlock Holmes so much he killed him off. A decade later, with no bestsellers, Conan Doyle resurrected his detective, keeping him alive another 20 years."

13 PASSING REFERENCES -- BOTH DOYLE AND HOLMES -- REVIEWS (3)

5363. "Chattering class." New Statesman & Society 7, no. 331 (1994): 37.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents several books compiled by Sebastian Knight. Includes 'Tibor Fischer: The Thought Gang'; Arthur Conan Doyle: 'The Complete Sherlock Holmes'; 'Keith Oatley: The Case of Emily V'.

5364. Colatrella, Carol. "Crossing Disciplines." Configurations 2, no. 2 (1994): 353-363.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews William J. Berg. The Visual Novel: Emile Zola and the Art of His Times. University Park, Penn.: Pennsylvania State University Press, 1992. 308 pp. $39.50. Marie-Christine Leps. Apprehending the Criminal: The Production of Deviance in Nineteenth-Century Discourse. Durham, N.C.: Duke University Press, 1992. 288 pp. $45.00, 15.95. Larwence Rothfield. Vital Signs: Medical Realism in Nineteenth-Century Fiction. Princeton, N.J.: Princeton University Press, 1992. 250 pp. $27.50. Richard Dean Smith. Melville's Complaint: Doctors and Medicine in the Art of Herman Melville. New York: Garland Publishing, 1991. 213 pp. $32.00. Includes multiple references to Doyle and at least one passing reference to Holmes.

5365. Cutrer, Emily Fourmy. "Visualizing Nineteenth-Century American Culture." American Quarterly 51, no. 4 (1999): 895-909.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews A Measure of Perfection: Phrenology and the Fine Arts in America. By Charles Colbert. Chapel Hill: The University of North Carolina Press, 1997. 441 pages. $55.00 (cloth). $24.95 (paper). Inventing the Modern Artist: Art and Culture in Gilded Age America. By Sarah Burns. New Haven: Yale University Press, 1996. 380 pages. $40.00 (cloth). $19.95 (paper). Art and the Higher Life: Painting and Evolutionary Thought in Late Nineteenth-Century America. By Kathleen Pyne. Austin: University of Texas Press, 1996. 416 pages. $50.00. Angels of Art: Women and Art in American Society, 1876-1914. By Bailey Van Hook. University Park: Pennsylvania State University Press, 1996. 280 pages. $65.00 (cloth). $34.95 (paper). Creating Picturesque America: Monument to the Natural and Cultural Landscape. By Sue Rainey. Nashville: Vanderbilt University Press, 1994. 383 pages. $34.95. Frederic Remington and Turn-of-the-Century America. By Alexander Nemerov. New Haven: Yale University Press, 1995. 244 pages. $47.00. Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Most suggestive--as well as most difficult to follow--is the connection that Nemerov ultimately draws among the following: his touchstone image, The Last Stand; a study of hands Remington completed in preparation for the painting; severed human ears in a Sherlock Holmes story, 'The Adventure of the Cardboard Box'; indexical marks, or trails, in several of Remington's paintings of Indians; the development of fingerprinting; Remington's sense of unease about the written word; and turn-of-the-century interest in primitive writing or pictograms, particularly in the fiction of Rudyard Kipling and Arthur Conan Doyle..."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

13 PASSING REFERENCES -- BOTH DOYLE AND HOLMES -- SILVER BLAZE (23)

5366. "O. J. Simpson: America's Newest Crime of the Century." Legal Studies Forum 29, no. 2 (2005): 711-722.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Explains the murder trial of O. J. Simpson. Designation given by journalists to the case; Comparison between O. J. Simpson and Roscoe Arbuckle, the silent-film comedian who faced charges stemming from the death of Virginia Rappe at a San Francisco party in 1921; Trouble with real-life celebrity murder mysteries in the U.S. Reference to Doyle and Holmes. From the article: "One feature of the case for the prosecution has evoked memories of Sherlock Holmes. I refer, of course, to testimony regarding the dog that, unlike its famous predecessor in 'Silver Blaze,' barked in the night time. Dick Thornburgh, former United States Attorney General, was among the first to note that the man exculpated by Arthur Conan Doyle's silent dog was another Simpson, Mr. Fitzroy Simpson."
5367. Alter, Jonathan. "The dog that barked." Newsweek 130, no. 3 (1997): 53.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Opinion. Offers insights into how media companies try to suppress stories that may hurt them. With a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "Arthur Conan Doyle once wrote a famous Sherlock Holmes story about 'the dog that didn't bark.' That's the way it usually is with the suppression of information by media giants."
5368. Bagamery, Anne. "Few Sleuths Cracked Quarter's Market Mysteries." International Herald Tribune, May 6, 2000: 15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An erroneous attribution in a financial report. "In Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's novel 'The Hound of the Baskervilles,' the detective Sherlock Holmes cracked a murder case by deciphering the clue of 'the dog that barked in the night.' [sic] The key to the case was that on the night in question, the dog should have barked [sic], but didn't proving, Sherlock Holmes said, that what is not there is often as important as what is. In the case of the 118 stocks recommended by analysts and money managers in The Money Report during the first quarter, clues to whether they would rise or fall could often be found buried in corporate strategy or the profit-and-loss statements at the back of the annual report and it took some clever sleuthing to find them...."
5369. Davies, Richard T. "The CIA and the Polish Crisis of 1980-1981." Journal of Cold War Studies 6, no. 3 (2004): 120-123.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews Douglas J. MacEachin, U.S. Intelligence and the Confrontation in Poland, 1980-81. University Park: Pennsylvania State University Press, 2002. 256 pp. $45.00. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...In Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's story 'Silver Blaze,' about a case solved by Sherlock Holmes, one of the principal clues is 'the curious incident of the dog in the night-time.' The tip-off was that a watchdog 'did nothing in the night-time' when it could have been expected to bark and alert the staff of a racing stable as a prize racehorse was stolen. This image of a dog that failed to bark resurfaced in 1981 when, as MacEachin writes, 'for more than six weeks prior to the imposition of martial law, the U.S. government had been notably silent on all aspects relating to a possible military crackdown in Poland' (p.211)...."
5370. Davies, Thomas Y. "Recovering the Original Fourth Amendment." Michigan law review 98, no. 3 (1999): 547.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the provisions of the original Fourth Amendment law in the United States. Reference made to Doyle and Holmes in note 105: "People rarely write down what they do not think; hence, unexpected silences in historical statements indicate aspects of contemporary thought without analogs in historical thought. One can learn a good deal about what the Framers did not think about search and seizure by tracing modern concepts backwards in time -- and finding they sometimes disappear from the historical record. Of course, the classic statement on significant silences comes from Sherlock Holmes, who perceived that the theft of a horse must have been an "inside job" because the stable watchdog had not barked the night the horse was taken. See Arthur Conan Doyle, "Silver Blaze," in Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes 1, 27 (1930). Dogs that do not bark in the night are essential guides to the past."
5371. Delfino, Erik. "Looking for the grails." Online 22, no. 1 (1998): 39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on the changes which have taken place in the personal computer (PC) industry. Includes passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "Every year at this time, the folks at

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- ONLINE ask us to take a look at the year just past, and to take a peek forward at what may be in the year to come. As I was pondering this task, I found myself recalling some lines from Conan Doyle: "Is there any other point to which you would wish to draw my attention?" "To the curious incident of the dog in the nighttime." "The dog did nothing in the nighttime." "That was the curious incident," remarked Sherlock Holmes. (from Silver Blaze) At first I couldn't think what this had to do with computers. Then it came to me-what I was really hearing was this: "Think of the curious developments in the PC industry in the last year." "But there haven't been any developments in the PC industry in the last year." "That's what's so curious."
5372. Doherty, Paul, and Pat Murphy. "Glimpsing Titan." Fantasy & Science Fiction 109, no. 4/5 (2005): 195-203.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on Titan, the largest moon of the planet Saturn, discovered in 1655. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...In Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's short story 'Silver Blaze,' Sherlock Holmes comments on the [sic] 'the curious incident of the dog in the night time.' What was curious about the dog's activity was the absence of activity. When a racehorse was stolen, the stable dog never barked. Scientists, like Sherlock Holmes, must always be aware of what isn't there...."
5373. Entin, Jonathan L. "The dog that rarely barks: Why the courts won't resolve the war powers debate." Case Western Reserve Law Review 47, no. 4 (1997): 1305.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Argues that the judiciary does not play a large role in resolving debates over the respective role of Congress and the president in matters of war powers and foreign affairs. Reasons why the judicial role in war powers debate is modest; Procedural and jurisdictional obstacles to litigating over war powers and foreign affairs. The title of the article notes "With apologies to Sherlock Holmes. Cf Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Silver Blaze, in The Complete Sherlock Holmes 335, 349 (1930) ('a dog was kept in the stables, and yet, though someone had been in and had fetched out a horse, he had not barked enough to arouse the two lads in the loft')."
5374. Flecknoe, Mervyn. "Democracy, Citizenship and School Improvement: what can one school tell us?" School Leadership & Management 22, no. 4 (2002): 421.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This article is a report of a low cost case study in a small primary school. The school has instituted several democratic procedures that involve pupils and staff in leadership activities such as reviewing policies and appointing staff." Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Inspectors are not required to look for ways in which a participative democracy has changed the structure or function of the school. What this guidance does not say is as significant Holmes' dog that did not bark in the night (Conan-Doyle 1894)...."
5375. Fletcher, Joseph F., and Boris Sergeyev. "Islam and Intolerance in Central Asia: the Case of Kyrgyzstan." Europe-Asia Studies 54, no. 2 (2002): 251-275.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides information that considers what connections may exist between Islamic religious beliefs and democratic political culture in post-Soviet Central Asia. Includes a passing reference in the text and note to Doyle and Holmes. The text reads: "Perhaps most interesting here are the dogs that didn't bark." The note for this statement, number 28, reads: "The reference is, of course, to Arthur Conan Doyle's famous Sherlock Holmes story, 'Silver Blaze'."
5376. Frank, Richard. "The Dog That Didn't Bark, Imperial Water, I Love L.A., and Other Tales From the California Takings Litigation Front." Ecology Law Quarterly 34, no. 2 (2007): 517-531.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes passing references to Doyle and Holmes. "...In one of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's famous mysteries, Sherlock Holmes takes note of a dog that didn't bark at the scene of the crime, and then correctly infers from that silence the identity of the criminal perpetrator. So, too, an important inference can be drawn, from the relative dearth of Nollan/Dolan-related takings litigation in California in the years following the landmark U.S. Supreme Court decisions in Nollan v. California Coastal Commission and Dolan v. City of Tigard....Just as Sherlock Holmes deduced much from the dog that didn't bark, so perhaps should observers take note of the relative silence when it comes to recent Nollan/Dolan litigation in California...."
5377. Glassman, James K. "1998 was banner year for U.S. air safety." Human Events 55, no. 6 (1999): 22.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the safety record of airlines in the United States in 1998. Includes a

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "Is there any point to which you would wish to draw my attention?" asked Watson. 'To the curious incident of the dog in the night-time' replied Sherlock Holmes. 'But the dog did nothing in the night-time.' 'That was the curious incident.' The curious incident of 1998 was not the impeachment of our priapic President. That was a dog-bites-man story if there ever was one. No, the curious incident was that not a single life was lost in an accident aboard a scheduled U.S. airliner. As in the Arthur Conan Doyle story 'Silver Blaze,' nothing happened. But that 'nothing' was significant--even though the story was covered briefly, if at all, by the press...."

5378. Hall, Katherine H. "Reviewing intuitive decision-making and uncertainty: the implications for medical education." Medical education 36, no. 3 (2002): 216-224.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...A second information bias is illustrated by Arthur Conan Doyle in a conversation between Inspector Gregory and Sherlock Holmes; 'Is there any other point to which you would wish to draw my attention?' 'To the curious incident of the dog in the night-time.' 'The dog did nothing in the night-time.' 'That was the curious incident,' remarked Sherlock Holmes.' Relevant normal findings are difficult for people to take into account...."
5379. Humphries, Drew. "Misconceiving Mothers: Legislators, Prosecutors, and the Politics of Prenatal Drug Exposure (review)." Journal of Health Politics, Policy and Law 25, no. 3 (2000): 595-597.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...In a handful of states, medicine and law enforcement joined forces in an unprecedented effort to charge crack mothers with crimes related to prenatal drug exposure. While several recent books address the sources and consequences of these endeavors, Gomez answers an alternate set of questions: what forces kept the war on drugs at bay and enabled medicine, public health, and social services to 'own' the problem? As Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes found significance in the 'dog that didn't bark,' Gomez draws her insights from the state that did not prosecute...."
5380. Madison, James H. "Civil War Memories and 'Partnership Forgittin',' 1865-1913." Indiana Magazine of History 99, no. 3 (2003): 198-230.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Explores the process of forgetting and remembering as the Hoosiers experienced the Civil War in the half century after 1865. Poem written by Hoosier poet James Whitcomb Riley in 1890; Estimated number of people who died in the Civil War; Civil war stories reminisced by the veterans during formal reunions; Amount of the appropriation fund which was approved by the General Assembly in 1905 to build the Civil War monument in Indianapolis, Indiana; Significance of the Chickamauga, a national military park, to the Hoosier veterans. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes (p. 200). "...History is often about seeing the things that are not there. In Arthur Conan Doyle's story 'Silver Blaze,' Sherlock Holmes solves the mystery by recalling that the dog did not bark in the night. American history is filled with dogs that should be barking but are not...."
5381. Mayston, David J. "Educational attainment and resource use: Mystery or econometric misspecification?" Education Economics 4, no. 2 (1996): 127.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines the relationship between educational attainment and resource use. Determinants of the levels of educational attainment and expenditure per pupil; Patterns of expenditure per pupil; Estimation of educational production function. Includes passing references to Doyle and Holmes. "... the curious incident of the dog in the night-time." "The dog did nothing in the night-time." "That was the curious incident", remarked Sherlock Holmes. (Silver Blaze, Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes, Sir Arthur Conan-Doyle.)...Like Conan-Doyle's dog that did not bark in the night, the apparent insignificance of resources in influencing educational attainment is itself a highly significant curious incident that Sherlock Holmes would relish for further investigation....The mystery of why the dog of resources has been so quiet in the earlier single-equation studies is then explicable in terms other than that the dog of resources is toothless and voiceless. In the elementary terms Sherlock Holmes might have used in his explanation to Dr Watson, the silence of the dog is not due to its being toothless and voiceless. Instead, we submit that the attention of the dog has become distracted by an apparently more tasty preoccupation--its attempt to consume the parrot of economic analysis..."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5382. Nagareda, Richard A. "Reconceiving the Right to Present Witnesses." Michigan law review 97, no. 5 (1999): 1063.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Explores the right to present witnesses in the United States. Explanation on the Sixth Amendment; Discussion on the court's decision in 'United States v. Scheffer'; Affirmative case for reconceiving the right to present witnesses as a right to equal treatment. Note 184 includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "This would not be the first time that silence served as a crucial piece of evidence in the reconstruction of past events. The key datum that enables Sherlock Holmes to unlock the mystery at the heart of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's Silver Blaze consists of the silence of an otherwise fierce dog stationed in a stable. Holmes infers from the dog's silence that the unknown person who made his way into the barn on the night in question must have been someone very familiar to the animal, such that it did not respond by barking. See Arthur Conan Doyle, Silver Blaze, in The Classic Mysteries of Sherlock Holmes 332, 336 (Longmeadow Press 1992) (1892). The absence of any contemporaneous recognition that the Bill of Rights would dramatically reorient then-existing evidence law is, in the present context, the equivalent of the dog that did not bark."
5383. Potter, Michael C. "Blue-on-Blue in the Falklands." U.S. Naval Institute Proceedings 126, no. 10 (2000): 96.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Speculates on the possibility of a friendly fire to explain the missile action against the British ship HMS Penelope on June 13, 1982, on its return trip from the Falklands Conflict. Argentina's denial of responsibility for the missile action; Description of the attack in the book 'The Royal Navy in the Falklands War,' by David Brown; Omission of position of Type 42 guided-missile destroyer, Exeter, from documents. Footnote 32 mentions Holmes: Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, "Silver Blaze" (1892): "Is there any point to which you would wish to draw my attention?" "To the curious incident of the dog in the night-time." "The dog did nothing in the night-time." "That was the curious incident," remarked Sherlock Holmes.
5384. Ramachandran, Vilayanur S., and Diane Rogers-Ramachandran. "The Quirks of Constancy. (Cover story)." Scientific American 18, no. 2 (2008): 44-47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses how optical illusions can reveal how the brain and visual system function. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "Even when we consciously know two lines are the same length, why can't we help seeing them as different? Illusions are anomalies that can reveal clues about the mysterious workings of the brain to neuroscientists in much the same way as the fictional Sherlock Holmes can solve a crime puzzle by homing in on a single out-of-the-ordinary fact. Think of the phrase 'the dog that did not bark' (in Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's short story 'Silver Blaze') or of the missing dumbbell (in Conan Doyle's novel Valley of Fear)....
5385. Sloan, Allan. "A Simple Plan (Part II)." Newsweek 133, no. 4 (1999): 44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses a document from AT&T Corp. that was sent to shareholders. How the document describes a proposed purchase of cable television company, Tele-Communications Inc. (TCI); The tracking stock security that was to be tied to the performance of AT&T's consumer long-distance and wireless businesses; Why AT&T chairman C. Michael Armstrong and TCI chairman John Malone created the security; A problem with putting the concept into reality. Includes passing references to Doyle and Holmes. "In one of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's best-known Sherlock Holmes stories, 'Silver Blaze,' the key element is something that didn't happen. To wit, a dog that didn't bark. Which brings us to a somewhat different piece of literature: a 325-page tome that AT&T has inflicted on its 3.5 million or so shareholders. No one will ever confuse this mass of legalese with one of Sir Arthur's nifty stories. Or, for that matter, with anything that normal people would ever read. But as in 'Silver Blaze,' the most interesting element in this document, which describes AT&T's pending purchase of cable-TV giant Tele-Communications Inc., is something that didn't happen. To wit: a stock that AT&T isn't launching....The deal description, which became public on Jan. 8, showed that owning TCI would have cut AT&T's 1997 per-share earnings by 41 percent, and by 35 percent for the first nine months of 1998. Yet the stock stayed strong. Without having even consummated their deal, let alone showing results, Armstrong and Malone convinced Wall Street that AT&T is a go-go stock and per-share profits don't matter. How did they accomplish this? That, my friends, is a mystery worthy of Sherlock Holmes."
5386. Stone, Ethan G. "Adhering to the Old Line: Uncovering the History and Political Function of the Unrelated Business Income Tax." Emory Law Journal 54, no. 4 (2005): 1475-1556.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This article examines the history of the building pressure during the 1940s to tax charities' business income and finds that the traditional explanations hide an underlying political function. As the charitable exemption became more important with the expansion of the income tax in the 1940s, it attracted new attention from both policymakers and a growing tax-shelter industry. Charities and sympathetic policymakers tried to justify a suddenly important blanket subsidy to charity on the basis of the charities' exclusive dedication to good works. Tax-shelter promoters made the effort more difficult by featuring charities in roles, such as buying and leasing commercial real estate and operating businesses, distinctly incompatible with traditional perceptions of charitable activities. The "unrelated business income tax" (UBIT) prevents this cognitive dissonance. It discourages activities that make charities look uncomfortably uncharitable by taxing them, while simultaneously leaving exempt the "old line" of passive investment and business activities related to an exempt purpose." [Abstract from author] Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes (p. 1503) "In Arthur Conan Doyle's short story, Silver Blaze, Sherlock Holmes solves a mystery, in part, by noticing a watchdog that did not bark when the perpetrator approached in the middle of the night. Holmes deduces from the dog's silence that the crime must have been an inside job. The unfair competition explanation for the UBIT faces a similarly telling clue: the taxpayers who did not bark. Although the UBIT was passed in the name of protecting taxable businesses from unfair competition, it was not passed at the behest of taxable businesses...."

5387. Sunstein, Cass R. "Impeaching the president[a]." University of Pennsylvania Law Review 147, no. 2 (1998): 279.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the legal implications involved in impeaching the president of the United States. Original understanding of the US Congress' impeachment power with reference to the Constitution's text and the founding era; Historical practice in impeaching proceedings; Analysis of the effort to impeach President Bill Clinton. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes in the section entitled "Dogs that Didn't Bark" with a footnote reference(69) to Silver Blaze. "Before deciding that question I had grasped the significance of the silence of the dog, for one true inference invariably suggests others. ... Obviously the midnight visitor was someone whom the dog knew well."
5388. Will, G. F. "The Conan Doyle school of law." Newsweek 118, no. 1 (1991): 70.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Opinion. Criticizes last week's Supreme Court ruling that elected judges are really 'representatives.' Asserts that the ruling declared the 1965 Voting Rights Act applicable to judicial elections. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Scalia said the proper procedure for determining a statute's meaning is to find the ordinary meaning of the language in its context and then decide if there is clear evidence that some other meaning applies. Instead, the Court began not with the statute's language ('representatives') but with a surmise about what the statute means, given what Congress did not say. (Congress did not explicitly say, other than in the use of the term 'representatives,' that judicial elections were not covered.) This, says Scalia, is the Conan Doyle school of statutory construction, named after the Sherlock Holmes story in which the crucial clue is a dog that didn't bark...."

13 PASSING REFERENCES -- BOTH DOYLE AND HOLMES -- SOUTH AFRICA (2)

5389. Jeffcoate, Stephen. "The retrieval of Ladysmith." Lancet 356, no. 9227 (2000): 418.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles Frederick Treves, a consulting surgeon at the London Hospital. Biographical details; His service alongside the Royal Army Medical Corps; His experiences as a surgeon in the Anglo-Boer war; Aftermath of his involvement for his personal and professional life. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. "...The medical consequences of the war were detailed in the Times History of the War in South Africa and in another contemporary account by a medical man turned author, Arthur Conan Doyle (who actually received his knighthood for writing post-war propaganda and not for the creation of his more lasting legacy, Sherlock Holmes)....The Times relied on reports filed by William Burdett-Coutts, an American-born MP, who had investigated the medical services in the Orange Free State (including Bloemfontein where Conan Doyle was serving)...."
5390. Klintworth, Gordon. "Duke University honors Gordon Klintworth." Ophthalmic genetics 24, no. 2 (2003): 67.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an excerpt from the remarks made by physician Gordon K. Klintworth at a Gala celebration in his honor on the occasion of his 70th birthday after 40 years of service, teaching and research at Duke University Medical Center in Durham, North Carolina. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Also, you may want to read The Great Boer War by Arthur Conan Doyle, the creator of Sherlock Holmes. The book will be more meaningful as he describes the siege of Jammersdrift and how the Boers were kept in front of Wepener...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

13 PASSING REFERENCES -- BOTH DOYLE AND HOLMES -- SPIRITUALISM AND FAIRIES
(1)

5391. Hughes, Robert. "Flittering in the Dells." Time 152, no. 21 (1998): 110.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the art exhibition titled 'Victorian Fairy Painting,' at the Frick Art Gallery in New York City, New York. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...They colonized the English stage, floating across it on (hopefully) invisible wires as actor-managers put their casts through ever more ethereal effects of movement and stage lighting; their defiance of gravity was to popular theater what the computer generation of dinosaurs and space oddities is to movies today. Arthur Conan Doyle was the son of a fairy painter, Charles Altamont Doyle, who died mad, but the creator of Sherlock Holmes was so gullible himself that as late as 1917 he defended some fake photos of fairies made by an enterprising pair of teenage English schoolgirls. You'd almost suppose that the national emblem of England was neither the lion nor the unicorn nor even John Bull, but the fairy...."

13 PASSING REFERENCES -- BOTH DOYLE AND HOLMES -- TELEVISION (4)

5392. Alleva, Richard. "Cheaper Than Crack: Keeping us hooked on TV." Commonweal 127, no. 17 (2000): 17.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on the intervention of politicians in the business and labor disputes of television networks in the United States. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...Before 1980, the literary prototype for the typical dramatic or comic TV series was the sort of thing Conan Doyle did with the Sherlock Holmes short story: each episode was a complete experience, and the audience would keep watching if they liked being in the company of Marshal Dillon or Ralph and Alice Kramden...."

5393. Kreitzer, Larry. "The Cultural Veneer of Star Trek." Journal of Popular Culture 30, no. 2 (1996): 1-28.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This article examines some of the ways in which the television program Star Trek demonstrates that it is a purveyor of Western culture, freely using some of the most important literary documents of heritage. The most important sources for this are the works of author William Shakespeare, the Bible and Greco-Roman mythology, although many other literary works, drawn almost exclusively from the English-speaking West are also cited or alluded to within the world of Star Trek. All of these sources have helped to contribute to the impression that Star Trek creates, namely that it has a veneer of cultural refinement and depth. This layer of sophistication serves an important function, for it allows Star Trek to bridge the gap between the modern world and the imaginary 23rd-century in which it is set. Such a reliance upon the fruits of Western literature gives Star Trek an intellectual credibility which makes it more acceptable to the typical Western audience, while at the same time appealing to the popular imagination and understanding of what Western culture embodies. The world of Star Trek stands as a remarkable study of popular culture at its best. There is little doubt that Star Trek has become, in its own right, one of the premiere media-generated myths of Western society." Includes a reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...In Star Trek VI: The Undiscovered Country, there are several allusions to well-known quotes and established works of literature beyond the quotations of Shakespeare (mentioned above). Spock makes an interesting allusion to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's fictional character Sherlock Holmes, whom the Vulcan describes as a distant relation when he says: 'An ancestor of mine maintained that if you eliminate the impossible, whatever remains, however improbable, must be the truth.' The line comes from Doyle's novel The Sign of Four and appears in the film as an expression of Spock's logical approach to solving the question of who has managed to assassinate the Klingon Chancellor...."

5394. McConnell, Frank. "A killer serial." Commonweal 124, no. 13 (1997): 19.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the television program 'Millennium,' on the Fox Network produced by

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Chris Carter. Schedule of the program; Television promotion for the program before the first episode was shown; Reason in forming the Millennium group; What makes Millennium different and vastly better; Impact of the program's idea of the serial killing. Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. "...Forget Poe's 'Murders in the Rue Morgue' of 1841. It was in 1887, in A Study in Scarlet, that Arthur Conan Doyle invented, at the same time, urban dread in the form of the serial killer and Sherlock Holmes, supreme rationalist, as his inevitable adversary. (The next year, 1888, remarkably saw the advent of the patron saint of urban dread, Jack the Ripper.) Carter's Frank Black is an heir of Doyle's Holmes. Not as rational--who at the tail end of this century could be as rational as Holmes?--and not nearly as assured, he is nevertheless committed to maintaining the solidarity of love against the vile forces who both attack him and whose seduction he feels...."

5395. McCormick, Moira. "PolyGram Video breaks 'Wishbone' series." Billboard 108, no. 7 (1996): 82.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on developments in the children's video recordings segment of the video tape industry in the United States as of February 17, 1996. PolyGram Video's release of four volumes of the 'Wishbone' television series; "...In 'The Slobbery Hound,' inspired by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's 'The Hound Of The Baskervilles,' Wishbone imagines himself as Sherlock Holmes, sniffing out the Baskerville family's mysterious curse...."

13 PASSING REFERENCES -- BOTH DOYLE AND HOLMES -- TOBACCO (1)

5396. Hilton, Matthew. "Smoking Gun." History Today 50, no. 5 (2000): 36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines the mystique surrounding tobacco which continues to confound the anti-smoking lobby in the year 2000 in Great Britain. Medical and commercial images of smoking; History of smoking's importance in popular culture and personal identity; Cigarette smoking in films and books. Includes reference to Doyle and multiple references to Holmes. "...Most idiosyncratic of all, however, was Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes, who came to exemplify the new 'philosophy' of smoking. This most singular detective kept his cigars and pipes in the coal scuttle and his tobacco 'in the toe-end of a Persian slipper'. Buying his 'strongest shag tobacco' from a tobacconist named Bradley, he was known to smoke both an 'everyday' briar pipe and an 'old and oily clay pipe', as well as a 'long cherrywood' when in a 'disputatious rather than a meditative mood'. He lit his pipe using a glowing cinder held by a long pair of tongs and would collect 'all the plugs and dottles left from his smokes of the day before' for his pre-breakfast pipe. Such peculiarities of cigar and pipe consumption individualised Holmes and many other smokers from the homogenising tendencies of the 'effeminate' cigarette. Mobilising the virtues of 'manliness' and independent-minded liberal Britishness, these smokers refused the fashionable dictates of the mass market and stamped their mastery and individuality upon the 'majestic leaf'...."

13 PASSING REFERENCES -- BOTH DOYLE AND HOLMES -- WINE(1)

5397. Hailman, John R. "It Doesn't Take a Detective to Choose the Right Wine." The Salt Lake Tribune (Salt Lake City, UT), Dec 1, 1994: F3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "[Holmes] and Watson, as Englishmen, necessarily drank a lot of claret or red Bordeaux, notably in 'The Dying Detective' and 'The Cardboard Box,' although I found no reference to a particular Bordeaux chateau.; In that case you can try any Bordeaux, but based on his other tastes I'd guess Holmes would like something classic, simple and moderately priced from a village like Pauillac, where Lafite and Latour still are located, say a Pontet-Canet.; Dr. [Arthur Conan Doyle] even mentioned the name of Sherlock Holmes' honorable London wine merchant, Mr. Vambery, and a rascally wine salesman named Windebank."

13 PASSING REFERENCES -- DOYLE (658)

5398. "32-year index, part 2: Book reviews." Studies in Short Fiction 32, no. 4 (1995): 623.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an index of book reviews, arranged alphabetically by the name of author, editor, or translator of the book reviewed, published in 'Studies in Short Fiction' from 1963 to 1995. Includes entries for: Cox, Don Richard: Arthur Conan Doyle. (George Monteiro, rev.) 23: 218-19; Doyle, Sir Arthur Conan: Tales of Terror and Mystery. (Howard Lachtman, rev.) 15: 117-19; Paul, Robert S.: What Ever Happened to Sherlock Holmes?: Detective Fiction, Popular Theology, and Society. (A. Nicholas Fargnoli, rev.) 29: 405-06.
5399. "35-Year Index, Part 1: Articles and Notes." Studies in Short Fiction 36, no. 1 (1999): 1-110.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The section presents an index of articles and notes published in the Studies in Short Fiction since 1964. Includes entries under: Hall, Jasmine Yong. "Ordering the Sensational: Sherlock Holmes and the Female Gothic." 28: 295-303; and "hook" reviews under Doyle.
5400. "100 Years." Time 148, no. 1 (1996): 10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a photographic retrospective of the Olympic Games starting with the first successful modern Olympics in Athens, Greece on April 6, 1896. Caption with Doyle reference for 1908 games in London. "The eruption of Mount Vesuvius forced a move from Rome. There was another eruption when Italy's Dorando Pietri finished the marathon first--with the help of officials, one of whom may have been Arthur Conan Doyle."
5401. "About London." New Statesman 129, no. 4481 (2000): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information related to London, England, including a quote from Doyle. "London, that great cesspool into which all the loungers of the Empire are irresistibly drained." in A Study in Scarlet (1887).
5402. "An adventure with books." Reading Today 19, no. 5 (2002): 25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a list of books recommended to school children. Entries under "Eighth Grade" include The Hound of the Baskervilles by Arthur Conan Doyle (Signet).
5403. "Annual Bibliography of Works about Life Writing, 2002 --2003." Biography: An Interdisciplinary Quarterly 26, no. 4 (2003): 625-711.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features books on biography. Includes following reference: Simmons, Diane. "The Curse of Empires Grandiosity and Guilt in the Stories of Arthur Conan Doyle." Psychoanalytic Review 89.4 (2002): 533-56. "Examines Doyle's history of loss and his 'narcissistic dualism' to gain an understanding of the psychic life of the British public during the high point of imperialism."
5404. "Ask the Globe." The Boston Globe, April 19, 1997: B6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An answer to the following reader question: Was the creator of master sleuth Sherlock Holmes a physician?
5405. "Bibliography: Relations of Literature and Science, 1989-1990." Configurations 1, no. 2 (1993): 283-319.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Doyle listed.
5406. "Boers and Britons." Economist 353, no. 8139 (1999): 92-94.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews books about the Anglo-Boer war in light of the October 1999 observation of the centenary of its outbreak. Passing reference to Doyle. 'The Boer War,' by Thomas Pakenham; 'The War Correspondents: The Anglo-Boer War,' by Raymond Sibbald; 'The Boy,' by Pat Hopkins and Heather Dugmore; 'Goodbye Dolly Gray,' by Rayne Kruger; 'The Mafeking Diary,' by Sol T. Plaatje; 'Commando,' by Deneys Reitz; 'Ladysmith,' by Giles Foden.
5407. "Book Reviews: Arts & Humanities." Library Journal 125, no. 15 (2000): 64.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews books relating to arts and humanities, including Visions of Adventure: N.C. Wyeth and the Brandwine Artists. A passing reference to Doyle in the review. "Earlier in the previous century, adventure novels by such writers as Raphael Sabatini, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Robert Louis Stevenson, and James Branch Cabell needed illustrations to describe the action and locales."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5408. "Books in brief." Skeptic 4, no. 3 (1996): 103.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews a number of books including one with a passing reference to Doyle. Martin Gardner. Tile Night Is Large: Collected-Essays, 1938-1995. 1996. St. Martin's Press. 672 pp. $29.95. HB "The problem with reading such prolific authors as Isaac Asimov and Martin Gardner is, given limited time, which of their numerous books do you choose to read to get a good sampling? Asimov's Foundation Series is a must, of course. But in Gardner's case he is so diverse in his interests and talents that it has not been possible to read one work and feel you understand the man and how he thinks--until now. The Night is Large is the definitive Martin Gardner on just about everything in the physical sciences (relativity, quantum mechanics, time, infinity, cosmology, superstrings), the social sciences (Adam Smith, the Laffer Curve, H. G. Wells, cultural relativism, artificial languages), pseudoscience (spiritualism, phrenology, Conan Doyle, Wilhelm Reich, Freud, William James, alien abductions), mathematics, the arts (Coleridge, Lewis Carroll, Oz, Ulysses, Shakespeare), philosophy ('nothing,' 'everything,' free will and determinism, Isaiah Berlin, realism, pragmatism, Popperism), and religion, including why Gardner believes in God."
5409. "Books Received." SEL Studies in English Literature 1500-1900 43, no. 4 (2003): 998-1017.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes reference to Doyle. Wynne, Catherine. The Colonial Conan Doyle: British Imperialism, Irish Nationalism, and the Gothic. Contributions to the Study of World Literature 114. Westport CT and London: Greenwood Press, 2002. Pp. ix + 212. $61.95. ISBN 0-313-32005-5.
5410. "Books Received." SEL Studies in English Literature 1500-1900 41, no. 4 (2001): 880-898.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes reference to Doyle. Barsham, Diana. Arthur Conan Doyle and the Meaning of Masculinity. The Nineteenth Century. Aldershot and Burlington VT: Ashgate, 2000. Pp. viii + 312. $84.95. ISBN 1-85928-264-4.
5411. "Bookshelf." BizEd 7, no. 2 (2008): 70-71.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews several books including "Think Smart, Act Smart," by Jim Nightingale. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...In one sense, this isn't a business book at all. For instance, a chapter on how 'wishful thinking' can derail individuals and organizations includes a long disquisition on author Arthur Conan Doyle's obsession with spiritualism...."
5412. "Bookshelf." Natural History 107, no. 9 (1998): 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on several books on natural history. Includes reference to Doyle. "French paleontologist Taquet, director of Paris's Natural History Museum, recalls his thirty-year career searching for dinosaur skeletons and other fossil treasures, inspired, he tells us, by the fictional adventures of Conan Doyle's Professor Challenger in The Lost World."
5413. "Bookshelf: Suspense then & Now." Scholastic Scope 51, no. 4 (2002): 16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents several classical books and novels. 'And Then There Were None,' by Agatha Christie; 'The Westing Game,' by Ellen Raskin; 'Stories,' by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.
5414. "A Century of Cycling." Saturday Evening Post 280, no. 3 (2008): 12-12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The author reports on the popularity of cycling in 1908 and 2008. Comparisons which have been made between cycling practices of 1908 and 2008 are discussed, including the impact which bicyclists have on commuters. Quotations by celebrities regarding cycling are presented including winner of the Tour de France bicycle race Lance Armstrong, women's rights activist Susan B. Anthony and author Ernest Hemingway. One of the quotes is from Doyle. "'A good cyclist does not need a high road.' -- Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, writer and creator of Sherlock Holmes, 1859-1930."
5415. "Class Transit." People 55, no. 22 (2001): 140.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the efforts of Alexander Waugh to sell short stories by famous authors in vending machines in the London Underground, with reference to Doyle. "Since January the first three of Waugh's Travelman dispensers have discreetly sprouted at the Tube station in London's affluent South Kensington. For a one-pound (about $1.50) coin, riders can purchase the selection of the week, chosen from the works of literary masters such as Arthur Conan Doyle, Muriel Spark, F. Scott Fitzgerald and, naturally, Evelyn Waugh."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5416. "Contributors." Literature and Medicine 24, no. 2 (2006): 332-334.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to Doyle in the note for one of the contributors. "James Krasner is an associate professor of English at the University of New Hampshire. His recent work includes a study of grief and phantom limb pain, published in PMLA, and a discussion of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle as a medical writer, published in Mosaic."
5417. "Contributors." Journal of Narrative Theory 35, no. 1 (2005): 133-134.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to Doyle. "Nils Clausson received his Ph.D. from Dalhousie University and has taught at the University of Regina (Regina, Saskatchewan, Canada) since 1984. He teaches courses on Victorian and modern British literature, popular fiction, literary genres, and literary theory. He has published articles on Benjamin Disraeli, D. H. Lawrence, Edmund Blunden, Seamus Heaney, Susan Glaspell, G. K. Chesterton, Wilfred Owen, Oscar Wilde, and Arthur Conan Doyle. He is currently working on a book on the theory and practice of genre criticism, tentatively entitled "How to Do Things with Genres," of which the present article on The Hound of the Baskervilles will form a chapter."
5418. "Contributors." Victorian Studies 46, no. 2 (2004): 381-385.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to Doyle under one of the contributors. "Robert Fraser is Senior Research Fellow in Literature at the Open University in the United Kingdom. His Victorian publications include The Making of The Golden Bough: The Origins and Growth of an Argument (1990, 2002), Sir James Frazer and the Literary Imagination (1990), Proust and the Victorians (1994), and Victorian Quest Romance: Stevenson, Haggard, Kipling and Conan Doyle (1998)."
5419. "David K.C. Cooper." Lancet 361, no. 9360 (2003): 886.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Interviews British physician David K.C. Cooper. Notes that he is reading an unspecified biography of Doyle.
5420. "Department of Corrections." New Republic 232, no. 2 (2005): 9-9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a correction to the article "CSI: Baker Street," published in the Correspondence section of the December 20, 2004 issue of "The New Republic," which properly cites a reference to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's short story "Silver Blaze."
5421. "Discovering Guyana." Geographical 80, no. 12 (2008): 18-18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article offers information on the Discovering Guyana conference sponsored by the Royal Geographical Society and Institute of British Geographers to be held on December 10, 2008 in London, England. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Guyana is home to some of the most varied landscapes in South America - from lush tropical rainforest in the highlands to spectacular mountainous vistas - including the table-top mountains that inspired Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Lost World...."
5422. "Down but not out. (Cover story)." Economist 335, no. 7909 (1995): 21-23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Looks at the effects of sanctions on Iraq, with a passing reference to Doyle. "But Mr Ekeus, whose sleuthing methods Conan-Doyle would have admired, worries about the past in order to be sure about the future..."
5423. "Dunbar and the Science of Lynching." African American Review 41, no. 2 (2007): 303-311.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Contains two passing references to Doyle.
5424. "English-Language Literatures." Reference & Research Book News 20, no. 3 (2005): 261-269.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents several books on English-language literatures. Includes a brief review of Jill Sharp's Written In Stone that notes "Castles, churches, abbeys, and other sites are presented in alluring color photos accompanied by a lively text describing their literary lives and associations in the works of such writers as Malory, Tennyson, Swinburne, Walter Scott, and Conan Doyle, with quotes from each." (English

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Heritage, 2005) 150p. ISBN 1-85074-929-9

5425. "Framing Rudy and Photography." Journal of Modern Literature 22, no. 2 (1999): 265-290.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes multiple references to Doyle.
5426. "Guns were silenced and it was time to celebrate." The Vancouver Sun, December 24, 1994: D2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The book quotes Tilley's letter, and another by German Lieut. Johannes Niemann of the 133rd Saxon Regiment. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, creator of Sherlock Holmes and a historian of the war, called the Christmas truce 'one human episode amid all the atrocities.'" 5427. "In Brief." Women's Studies 36, no. 4 (2007): 303-307.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The Triumph of the Thriller: How Cops, Crooks, and Cannibals Captured Popular Fiction," by Patrick Anderson, among others and includes a passing reference to Doyle. "Anderson begins The Triumph of the Thriller with a brief history of crime fiction. He touches on the writings on Edgar Allen Poe, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, and Agatha Christie...."
5428. "In Search of Bounty." Geographical 77, no. 11 (2005): 36-37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article focuses on rainforests and rainforest products as of 2005. From the earliest times, the jungle's bounty came in plant form. Some of the earliest voyages of the conquistadors to the Americas had, as a subsidiary aim to the discovery of El Dorado, the penetration of the cinnamon forests. The people of the Amazon were equally assiduous plant collectors. A favourite was the coca plant. It is, of course, the source of cocaine, and today it is probably South America's most profitable crop. The article notes that "Back in Europe, coca only became popular during the 1860s, after German chemist Albert Niemann isolated the alkaloid cocaine and a Corsican entrepreneur called Angelo Mariani added it to wine to make Vin Mariani. The wine was celebrated by everyone from Buffalo Bill to Emile Zola, Queen Victoria to the cardinals of the Vatican and Jules Verne to Arthur Conan Doyle."
5429. "Influences Roger Angell." New York 39, no. 19 (2006): 71-71.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article presents an interview with Roger Angell, author of "Let Me Finish." His favorite authors when he was young were Conan Doyle, Will James, Joseph A. Altsheler, and Raymond L. Ditmars. He thinks that there is no single young writer who has influenced people in recent years; someone will come along and suddenly everyone will shift over and begin writing like that.
5430. "Japanese Build on Holmes Legend." The Guardian (London), July 5, 1996: 9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A Japanese museum has launched a bizarre search for bricks from buildings featured in the adventures of Sherlock Holmes. The World Brick Museum, based in Maizuru, Japan, has targeted New Scotland Yard, Covent Garden, the Royal Albert Hall and St Pancras Station for an exhibition of British building bricks - particularly those from buildings which feature in the novels and short stories of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. The legend of Sherlock Holmes was born when Sir Arthur lived in Portsmouth, where there is concern at the methods that may be used by Japanese tourists to obtain the bricks."
5431. "Jekyll and Hyde: A Literary Forerunner to Freud's Discovery of the Unconscious." Modern Psychoanalysis 30, no. 1 (2005): 92-106.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reference to Doyle. From the article: "Various English writers--the Brontes, Charles Dickens, Thomas DeQuincey, Arthur Conan Doyle, as well as Stevenson--were working through to a literary and cultural understanding of intrapsychic processes that Freud would extrapolate from, develop, refine, and eventually define as the unconscious."
5432. "Leonardo Reviews." Leonardo 38, no. 1 (2005): 67-81.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several books, periodicals, audio compact discs and Web sites. Includes a review of Neurology of the Arts: Painting, Music, Literature, edited by F. Clifford Rose. Imperial College Press, London, U.K., 2004. 452 pp., illus. Trade. ISBN: 1-86094-368-3, with a passing reference to Doyle. "...The section on literature relates to Shakespeare, Dostoyevsky, Conan Doyle, James Joyce and the poetry of one of England's most famous neurologists, Henry Head...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5433. "Let's Practise in Portsmouth." Pulse 65, no. 37 (2005): 77-77.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features the historic naval port in Portsmouth, England. Number of general practitioners in the area; Schools established; Details of various leisure and activities available. Mention made of famous residents, including Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.
5434. "Letters to the Editor." Addiction 95, no. 11 (2000): 1705-1717.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents several editorial letters on alcoholism. Strategies for reducing alcohol-related harm in remote communities in Australia; Risk of injury for alcohol consumption; Evaluation of the driving-under-the-influence risk screening instruments. Includes a reference to Doyle. "SIR--In 'Scandal in Bohemia' Sir Arthur Conan Doyle wrote, 'It is a capital mistake to theorize before one has data' (1892). Morgenstern and Longabaugh's outstanding paper (2000) is likely to stir up a bit of a scandal itself by pointing out that the existing data supporting theoretical mechanisms of action of CBT is, at best, rather thin...."
5435. "Londoner's Diary; Reform Club is reeling from spate of thefts." The Evening Standard (London), January 26, 2006: A15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "It's one for Sherlock Holmes and Watson. The Reform Club on Pall Mall, of which Sherlock Holmes creator Sir Arthur Conan Doyle was a member, has suffered an outbreak of larceny. The most recent issue of the in-house magazine, the Reform Review, carries a letter from the editor, Chris Underwood, warning members of a spate of thefts in the club...."
5436. "The Lost City of Z: The Tale of Deadly Obsession in the Amazon." Kirkus Reviews 76, no. 23 (2008): 1241-1241.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The Lost City of Z: The Tale of Deadly Obsession in the Amazon," by David Grann. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...As New Yorker staff writer and debut author Grann notes, the British explorer Percy Fawcett's exploits in jungles and atop mountains inspired novels such as Arthur Conan Doyle's The Lost World, and his character is the tutelary spirit of the Indiana Jones franchise. Fawcett in turn was nurtured by his associations with fabulists such as Doyle and H. Rider Haggard, whose talisman he bore into the Amazonian rainforest...."
5437. "Lost World Mapped." Geographical 75, no. 2 (2003): 71.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Offers information on a map produced by natural-history filmmaker Adrian Warren for Mount Roraima adventurers. Passing reference to Doyle. "Until it was first climbed in 1884, after almost 50 years of unsuccessful attempts, there was speculation that South America's Mount Roraima was home to prehistoric life - rumours that inspired Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's Lost World."
5438. "The Mammoth Book of Vintage Whodunnits." Kirkus Reviews 74, no. 1 (2006): 18-19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The Mammoth Book of Vintage Whodunnits," edited by Maxim Jakubowski. The review comments that "Readers will look in vain for Agatha Christie, Ellery Queen and John Dickson Carr, though Jakubowski includes a negligible locked-room puzzle by E. Charles Vivian, superfluous stories from Poe and Conan Doyle and unclassifiable curios by M.P. Shiel and C. Daly King." The Doyle story is "The Adventure of the Three Students."
5439. "Mark Moffet." Natural History 109, no. 10 (2000): 102.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an article on nature photography, with a passing reference to Doyle. "...being among the first to visit one of Venezuela's flat-topped tepui mountains (subject of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's Lost World)..."
5440. "Mark Your Calendar." Writing 28, no. 6 (2006): 5-5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes Doyle's birthday on May 22, 1895.
5441. "The Medea of Kew Gardens Hills." Legal Studies Forum 29, no. 2 (2005): 659-674.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the mysterious disappearance and homicide of Eddie Jr., and his four-year-old sister Alice also known as Missy, children of Eddie and Alice Crimmins. Description of both parents;

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Highlights of the criminal investigation on the case; Information on the prosecution case of Alice Crimmins. Reference to Doyle. From the article: "The court was influenced by the affiant's seven year delay in coming forward, and commented scathingly that the affidavit 'offers an imaginative alternative hypothetical explanation [of the crime], worthy of concoction by an A. Conan Doyle."

5442. "Modern Fiction Studies Biannual Index: Volumes 48 (2002) and 49 (2003)." MFS Modern Fiction Studies 50, no. 2 (2004): 542-549.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to Doyle. Huh, Jinny. "Whispers of Norbury: Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and the Modernist Crisis of Racial (Un)Detection." 49.3: 550-80.
5443. "The Monitor's Annual Best of Books / 2008." Christian Science Monitor, 12/02, 2008: 13-15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes one entry with a passing reference to Doyle: The Black Tower by Louis Bayard. (William Morrow, 368 pp., $24.95). "In this thriller, which reads like Alexandre Dumas with a little Conan Doyle mixed in, Louis Bayard borrows from Edgar Allen Poe, appropriating the real-life inspiration for Poe's very first detective story, protagonist Eugene Francois Vidocq, a criminal who became one of the first private detectives and the first director of France's Sûreté Nationale. " 5444. "New Scholarly Books." Chronicle of Higher Education 54, no. 21 (2008): B24-B25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article lists scholarly books released in January 2008 including Oscar Wilde as a Character in Victorian Fiction, by Angela Kingston (Palgrave Macmillan; 304 pages; $79.95). Examines Wilde-like characters in works by Joseph Conrad, Arthur Conan Doyle, Henry James, Bram Stoker, and other famous and lesser-known contemporaries.
5445. "New Scholarly Books." Chronicle of Higher Education 54, no. 31 (2008): B19-B21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews several books including "Anxieties of Empire and the Fiction of Intrigue," by Yumna Siddiqi (Columbia University Press; 290 pages; $45). "Analyzes works of detection, policing, and espionage by two British writers of the colonial era, Arthur Conan Doyle and John Buchan, and South Asian writers of recent decades, including Amitav Ghosh and Arundhati Roy."
5446. "Notes on contributors." Nineteenth-Century Contexts 26, no. 3 (2004): 305-306.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides information on contributors to the September 2004 issue of the journal "Nineteenth-Century Contexts." Passing reference in notes on contributors. "Joseph A. Kestner is the McFarlin Professor of English at the University of Tulsa, where he specializes in nineteenth-century British literature and art. His books include Masculinities in Victorian Painting (1995), Sherlock's Men: Masculinity, Conan Doyle, and Cultural History (1997), and The Edwardian Detective 1901-1915 (2000)."
5447. "Notes on current books: Fiction." Virginia Quarterly Review 73, no. 3 (1997): 93.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several books about fiction. Includes Doyle reference in Vampires, Wine & Roses, edited by John Richard Stephens. "If a good late-night read is one that haunts you in your dreams, can there be a better book to keep on the night stand than an anthology of vampire tales? In this stylistically diverse yet strangely titled collection (the reference to wine and roses remains a mystery to the end), Stephens serves up a delicious dose of mostly Anglo-French poems and short stories, all of which explore the allure of the vampire. On the Anglo side there is, of course, a passage from Stoker's Dracula, but also some charming ditties from Arthur Conan Doyle, Edith Warton, William Shakespeare, and Woody Allen."
5448. "Notes on current books: General." Virginia Quarterly Review, no. (1997): 2p.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Who in Hell: A Guide to the Whole Damned Bunch,' by Sean Kelly and Rosemary Rogers, with a reference to Doyle. "Part historical reference, part hysterical parody, this articulate little ditty is a witty inventory of every noteworthy soul ever condemned to hell. Arranged alphabetically.... One of the book's charms is its thoroughness; the Ds alone include Don Juan, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, John Dillinger, Jeffrey Dahmer, Salvador Dalf, and Walt Disney."
5449. "Notes on current books: Literary studies." Virginia Quarterly Review, no. (1997): 1/9p.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Fictions of Loss in the Victorian Fin de Siecle,' by Stephen

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Arata, with a reference to Doyle. "...Focusing in a series of core studies on R. L. Stevenson, Oscar Wilde, Brain Stoker, Conan Doyle, and Rudyard Kipling, Arata deftly analyzes the "degeneration" of literature and "decline" of imperialism...."

5450. "One-trick ponies: Professional, personal success hinges on balancing strengths, weaknesses." Ophthalmology Times 33, no. 9 (2008): 4-4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...There are a few people I know who, whatever it is they do, do it extremely well....The key word, however, is 'few.' With some people, everything they do is done extremely well. But with most people, there are one or two things they do incredibly well, and the rest is about average. Others--the one-trick ponies--are great in one or two things, and terrible at many others. History gives us some striking examples....The famous English ophthalmologists Arthur Gonan Doyle (creator of Sherlock Holmes) and Thomas Young (established the wave theory of light, proved accommodation resided in the lens) were unable to build successful ophthalmology practices...."
5451. "The petrodollar puzzle." Economist 383, no. 8541 (2007): 86-86.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reports on the question of where the member Arab states of the Gulf Cooperation Council (Bahrain, Kuwait, Oman, Qatar, the United Arab Emirates, and Saudi Arabia) invest their vast surplus of oil wealth. Research from international banking groups is presented showing that most petrodollars probably end up invested in the U.S., then Europe, then the Middle East and Asia. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "There is no crime involved, but the mystery of the petrodollar billions is worthy of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle...."
5452. "Pocket-Sized Paradise." Geographical 75, no. 4 (2003): 96.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Describes the ecotourism industry of Ecuador as of April 2003. Passing reference to Doyle. "Discover Conan Doyle's Lost World in Venezuela..."
5453. "Preface." Legal Studies Forum 29, no. 2 (2005): 591-596.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Introduces a series of articles which deals with crime. Reference to Doyle. From the Preface: "The noble tradition of the writer in combat for justice has embraced the crusades of Emile Zola and Arthur Conan Doyle, and in our own times the campaign of Arthur Miller to vindicate Peter Reilly."
5454. "Quiz: A question of medicine and sport." Lancet 366, no. (2005): S66-S67.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article offers a quiz about sports medicine. Includes the question "Which doctor became famous as the creator of perhaps the best known of all fictional detectives, and still found time to play in goal for Portsmouth Football Club?"
5455. "Recent Work in Critical Theory: Feminist and Gender Studies." Style 34, no. 4 (2000): 598.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides information on several books on feminist and gender studies. Includes Paula M. Krebs' Gender, Race, and the Writing of Empire (Cambridge University Press, 1999). "Through the writings of Arthur Conan Doyle, Olive Schreiner, H. Rider Haggard, and Rudyard Kipling, Krebs addresses the Boer War of 1899-1902 and the struggles to maintain an imperialist hegemony in a twentieth-century world."
5456. "Resources for the classroom." Curriculum Review 39, no. 9 (2000): 12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Offers information on teaching and educational resources. Includes mention of both Doyle and Holmes in notice of Arthur Conan Doyle: Beyond Baker Street. "Whenever there was excitement or danger, wherever important events were taking place, wherever he felt he could be useful, Arthur Conan Doyle (1859-1930) could be found near the front lines, enthusiastically doing twice as much work as anyone else, having a wonderful time. And helping to lift everyone else's spirits. Nevertheless, whether he was harpooning whales in the Arctic, competing with German officers in a road race, introducing skis to the Alps, stitching wounds on the front lines, or fighting to save a wrongly condemned man from the gallows, in the eyes of the public, he was always the creator of Sherlock Holmes, and the public never let him forget it. But as readers of Arthur Conan Doyle: Beyond Baker Street will learn, the Holmes tales were only a tiny part of the author's literary output and something he never took very seriously. This first biography of the man written for young adults takes a seriously engaging look at Doyle." (Oxford University Press)

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5457. "Rudyard Kipling unburdened." New Criterion 26, no. 8 (2008): 22-26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Kipling was pals with H. Rider Haggard. Arthur Conan Doyle came to visit and give Kipling a golf lesson when he was ensconced with his American wife in Bratdeboro, Vermont, in the early 1890s. But by and large, he consorted with politicians, generals, and magnates...."
5458. "The September Society." Publishers Weekly 255, no. 23 (2008): 34-34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The September Society," by Charles Finch. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "As in Conan Doyle's The Sign of Four, a crime committed in India has consequences in England years later in Finch's less than successful second Victorian whodunit to feature amateur detective Charles Lenox (after 2007's A Beautiful Blue Death)...."
5459. "Slumming with T.S. Eliot." Wilson Quarterly 19, no. 3 (1995): 145.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on the article 'T.S. Eliot and the Cultural Divide' by David Chinitz in the March 1995 issue of 'PMLA' periodical. Includes Doyle reference. "One of Eliot's lasting enthusiasms," Chinitz writes, "was for detective fiction, from Arthur Conan Doyle to Georges Simenon and Raymond Chandler."
5460. "Sparks fly in a lost world." Economist 360, no. 8235 (2001): 27-27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the construction of power lines in Venezuela, with a passing reference to Doyle. "The ugly steel pylons march across what was virgin rainforest; they mar the landscape of the Gran Sabana region, a wilderness so geologically ancient and remote that it inspired Arthur Conan Doyle's dinosaur fantasy, 'The Lost World.'" 5461. "Speakers' Corner." British Heritage 24, no. 7 (2003): 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents letters to the editor published in December 2003 issue of the journal "British Heritage." In some aspects, the few particulars mentioned above do indeed seem to describe Craigmillar Castle, located just south-east of central Edinburgh, Scotland. Reference to Doyle and Holmes. "Memories can be imprecise, and perhaps the name that Ms Murray recalls from her days in the service was not that of the building, but of the local residential development of Cragmillar that took its name from the castle. The neighborhood dates from the 1920s and it could be that a local boarding school was indeed commandeered, as were so many public buildings, for use by the military. In fact, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the creator of the Sherlock Holmes stories, attended a boarding school in the general vicinity and the Craigmillar Park Association is currently engaged in efforts to help save from demolition the nearby house in which he also lived."
5462. "Special Gifts." People 64, no. 23 (2005): 76.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article recommends several one-of-a-kind gifts to give for the holidays. Books that are mentioned include "The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes: The Novels," by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, and "The Complete Calvin & Hobbes," by Bill Watterson.
5463. "Thrillers in the Canon: Diemert on Graham Greene and Modernism." Papers on Language & Literature 34, no. 4 (1998): 437.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Graham Greene's Thrillers and the 1930s,' by Brian Diemert, with two passing references to Doyle.
5464. "Twentieth Century Literature's Andrew J. Kappel Prize in Literary Criticism, 1997." Twentieth Century Literature 43, no. 2 (1997): 123.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the selection of the literary work 'Miniaturization and Anticlimax in Evelyn Waugh's 'Sword of Honour,' by Steven Trout as 'Twentieth Century Literature' journal's recipient of the 1997 Andrew J. Kappel Prize in Literary Criticism. Assessment by judge William Pritchard. Includes Doyle reference. "The essay usefully relates Waugh's novel to its "imperialist" ancestors in Gunga Din, G. A. Henty,

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Conan Doyle, and Kipling..."

5465. "The unsuccessful ophthalmologist." Ophthalmology Times 33, no. 4 (2008): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A brief article on technology that may be replacing observation and deduction in treating patients. Mention made of both Holmes and Doyle (and his career as an ophthalmologist).
5466. "Victorian Studies: Index to Volume 44 (2001-2002)." Victorian Studies 44, no. 4 (2003): 743-753.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes two references to Doyle. Sussman, Herbert. Review: Barsharn, Arthur Conan Doyle and the Meaning of Masculinity; Barsharn, Diana, Arthur Conan Doyle and the Meaning of Masculinity, 536-39.
5467. "Victorian Studies: Index to Volume 46 (2003-2004)." Victorian Studies 46, no. 4 (2005): 723-731.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Two references to Doyle. Valente, Joseph. Review: Wynne, The Colonial Conan Doyle: British Imperialism, Irish Nationalism and the Gothic, 694-96.; Wynne, Catherine. The Colonial Conan Doyle: British Imperialism, Irish Nationalism and the Gothic, 694-96.
5468. "Vint Cerf on the World Wide Web." Educom Review 31, no. 4 (1996): 42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Interviews Vinton Cerf, senior vice president of data architecture for MCI Engineering. Passing reference to Doyle (in online/electronic form). "I read all of Arthur Conan Doyle."
5469. "The virtues of a Cambridge history." New Criterion 23, no. 9 (2005): 1-3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article presents information on the book "Cambridge History of Twentieth-Century English Literature," edited by Laura Marcus and Peter Nicholls. The book assures that the category of English literature has now become "suspect." If English literature were what this book describes, it should be admitted that English literature never really existed as literature but only as an appendage of politics and sociology. It describes a parallel universe, one that exists alongside, but without ever touching, the real universe of literary and cultural experience. Notes that Doyle did not make it into this "authoritative" history.
5470. "The War for Talent, Part 2." Business Week Online, no. (2002): N.PAG.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an excerpt from the book 'The War for Talent,' by Ed Michaels, Helen Handfield-Jones and Beth Axelrod, which focused on employee recruitment. Includes the following: "There's another good reason to put your best people on recruiting: The people doing the recruiting are setting the standard for talent for the company. The caliber of talent they have in their minds is going to determine how high your organization will fly. As Sir Arthur Conan Doyle said, 'Mediocrity knows nothing higher than itself, but talent instantly recognizes genius.'"
5471. "The War for Talent, Part 2." Business Week Online, no. (2001): N.PAG.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents excerpt from the book 'The War for Talent,' by Ed Michaels, Helen Handfield-Jones and Beth Axelrod, which focused on recruitment. Passing reference to Doyle. "There's another good reason to put your best people on recruiting: The people doing the recruiting are setting the standard for talent for the company. The caliber of talent they have in their minds is going to determine how high your organization will fly. As Sir Arthur Conan Doyle said, 'Mediocrity knows nothing higher than itself, but talent instantly recognizes genius.'"
5472. "The Week." National Review 55, no. 13 (2003): 6-12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article offers news briefs of political issues in the United States as of July 14, 2003. One item concerns J.K. Rowling, with a passing reference to Doyle. "...What she has built is a story of families, fathers and sons; of growing in wisdom and stature; of choosing good over evil. It is also a story of rich imagination and essential simplicity, in the manner of the greatest storytellers-Defoe, Swift, Arthur Conan Doyle...."
5473. "Welcoming Gala celebrates 'Adventures in Books'." Reading Today 22, no. 2 (2004): 24-24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the Welcoming Gala for the 2005 International Reading Association Convention, held on May 2, 2005 at the Henry B. Gonzalez Convention Center in San Antonio, Texas. Passing reference to Doyle: "The brave souls willing to 'undertake' the mystery/horror adventure will be 'buffed' in fun! A haunted house--complete with characters from the dark imaginations of Mary Shelley, Bram Stoker, Stephen King, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, and Edgar Allan Poe--will be frighteningly welcoming to arriving guests."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5474. "We're not making this up." CMAJ: Canadian Medical Association Journal 159, no. 12 (1998): 1451.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents several interesting topics relating to medicine as of December 1998. The possible reason for the death of Lord Carnarvon in 1922 after he entered the 3200-year-old tomb of the Pharaoh Tutankhamen includes a reference to Doyle. "Dr. Sylvain Gandon, a researcher at the Laboratoire d'acologie in Paris, has shown that microscopic spores can become extremely potent and are capable of surviving for long periods outside a living host body. 'The death of Lord Carnarvon could potentially be explained by infection with a highly virulent and very long-lived pathogen,' says Gandon. His findings, which recently appeared in Proceedings of the Royal Society, support Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's conviction that Carnarvon died after breathing germs in Tutankhamen's burial chamber. Doyle, the creator of the Sherlock Holmes mysteries, suggested that spores were deliberately placed there by priests to punish grave robbers."
5475. "Where to Sell Manuscripts." Writer 113, no. 4 (2000): 27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on several periodicals where a writer can sell her manuscript. Passing reference to Doyle under "Mystery and Suspense."
5476. "Who Is Sakamoto Ryoma?". Wilson Quarterly 31, no. 3 (2007): 87-88.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews a survey titled "History's 100 Most Influential People, Hero Edition," by Nippon Television Network on April 1, 2007 at www.japanprobe.com. The author states that the number one position on the survey went to Sakamoto Ryoma, a nineteenth century Japanese samurai warrior. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...There are, however, some eyebrow-raising entries: Walt Disney (40), Audrey Hepburn (46), Freddy Mercury (from the rock group Queen, at 52), and Elvis Presley (70). William Shakespeare--highly regarded in some literary circles--languishes at number 87, well behind Arthur Conan Doyle (69), the creator of Sherlock Holmes..."
5477. "With all due respect." New Criterion 26, no. 9 (2008): 76-80.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Great Victorian Lives, edited by Ian Bmnskill; 704 pages. Times Books. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Great Victorian Lives isn't designed to be used as a textbook, still less as a work of reference. It is a book to browse in--and one in which, once you have started, you are liable to go on browsing for longer than you intended....Arthur Conan Doyle, paying tribute to the prodigious, (and prodigiously bearded) cricketer W. G. Grace, is able to describe what it was like to play with die great man from personal experience...."
5478. "The world of paperbacks." Contemporary Review 272, no. 1587 (1998): 220.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Lists some paperbacks released as of April 1998. Includes a passing reference to Doyle in entry for Edwardian Fiction: An Oxford Companion. Sandra Kemp, Charlotte Mitchell and David Trotter. Oxford University Press. GBP30.00. ISBN 0-19811760-4. "The 'Edwardian period' strictly speaking that between January 1901 and May 1910 - saw the publication of many famous works by Conan Doyle, Barrie, Kipling, Galsworthy, D. H. Lawrence, Henry James and Arnold Bennett...."
5479. "Writers of the Past." World Almanac & Book of Facts, no. (2008): 188-192.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An almanac entry for renowned writers of the past is presented. Includes an entry for Doyle.
5480. "WWI enemies called a Christmas truce in trenches; [Metro Edition]." Cincinnati Post (Ohio), December 24, 1994: 4A.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The book quotes [Oswald Tilley]'s letter, and another by German Lt. Johannes Niemann of the 133rd Saxon Regiment. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, creator of Sherlock Holmes and a historian of the war, called the Christmas truce 'one human episode amid all the atrocities.'..."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5481. Abbott Jr, John B. "The Diving Horse." Writing 30, no. 1 (2007): 12-13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents the author's experience as a school boy. He narrates that he enjoyed reading comic books and books of authors like Daniel Defoe, Washington Irving, Mark Twain and Arthur Conan Doyle. He recalls that at the beginning of a school year, he was assigned to write an essay about summer vacation.
5482. Abel, Allen. "The Death of Death." Maclean's 118, no. 41 (2005): 160-168.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the prediction of the author about the future life of his daughter in the year 2105. Three possible ways for life to progress, including the ability of living forever; Way that brains can be stored into computers; Principles created by Nick Bostrom, director of the Future of Humanity Institute at Oxford University; Thoughts about cryonics and freezing one's head; Questions about whether our children can remember their past lives; Description of the book "Life Before Life--A Scientific Investigation of Children's Memories of Previous Lives," by Jim Tucker. Inset: Freeze Frames. Opens with a quotation from Doyle: "Preoccupations of food, money, pain, etc. are of the body and are gone. Music, the arts, intellectual and spiritual knowledge and progress have increased. The people are clothed, as one would expect. . . . People live in communities, as one would expect if like attracts like, and the male spirit still finds his true mate. These, roughly speaking, are the lines of the life beyond." (Maclean's, February 1918) 5483. Abuk, Christina. "Urbanisation's long shadows: Mariama Bă's So Long A Letter." Journal of Ethnic & Migration Studies 29, no. 4 (2003): 723.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This paper explores the text and context of Miriama Bă's 1979 novel, So Long A Letter, as a view of globalist and localist approaches to migration expressed in the popular cultural form of narrative fiction. Includes reference to Doyle.
5484. Albanese, Andrew. "UVA library's free E-books a success." Library Journal 125, no. 19 (2000): 14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The University of Virginia's (UVA) new e-book program has been a success. Officials at the Electronic Text Center at UVA say that since 1,200 of its 50,000 online texts were released for download in August 2000, there have been over 600,000 downloads of free e-books. According to the director of the center, the validation of the concept of the e-book has been greatly assisted by the popularity of its e-book holdings. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...E-books currently available range from the Bible and all of Shakespeare, to classic authors like Charles Dickens, Lewis Carroll, Robert Frost, Arthur Conan Doyle, Shelley, Charles Darwin, and Jane Austen...."
5485. Alberti, Samuel J. M. M. "Conversazioni and the Experience of Science in Victorian England." Journal of Victorian Culture 8, no. 2 (2003): 208.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the role of social gatherings held by the learned and art societies called, 'conversazione,' on the experience of science during England's Victorian period. Includes reference to Doyle and drawing by Richard Doyle. "In Arthur Donan Doyle's 1891 short story 'The Voice of Science', for example, a conversazione is held in a private residence..."
5486. Alexander, Neal. "Mapping junkspace: Ciaran Carson's urban cartographies." Textual Practice 21, no. 3 (2007): 505-532.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The article discusses the status and function of maps and mapping within the field of cultural theory. It reflects on positions in cultural theory and spatial analysis as a means of examining the ways in which Ciaran Carson's representations of Belfast, Northern Ireland serve to dislocate habitual frameworks for apprehending the city attending to its multiple articulations across time and space." Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...But if Irish -- which is his first language -- flows beneath the surface of Carson's writing in English like an underground river, then his Irish has also taken on the colouring of the latter's more pervasive general influence. In The Star Factory, he relates how his father would cull stories from The Arabian Nights, the Brothers Grimm, Robert Louis Stevenson and Arthur Conan Doyle, then retell them to his children in Irish, which is emphatically designated as 'the language of the home'...."
5487. Alkon, Paul. "The Tale of the Next Great War, 1871-1914: Fictions of Future Warfare and of Battles Still-to-come (Book Review)." Utopian Studies 8, no. 1 (1997): 147.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book The Tale of the Next Great War, 1871-1914: Fictions of Future Warfare and of Battles Still-to-come, edited by I.F. Clarke. Includes a reference to Doyle. "We go below to experience submarine warfare in George Griffith's "The Raid of Le Vengeur" (1901) and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's "Danger! Being the Log of Captain John Sirius" (1914)."
5488. American Association for the History of Medicine, Meeting. "American Association for the History of Medicine: Report of the Seventy-First Annual Meeting." Bulletin of the History of Medicine 72, no. 3 (1998): 496-511.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- (71st : Toronto, Canada) // Includes a session with reference to Doyle. "Session B: Readers Theater as a Tool in Teaching History of Medicine (including a performance of Arthur Conan Doyle's "The Doctors of Hoyland")" 5489. Anders, Peter. "Hauntings: Ghosts, Technology and the Observer's Domain." Leonardo Electronic Almanac 12, no. 12 (2004): N.PAG.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Explores parallels between spiritualist and electronic communications technologies in the nineteenth century, and the manifestation of ghosts or other abstract, remote presences. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "Harriet Beecher Stowe, Arthur Conan Doyle and Horace Greeley attended spiritualist events and gatherings."
5490. Anderson, Digby. "The Great Tradition." National Review 46, no. 7 (1994): 56-57.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents information on several authors who wrote books about moral adventure. Reference to Doyle and The White Company.
5491. Apfelbaum, Jim. "Summer Reading List." Golf Magazine 44, no. 8 (2002): 86.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a lists of books related to golf including Unplayable Lie: A Chief Inspector St. George Mystery, by Peter Jamesson (Sleeping Bear Press, $22.95). "A man who never kids about his golf, Chief Inspector St. George of Scotland Yard tackles a complex whodunit in the grand tradition of Agatha Christie and Conan Doyle."
5492. Ashline, William L. "The problem of impossible fictions." Style 29, no. 2 (1995): 215.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the problem of impossible fictions, with a reference to Doyle. "...[David] Lewis cites Conan Doyle's inconsistency in locating Watson's war wound on his body...."
5493. Ayoub, Nina C. "New Scholarly Books." Chronicle of Higher Education 47, no. 19 (2001): A17.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a list and summaries of several books including Arthur Conan Doyle and the meaning of Masculinity, by Diana Barsham (Ashgate Publishing; 312 pages: $84.95). "Discusses Doyle's life, writings, and personal rivalries in a study of the author's attempts to embody the ideals of British manhood; topics include the relationship between Doyle's histories of the Boer War and World War I and his Sherlock Holmes stories, here read as a secret autobiography."
5494. Babbitt, Jed. "Blame McCain's Aides For His Speech." Human Events 64, no. 21 (2008): 7-7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The author comments on the presidential campaign of U.S. Republican candidate John McCain. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "What's going on inside the McCain campaign? Maybe I've read too much Conan Doyle and Le Carre. Maybe too much of my young professional life was spent in the company of people who built satellites to detect faint electronic signals in enemy lands. Nevertheless, there are too many faint signals coming out of McCain's inner circle to ignore. And they do not bode well for the candidate...."
5495. Bach, Caleb. "Wizard of the World of Words." Americas 51, no. 3 (1999): 44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles Alberto Manguel, a writer. Includes reference to Doyle. "...Together we coauthored our first book, The Dictionary of Imaginary Places, which appeared in 1980. This extensive traveler's guide to places in literature--Shangri-La, Oz, Ruratania, and Celesteville among them--met with immediate success. Particularly appealing were its illustrations, which included drawings of literary structures like the Circular Ruins of Borges and Baskerville Hall of Conan Doyle and detailed maps of places like the Island of Doctor Moreau, Narnia, and Utopia."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5496. Baggs, Chris. "How Well Read Was My Valley? Reading, Popular Fiction, and the Miners of South Wales, 1875-1939." Book History 4, no. (2001): 277-301.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to Doyle in the Appendix.
5497. Balas, Janet L. "Of iPhones and Ebooks: Will They Get Together?" Computers in Libraries 27, no. 10 (2007): 35-38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses various electronic book resources for iPhone. Developers can only create Web-based applications for the smart telephone through the Safari Web browser that is included in the iPhone's installed software. BooksoniPhone and Readdle are Web sites that offer e-books which could be uploaded to the smart telephone. Reading e-books from BooksoniPhone and Readdle requires Internet connection. Books.app, the unauthorized e-book reader maintained by Zach Brewster-Geisz, is also cited. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Free storage space of 50 MB, referred to as the Bookshelf, is available to registered users. In addition to a personal Bookshelf, you also have access to titles in Readdle's Public Library. When I checked, that included selections by Charles Dickens, H. P. Lovecraft, O. Henry, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, and William Shakespeare."
5498. Ball, David. "Book and Media Reviews." Addiction Biology 8, no. 4 (2003): 473-475.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews three books on addiction. Includes reference to Doyle in entry for Doctors and Patients: an Anthology, ed. by Cecil Helman (Oxford: Radcliffe Medical Press, 2002) ISBN 1857759931 The reference is to Doyle's 'A Medical Document,' one of the items included in the anthology.
5499. Banash, David. "From Advertising to the Avant-Garde: Rethinking the Invention of Collage." Postmodern Culture 14, no. 2 (2004).
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to Doyle. "... In another scrapbook collage (see Figure 16), Burroughs brings together two moonscapes, a fragment of prose, and an image of the Mary Celeste, the nineteenth-century ghost ship made famous by Arthur Conan Doyle...."
5500. Barnaby, Paul. "Three into One: Twentieth-Century Scottish Verse in Translation Anthologies." Translation & Literature 9, no. 2 (2000): 188.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the need for a translation anthology to reflect the trilingualism of Scottish literature and the polyvocal, synthetic character of 20th century verse in all three of Scotland's languages. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "The nontranslation of Catholic Scotland is unique to anthologies; it is perhaps not sufficiently remarked that four of Scotland's five most translated twentieth-century prose fiction writers (Conan Doyle, Cronin, Bruce Marshall, and Muriel Spark) are of Catholic background or faith."
5501. Barnes, John. "Henry Lawson and the 'Pinker of Literary Agents.'." Australian Literary Studies 23, no. 2 (2007): 89-105.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article focuses on the relationship between literary agent James Brand Pinker and novelist Henry Lawson. Doyle is mentioned in passing. A. P. Watt also noted.
5502. Beard, Charles Austin. "The quest for academic power." The Journal of Higher Education (Columbus, Ohio) 70, no. 5 (1999): 572-578.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "An article originally published in the 1930s is presented. Members of the American Association of University Professors are attempting to determine the future direction of higher education. A brief history of the university is presented." Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "A music-hall wit who has taken London by storm recently tore his audience wide open by saying in true English drawl: 'Darwin has told us where we came from, Conan Doyle has told us where we are going, and if Stanley Baldwin will tell us where we are, I'll buy him a new top hat.' In the kingdom of higher education we have no Darwins or Conan Doyles, and it is doubtful whether there are any Baldwins among us to win shiny plugs...."
5503. Beavin, Kristi. "Audiobooks: Hear! Hear!" Horn Book Magazine 72, no. 1 (1996): 105.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Mention of Doyle and Holmes. "...Another inspired match between locale and

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

narrator is Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Red-Headed League, read by the oh-so-properly-British Charles Keating...."

5504. Becker, Alan. "Schumann: Symphonic Etudes; Abegg Variations; Kinderszenen; Toccata (Music)." American Record Guide 67, no. 6 (2004): 178-179.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews a piano music release, featuring works composed by Robert Schumann and performed by Ivo Janssen. Includes work by Scott that refers to Doyle. "Scott: Symphony 3; Piano Concerto 2: Neptune. Cyril Scott was an English mystic, eccentric if not so dotty as Scriabin....He shared with Arthur Conan Doyle a belief in spiritualism, a popular fad at the time...."
5505. Beerbohm, Nonie. "Literary supplement: A Gallimaufrey of essays." Contemporary Review 264, no. 1540 (1994): 278.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Literary Essays and Reviews, With Some Ellen Terry Letters,' by John Whitehead. Includes references to Doyle.
5506. Bell, Frederick, and Marc Schepers. "Frederick Bell & Marc Schepers: the deconstructed image." Artefactum 11, no. 53 (1994): 30-31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The artists Frederick Bell and Marc Schepers comment briefly on their photographic project The Deconstructed Image and provide a history of photomontage and collage. They explain the choice of the title, noting that it contains a reference to collage and montage, and examine the philosophy behind these art forms, with reference to the writings of Conan Doyle, Walter Benjamin and Sigmund Freud, and to pioneering work in the field by artists such as George Grosz, Hannah Höch and Raoul Hausmann. He draws a parallel between montage and an increasingly fragmented society, and analyses the confusion between reality and representation caused in the viewer by such art works."
5507. Bell, Kenny. "It's elementary." Economist 385, no. 8551 (2007): 23-23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A letter to the editor is presented in response to the article "A Man Divided" published in the October 6, 2007 issue. Letter reads in full: Sir -- It is unlikely that Arthur Conan Doyle was "one of the best-known Englishmen in the world", as he was a Scot ("A man divided", October 6th). Anyone who views the extant film interviews with him at Surgeons' Hall Museums in Edinburgh will be left in no doubt. Surgeons' Hall also houses a fascinating exhibition on Dr Joseph Bell, Doyle's inspiration for Sherlock Holmes.
5508. Bell, Millicent. "James, The Audience of the Nineties, and The Spoils of Poynton." The Henry James Review 20, no. 3 (1999): 217-226.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...In the last decade of the century, the English literary marketplace was being transformed by the increase of readers, by the proliferation of one-volume adventure thrillers and romances written not only by forgotten hacks but by gifted writers like Rider Haggard, Conan Doyle, and Marie Corelli...."
5509. Bencivenga, Jim. "Hillerman's mystery writing scales the heights of fiction." Christian Science Monitor, Jan 6, 1997: 13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the book The Fallen Man, by Tony Hillerman, beginning with a reference to Doyle. "With the publication of 'The Fallen Man,' his 12th in the Leaphorn-Chee detective series, Tony Hillerman's place alongside such great mystery writers as Agatha Christie and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle is certain...."
5510. Bergstrom, Jenne. "The Somnambulist." Library Journal 133, no. 2 (2008): 59-59.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A review is presented of the book "The Somnambulist," by Jonathan Barnes. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...A reader of Edgar Allan Poe, Arthur Conan Doyle, and Wilkie Collins is likely to find plenty to wink at, but the story works on many levels...."
5511. Bernstein, Paula. "Murder, She Wrote Former Sex Crimes Prosecutor Linda Fairstein Turns a Gritty Career Into Bestsellers." Biography 7, no. 8 (2003): 80.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features former New York sex crimes prosecutor Linda Fairstein who devoted herself to writing full time. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...I started out with The Hardy Boys before Nancy View [sic] because I had a brother who is three years older, so they were already in the house. Then I moved on to the classics like Edgar Mien [sic] Poe and Conan Doyle...."
5512. Bertens, Hans. "Fleeing forwards." Paragraph 21, no. 1 (1998): 121.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews books related to postmodern culture including Postmodern Wetlands: Culture, History, Ecology, by Rod Giblett, with a passing reference to Doyle. "...With only a few exceptions, western writers have maligned wetlands as sources of miasma, melancholy, madness, disease, the monstrous, in short, of everything evil. Quotations from Wilkie Collins, Sarah Orne Jewett, Dickens, J. G. Ballard, Milton, Sir Rider Haggard, John Bunyan, Conan Doyle, Charles Kingsley and a host of others more than sufficiently make the point...."
5513. Berube, Michael. "Anxious Academics." American Literature 75, no. 1 (2003): 169-178.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review and discussion of Anxious Intellectuals: Academic Professionals, Public Intellectuals, and Enlightenment Values. By John Michael. Durham, N.C.: Duke Univ. Press. 2000. x, 218 pp. Cloth, $54.95; paper, $18.95. Academic Instincts. By Marjorie Garber. Princeton, N.J.: Princeton Univ. Press. 2001. xi, 187 pp. $19.95. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Garber's is the kind of book in which one refers lightly and gracefully to Woolf, Sartre, Sidney, Conan Doyle, Kant, George Eliot, Flaubert, David Mamet, and Dilthey in the space of six or seven pages..."
5514. Bihl, Martin. "The Moriarty Complex." Adweek 42, no. 5 (2001): 16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Compares the manner by which United States advertisers view their competition to Moriarty, a character in Arthur Conan Doyle stories who masterminded all the bad things that happens. Failure of companies to consider competitors' perspectives; Efforts of brand managers to improve sales; Recommended ways of enhancing a brand's potential."
5515. Bisla, Sundeep. "The Return of the Author: Privacy, Publication, the Mystery Novel, and The Moonstone." boundary 2 29, no. 1 (2002): 177-222.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes reference to Doyle. "...Here, in Collins's most popular story, we have the insightful and intelligent detective, the crime defying his ingenious attempts at solution, the red herring, and so forth, all before Sir Arthur Conan Doyle would come along to enshrine them in Anglo-American literary practice...." Also mention of Doyle in note 44. "...Ian Ousby writes, 'Though Ablewhite was the real villain, Franklin was the original thief of the diamond, if only in a technical sense' (Bloodhounds of Heaven: The Detective in English Fiction from Godwin to Doyle [Cambridge: Harvard University Press, 1976], 119)..."
5516. Boddy, Kasia. "Edwin Morgan's Adventures in Calamerica." The Yale Journal of Criticism 13, no. 1 (2000): 177-194.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Doyle mentioned in note 22. "'Poetry about anything' (interview with W. N. Herbert) in Nothing Not Giving Messages, 113. In the same volume, Morgan includes a list of 'Books I Have Read (1927-1940)'--in other words, between the ages of seven and twenty (264-72). Other well-represented authors include, perhaps unsurprisingly, Edgar Rice Burroughs, H. Rider Haggard, Jules Verne, and Arthur Conan Doyle."
5517. Boehm, Alan D. "The House of Blackwood: Author-Publisher Relations in the Victorian Era (review)." Libraries & Culture 39, no. 1 (2004): 103-104.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...As Finkelstein points out, accordingly, across the late 1800s and early 1900s the firm either refused or failed to publish works by George Bernard Shaw, H. G. Wells, Thomas Hardy, Robert Louis Stevenson, and Arthur Conan Doyle...."
5518. Bolonik, Kera, and Jeff Zaleski. "Illuminating the Darkness." Publishers Weekly 250, no. 10 (2003): 53.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Interviews author Anthony O'Neill about the book The Lamplighter with a reference to Doyle. "What inspired you to become a writer? Nineteenth-century novelists like Stevenson, Alexandre Dumas, Jules Verne, the Brontes and Arthur Conan Doyle. All of those influences come through in

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

The Lamplighter...."

5519. Bolt, David. "Disability and the Rhetoric of Inclusive Higher Education." Journal of Further & Higher Education 28, no. 4 (2004): 353-358.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Indeed, canonical representations of persons with impaired vision have been created by...H.G. Wells, Arthur Conan Doyle, Andre Gide..."
5520. Bose, Claire. "Bestseller hall of fame." Europe, no. (1998): 3p.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a glance at European novels from the ancients to the modern. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...One field where the British seem destined to excel is that of the murder mystery. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle may well have been a forerunner to the crown, but Agatha Christie has long been considered the queen of crime...."
5521. Braham, Persephone. "Violence and patriotism: La novela negro from Chester Himes to Paco Ignacio Taibo II." Journal of American Culture 20, no. 2 (1997): 159.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information focusing on the violence and patriotism within Mexico. Endnote 4 contains a reference to Doyle. "The historic construction of the detective story as an exercise in logic is usually based on analyses of Edgar Allen Poe's detective, C. Auguste Dupin, while the emphasis on empiricism is usually attributed to Arthur Conan Doyle...."
5522. Brandt, D. Scott. "1997 Buyer's Guide and Consultant Directory." Computers in Libraries 17, no. 7 (1997): 40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a buyer's guide and consultant directory of automated library products. Includes listing for E-Codex--The Complete Works of Arthur Conan-Doyle, Insight Engineering.
5523. Brieger, Gert H. "Bodies and Borders: A New Cultural History of Medicine." Perspectives in Biology and Medicine 47, no. 3 (2004): 402-421.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes reference to Doyle. "...Furst compares these novels with British counterparts (including a story by Arthur Conan Doyle), all published at about the same time....Laura Otis, who turned from graduate work in the neurosciences to literary studies, became intrigued by physicians who not only wrote about their medical or scientific work but also wrote fiction. She discusses the work of Ramon Y. Cajal, S. Weir Mitchell, Arthur Conan Doyle, and Arthur Schnitzler...."
5524. Bromley, Carl. "In the Lost Realm of the Real. (Cover story)." Nation 286, no. 22 (2008): 26-32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the books "Vendetta" and "Dirty Tricks" by Michael Dibdin. Includes passing references to Doyle 5525. Brooke, Bob. "A Lost World." Hispanic 12, no. 9 (1999): 92.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a travel guide to Camp Canaima in Venezuela, with a passing reference to Doyle. "If you dream about a lost island filled with exotic plants and animals, it may be because you're on your way to Angel Falls deep in the Guayana Highlands of southeastern Venezuela. After all, it inspired Sir Arthur Conan Doyle to write The Lost World, a novel about a South American mountain peak populated by dinosaurs...."
5526. Brown, Frederick. "The Typist." New Republic 217, no. 16 (1997): 32-36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "Simenon: A Biography," by Pierre Assouline and translated by Jon Rothschild. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Under Henriette's jaundiced eye, he read novels voraciously, wolfing down much of Dumas, Dickens, Conrad, Arthur Conan Doyle, and Robert Louis Stevenson...."
5527. Browne, Ray B. "The Triumph of the Thriller: How Cops, Crooks, and Cannibals Captured Popular Fiction by Patrick Anderson." Journal of American Culture 30, no. 3 (2007): 374-375.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The Triumph of the Thriller: How Cops, Crooks, and Cannibals Captured Popular Fiction," by Patrick Anderson. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Playing on the innate desire to solve puzzles--especially those as fundamental as murder and death--Poe and A. Conan

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Doyle invented the detective story. It was an immediate and lasting success...."

5528. Bryans, John. "The London Book Fair 2001." Information Today 18, no. 5 (2001): 56.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the annual London Book Fair, which is the smallest of the three major international book-publishing events. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "When one considers the British literary tradition, the mind reels. From Shakespeare to Dickens to Kipling, from Jane Austen and the Bronte sisters to Mary Shelley, Lewis Carroll, Arthur Conan Doyle, D. H. Lawrence, Graham Greene, John LeCarre, and beyond, England is a land of words and wordsmiths without peer. In all the world, what better place for a book fair than Londontown?..."
5529. Bryant, Mark. "Britannia's Victorian War Artist." History Today 57, no. 5 (2007): 58-59.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article profiles Sir John Tenniel, whose illustrations of the Sepoy Rebellion for Punch magazine made him England's most famous cartoonist. He later would provide the artwork for "Alice in Wonderland," and capture many other Victorian icons. In 1893 he became the first cartoonist to be knighted. Includes a reference to Richard Doyle and to ACD. "...To supplement his income from painting Tenniel also worked as an illustrator, and an introduction by Leopold Martin to the publisher John Murray led to a commission to draw plates for a new edition of Aesop's Fables. This caught the eye of Douglas Jerrold, one of the founders of Punch magazine, who suggested him to the Editor, Mark Lemon, as a possible replacement for Richard Doyle (Deputy Cartoonist to John Leech), who had recently resigned from the magazine....Tenniel was knighted by Gladstone in 1893 and when he retired in 1901, the future Prime Minister Arthur Balfour (then Leader of the House of Commons) presided over a celebrity banquet in his honour. Amongst the 200 or so guests were various dukes, knights and ambassadors as well as figures from the arts such as Arthur Conan Doyle, George Meredith, J.M. Barrie, Bram Stoker and W.S. Gilbert...."
5530. Buckley Jr, William F. "James Clavell, RIP." National Review 46, no. 19 (1994): 23-24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents an obituary for novelist James Clavell. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...We very much enjoyed our fax camaraderie. Feb. 19, 1994: 'To: the guru of gurus. M'aidez si vous plait. Could you press THE button and tell me did King Kong come out of Conan Doyle's Lost World? cir 1912? J.'" 5531. Bull, Glen, Gina Bull, and Laura Blasi. "Electronic texts in the classroom." Learning and Leading with Technology 27, no. 4 (1999): 46-9+.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...A rich array of quotes using 'law' can be prepared before class for the students or compiled by students in class. 'I have found the law of my own poems,' writes Walt Whitman. 'I am the law!' exclaims Sir Arthur Conan Doyle....Students could interpret these examples within the context of each text, then conduct their own searches on abstract nouns, research in dictionaries for word origins, and follow with their own explanations or uses of a concept in nonfiction essays. Students also can develop fiction using abstract nouns, for example, while modeling the writing style of Doyle, Shakespeare, Pliny, or the other authors available through the Center...."
5532. Burns, Ann, and R. Kent Rasmussen. "The Land That Time Forgot (Sound recording)." Library Journal 127, no. 4 (2002): 159.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the sound recording 'The Land That Time Forgot,' by Edgar Rice Burroughs, with a passing reference to Doyle. "Deserving a place in the small but popular submarine-adventure genre, this novella may be described as 'U-571 meets Conan Doyle's The Lost World...'" 5533. Byrne, Alex. "How Hard Are the Sceptical Paradoxes?" Nous 38, no. 2 (2004): 299-325.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...We do not consider sceptical hypotheses in everyday life, but the sceptic charges that in this respect we are like detectives who have understandably overlooked a bizarre but powerful rival explanation of the evidence--say, as in Conan Doyle's 'The Lion's Mane,' that the victim died in an accidental encounter with a large jellyfish...."
5534. Calamai, Peter. "Immoral, odious and unethical." Beaver 77, no. 4 (1997): 44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book Profits & Politics: Beaverbrook and the Gilded Age of Canadian

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- Finance by Gregory P. Marchildon. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Anyone wanting to know how a not-very-promising youth from New Brunswick was transformed within 10 years into the first financier in the Michael Milken mold -- How Max Did the Trick, as Arthur Conan Doyle would have titled it -- will find the answers in this book..."
5535. Campbell-Lee, Sally A. "The future of red cell alloimmunization." Transfusion 47, no. 11 (2007): 1959-1960.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses various reports published within the issue including the case-control study which examines potential clinical predictors of alloimmunization in red blood cells (RBC) transfusion, and another one about the concept of animal models of hemolysis. The article opens with a quote from Doyle: "The past and the present are within the field of my inquiry, but what a man may do in the future is a hard question to answer." No other references to Doyle or Holmes.
5536. Cannadine, David. "John Buchan." American Scholar 67, no. 3 (1998): 85.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines the work of author John Buchan. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...When Buchan wrote The Thirty-Nine Steps, stories dealing with spies, espionage, great-power rivalries, and worldwide conspiracies had already been pioneered and popularized by such writers as William Le Queux, Erskine Childers, and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in the era of growing international tensions and 'invasion scares' before 1914...."
5537. Carrier, David. "How can Art History use its History?" History & Theory 46, no. 3 (2007): 468-476.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Chaos and Cosmos: On the Image in Aesthetics and Art History," by Karen Lang. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...But the failure of this part of Lang's analysis says nothing one way or the other about objectivity of interpretation in art history. (Indeed, other scholars have given plausible arguments against objectivity, but she does not deal with their concerns.) She quotes the extensive literature, discussing what Berenson learned from the pioneering Italian connoisseur Giovanni Morelli, and citing Carlo Ginzburg's fascinating speculations about the relation among connoisseurship, Arthur Conan Doyle's detective stories, and psychoanalysis, without really extending the discussion...."
5538. Casella, Ronnie. "Pedagogy as view sequence: popular culture, education, and travel." Anthropology & Education Quarterly 30, no. 2 (1999): 187-209.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A study examined the economic and cultural construction of Latin America as an educational site. It involved the analysis of brochures advertising educational tours in the region, fieldwork in an educational tour organization, and interviews with educational travelers in the U.S. and Mexico. Results revealed the manipulation of representations to define U.S. travelers as omniscient, sophisticated, and invisible and to define Latin America as colorful, exotic, and pristine." Includes references to Doyle and The Lost World.
5539. Chandler, David. "From Sparky to Boney." History Today 50, no. 8 (2000): 62.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an article about a military historian with a reference to Doyle. "...For the rest, I drank deeply from Sir Nigel (1906) and The White Company (1891) by Arthur Conan Doyle, and also his Historical Romances, especially the pair Gerard's Exploits and Adventures...."
5540. Charlesworth, J. J. "Shahin Afrassiabi." Art Monthly, no. 274 (2004): 30-31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews an exhibition by Shanin Afrassiabi at the Project Gallery in Dublin, Ireland from January 28 to March 26 2004. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...With Madge Gill's cubistic line drawing Untitled (dedicated to Conan Doyle), these works immediately conform to the stereotype of Outsider Art..."
5541. Chatman, Seymour. "Whatever happened to literary theory?" Southern Review 34, no. 2 (1998): 367.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides information on literary theory, opening with a quote attributed to Doyle: "It is a capital mistake to theorize before one has data."
5542. Chelminski, Rudolph. "Warning: Log-o-phil-ia is Addictive." Smithsonian 31, no. 9 (2000): 66.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles Anu Garg, creator of A Word A Day (AWAD), a Web site that provides daily electronic-mail with definitions for unusual words. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Garg is a computer engineer by academic training and vocation-he now works as a consultant for AT&T in Columbus-but his real passion is literature, language and art, and it shows in his themes: words from classical mythology, words from Hindi and Sanskrit, words from chess, words from Catch-22, from William Faulkner, from Scott Joplin songs, from Jonathan Swift, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Patrick O'Brian, Tintin comics, Maya Chandrasekaran...."
5543. Childs, Elizabeth C. "Robert Smithson and film; the Spiral Jetty reconsidered." Arts Magazine LVI, no. 2 (1981): 68-81.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Considers the relationship of Smithson's only completed sculpture-related film, Spiral Jetty, to the earthwork Spiral Jetty which he constructed in the Great Salt Lake of Utah in 1970. The narrative structure of the film is related to Smithson's travelogue essays of the 1960s which document both the artist's itinerary and his personal reflections on various excursions to predetermined sites. The incorporation of series of photographs into the documentation of these trips evidences Smithson's cinematic sensibility. The system of site documentation developed in his non-site projects of 1967-1969 also links to the concerns of his film in which he similarly documents his trip and the physical make-up of the site with maps and photographs. The medium of film permits Smithson the ordered juxtaposition of objective, physical facts with his own personal associations with the site. The film addresses these concerns of the physical and the conceptual in both the present time and the geological past through contrasting models of space and time. Sources of these models are suggested in scientific models and dioramas at the Museum of Natural History, New York, and in the various scientific texts and in science fiction, such as Conan Doyle's The lost world, which are explicitly referred to in the film. (Author) 5544. Clark, Ross. "The miracle of medicine." Social Alternatives 18, no. 2 (1999): 70.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the short story 'The Miracle of Medicine.' Includes a reference to Doyle. "...It gives me time to go around with my camera, taking portraits of people in the street for my collection. It's passed beyond being a hobby, having become somewhat of an obsession: I've got over 4000 candid portraits now, after eight years in practice. Still, Conan Doyle had more to show for a decade's slow practice, and eventually was able to give up the practice for the passion...."
5545. Clarke, I. F. "The Evolution of an Evolutionist: H. G. Wells Revealed in his Letters." Journal of Social & Evolutionary Systems 21, no. 3 (1998): 327.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'The Correspondence of H. G. Wells,' edited by David C. Smith and Patrick Parrinder. Doyle and Holmes mentioned in the first endnote.
5546. Clausson, Nils. "Arnold's Coleridgean Conversation Poem: 'Dover Beach' and 'The Eolian Harp'." Papers on Language & Literature 44, no. 3 (2008): 276-304.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Cites Nordon, Pierre. Conan Doyle. Trans. Frances Partridge. London: John Murray, 1966. Note at end of article states that the author "is completing a book on Arthur Conan Doyle and working on a study of the theory and practice of genre criticism."
5547. ———. "Sassoon's Prose Trench Lyric and the Romantic Tradition: The Ending of Memoirs of a Fox-Hunting Man." War, Literature & the Arts: An International Journal of the Humanities 19, no. 1 (2007): 165-172.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A literary criticism of the book "Memoirs of a Fox-Hunting Man," by Siegfried Sassoon is presented. No reference to Holmes or Doyle beyond note about the author: "Nils Clausson has taught at the University of Regina since 1984. He has published articles on Benjamin Disraeli, D. H. Lawrence, Oscar Wilde, H. G. Wells, Wilfred Owen, G. K. Chesterton, Arthur Conan Doyle, and Susan Glaspell. He is completing a book on Arthur Conan Doyle."
5548. Clayton, Jay. "Networking: Communicating with Bodies and Machines in the Nineteenth Century (review)." Victorian Studies 45, no. 4 (2004): 775-777.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Networking: Communicating with Bodies and Machines in the Nineteenth Century, by Laura Otis; pp. x + 268. Ann Arbor: University of Michigan Press, 2001, $49.50.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Includes a reference to Doyle. "... The influence of the semaphore telegraph may be detected in Jane Austen's fiction and William Hazlitt's essays; the electrical telegraph plays a role in nearly all of Anthony Trollope's novels and especially his story "The Telegraph Girl" (1877); the same is true of the fiction of Mary Elizabeth Braddon, Wilkie Collins, and Arthur Conan Doyle; Charles Dickens's novels contain provocative observations on the telegraph from the 1850s onward; and Thomas Hardy's A Laodicean (1881) employs the telegraph as major symbol...."

5549. Clej, Alina. "High Anxieties: Cultural Studies in Addiction (review)." Modernism/modernity 11, no. 2 (2004): 360-361.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of High Anxieties: Cultural Studies in Addiction. Janet Farrell Brodie and Marc Redfield, eds. Berkeley and Los Angeles: University of California Press, 2002. Pp. 232. $60.00 (cloth); $24.95 (paper). Includes a reference to Doyle. "...The first chapter, 'Constructions of Addiction,' includes an article by Stacey Margolis, which reexamines the ghoulish possession narratives of late-nineteenth-century authors like Arthur Conan Doyle and Bram Stoker...."

5550. Coetzer, Owen. "After suffering defeat at Spioenkop, Maj. Gen. Sir Charles Warren had to endure a humiliating." Military History 16, no. 6 (2000): 18.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles Major General Sir Charles Warren and his defeat at Spioenkop. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "The war had cost an appalling 3.23 billion pounds sterling and thousands of lives, and King Edward VII wanted to know why. Lord Roberts, Buller, Warren, ... Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, William Gatacre, Paul Sanford (third Baron Methuen) and Henry Charles Keith (fifth Marquess of Lansdowne) were among a host of British military men and politicians who attended the inquiry...."

5551. Cohen, Edward H. "Victorian Bibliography for 1999." Victorian Studies 43, no. 4 (2001): 699-839.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes Doyle references. --Baccolini, Raffaella, Carla Comellini, & Vita Fortunati, eds. Culture di lingua inglese a confronto. Bologna: CLUEB, 1998. 256 pp. Includes Barrie, Doyle, and Stevenson; --Baxter, Kent B. "Identity in Crisis: Modernism and the Texts of Adolescence." DAIA 59:2972. Includes Doyle and Kipling; --Calanchi, Alessandra. Quattro studi in rosso: I confini del privato maxchile nella narrativa vittoriana. Cesena: Societa Editrice "Il Ponte Vecchio," 1997. 216 pp. Includes Collins, Doyle, and Stevenson; --Cockerell, Hugh. "Tobacco and Victorian Literature," in IIIsc, Lock, Reynolds, & Tansey, pp. 89-99. Includes Dickens, Doyle, and A. Trollope; --Drever, Tiffany E. "Medical Mysteries: Dragging the Victorian Hysteria into the Machine Age." DAIA 59:3827. Includes Collins, Dickens, and Doyle; --Fraser, Robert W. Victorian Quest Romance: Stevenson, Haggard, Kipling, and Conan Doyle. Plymouth: Northcote, 1998. 93 pp.; --Hendershot, Cyndy. The Animal Within: Masculinity and the Gothic. Ann Arbor: U of Michigan P, 1998. 281 pp. Includes C. Bronte, Conrad, Doyle, Stevenson, and Stoker; --Hennessey, Rosemary, & Chrys Ingraham, eds. Materialist Feminism: A Reader in Class, Difference, and Women's Lives. London: Routledge, 1997. 430 pp. Includes Doyle; --Krebs, Paula M. Gender, Race, and the Writing of Empire: Public Discourse and the Boer War. Cambridge UP. 205 pp. Includes Doyle, Haggard, Kipling, and Schreiner; --Otis, Laura. Membranes: Metaphors of Invasion in Nineteenth-Century Literature, Science, and Politics. Baltimore: Johns Hopkins UP. 210 pp. Includes Doyle; --Ramirez, Luz E. "Empire and Americanism: British Representations of Latin America." DAIA 59: 3468. Includes Conrad and Doyle; --Reitz, Caroline W. "The Necessary Detective: Police, Empire and Victorian National Identity." DAIA 60:1576. Includes Burton, Collins, Dickens, Doyle, and Kipling; --Baker Street Inventory." BSJ Mar:59-63; Jun:53- 55; Sep:58-61; Dec:59-61. --Calanchi, Alessandra. "Others Will Follow': Lo strano caso di Jekyll, Hyde e Sherlock Holmes." RdSV 3, 5(1998):133-43. --Calanchi, Alessandra. "Rovinare le sacre simbiosi: Rosencrantz, Guildenstern e Sherlock Holmes." Poetiche: Letteratura ed Altro 4/5(1996):145-55. --Edwards, Owen Dudley. "Arthur Conan Doyle," in V, Winks & Corrigan, pp. 301-30. --Frank, Lawrence. "The Hound of the Baskervilles, the Man on the Tor, and a Metaphor for the Mind." NCL 54:336-72. --Genis, Aleksandr. "Zakon i poriadok: Moi Sherlock Holmes." Znamia Dec:195-201. --Goldfarb, Clifford. The Great Shadow: Arthur Conan Doyle, Brigadier Gerard and Napoleon. Ashcroft, BC: Calabash, 1997. 232 pp. Rev. by N. Dames in VPR 32:181-82. --Hennessey, Rosemary, & Rajeswri Mohan. "The Construction of Women in Three Popular Texts of Empire: Toward a Critique of Materialist Feminism," in V, Hennessey & Ingraham, pp. 186-206. Includes "The Speckled Band." --Holland-Toll, Linda J. "Holmes the Prole: Or, a Marxist, Definitely Manque." Clues 20, 1:37-48. --Jenkins, William D. The Adventure of the Detected Detective: Sherlock

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- Holmes in James Joyce's "Finnegan's Wake". Westport, CT: Greenwood, 1998. 149 pp. --Jurkowska-Krupa, Beata. "Modes of Storytelling: A Rhetorical Analysis of Film and Television Adaptations of Arthur Conan Doyle's The Hound of the Baskervilles and Leo Tolstoy's Anna Karenina." DAIA 59:3265. --Keep, Christopher, & Don Randall. "Addiction, Empire, and Narrative in Arthur Conan Doyle's The Sign of Four." Novel 32:207-21. --Kestner, J. Sherlock's Men. . . . See VB 1997, 794. Rev. by E. Lauterbach in ELT 42:212-16; by R. Jann in VS 42:314-16. --McConchie, R. W. "Privileged and Displaced Persons: Henry Lawson in Sherlock Holmes's England." CE&S 21, 2:83-100. --Otis, Laura. Membranes: Metaphors of Invasion in Nineteenth-Century Literature, Science, and Politics. Baltimore: Johns Hopkins UP. 210 pp. Includes Doyle. --Schumacher, Hans. "Sherlock Holmes und der Höllenhund: Mythologie der Detektivgeschichte," in V, Chiarini, Kruse, & Todini, pp. 265-84. --Stashower, Daniel. Teller of Tales: The Life of Arthur Conan Doyle. London: Pan; NY: Holt. 512 pp. Rev. by A. Lejeune in NRev 31 May:68-69.
5552. Coleman, Alexander. "Fantastic Argentine." New Criterion 13, no. 2 (1994): 65.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the fictional works of Argentine novelist Adolfo Bioy Casares. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...The two collaborated in five works of fiction, most of them parodies of detective stories modeled on their avid readings in Chesterton and Conan Doyle...."
5553. Colmeiro, Jose F. "The Hispanic (Dis)Connection: Some Leads and a Few Missing Links." Journal of Popular Culture 34, no. 4 (2001): 49.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article explores the connections suggested by two images between popular culture and high culture and between detective fiction in the English-speaking nations and in the Spanish-speaking nations. Includes a reference to Doyle.
5554. Concar, David. "Death of old age. (Cover story)." New Scientist 150, no. 2035 (1996): 24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Investigates the potentials of aging research. Storyline of Arthur Conan Doyle's 'The Creeping Man'; Geron Corp.'s devotion to developing drugs and therapies for aging; Genetic and physiological basis of aging; Approaches to preventing aging due to damaged DNA and proteins; Studies on the molecular mechanisms underlying the effects of caloric restriction.
5555. Conroy, James C. "Morals for the millennium: The 25th anniversary conference at University College of St Martin." Journal of Moral Education 25, no. 4 (1996): 480.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the 25th anniversary conference of the editorial board of the 'Journal of Moral Education' at the University College of St. Martin, Lancaster on July 15-19, 1996. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Like Conan-Doyle, Williams tells a ripping good yarn; unlike him, however, all is not resolved at the end..."
5556. Coren, Michael. "Alas the Women's Television Network--a sad and sorry waste of air time." Alberta Report / Newsmagazine 22, no. 34 (1995): 37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Criticizes the Women's Television Network (WTN). Includes a reference to Doyle in the note on the author. "Michael Coren, biographer of H.G. Wells, G.K. Chesterton and C.S. Lewis, is currently chronicling the life of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle..."
5557. ———. "Anyone may be seized with an evil idea--what counts is change and contrition." Alberta Report / Newsmagazine 22, no. 26 (1995): 44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Deals with European literary intellectuals' ideas of population control. Includes a reference to Doyle in the note on the author. "Michael Coren, biographer of H.G. Wells, G.K. Chesterton and C.S. Lewis, is currently chronicling the life of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle..."
5558. ———. "Are gossip/satire magazines justified? Yes--if they are really good at their job." Alberta Report / Newsmagazine 22, no. 30 (1995): 33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Questions the justification behind gossip/satire magazines in Canada. Includes a reference to Doyle in the note on the author. "Michael Coren, biographer of H.G. Wells, G.K. Chesterton and C.S. Lewis, is currently chronicling the life of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle..."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5559. ———. "Can Canadian TV satirists break through the PC barrier? Are pigs stunt-fliers?" Alberta Report / Newsmagazine 22, no. 22 (1995): 58.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Recalls the author's enjoyment of the television comedy show 'Monty Python's Flying Circus' and considers television humor in Canada in 1995. Includes a reference to Doyle in the note on the author. "Michael Coren, biographer of H.G. Wells, G.K. Chesterton and C.S. Lewis, is currently chronicling the life of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle..."
5560. ———. "Censorious liberaldom chokes on Limbaugh--so what would they make of Voltaire?" Alberta Report / Newsmagazine 22, no. 20 (1995): 38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Opinion. Presents arguments against censorship in the media. Includes a reference to Doyle in the note on the author. "Michael Coren, biographer of H.G. Wells, G.K. Chesterton and C.S. Lewis, is currently chronicling the life of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle..."
5561. ———. "Charting the winds of change, so to speak, in the contentious profession of biography." Alberta Report / Newsmagazine 22, no. 49 (1995): 40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Opinion. Criticizes the recent wave of revisionist biography for its commitment to nothing more than making money for its authors and publishers. Includes a reference to Doyle in the note on the author. "Michael Coren, biographer of H.G. Wells, G.K. Chesterton and C.S. Lewis, is currently chronicling the life of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle..."
5562. ———. "Children's literary views are unvarnished, but they are also wonderfully untarnished." Alberta Report / Newsmagazine 22, no. 42 (1995): 39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Opinion. Discusses the literary argument that professionals, rather than the young readers themselves, ought to be the ones to review books for children and young adults. Includes a reference to Doyle in the note on the author. "Michael Coren, biographer of H.G. Wells, G.K. Chesterton and C.S. Lewis, is currently chronicling the life of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle..."
5563. ———. "Coren on the arts." Alberta Report / Newsmagazine 22, no. 31 (1995): 39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on the libertarian ideas of author Sir Karl Popper. Includes a reference to Doyle in the note on the author. "Michael Coren, biographer of H.G. Wells, G.K. Chesterton and C.S. Lewis, is currently chronicling the life of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle..."
5564. ———. "Cynics notwithstanding, PEI's Anne ought to be relished, not rubbished." Alberta Report / Newsmagazine 22, no. 36 (1995): 29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on the Anne of Green Gables character popularized by Prince Edward Island author Lucy Maude Montgomery. Includes a reference to Doyle in the note on the author. "Michael Coren, biographer of H.G. Wells, G.K. Chesterton and C.S. Lewis, is currently chronicling the life of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle..."
5565. ———. "Discrediting Buchan for anti-Semitism is (a) a lie and (b) an irrelevancy." Alberta Report / Newsmagazine 22, no. 24 (1995): 35.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on the irrelevancy of the racist charges against John Buchan on the brilliance of his work. Includes a reference to Doyle in the note on the author. "Michael Coren, biographer of H.G. Wells, G.K. Chesterton and C.S. Lewis, is currently chronicling the life of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle..."
5566. ———. "For a case study on a hatchet job, see media coverage of the Reform Party." Alberta Report / Newsmagazine 22, no. 23 (1995): 35.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents instances of media unfairness to conservative causes in Canada. Includes a reference to Doyle in the note on the author. "Michael Coren, biographer of H.G. Wells, G.K. Chesterton and C.S. Lewis, is currently chronicling the life of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle..."
5567. ———. "Frowsting among his musty, dusty volumes, the bibliophile makes a vital statement." Alberta Report / Newsmagazine 22, no. 33 (1995): 37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Opinion. Asserts that booklovers have a place in the world of the 1990s. Includes a

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

passing reference to Doyle in the text and in the note on the author. From the text: "...In a 1973 essay on antiquarian bookstores, Graham Greene explained the delightful quintessence of the book-lover: 'The value of a collection to a collector lies less in its importance, surely, than in the excitement of the hunt, and the strange places to which the hunt sometimes leads... I prefer the badly organized bookshops where Topography is mixed up with Astronomy and Theology with Geology, and stacks of unidentified books litter the staircase to a room marked Travel, which may contain some of my favourite Conan Doyles.'"

5568. ———. "Is anyone more likely to go astray than literary men who embrace politics?" Alberta Report / Newsmagazine 22, no. 37 (1995): 37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on some writers' tendency to become overtly political to the point of allying themselves to a political party. Includes a reference to Doyle in the note on the author. "Michael Coren, biographer of H.G. Wells, G.K. Chesterton and C.S. Lewis, is currently chronicling the life of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle..."
5569. ———. "It is time to stand up and be counted against censorship's multifaceted forms." Alberta Report / Newsmagazine 22, no. 46 (1995): 39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Argues that literary censorship can occur in more subtle and insidious ways than straightforward banning. Includes a reference to Doyle in the note on the author. "Michael Coren, biographer of H.G. Wells, G.K. Chesterton and C.S. Lewis, is currently chronicling the life of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle..."
5570. ———. "Literary prizes certainly have their uses--but maybe the currency's being devalued." Alberta Report / Newsmagazine 22, no. 44 (1995): 45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Opinion. Considers benefits and disadvantages of literary prizes. Includes a reference to Doyle in the note on the author. "Michael Coren, biographer of H.G. Wells, G.K. Chesterton and C.S. Lewis, is currently chronicling the life of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle..."
5571. ———. "Odd, isn't it, how the arts flourish under the capitalism the arts deplore?" Alberta Report / Newsmagazine 22, no. 25 (1995): 31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the growth of art under capitalism. Includes a reference to Doyle in the note on the author. "Michael Coren, biographer of H.G. Wells, G.K. Chesterton and C.S. Lewis, is currently chronicling the life of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle..."
5572. ———. "There is indeed a happy median between subsidized sneezes and zero arts funding." Alberta Report / Newsmagazine 22, no. 47 (1995): 37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the debate in Canada over state funding of the arts, particularly in literature. Includes a reference to Doyle in the note on the author. "Michael Coren, biographer of H.G. Wells, G.K. Chesterton and C.S. Lewis, is currently chronicling the life of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle..."
5573. ———. "Unaware Leacock was a German pawn? You need The Canada Nobody Knows." Alberta Report / Newsmagazine 22, no. 38 (1995): 35.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Previews the content of the author's book entitled 'Just Beyond Libel: The Canada Nobody Knows Because I Just Made It Up'. Includes a reference to Doyle in the note on the author. "Michael Coren, biographer of H.G. Wells, G.K. Chesterton and C.S. Lewis, is currently chronicling the life of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle..."
5574. ———. "We fret about the deficit and the CBC, and evade the crisis central to it all." Alberta Report / Newsmagazine 22, no. 21 (1995): 24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Looks at the issue of whether or not Canada can survive as a meaningful cultural identity. Includes a reference to Doyle in the note on the author. "Michael Coren, biographer of H.G. Wells, G.K. Chesterton and C.S. Lewis, is currently chronicling the life of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle..."
5575. ———. "We owe a great debt to Aldous Huxley--semi-blind but a colossal visionary." Alberta Report / Newsmagazine 22, no. 32 (1995): 37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Opinion. Asserts that we owe a great debt to English writer Aldous Huxley, who

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

prophesied about a possible totalitarian state in his 1932 novel 'Brave New World.' Includes a reference to Doyle in the note on the author. "Michael Coren, biographer of H.G. Wells, G.K. Chesterton and C.S. Lewis, is currently chronicling the life of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle..."

5576. ———. "Why Canadian authors and publishers should stop being so very, very sensitive." Alberta Report / Newsmagazine 22, no. 40 (1995): 44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Opinion. Declares that authors and publishers in Canada should stop being so sensitive when their works receive bad reviews. Includes a reference to Doyle in the note on the author. "Michael Coren, biographer of H.G. Wells, G.K. Chesterton and C.S. Lewis, is currently chronicling the life of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle..."
5577. ———. "William Morris failed to reach 'workers' but speaks volubly to his artistic heirs." Alberta Report / Newsmagazine 22, no. 27 (1995): 38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features the biographical book 'William Morris: A Life For Our Times,' by Fiona MacCarthy. Includes a reference to Doyle in the note on the author. "Michael Coren, biographer of H.G. Wells, G.K. Chesterton and C.S. Lewis, is currently chronicling the life of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle..."
5578. ———. "With Catholic literature in abysmal decline, it's all up to the pope and the converts." Alberta Report / Newsmagazine 22, no. 28 (1995): 37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on the decline of Catholic literature in Canada. Includes a reference to Doyle in the note on the author. "Michael Coren, biographer of H.G. Wells, G.K. Chesterton and C.S. Lewis, is currently chronicling the life of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle..."
5579. ———. "Writing a book may be a tough proposition; but 'launching' it has horrors all its own." Alberta Report / Newsmagazine 22, no. 35 (1995): 39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines the peculiarities of book launches. Includes a reference to Doyle in the note on the author. "Michael Coren, biographer of H.G. Wells, G.K. Chesterton and C.S. Lewis, is currently chronicling the life of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle..."
5580. Cox, Ann M. "Correspondence." Lancet 361, no. 9373 (2003): 1984.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents letters to the editor concerning topics in medicine, including a one letter with a reference to Doyle. "Sir--5 months after Egyptologist Howard Carter discovered the tomb of the pharaoh Tutankhamen, his benefactor, George Edward Stanhope Molyneux Herbert, fifth Earl of Carnarvon, aged 57, died. His sudden death within weeks of the tomb's official opening, coupled with the fertile imagination of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, lead to speculations of a curse...."
5581. Coyle, Karen. "Catalogs, Card--and Other Anachronisms." The Journal of Academic Librarianship 31, no. 1 (2005): 60-62.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The writer describes how a library catalog based on the technology of computing and freed from the constraints of the card could revitalize the library for current and future generations. She highlights the need for libraries to move beyond the card metaphor and suggests what an alternative bibliographic display could look like. Doyle is used in an example on headings, sorting, and index forms.
5582. Crandall, Richard E. "The challenge of large numbers." Scientific American 276, no. 2 (1997): 74.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the challenges faced by mathematicians in solving problems that involve large numbers. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...For instance, the number 10 to the three-millionth power begins to make some intuitive sense if we ask how long it would take a laboratory parrot, pecking randomly and tirelessly at a keyboard, with a talon occasionally pumping the shift key, say, to render by accident that great detective epic, by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, The Hound of the Baskervilles. To witness a perfectly spelled manuscript, one would expect to watch the bird work for approximately 103,000,000 years...."
5583. Croll, Andy, Chris Evans, and Julie-Marie Strange. "VIII Nineteenth Century." Annual Bulletin of Historical Literature 86, no. 1 (2002): 96.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides information on several books on British history. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...In a similar vein, L. Hapgood, 'The literature of the suburbs: versions of repression in the novels of George Gissing, Arthur Conan Doyle and William Pitt Ridge, 1890-1899' (J. Victorian Culture, 5) is an interesting comparison of the three writers who appealed to that every more significant reader--the suburbanite...."
5584. Crowther, M. A., and Marguerite Dupree. "The Invisible General Practitioner: The Careers of Scottish Medical Students in the Late Nineteenth Century." Bulletin of the History of Medicine 70, no. 3 (1996): 387-413.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reference to Doyle in note 9. "...Reminiscences by GPs who were also famous Scottish writers include Arthur Conan Doyle, Memories and Adventures (London: Hodder & Stoughton, 1924); and A. J. Cronin, Adventures in Two Worlds (London: Gollancz, 1952)."
5585. D.S. "NB." TLS, no. (1996): 16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on BBC2's televised literary program, Bookmark, that has begun a new series with reference to the "literary deprivation of Crowborough, the town where Sir Arthur Conan Doyle lived...."
5586. DaGroomes, Kathy Vilim. "My favorite books." Boys' Life 84, no. 7: 30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the responses of some famous guys who were asked, 'When you were a boy, what were your favorite books?' Includes reference to Doyle in one response. Stan Lee, creator of Spider-Man; Chairman, Marvel Films: "Favorite book: Minute Biographies by Nisenson and Parker. 'Each page contained a very brief, excitingly written biography of one of the 100 most famous people in history. This book instilled in me a fascination for the lives of great people and also provided me with heroic role models who gave me goals to strive for while I was growing up.' Favorite authors: Arthur Conan Doyle, O. Henry, Mark Twain, H. G. Wells and Edgar Rice Burroughs."
5587. Damrosch, David. "World Literature Today: From the Old World to the Whole World." symplek 8, no. 1 (2000): 7-19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes references to Doyle. "...This crossover evangelism in turn informs the collection's advocacy on behalf of the difficult, elite works it presents side by side with the work of Conan Doyle and C. S. Forester...Whereas both Charles Eliot and Henry Cabot Lodge had focused exclusively on established major authors, Magill freely mixed popular work in with established classics: Arthur Conan Doyle and Pearl Buck appear as early as Volume 1, along with Homer and Shakespeare--taking places that might otherwise have been used for Ovid's Metamorphoses or for Goethe's Wilhelm Meister, both of which appear only in Volume 3...."
5588. Darby, Robert. "Captivity and Captivation: Gullivers in Brobdingnag." Eighteenth-Century Life 27, no. 3 (2004): 124-139.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews Linda Colley. Includes reference to Doyle. Arthur Conan Doyle. The Tragedy of the Korosko (1898; rep., London: Hesperus, 2003). Pp. 112. (paper). ISBN 184391039x "...It was the more popular works of lower or middlebrow culture that tended to embody the orientalist typecasting in its full colors--the novels of H. Rider Haggard or G. A. Henty, the ambiguous examples of Kipling, or Arthur Conan Doyle's oddly topical story, The Tragedy of the Korosko (1898), recently republished by a small English press. This is a most hackneyed and predictable adventure tale about a party of tourists on a Nile steamer who are kidnapped by "Dervishes" (the Islamic extremists of the 1890s)...."
5589. David, Deirdre. "Gender, Race, and the Writing of Empire: Public Discourse and the Boer War (review)." Victorian Studies 45, no. 1 (2003): 163-165.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Gender, Race, and the Writing of Empire: Public Discourse and the Boer War, by Paula Krebs; pp. xii + 205. Cambridge and New York: Cambridge University Press, 1999, GBP40.00, $60.00. Includes references to Doyle.
5590. Davidson, A., and I. Filatova. "Russian Sources on the Anglo-Boer War." S.A.Archives Journal 41, no. (1999): 56.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses Russian sources on the Anglo-Boer War or the South African War of 1899-1902. Includes reference to Doyle's 'The Great Boer War.'

5591. Davies, Hunter. "And it's a 3-3 draw." New Statesman 127, no. 4390 (1998): 48.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews various soccer (football to everyone outside the U.S.) books including 'Flat Back Four,' by Andy Gray, 'The Beautiful Team,' by Garry Jenner and 'The Beautiful Game,' by Chis Taylor. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...It was when I got to Francis Hodgson that it became unexpectedly exciting. He is some sort of art lecturer but happens to play park football as a goalkeeper, which has inspired him to take us through the history of goalkeeping and atone for all the put-downs and dismissals goalies have had to suffer. Oh you know, you have to be daft to be a goalie, that sort of thing. You just have to think of the Pope, Basil Hume, Nabokov, Camus, Alistair Cooke, Conan Doyle, Julio Iglesias, all goalies in their time, to realise they're not all stupid. Not sure about Julio...."

5592. Davies, Ioan. "Theorizing Toronto!" Topia, no. (2000): 23p.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the existence of Toronto as a cultural unit in Ontario. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Robertson Davies's bourgeoisie are the British in disguise, those ghostly echoes on paper who pull Toronto back to the BBC, PBS, and Conan Doyle (draped in the pseudo-psychology of Jung)...."

5593. Davis, August Jordan. "Suspect (Alphabet City Magazine No. 10) by John Knechtel (Ed.)." Art Book 13, no. 4 (2006): 41-42.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Suspect (Alphabet City Magazine No. 10)," edited by John Knechtel. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Mark Kingwell's 'Who is the suspect?' is a well-considered investigation of the structural logic of the detective novel, e.g. Conan Doyle and Chandler, and of narrative itself, exploring its philosophical assumptions and Freudian operations...."

5594. de Lint, Charles. "Books to look for." Fantasy & Science Fiction 88, no. 4 (1995): 34.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Recommends several books including 'Lady Cottington's Pressed Fairy Book,' by Brian Froud and Terry Jones. Includes reference to Doyle. "...he text begins with an entry dated July 6th, 1895, when the child Lady Cottington was could barely string words together into a sentence, little say spell them, through to December 1912 when the faeries have disappeared from her life. At once poking fun at Froud's earlier work, the faerie photographs "authenticated" by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in the early part of this century (a premise wonderfully explored in Steve Szilahi's 1992 novel Photographing Fairies), and perhaps even Edith Holden's The Country Diary of an Edwardian Lady, in the end, the text proves to have more resonance than buffoonery."

5595. Dean, Tacita. "W.G. Sebald." October, no. (2003): 15p.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Deals with an article written by German author W. G. Sebald about the life of German envoy Roger Casement during World War I. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Any pleas for clemency, which came from many quarters in Britain and America because of his distinguished career, were dissipated by the circulation of the so-called Black Diaries, an alternative journal he wrote alongside his public White Diaries that graphically documented a hitherto unimagined homosexuality. Copies were sent to the Archbishop of Canterbury and Arthur Conan Doyle, among others, and were also used to discredit him in the Congo and quash any likely uprising there if he were executed...."

5596. Dedman, Stephen. "Never Seen by Waking Eyes." Fantasy & Science Fiction 91, no. 2 (1996): 133.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the short story 'Never Seen by Waking Eyes,' by Stephen Dedman, dealing with a vampire little girl who was acquainted with the author Lewis Carroll. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...They were easily gulled in those days. Arthur Conan Doyle even believed in fairies..."

5597. Den Boggende, Bert. "The Fellowship of Reconciliation's Propaganda and Theodora Wilson Wilson's Literary Contribution 1914-1917." Quaker Studies 12, no. 1 (2007): 107-128.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // During World War I Theodora Wilson Wilson, who shortly before the war had returned to her ancestral Quaker faith, made a unique contribution to the Fellowship of Reconciliation's (FOR)

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

propaganda. Instead of the usual expository writings aimed at the well educated, she wrote simple stories directed at casual readers. They emphasised the kind of activity, 'doing', the FOR leadership had decided to curtail after an attempt at tramping in the Midlands in the summer of 1915 had resulted in a near riot. Her perspective reflected that of many Friends. Some very limited attention has been given to these stories, but their contexts have not been explored adequately. This essay attempts to correct this deficiency and provides insight into an important Quaker stream within the FOR. [Abstract from author]. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Wilson's use of war imagery, however, conflicted with the government's propaganda. On 2 September 1914 C.F.G. Masterman, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster and Chairman of the National Health Insurance, had called a meeting of a group of eminent authors, including G.K. Chesterton, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, H.G. Wells, and George Trevelyan, for the purpose of producing literary war propaganda...."

5598. Denton, Sally. "What Happened at Mountain Meadows?" American Heritage 52, no. 7 (2001): 76.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the September 11, 1857 mass murder of California-bound immigrants in Utah. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Despite all the agitation over the last 144 years, despite the volatility of the issues, and despite the connection with a religion of 11 million adherents, amazingly little has been written on the subject, and the event has been dealt with literarily mainly in fiction and in a handful of nineteenth-century anti-Mormon screeds. The original 1871 edition of Mark Twain's Roughing It contained an appendix about the massacre that was deleted from most later editions. A few authors wrote of the 'Avenging Angels,' most notably Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in A Study in Scarlet, but without mention of the massacre."
5599. Derbyshire, John. "Dads and Cads." National Review 55, no. 3 (2003): 55-56.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article presents views of the author on parenting and includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...For some centuries now, every Englishman who could afford to do so has sent his children away from home to be raised by paid professionals. None of the parents concerned doubts for a moment that he is doing the right thing, nor is there any reason to think that he is deficient in affection. I am looking at a photograph from the early 1920s of the Conan Doyles standing in a family group on the platform at Waterloo Station, whither they have gone to see their two boys back to boarding school after the summer break. Their parental affection is plain to see; indeed, after Sir Arthur's death, his sons went to much trouble and expense in attempting to get in touch with him through spiritualist mediums...."
5600. Di Ciolla, Nicoletta. "Roma in Noir -- The Eternal City as Dystopia. Or Perfect Imperfection." Romance Studies 25, no. 4 (2007): 297-307.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This essay looks at the representation of the city of Rome in contemporary noir fiction, focusing in particular on the 2005 novel Un giorno perfetto by the award-winning novelist Melania G. Mazzucco." Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "The crime genre has always held a privileged relationship with the city. From the Paris mapped by Poe and Simenon, to the London of Conan Doyle, to the contemporary Glasgow, Edinburgh, Manchester of McIlvanney, McBain, and McDermid respectively, the genre has often drawn some of its impact from what has been defined as a 'realist production of place'...."
5601. Di Filippo, Paul. "Plumage from Pegasus." Fantasy & Science Fiction 87, no. 3 (1994): 73.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides information on science fiction and their authors. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Arthur Conan Doyle received a gold-inlaid ouija board with platinum planchette for his autobiography, Don't Call Me Conan the Barbarian! (1915)...."
5602. Dick, Archie L. "'Send your books on active service': The books for troops scheme during the Second World War, 1939-1945." South African Journal of Library & Information Science 71, no. 2 (2005): 115-126.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "During the Second World War, the South African Library Association coordinated the Books for Troops Scheme that distributed thousands of books and magazines to soldiers in the Union Defence Force. The scheme presented the chance to demonstrate the democratic values of books and libraries, and to improve the social standing of the library profession. This article argues that personal squabbles, regional tensions, racialism and the regulation of reading by the Army Education Services prevented the South African Library Association from making a more forceful impact on the South African public." Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...One commentator (Bressler 19343: 19) was surprised to discover among the books collected from the public some valuable works and early editions of George Bernard

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Shaw, Alexander Dumas...Arthur Conan Doyle and William Thackeray...."

5603. Dillman, Joanne Clarke. "Minority Report: Narrative, Images, and Dead Women." Women's Studies 36, no. 4 (2007): 229-249.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses the two major female characters in the film "Minority Report." Includes a passing reference to Doyle in footnote 3. "In another reflexive gesture, and as several critics point out, the cogs are named Agatha (after Christie), Dashiell (after Hammett), and Arthur (after Conan Doyle)."
5604. Dillon, Sarah. "Palimpsesting: Reading and Writing Lives in H. D.'s 'Murex: War and Postwar London (circa A.D. 1916-1926).'" Critical Survey 19, no. 1 (2007): 29-39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The author discusses a story from the book "Palimpsest," by Hilda Doolittle. Palimpsests are parchments that writing has been erased from and replaced. The author comments that Doolittle uses palimpsests as a metaphor for history. Note 5 includes a passing reference to Doyle: "Since De Quincey's essay, the figure of the palimpsest has been employed by writers as varied as Thomas Carlyle, Arthur Conan Doyle, D. H. Lawrence, Umberto Eco, George Orwell and Jeanette Winterson. For a more detailed account of the history of the palimpsest and its diverse employment see my study The Palimpsest: Literature, Criticism and Theory (London: Continuum, 2007)."
5605. Dimendberg, Edward. "From Berlin to Bunker Hill: Urban Space, Late Modernity, and Film Noir in Fritz Lang's and Joseph Losey's M." Wide Angle 19, no. 4 (1997): 62-93.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...The decay of the city center, controversies around downtown urban renewal precipitated by passage of the Housing Act of 1949, public apartment projects, and the growth of pedestrian zones in response to the spread of the automobile define the conditions of what I call 'centripetal space' of the postwar American city: the navigable metropolis whose fabric of neighborhoods, public landmarks, and zones of safety, danger, and transgression form an unbroken chain from the nineteenth-century urban fictions of Emile Zola and Arthur Conan Doyle to twentieth century works by Alfred Döblin, Dashiell Hammett, and Raymond Chandler that culminates in film noirs such as The Naked City (1948) and Criss Cross (1949)...."
5606. Dingus, Anne. "December 1899." Texas Monthly 27, no. 12 (1999): 274.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the social condition of Texas in December 1899 and other international issues. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...A dollar buys a pair of baby shoes, a month of phone service, a bottle of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, a bushel and a third of sweet potatoes, a six-volume set of Arthur Conan Doyle, two crockery slop pails, a set of toy instruments (fiddle, horn, and drum), five pounds of redfish, twelve pounds of cotton, fourteen bars of Sapolio soap, or five dozen bottle rockets to usher in the new century with a bang...."
5607. Dollar, Mark. "Ghost Imagery in the War Poems of Siegfried Sassoon." War, Literature & the Arts: An International Journal of the Humanities 16, no. 1/2 (2004): 235-245.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The article focuses on the war poems of Siegfried Sassoon. Sassoon speak on behalf of his peers who fought and died in the First World War, even though twenty-seven years had passed since the war ended. His ardent pacifism during the war led him to denounce England's continued involvement in a conflict he deemed unjust and he saw those killed in battle as sacrificed unjustly. Their ghosts seem to have haunted Sassoon and caused him to regret mightily the cause of their deaths. Sassoon conceives of these ghosts as scarred, eyeless figures deformed by the hell of battle." Note 2 includes a passing reference to Doyle. "Winter notes how even such a well-regarded figure as Sir Arthur Conan Doyle attended seances and was fascinated by 'spirit photography' (a practice based on the idea that a camera can capture a ghostly spirit on film) after the death of his son, Kingsley, from wounds received at the Somme (58)."
5608. Donahue, Dick. "Child 44." Publishers Weekly 255, no. 3 (2008): 37-37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article features debut novelist Tom Rob Smith and his book "Child 44." He was born and still lives in London, England. Among the authors who have influenced his book are Thomas Harris, Graham Greene and Arthur Conan Doyle. Information is provided on the plot of the novel and the

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- toughest challenge the author faced in writing the novel. The publisher's take on the book is also presented.
5609. ———. "Fiction/mystery & Suspense." Publishers Weekly 252, no. 31 (2005): 182-183.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on mystery and suspense books. "Easy Street: A Lillian Byrd Crime Story," by Elizabeth Sims; "By the Sword," by Mike Yorkey; "The Sherlock Holmes Mysteries," by Arthur Conan Doyle.
5610. Donald, James. "Greasing the Channels." Novel: A Forum on Fiction 40, no. 3 (2007): 312-315.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A review of Modernism, Media and Propaganda: British Narrative from 1900 to 1945 by Mark Wollaeger. (Princeton: Princeton UP, 2006), pp. 364, cloth, $35.00. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Whether Baldwin knew it or not, and he probably did, it was the British war-time Government that authorized the invention of the twentieth century's most effective arts of propaganda. Wollaeger repeatedly returns to a defining event that provides the backdrop to his study. On 2 September 1914 the man of letters, former Liberal MP, and now Government propaganda chief C.F.G Masterman invited to his office at Wellington House the elite of English letters, among them J.M. Barrie, Arnold Bennett, Robert Bridges, G.K. Chesterton, Arthur Conan Doyle and on through the alphabet to Israel Zangwill. The purpose of the meeting was to devise a new approach to propaganda, one that rejected the opportunistic use of lies and misrepresentations in favor of the strategic dissemination of factual information and the covert management of the media of communication. The Wellington House meeting, characteristically, looked both backward and forward. Masterman's instinctive cultural conservatism meant that the printed word was initially the preferred medium, with secret subsidies being paid to respectable commercial and university presses, and that the authors being co-opted were the aging lions of late Victorian and Edwardian literature rather than any emerging modernists...."
5611. Donovan, Stephen. "Dead Men's News: Joyce's 'A Painful Case' and the Modern Press." Journal of Modern Literature 24, no. 1 (2000): 25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the hostility of writer James Joyce to the newspaper press. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...In the extremest case, a novelist could even reveal what newspapers had reported as rail suicide to be in fact foul play, as happens in the Conan Doyle stories 'The Adventure of the Bruce-Partington Plans' (1908) and 'The Man with the Watches' (1908)...."
5612. Doonan, Jane. "Drawing Out Ideas: A Second Decade of the Work of Anthony Browne." The Lion and the Unicorn 23, no. 1 (1999): 30-56.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...One might say at this stage that Anthony Browne, like Sir Arthur Conan Doyle before him, has killed off his hero. But Willy is saved by the wink. The idea of 'Ceci n'est pas un chimp' and the wink act in mutual cancellation...."
5613. Doran, Amanda-Jane. "Hodder Headline Acquires John Murray." Publishers Weekly 249, no. 20 (2002): 13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the acquisition of John Murray, an independent publisher in Great Britain, by Hodder Headline. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Currently run by the seventh generation of the family, John Murray was the most quintessentially British publishing house. Its backlist reads like a who's who of great British writers. Jane Austen entrusted Emma to John Murray in 1815, and Murray's first bestseller was Childe Harold's Pilgrimage, purchased from Lord Byron in 1811. Other world famous authors included Charles Darwin and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, but in recent years the firm's fortunes have foundered, as it was unable to compete, particularly in the fiction market, with the huge advances paid by publishing conglomerates...."
5614. Dorn, Jennifer, and Alex Saunderson. "The literary world of Jerome K. Jerome." British Heritage 18, no. 6 (1997): 50.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the late Jerome K. Jerome who was an actor, a well-known playwright, editor of a literary magazine and an author. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Jerome's office provided the setting for Friday afternoon tea parties attended by George Bernard Shaw, J.M. Barrie, Arthur Conan Doyle, and other great writers who contributed to The Idler...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5615. Dougherty, Stephen. "Foucault in the House of Usher: Some Historical Permutations in Poe's Gothic." Papers on Language & Literature 37, no. 1 (2001): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Interprets the poem 'The Fall of the House of Usher,' by Edgar Allan Poe in the context of race relations and a biological nightmare scenario. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Indeed, the pattern has been revisited and reworked by countless Gothic stylists since Poe. Nathaniel Hawthorne, George Washington Cable, Arthur Conan Doyle, Charlotte Perkins Gilman, Ambrose Bierce, H. P. Lovecraft, William Faulkner, Eudora Welty, Angela Carter, Joyce Carol Oates, Isabel Allende, and others would all write fictions that effectively pay homage to Poe's 'Usher.'" 5616. Douglass, Paul. "Reading the wreckage: De-encrypting Eliot's aesthetics of empire." Twentieth Century Literature 43, no. 1 (1997): 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an analysis of the book 'The Waste of Land,' by T.S. Eliot. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Most of all, the curse motif presents a strong parallel between the Tut story and The Waste Land. Five months after entering the tomb, in April 1923, Lord Carnarvon died. Rumors of a "curse" ("Death shall come on swift wings to him that toucheth the tomb of the pharaoh") sprang up immediately and have refused to die. Fear of occult revenge was so strong that two days after the news of Lord Carnarvon's death, the Daily Express ran this headline: 'Egyptian Collectors in Panic / Sudden Rush to Hand Over their Treasures to Museum / Groundless Fears' (April 7, 1923). Arthur Conan Doyle fed curse fears that spring of 1923 by crediting them (el-Mallakh 95)...."
5617. Dover, Caitlin. "Books." Print 61, no. 5 (2007): 22-22.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article offers information on the cover of the book "The Boy's Own Paper." The covers of Penguin's "Boys Own" book series, comprised of titles from the likes of Arthur Conan Doyle, revive that brio with bold, monochromatic illustrations and inventive hand lettering. Art director Coralie Bickford-Smith worked with four illustrators, plus lettering artist Stephen Raw, and carefully researched period publications and ephemera.
5618. Downing, Ben. "An old gypsy nature." New Criterion 16, no. 10 (1998): 69.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Selected Letters of Robert Louis Stevenson,' edited by Ernest Mehew. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Spanning the years from September 1868, when R.L.S. was seventeen, right up to a few days before his death in 1894, the 317 letters chosen by Mehew range across the broad spectrum of moods, from the goofball to the saturnine, in which Stevenson operated. No less diverse is the roster of his recipients: Stevenson's parents, cousin, oldest friends, and adored ex-nurse, Cummy, at the homier end of the list, and, at the more glamorous pole, a group of luminaries that includes Twain, Yeats, Rodin, Hardy, Henry James, J. M. Barrie, Edmund Gosse, George Meredith, George Saintsbury, John Addington Symonds, Arthur Conan Doyle, and William Dean Howells. For each correspondent, whether famous or obscure, Mehew provides a concise footnote explaining his or her relationship to R.L.S. Even more helpfully, his footnotes apprise us of the circumstances surrounding and prompting the letters..."
5619. Downing, Eric. "Paraphotography and the Ent-wicklung of Bildung in Thomas Mann's Der Zauberberg." Germanic Review 76, no. 2 (2001): 172.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines how the properties of German novels within the Bildungsroman genre are reconfigured with the insinuation of photography in the theme of the book 'Der Zauberberg,' by Thomas Mann. Includes reference to Doyle. "...'Fragwürdigstes' does not, of course, initiate Hans Castorp into the esoteric machinations of an eighteenth-century secret society but rather into those of a quite topical and recognizably twentieth-century one, one that famously occupied such figures as Conan Doyle, Houdini, Yeats, Rilke (and even, let it be said, Freud): spiritualism, or rather, 'mediumistic studies.' Mann based his chapter on the work of Dr. Freiherr Albert von Schrenck-Notzing, a Munich-based doctor of sexual pathology whom Freud cites and whose seances featuring the well-known medium 'Eva C.' both Conan Doyle and Houdini attended...." Doyle also mentioned in notes 15, 17, and 39.
5620. Doyle, Walter, and Kathy Carter. "Narrative and learning to teach: implications for teacher-education curriculum." Journal of Curriculum Studies 35, no. 2 (2003): 129.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines the implications of narrative on teacher-education curriculum. Includes a

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

passing reference to Doyle. "...In such incidents, 'those who are wiser may have the laugh of you, and we who love you may be shamed', a quote from a novel by Arthur Conan Doyle in which a young man is being schooled in the proper terminology to avoid embarrassment..."

5621. Drews, Jürgen. "Timeline: Paul Ehrlich: Magister Mundi." Nature Reviews Drug Discovery 3, no. 9 (2004): 797-801.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Paul Ehrlich, a founding father in fields across a wide range of medical sciences, was born 150 years ago. To mark this anniversary, this article gives an overview of his life, highlighting his major scientific contributions and paying tribute to Paul Ehrlich the man. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...He read the new French authors--Andre Gide, Guy de Maupassant, Anatole France--but his favourite books were crime stories, preferably by Conan Doyle, which, as he claimed, stimulated his detective abilities...."

5622. Drinkwater, Ros. "Jewels of the crown." In Britain 4, no. 3: 30.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the Crown Jewels of England and includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...It was Conan Doyle who described precious stones as 'the devil's pet ban' on account of the stories of evil that surround them. The trail of dastardly deeds associated with the Koh-i-Noor suggests that the description applies more aptly to this diamond than to any other stone in history...."

5623. Duerden, Dennis. "The 'Discovery' of the African Mask." Research in African Literatures 31, no. 4 (2000): 29.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses the influence of the mask discovered from the Niger and Congo basins on Western art. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Perhaps a preoccupation with the dinosaur is the manifestation that occurs very early in Conan Doyle's The Lost World...." (p. 40)

5624. Duvall, John Noel, and Nancy J. Peterson. "Introduction: Racechange and the Fictions of Identity." MFS Modern Fiction Studies 49, no. 3 (2003): 409-413.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes reference to Doyle. "...In 'Whispers of Norbury: Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and the Modernist Crisis of Racial (Un)Detection,' Jinny Huh examines Arthur Conan Doyle's anxieties regarding race detection. Looking at incidents both from Doyle's life and specific failures of his most famous creation, Sherlock Holmes, Huh argues that the emergence of the detective fiction genre directly responds to the threat of racial passing. Rather than its enactment, it is instead the fear of race change that creates the mutually constitutive space of the politics of passing and detective fiction...."

5625. Eaton, Joe. "Tower Kill." Earth Island Journal 17, no. 4 (2002): 32.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports that the growing network of towers for communication systems have been killing migratory birds in the U.S. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...We've known for years that birds are drawn to lighted structures. 'Folk who were in grief came to my wife like birds to a lighthouse,' says Dr. Watson in Conan Doyle's The Man with the Twisted Lip. Mass deaths were recorded at electric light towers in Illinois as far back as 1886; the first fatalities at a communications tower took place at Baltimore in 1948. But scientists are only beginning to figure out why illuminated communications towers are so dangerous...."

5626. Echevarria Ii, Antulio J. "Tomorrow's army: The challenge of nonlinear change." Parameters: US Army War College 28, no. 3 (1998): 85.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Shows how American and other military and civilian futurists missed the mark during the turn of the century in anticipating technology's effects on warfare. Use of nonlinearity theory and RAND's assumption-based planning model to examine the quest for certainty; Need to blend formalism and intuitive insight to cope with planning in uncertain times. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Reflecting still more the unbridled imagination of the nonprofessional, popular journals and magazines like Punch, Strand, and Blackwood's in Britain, La Caricature in France, and Kladderadatsch in Germany featured stories by famous authors like Sir Arthur Conan Doyle (1859-1930), A. A. Milne (1882-1956), and Jack London (1876-1916). Their tales described fantastic dynamite cruisers, electric rifles, compressed air carbines, mobile armored artillery bases, flying fortifications, underwater sleds, protective fogs, exotic chemicals and diseases, corrosive dewdrops, human mind-benders, and brain-disrupting psychic mediums..." Note 16 also mentions Doyle. "...See also in the same volume Conan Doyle's short story, 'Danger! Being the Log of Captain John Sirius'"

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

(Strand, 1914), which showed how a small nation using submarines in a blockade-like fashion might defeat a larger one, equipped with a surface navy...."

5627. Edgerton, David. "Science and the nation: towards new histories of twentieth-Century Britain." Historical Research 78, no. 199 (2005): 96-112.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article examines the technocratic and militaristic critiques of twentieth-century Britain, arguing that they often take the form of 'anti-histories' of British science and technology and of preparedness for war. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...There have been a remarkable number of novelists with backgrounds in science and engineering who wrote about technical people, many more insightfully than Snow. Imperial College produced H.G. Wells. Of the others (omitting the medics such as Conan Doyle or J.G. Ballard) we might note Eric Ambler, who transformed the detective story in the nineteen-thirties..."

5628. Engelhardt, Tom. "The Cartography of Death." Nation 271, no. 12 (2000): 25-34.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses several books. Some of them are "Rivers of Blood, Rivers of Gold: Europe's Conquest of Indigenous Peoples," by Mark Cocker.; "The World and the West: The European Challenge and the Overseas Response in the Age of Empire," by Philip D. Curtin and "The Unfinished Twentieth Century," by Jonathan Schell. The first book is a well-documented history of the conquest and extermination of tribal peoples in different countries. The second book explores whether imperial conquest was driven by desires of home governments or the impetuous acts of men-on-the-spot. The last book discusses important political events in the twentieth century. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...A vast tropical gulag, 'awash in corpses,' the Congo became a global cause celebre, the object of the first great human rights protest of modern times. Mark Twain, Conan Doyle and Roger Casement were among the many who raised voices or pens to denounce king and colony...."

5629. Engle, Lars. "Recent studies in Tudor and Stuart drama." Studies in English Literature (Rice) 37, no. 2 (1997): 415.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Evaluates and comments on books about Tudor and Stuart drama. Includes 'The Shakespearean Playing Companies,' by Andrew Gurr; 'Impersonations: The Performance of Gender in Shakespeare's England,' by Stephen Orgel; 'Resistant Structures: Particularity, Radicalism, and Renaissance Texts,' by Richard Strier. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "... (Blunt/Genings may be a textual ancestor not only of Poor Tom but also of the man with the twisted lip in the Conan Doyle story of that title, whose income from begging is in similar proportion to what he can make as a Victorian journalist.)..."

5630. Epstein, Andrew E. "Baseball, Crackers, Green Dust, Nose Candy, and Snow Cones: Cocaine, Defibrillation, and ICDs." Journal of cardiovascular electrophysiology 18, no. 7 (2007): 726-727.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article relates the author's comments on the study by J. Chen, R. H. Naseem, O. Obel, and J. A. Joglar entitled "Habitual cocaine used is associated with high defibrillation threshold during ICD implantation." Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...A long list of prominent individuals who have used the drug includes Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Sigmund Freud, and President Ulysses S. Grant. Cocaine could even be found in trace amounts in the Coca-Cola beverage for several decades after the beverage's release, although this is, of course, no longer the case...."

5631. Eskew, Douglas. "Books in the Blood: Memoirs of a Fourth Generation Bookseller (review)." Libraries & Culture 39, no. 2 (2004): 230-231.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews Books in the Blood: Memoirs of a Fourth Generation Bookseller. By Anthony Rota. New Castle, Del.: Oak Knoll Books, 2002. 313 pp. $35.00. ISBN 1-58456-076-2. Includes reference to Doyle. "...In fact, Books in the Blood marries all of its elements in an agreeable harmony. On most pages Rota represents both exciting acquisitions and colorful personalities, neither of which outshines the other. For example, the fascinating story of the author's purchase of a holograph manuscript of Conan Doyle's Sir Nigel--for GBP5,000 in 1975--would have been entertaining and instructive enough for most readers. Not only does Rota accompany the story with a reproduction of one of the manuscript's leaves (the beginning of chapter 18, 'The Spaniards on the Sea'), but he weaves the procurement into his memories of the generous, honest, and affable bookseller David Magee. Rota allows that he 'gloated over [the Doyle manuscript] for some little while' before selling it to the Pierpont Morgan Library; he also gloats over the friendship with the 'hugely likable' Magee, whom he calls 'the sort of bookseller who makes me proud of my calling' (189). Most of Rota's reminiscences have such a delightful appeal...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5632. Espinosa, Marcos Rodríguez. "La traducción como forma de exilio." Bulletin of Hispanic Studies 75, no. 1 (1998): 83-94.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // In Spanish. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Sus traducciones de las obras completas de Charles Dickens, Marky Twain y Arthur Conan Doyle han continuado publicándose en los últimos cuarenta años y siguen siendo leídas por nuevas generaciones de lectores españoles...."

5633. Farrell, Elisabeth. "Discovering the homes and haunts of England's literati." Europe, no. 340 (1994): 29.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features places in England that most literary authors have used as setting for their stories. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...For those who prefer the benefits of joining an arranged tour, at least two companies offer packages for literary aficionados. Wilson and Lake International (468 "B" Street, Suite #3, Ashland, Oregon 97520; 800-227-5550) offers a 12-day Mystery Readers' Tour to England each summer. The itinerary includes visits to places associated with the lives and works of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Agatha Christie, Anthony Price, P.D. James, Ruth Rendell, Daphne du Mauriet, Margaret Yorke, and others. The annual excursion (next summer it will be the sixth) visits Cambridge, Oxford, the Cotswolds, Bath, Torquay, Plymouth, Stratford-upon-Avon, and London. Meetings with contemporary British crime writers are also arranged as availability allows...."

5634. Felber, Lynette. "The Recalcitrant Sleuth: Trollope and the Metaphysical Detective Sequence Novel." Journal of Popular Culture 40, no. 5 (2007): 831-848.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents a criticism and appreciation of the nineteenth century detective fiction and crime sequence novels of Anthony Trollope. Includes passing references to Doyle. "Detective fiction emerges as a popular genre during the nineteenth century, yet disproportionate critical attention has been given to only three of the many Victorian writers who produced detective fiction. The focus has been on 'a handful of canonized texts by three male writers--Charles Dickens, Wilkie Collins, and Arthur Conan Doyle'....One of the Victorian novelists conspicuously absent from this trio, Anthony Trollope, has traditionally been considered more notable for denigrating than for producing detective fiction....Detective fiction often appears in serial form. Martin Swales suggests an inherent connection between the detective genre and series mode of presentation: 'seriality engenders a sense of pattern while withholding the explanation of that pattern' (xiii). Furthermore, Martin Priestman credits Arthur Conan Doyle with developing a 'series' mode which is only rudimentary in his predecessors' (85). This affinity or developing tradition may suggest why Trollope chose to embed detective plots in some of his sequence novels...."

5635. Fernald, Anne E. "A Feminist Public Sphere? Virginia Woolf's Revisions of the Eighteenth Century." Feminist Studies 31, no. 1 (2005): 158-182.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses feminism in the works of modernist writer Virginia Woolf. Includes references to Doyle. "...This exchange encouraged Woolf to look for outlets for longer, signed reviews. She had many options. 'The inherent benefits of literary practice' that Arthur Conan Doyle notes with impatience had clearly paid off. Furthermore, she was now very well connected. Her friends dominated the highbrow publishing world and Bloomsbury's editorial power in the 1920s was unmatched....In the context of Bloomsbury--or of other modernists--Woolf was something of a profiteer. However, although class motives animated Conan Doyle and Arnold Bennett's ambition to earn money from art and a foreigner's ambition to assimilate drove Conrad to place his stories in the 'right' magazines, Woolf strove to prove that a woman and a feminist could make a living, claim mainstream cultural authority, and reshape public discourse...."

5636. Ferreira-Pinto, Cristina. "World literature in review: Portuguese." World Literature Today 72, no. 2 (1998): 357.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'The Killer,' by Patricia Melo and translated by Clifford E. Landers. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "The roman noir does not have a long tradition among Brazilian writers, despite the popular success enjoyed by such masters of the detective novel as Conan Doyle, Agatha Christie, and Georges Simenon...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5637. Ferris, Alison. "Disembodied Spirits: Spirit Photography and Rachel Whiteread's Ghost." Art Journal 62, no. 3 (2003): 44-55.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines the way that spirit photography functions within the history of photography and shows how a knowledge of spirit photography can expand the understanding of contemporary works that employ the metaphor of the ghost. Featured works in the photography exhibition "The Disembodied Spirit," at the Bowdoin College Museum of Art in Maine; Points raised by Rosalind Krauss and Tom Gunning, proponents of spirit photography, that seem pertinent for the understanding of contemporary art; Characterization of the sculpture Ghost by Rachel Whiteread. Includes two photographs "Courtesy of the Estate of Dame Jean Conan Doyle, Photography Collection, Harry Ransom Humanities Research Center, The University of Texas at Austin."
5638. Finch, Lynette. "Psychological Propaganda: The War of Ideas on Ideas During the First Half of the Twentieth Century." Armed Forces & Society 26, no. 3 (2000): 367-312.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article traces the origins of the modern history of propaganda in warfare. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...As Peter Buitenhuis has shown, leading British and expatriate American literati were willingly drawn into the propaganda war, writing articles and novels that passionately proclaimed Germans to be barbarians and civilization to be under threat. Buitenhuis claims that Henry James, Edith Wharton, Joseph Conrad, Arnold Bennett, H. G. Wells, Rudyard Kipling, Arthur Conan Doyle, and Ford Madox Hueffer 'genuinely believed that the cause of civilisation...was at stake.'" 5639. Fincher, Sally. "Analysis of design: an exploration of patterns and pattern languages for pedagogy." The Journal of Computers in Mathematics and Science Teaching 18, no. 3 (1999): 331-348.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This paper describes and delineates patterns and pattern languages from different knowledge domains, and attempts to generate an understanding of why they are a distinctive and powerful way of sharing knowledge. It surveys several examples within the genre of Pattern Languages and analyses the unique characteristics of the form, with reference to the instances surveyed...." Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...One of the interesting things about Patterns and Pattern Languages is that there is a single first-use instance of the genre. Unlike, for example, detective fiction, where one can say 'Edgar Allen Poe invented this type...and Arthur Conan Doyle pioneered that approach...and Raymond Chandler added that aspect...' for Patterns it all starts with Christopher Alexander's works The Timeless Way of Building (Alexander, 1979) and A Pattern Language (Alexander, Ishikawa, & Sliverstein, 1977)...."
5640. Fine, Gary Allan, and Ryan A. White. "Creating Collective Attention in the Public Domain: Human Interest Narratives and the Rescue of Floyd Collins." Social Forces 81, no. 1 (2002): 57-85.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Building on Helen MacGill Hughes's News and the Human Interest Story, we examine how human interest stories create collective attention, essential for the establishment of a public or demos, and the limitations of that process...." Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...An intriguing setting and a compelling cast of characters is necessary, but not sufficient. A narrative thrust must exist: a movement of events, situated in time (Johnstone 1990; Maines 2001; Stahl 1989). The Louisville Evening Post made the linkage to fiction explicit: 'Fiction has nothing comparable to the horror of this scene which makes one quake and shudder. Poe and 'The Pit and the Pendulum'... Conan Doyle and his story of the engineer trapped in a room, the floors and ceiling of which [were] closing... neither is comparable to the throes of agony tearing the spirit of Floyd Collins'..."
5641. Finkel, Michael. "The Game." Rolling Stone, no. 875 (2001): 72.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Relates the personal experiences of the author in playing the brainstorming game in the United States. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...We had to look up the degree of axial tilt of all the planets in the solar system. We had to recognize quotes from Vladimir Nabokov, Washington Irving, Henry James, Edgar Allan Poe and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. We had to know the Greek alphabet...."
5642. Fischman, Josh. "Family Ties." National Geographic 207, no. 4 (2005): 16-27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the archaeological discovery of hominin remains in Dmanisi, Georgia. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Lordkipanidze admits that his interpretation of the Dmanisi discoveries is far from certain. 'What we are doing is like reconstructing a crime scene,' says Lordkipanidze,

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

who as a boy loved mystery novels--Agatha Christie and Arthur Conan Doyle. "The crime was long ago, and you can't find witnesses.'..."

5643. Fisher, Hollice. "Free Books." Teacher Magazine 18, no. 2 (2006): 20-20.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents information about an online collection of free e-books which is titled as "Project Gutenberg." The collection is available at the website, www.gutenberg.org. Most of the books included in the site are classics. Popular downloads include works by authors such as Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Mark Twain and William Shakespeare.

5644. Fitzgerald, Ian. "Multimedia history." History Today 46, no. 12 (1996): 48.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a survey of the multimedia which aimed to give some idea of the sheer diversity of history-related products available in audio-visual formats. Includes one item with a passing reference to Doyle. "...Another newspaper putting its archive to good use is the subject of The Daily Mail Centenary CD-ROM, produced by Verulam Publishing (PC format, GBP29.95). However, serious source-miners should tread carefully, as this is not a comprehensive archive but a leisurely stroll through the paper's back numbers. The more sombre events are balanced by lighter touches, such as the Cookery Section and the News Quiz. The interesting list of contributors includes Edgar Wallace, H.G. Wells, Conan Doyle and Mrs Josef Goebbels...."

5645. Fitzpatrick, Eileen. "The Prosodic Phrasing of Clause-Final Prepositional Phrases." Language 77, no. 3 (2001): 544-561.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...This article reports on a study of the boundaries of a single type of data, clause-final prepositional phrases (PPs). The study was done to improve the phrasing of a text-to-speech synthesizer....The corpus was a professional dramatic reading of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Speckled Band.(7)..."

5646. Fleming, Colin. "The Golden Volcano." New Criterion 27, no. 3 (2008): 76-77.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The Golden Volcano," by Jules Verne. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Verne had tired of the yoke, even if he refused to dash it to the ground: 'my intention for the novels that are still left for me to do is to spice them up as much as possible by using every means provided by my imagination in the rather restricted milieu in which I am condemned to operate.' Conan Doyle talked this way sometimes about Holmes, but he was referring to what was almost too much public love for a character, despite his other successes...."

5647. Fleming, Tyler, and Toyin Falola. "Africa's Media Empire: Drum 's Expansion to Nigeria." History in Africa 32, no. (2005): 133-164.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Though Bailey would eventually relinquish most of his creative control to Hopkinson and Ottah, he maintained a great deal of influence on the magazine's content. In The Beat Of Drum, Ottah remembered Bailey's naïve thinking about Nigeria and its cultures, and remarks: 'I had by then learnt many things about Mr Bailey. I had learnt to rely on him as a mine of quaint, bizarre and weird information. I had also learnt not to take his information at face value. . . . It was simply as a result of my eventually finding out that the not-so-genteel and not-so-educated Nigerians from whom he got most of such information generally exaggerated them in the telling, and that Mr Bailey who, despite his long acquaintance with Africa, was still in the habit of seeing his dear Africa as the locale of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Lost World, generally accepted it without question.'(88)..."

5648. Foley, Tadhg. "Reviews." Irish Studies Review 11, no. 3 (2003): 351-381.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several books on Irish ethnology. Includes review of The Colonial Conan Doyle: British Imperialism, Irish Nationalism, and the Gothic by Catherine Wynne (Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 2002) 212 pp, ISBN 0313320055 $61.95 hardcover 5649. Folger, Tim. "A Universe Built for Us." Discover 29, no. 12 (2008): 52-58.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article discusses models in theoretical physics that seek to explain how the universe developed in a manner amenable to human life on Earth. Includes a passing reference to Doyle.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

"...When I ask Linde whether physicists will ever be able to prove that the multiverse is real, he has a simple answer. 'Nothing else fits the data,' he tells me....'What I am saying is, look at it with open eyes. These are experimental facts, and these facts fit one theory: the multiverse theory. They do not fit any other theory so far. I'm not saying these properties necessarily imply the multiverse theory is right, but you asked me if there is any experimental evidence, and the answer is yes. It was Arthur Conan Doyle who said, 'When you have eliminated the impossible, whatever remains, however improbable, must be the truth.'..."

5650. Forman, Ross G. "When Britons Brave Brazil: British Imperialism and the Adventure Tale in Latin America, 1850-1918." Victorian Studies 42, no. 3 (2000): 455-487.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Note 5 contains a reference to Doyle: "River exploration is the genre into which many of the best-known Victorian and Edwardian fictions about Latin America--as well as many about Africa--all fit. Typical of this genre are W. H. Hudson's Green Mansions: A Romance of the Tropical Forest (1904); William Henry Giles Kingston's three novels, Manco, The Peruvian Chief; or, An Englishman's Adventures in the Country of the Incas (1853), On the Banks of the Amazon (1872), and The Heroic Wife, or Wanderers on the Amazon (1874); and even Arthur Conan Doyle's fantastical parody of the adventure formula, The Lost World (1911)."

5651. France, Peter, and Sian Reynolds. "Nelson's Victory: A Scottish Invasion of French Publishing, 1910-1914." Book History 3, no. (2000): 166-203.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Contains multiple references to Doyle.

5652. Fraser, George MacDonald. "Blood and Thunder." History Today 50, no. 5 (2000): 62.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Explains how history disguised as fiction has been the inspiration of the author as well as his aim. Includes reference to Doyle. "...As I've said, it was Sir Daniel Darnley who led me to Esquemeling, and Conan Doyle to Froissart, Graves to Suetonius and Tacitus, Henry to Kinglake, Mayne Reid to Bancroft, the Wolf of Kabul to Kaye and Mallinson, and Sabatini to more than I can count....If this proves anything, it is that there is no truer guide to the past than good historical fiction. There is nothing phoney about it; while I tend to distrust approaches to education which suggest that it is an enjoyable game (when we know it is just hard slogging), the good costume novel is telling no more than the truth when it suggests that real history is fun and excitement and glamour and suspense; that it has all the ingredients of a great adventure story. But of course, that is what history is....It does not matter if the historical novel is pure unashamed fiction, with plot and characters owing nothing to historic fact, so long as it is properly researched and reflects, as faithfully as the writer knows how, the period and its spirit. Better still, of course, to write what a Sabatini reviewer called 'history disguised as fiction' -- that is, to take historic truth and present it as a story, weaving in whatever fictitious incidents and characters are needed to oil the narrative's wheels, but never, never falsifying or distorting the truth on which it is based. Fairness above all, to the best of the writer's ability; it isn't always easy, but history and the reader deserve no less. It is a rule which the best of them -- Scott, Dumas, Doyle, Graves, Forester, Sabatini, Roberts and the rest -- never broke, and far beyond the entertainment they gave and continue to give to countless millions, they did history good service, and set an impossible standard for those emulators who trudge vainly in their footsteps...."

5653. Fraser, Robert. "Proust's Cup of Tea: Homoeroticism and Victorian Culture (review)." Victorian Studies 46, no. 2 (2004): 370-372.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Proust's Cup of Tea: Homoeroticism and Victorian Culture, by Emily Eells; pp. xii + 220. Aldershot and Burlington, VT: Ashgate, 2002, GBP45.00, $79.95. Doyle mentioned in note on author: Robert Fraser is Senior Research Fellow in Literature at the Open University in the United Kingdom. His Victorian publications include The Making of The Golden Bough: The Origins and Growth of an Argument (1990, 2002), Sir James Frazer and the Literary Imagination (1990), Proust and the Victorians (1994), and Victorian Quest Romance: Stevenson, Haggard, Kipling and Conan Doyle (1998).

5654. French, Michael, and Jim Phillips. "Sophisticates or Dupes? Attitudes toward Food Consumers in Edwardian Britain." Enterprise & Society 4, no. 3 (2003): 442-470.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes reference to Doyle. "...The socialist and working-class collectivist concerns and movements existed in parallel with an interconnected series of nonsocialist and noncollectivist

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- food reform organizations. Active from 1909 to 1914, the membership of these groups was primarily metropolitan and professional. The groups' leadership linked local public analysts with council officials and Medical Officers of Health, as well as with members of the social and political elite, such as Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and Hilaire Belloc. The most committed and consistent advocates of regulation were the public analysts and doctors who were responsible for the enforcement of the adulteration laws...."
5655. Friedman, Kinky. "The Ten Essential Works of Mystery Fiction." Forbes 161, no. 9 (1998): 142-143.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a listing of recommended mystery fiction books that are in stores as of May 1998. 'The Murders in the Rue Morgue,' by Edgar Allan Poe; 'The Monkey's Paw,' by W.W. Jacobs; 'A Study in Scarlet,' by Arthur Conan Doyle; 'Maigret and the Headless Corpse,' by Georges Simenon; 'Busman's Honeymoon,' by Dorothy L. Sayers; 'The Widows of Broome,' by Arthur W. Upfield; 'The Big Sleep,' by Raymond Chandler; More.
5656. Frost, Bob. "Leopold II of Belgium." Biography 5, no. 5 (2001): 84.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on King Leopold II of Belgium. Exploitation of the people in Central Africa; Compensation of greed for colonization; Accumulation of wealth in the Congo in exchange for the lives of local villagers; Analysis of factors contributory to the king's commission of crimes against humanity. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Then, shortly after the turn of the century, British newspapers began publishing detailed charges of cruelty in the Congo, based on the remarkable detective work of a solitary individual, an English shipping clerk named E.D. Morel. These accounts were not the first such reports out of the Congo, but they were the most effective--they forged the foundation of an international protest movement that enlisted thousands of crusaders including Mark Twain, Booker T. Washington, and Arthur Conan Doyle...."
5657. Fultz, Marcella. "Bibliography of Articles and Books Published on Colonialism and Imperialism in 2001." Journal of Colonialism and Colonial History 3, no. 2 (2002).
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes one item regarding Doyle: Thomas, Katie-Louise. "Racial Alliance and Postal Networks in Conan Doyle's 'A Study in Scarlet'." 2.1 (2001). Journal of Colonialism and Colonial History Project Muse. <<http://muse.jhu.edu>>
5658. ———. "Bibliography of Books and Articles Published in English on Colonialism and Imperialism in 2002." Journal of Colonialism and Colonial History 4, no. 2 (2003).
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes items with reference to Doyle. Wynne, Catherine. The Colonial Conan Doyle, British Imperialism, Irish Nationalism, and the Gothic. Westport: Greenwood, 2002; Dalziell, Rosamund. "The Curious Case of Sir Everard Im Thurn and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle: Exploration & the Imperial Adventure Novel, 'The Lost World'." English Literature in Transition (1880-1920) 45 (2002): 131-57; Simmons, Diane. "The Curse of Empire: Grandiosity and Guilt in the Stories of Arthur Conan Doyle." Psychoanalytic Review 89 (2002): 533-56.
5659. Furst, Lilian R. "Anxious Patients/Anxious Doctor: Telling Stories in Freud's Studies on Hysteria." LIT: Literature Interpretation Theory 8, no. 3/4 (1998): 259.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Analyzes psychoanalyst Sigmund Freud's book 'Studies on Hysteria.' Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...The 'mad,' as they were called in the eighteenth and early nineteenth century, were secluded in 'madhouses' directed by 'mad-doctors.' The financially well endowed secreted deranged family members at home under private care like Mrs. Rochester in Jane Eyre (1847) and the lord's son in Conan Doyle's The Stark Munroe Letters (1895)...."
5660. Gabilondo, Joseba. "The Global Phallus: On the Digital and Allegorical Economy of the Hispanic Subaltern in Hollywood Film." Discourse 23, no. 1 (2001): 4-24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes reference to Doyle. "...As Joseph McBride states in his Spielberg biography, if Jurassic Park is indebted to Michael Crichton's 1973 film Westworld, it is more so to Arthur Conan Doyle's 1912 novel The Lost World (417)--a debt that the sequel acknowledges in the title. Doyle's novel also narrates the adventures of an explorer who finds a Latin American plateau populated by dinosaurs and ape-men. In turn, it is not difficult to establish a connection between Doyle's work and Daniel Defoe's foundational Robinson Crusoe (1719)...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5661. Gailus, Andreas. "A Case of Individuality: Karl Philipp Moritz and the Magazine for Empirical Psychology." New German Critique, no. (2000): 39p.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Looks at the 'Magazine for Empirical Psychology,' published in the late 18th century in Germany and edited by Karl Phillip Moritz to corroborate the notion of truth and power by Michael Foucault. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...One hundred years before Conan Doyle and Freud, Moritz directs the investigative gaze of the moral doctor to tiny unintended irregularities in peoples' behavior, proposing to read involuntary memories,(n39) 'seemingly insignificant repetitions in speech' (494), dreams (IV 23), and other 'little unnoticed splinters' (486) as clues to an otherwise inaccessible 'secret history' (494)...."
5662. Ganim, John M. "Cities of Words: Recent Studies on Urbanism and Literature." MLQ: Modern Language Quarterly 63, no. 3 (2002): 365-382.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...This city is always at the point of dissolution or chaos, always subject to entropy. Indeed, the latter parts of the book are the most striking and original, especially the part dealing with more or less popular fiction--Bram Stoker, Arthur Conan Doyle, H. Rider Haggard--and with the high literature that exploits that tradition, that is, Pynchon...."
5663. Gardiner, John. "Oscar Wilde and Posterity." History Workshop Journal 58, no. (2005): 320-325.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to Doyle. "... Across the next twenty-five years, while leading a hectic and ultimately tragic life, Wilde would develop his use of masks so that he was always subject to his ideal intellectual and artistic condition of being misunderstood. Partly vanity, the need to avoid being taken for granted, this was also a surrender to helpless artistry and a bid to challenge the way people thought. 'Between me and life there is a mist of words always', he wrote in 1891 to Conan Doyle; and, deliberately and delightfully inscrutable behind the words then, he seems to have known that he would be equally inscrutable, and equally delightful, to posterity.(19)" 5664. Gardiner, Michael. "Representing Scotland in Literature, Popular Culture and Iconography: The Masks of the Modern Nation." Scottish Studies Review 8, no. 1 (2007): 158-160.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Representing Scotland in Literature, Popular Culture and Iconography: The Masks of the Modern Nation," by Alan Riach. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Riach also draws ingenious lines from, for example, Arthur Conan Doyle to African and Caribbean writers, one point of contact being that there has been of necessity a diverse and political understanding of language in both Scotland and the Caribbean...."
5665. Gartner, Scott Sigmund, and Philip R. Harris. "Book reviews." Behavioral science 39, no. 4 (1994): 338.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book Theory of Moves, by Steven J. Brams. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...While Brains' theoretical approach may provide less explanatory purchase than he claims, his stylistic approach delivers more. Brains uses an extremely impressive array of examples from the Bible, literature (including Faulkner, Shakespeare, and Conan Doyle), and international relations (events such as The Marshall Plan, the United States Iranian Hostage Rescue, and the Christmas Bombings in the Vietnam War)...."
5666. Garton, Stephen. "The scales of suffering: love, death and Victorian masculinity." Social History 27, no. 1 (2002): 40-58.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This article examines an extensive set of mourning diaries by a prominent Victorian doctor and social reformer, written after the death of his wife during childbirth. Through an analysis of the complex grieving performances in these texts, the article questions some of the prevailing representations of Victorian masculinity which argue that the late nineteenth century was a period of masculine 'flight from domesticity'. This article argues that the formation of Victorian masculinity was structured by diverse and contradictory currents, including romanticism, spiritualism, science, rationalism, imperialism and religion, in which 'domesticity' and the 'private self' still functioned to create possibilities for the construction of particular forms of masculine, middle-class identity. Finally the article explores the public memorialization of this grief, and the complex class tensions that this elicited. In the context of a colonial, egalitarian, masculine ethos the assertion of an elite, feminized mourning represented a complex and ambiguous challenge to colonial codes of manhood." Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...But he found no comfort in spiritualism: 'I have had no knowledge or communication, though certainly I have not had the 'letting-go' of a Lodge or Conan-Doyle'..."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5667. Geary, C. G. "The story of chronic myeloid leukaemia." British Journal of Haematology 110, no. 1 (2000): 2-11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a historical review of chronic myeloid leukemia. Contains multiple references to Doyle and a photograph of Doyle in 1892. "...Dr Arthur Conan Doyle, the author, then in medical practice in Birmingham, wrote in 1882 'notes on a case of leucocythaemia' in a letter to the Lancet (Conan Doyle, 1882) (Fig 6). He described the case of a well-built man of 29 years with massive splenomegaly, 'which attained its large proportions in the course of a few weeks, and in whose blood under the microscope it was found that the leucocytes were enormously increased in number, almost filling the interspaces of the rouleaux. The proportion of white to red cells was calculated at one to seven'. Conan Doyle seems to have assumed that his patient's condition was related to a previous attack of malaria, a popular theory at the time....Dr Conan Doyle's case of leucocythaemia was treated first with iron and quinine without any result and then with arsenic 'in large doses, in combination with the iodide and chlorate of potash', which 'combined with a liberal diet, and strict attention to the state of the bowels, has been remarkably efficacious'...."
5668. Gerling, David Ross. "An Informal Interview with Lorenzo Silva." World Literature Today 76, no. 2 (2002): 92.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Interviews Lorenzo Silva about his writings. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Q. There's always the possibility that your readers will demand a serialization of your protagonists, as occurred with Arthur Conan Doyle and Raymond Chandler. Would you be willing to accede to their wishes, or would you prefer to avoid being typed as a crime-novel writer? A. I would like to write about different things, but I won't answer no to this question because I've had a very good time writing these two detective novels...."
5669. Gingrich, Nadine. "'Every Man Who Dies, Dies for You and Me. See You Be Worthy': The Image of the Hero as Rhetorical Motivation in Unofficial War Propaganda, 1914-1918." War, Literature & the Arts: An International Journal of the Humanities 17, no. 1/2 (2005): 108-117.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article examines the image of the hero as rhetorical motivation in unofficial war propaganda in Great Britain during World War I. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Peter Buitenhuis says that the 'myth and romance of the trenches,' propagated by authors such as Kipling and Conan Doyle, served to make 'the trench the moral as well as the physical bulwark against the Hun.'" 5670. Glaser, Susan. "The Missing Link: Connections Between Musical and Linguistic Prosody." Contemporary Music Review 19, no. 3 (2000): 131.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the relationship between music and linguistic prosody. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...It should be noted that certain forms of speech contain no semantic information at all. For example, as Jakobson points out, interjections may carry no semantic meaning. He writes, 'The purely emotive stratum in language is presented by the interjections. They differ from the means of referential language both by their sound pattern (peculiar sound sequences or even sounds elsewhere unusual) and by their syntactic role (they are not components but equivalents of sentences). 'Tut! Tut! said McGinty': the complete utterance of Conan Doyle's character consists of two suction clicks...."
5671. Glazener, Nancy. "Book reviews." American Literature 70, no. 2 (1998): 407.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book, Fiction and the American Literary Marketplace: The Role of Newspaper Syndicates in America, 1860-1900, by Charles A. Johnningsmeier. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "... For lucidity of writing and thoroughness and accuracy of research, this study deserves high praise. It will no doubt be an important resource for other scholars of publishing as well as for critics exploring the publishing histories of particular writers who published in syndicates, writers as varied as Stephen Crane, Arthur Conan Doyle, Mary E. Wilkins Freeman, and Henry James...."
5672. Glinert, Lewis. "Golem! the Making of a Modern Myth." Symposium 55, no. 2 (2001): 78.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Explores the origins and significance of the myth of the Golem. First recorded use of the word Golem; Revival of the motif of the Golem in the medieval period; Historic intersection of Jewish and Christian traditions. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...No one has ever seen Rosenberg's 'document.' In fact, everything about it and about the history of the Golem suggests that this was a work of fiction. But it was no less remarkable for that: it drew on Alexander Dumas, Daniel Defoe, Conan Doyle, yet it was the work of a prominent Warsaw rabbi and Kabbalist...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5673. Glowka, Arthur Wayne, Megan Melancon, Adrian Fairchild, Leona Gray, Zachary Haley, Niyatee Kher, Holly Leskovics, Leah Stanley, and Danielle C. Wyckoff. "Among the New Words." American Speech 78, no. 1 (2003): 93-102.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents new words or phrases in the English language. Among them is one that references Doyle. Baskerville effect; Hound of the Baskervilles effect n [from Arthur Conan Doyle's The Hound of the Baskervilles] Death caused by fear 2001 Dec 24 Washington Post A7 (Lexis-Nexis) In Mandarin, Cantonese and Japanese, the words 'death' and 'four' are pronounced nearly identically. As a result, the number four causes anxiety and stress among many Chinese and Japanese.... The researchers found there were 13 percent more deaths from heart attacks among Americans of Chinese and Japanese descent on the fourth day of the month than would have been expected....'We call this mortality peak the 'Baskerville effect,' the researchers wrote in the Dec. 22-29 issue of British Medical Journal [sic]. 2002 Jan 7 Cheryl Clark San Diego Union-Tribune B1 (Lexis-Nexis) His paper, published last month in the British Medical Journal [sic], is titled 'The Hound of the Baskervilles Effect: Natural Experiment on the Influence of Psychological Stress on Timing of Death.' Mar 4 Bill Hendrick Atlanta Journal-Constitution 1C (Lexis-Nexis) Phillips and his colleagues dubbed their finding 'the Hound of the Baskervilles effect,' and it was published under that title in the respected British Medical Journal [sic].

5674. Goetsch, Paul. "Reader Figures in Narrative." Style 38, no. 2 (2004): 188-202.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the role of the reader in the narrative theory. Use of a communication model to define the types of readers; Advice on manipulating a fictive reader; Description of the paradigmatic function of a reader. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...There is no doubt that many narratives are able to do without fictive and fictional readers. This does not imply, however, that reader figures are a negligible instrument of reader control. How important they are is demonstrated, for instance, by the fact that writers often transfer some of their functions to characters such as painters or musicians or mirror figures such as Conan Doyle's Doctor Watson or Henry James's ficelles...."

5675. Goldberg, Carl. "The Secret that Guilty Confessions Fail to Disclose." American Journal of Psychotherapy 56, no. 2 (2002): 178.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "In my work with destructive clients, I have found suspect the notion that our deepest fear is that we are malevolent. By use of intuitive insights about the nature of confession in the writings of three literary psychologists--Edgar Allan Poe, Leo Tolstoy, and Fyodor Dostoevsky--and from clinical evidence in a case study of a client who confessed to a crime, I seek to show the actual psychodynamics at work in the confession of a crime." Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...These literary psychologists pioneered the practice of psychological detective work long before the advent of modern psychology. They most notably include: William Shakespeare, Edgar Allan Poe, Leo Tolstoy, Fyodor Dostoevsky, Nathan Hawthorne, Mark Twain, Herman Melville, Joseph Conrad, Arthur Conan Doyle, and Franz Kafka...."

5676. Golden, Janet Lynne. "Medical Readers' Theater: A Guide and Scripts (review)." Journal of the History of Medicine and Allied Sciences 58, no. 1 (2003): 112-113.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to Doyle. "Seven of the fourteen scripts are adapted from the stories of two well-known physician writers: William Carlos Williams and Richard Seltzer. Two scripts are from stories by Susan Onthank Mates; the other authors are Pearl Buck, Arthur Conan Doyle, Katherine Anne Porter, Mary E. Wilkins Freeman, and Margaret Lamb. The adaptations are effective, but are no substitutes for the original stories. The audience might therefore be given guidance on how to locate the original pieces should their interest be piqued."

5677. Goldsborough, L. Gordon. "Reginald Buller: The Poet-Scientist of Mushroom City." Manitoba History, no. (2004): 25p.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Many stories are told about A.H. Reginald Buller, one of the University of Manitoba's first science professors. This article focuses on aspects of his life and times that have eluded the story-tellers, collectively revealing a person who is more complex and human than the stereotype allows. Like most Winnipeggers in the early 20th century, Buller had humble roots. Almost immediately upon arrival in Winnipeg, Manitoba, Buller signaled a new state of affairs. Buller's contributions to various fields and to the University of Manitoba are highlighted in the article. Footnote 73 contains a reference to Doyle: A. H. R. Buller, "Progress of Science", 17 October 1912, published 1913. Dafoe Library microfilm FC16 C105 No. 84231. It is doubtful that Buller's physicist colleagues shared his views on paranormal phenomena. In 1920, Frank Allen dismissed spiritualism advocated by prominent figures like Sir Arthur Conan Doyle as "humbug." ("Allen Says Lodge is Apostle of Humbug : Manitoba University Scientist Ridicules Scientist's Views on Spiritualism" MFP, 10 May 1920)

5678. Goldstein, Lisa. "Historical Adventure/Great Heroes/Science Fiction & Fantasy." School Library Journal 53, no. 7 (2007): 123-123.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the books "Historical Adventure," adapted by Henry & Shannon Lowry, illustrated by Dan Spiegle, "Great Heroes" and "Science Fiction & Fantasy," adapted by Seymour Reit, illustrated by Ernie Colon. "Be aware of a typo in the biography of Arthur Conan Doyle in Great Heroes that states that he was born in 1959, instead of 1859."

5679. Gomel, Elana. "Oscar Wilde, The Picture of Dorian Gray, and the (Un)Death of the Author." Narrative 12, no. 1 (2003): 74-92.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes references to Doyle. "Oscar Wilde wrote his last book twenty-four years after his death. The book, entitled Oscar Wilde from Purgatory: Psychic Messages, was edited by Hester Travers Smith, the medium who received the messages while in a trance and inscribed them through the process known as 'automatic writing.' The book's publication occasioned a lively exchange of letters in the spiritualist journal Occult Review, in which Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and his opponent, C. W. Soal, debated the connection between the identity of the writer and the textual persona of the author. Doyle considered the messages to be genuine on the basis of his stylistic analysis of the text: 'It is difficult to note these close analogies of style and to doubt that an Oscar Wilde brain is at the back of it' (305). Soal, on the other hand, pointed out that such analogies are easily counterfeited and suggested that the author of the text was the medium herself, even though she may not have been aware of her forgery....The sides in the authorship debate parallel the positions taken by Doyle and Soal: while some critics believe that there must be a direct connection between the writer and the work, with style (or content) reflecting personality, others argue that the author is a textual phantom, a discursive construct whose relation to a specific person is loose and perhaps even irrelevant....Oscar Wilde was not the only writer to be kept busy after death; in the heyday of spiritualism, many (including, eventually, Doyle himself) suffered a similar fate. But Wilde's posthumous Gothic romance was special because it so eerily resembled his own Gothic parables of authorship...."

5680. Gordon, Anita, and Phyllis Levy Mandell. "Reading Frenzy: Teens Reveal the Thrill of Reading." School Library Journal 50, no. 5 (2004): 86-87.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the video recording "Reading Frenzy: Teens Reveal the Thrill of Reading." Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Several speakers champion Tom Clancy and John Grisham books as well as those by Mark Twain and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle...."

5681. Goring, Rosemary. "Revealing a dark and divided psyche in our favourite books; first word." The Herald (Glasgow), Jul 26, 2003: 12.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The results of the search to find Ottakar's best-loved Scottish book have finally been announced. Although it pains me as a pessimist not to have an opportunity to rant about the dumbing down of Scottish taste, it's a fascinating, yet slightly disturbing list. The top 20 books are as follows: 1 Trainspotting, Irvine Welsh; 2 Sunset Song, Lewis Grassie Gibbon; 3 Kidnapped, Robert Louis Stevenson; 4 Treasure Island, RLS; 5 The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie, Muriel Spark; 6 The Wasp Factory, Iain Banks; 7 The Private Memoirs and Confessions of a Justified Sinner, James Hogg; 8 The Thirty-Nine Steps, John Buchan; 9 The Crow Road, Iain Banks; 10 Lanark, Alasdair Gray; 11 Black and White, Ian Rankin; 12 Ivanhoe, Sir Walter Scott; 13 The Wind in the Willows, Kenneth Grahame; 14 The Hound of the Baskervilles, Sir Arthur

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Conan Doyle; 15 The House with the Green Shutters, George Douglas Brown; 16 Peter Pan, J M Barrie; 17 Cross Stitch, Diana Gabaldon; 18 Dr Jeckyll and Mr Hyde, RLS; 19 Rob Roy, Sir Walter Scott; 20 Wax Fruit Trilogy, Guy McCrone...."

5682. Gough, William C., and Robert L. Schaklett. "What Science Can and can't Say About Spirits Part 1." Journal of Religion & Psychical Research 23, no. 3 (2000): 124.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "In this three-part series of articles the authors develop an expanded model of universal connectiveness that includes spirit in a scientific framework." Includes a passing reference to Doyle.

5683. Grady, Wayne. "Underwater dinosaurs." Canadian Geographic 121, no. 2 (2001): 72.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Details the search for ichthyosaur fossils in the Sikanni Chief River in British Columbia by Elizabeth Nicholls, a specialist in extinct marine reptiles. Information on ichthyosaurs; Description of the site; Discoveries made by Nicholls and her team. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Ichthyosaurs were large reptiles that resembled fish, usually three to five metres in length, with flat, vertical tails and long, tapering snouts filled with dozens of conical teeth. The teeth strongly suggest they were fast-moving predators, feasting on belemnites, the squidlike animals that teemed in the nutrient-rich water off the ancient super-continent of Pangaea. They so resembled modern-day dolphins that when Sir Arthur Conan Doyle -- author of the Sherlock Holmes mysteries and such scientific adventure stories as The Lost World -- saw a school of dolphins swimming beside his ship while he was honeymooning on the Adriatic Sea in the 1880s, his first thought was that he had discovered a surviving population of long-lost ichthyosaurs, living fossils from the long-dead past...."

5684. Grann, David. "The Lost City of Z." New Yorker 81, no. 28 (2005): 56-81.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the expedition led by Brazilian financier James Lynch, to search for signs of Colonel Percy Harrison Fawcett, a British explorer who, in 1925, had disappeared in the forest, along with his son and another companion, in the Amazon, which Fawcett had named, the City of Z. Includes passing references to Doyle. "...Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Lynch learned, had reportedly drawn on Fawcett's explorations of the Amazon for his 1912 novel 'The Lost World,' in which explorers in South America 'disappear into the unknown' and find, on a remote plateau, a land where dinosaurs still roam....Fawcett was fifty-seven years old, nearly three times as old as Jack and Raleigh, and his hair was gray and thinning, yet he was strikingly fit. He was over six feet tall, and his long, lean legs were unusually strong. His blue eyes burned like a preacher's. He wore baggy, lightweight, tear-resistant pants, riding boots, and a broad-rimmed Stetson hat; in photographs taken soon after the trip began, he eerily matches the descriptions of Lord John Roxton, a protagonist of The Lost World. At one point, Conan Doyle writes of Roxton, 'Something there was of Napoleon III, something of Don Quixote, and yet again something which was the essence of the English country gentleman....'" 5685. Grassby, Paul. "Prescribing controlled drugs." Practice Nurse 30, no. 2 (2005): 24-27.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Explains the provisions of the law on the prescription of controlled drugs by nurse practitioners and pharmacist supplementary prescribers. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Until the early 1900s, drug abuse and addiction were not understood and legislation concerning the use of narcotics, and other drugs of abuse, was sparse. Coca Cola contained cocaine and was sold in pharmacies, and many famous figures of the day including Freud and Arthur Conan Doyle openly used drugs such as cocaine. Opium was also used extensively in the American Civil War...."

5686. Grattan-Guinness, I. "Beyond Categories: The Lives and Works of Charles Sanders Peirce (Essay)." Annals of Science 51, no. 5 (1994): 531.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book Charles Sanders Peirce: A Life, by Joseph Brent. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "Peirce's principal antagonist appears to have been Simon Newcomb (1835-1909), like Charles a student of Benjamin Peirce and much involved in his career with the same branches of science; he seems to have developed a deep antagonism to Peirce on both personal and scientific grounds...Whether or not he was the model for Conan Doyle's Professor Moriarty,(6) he certainly stalked the later stages of Peirce's professional non-career...." Footnote six reads: See B. E. Schaefer, "The astronomical Sherlock Holmes," Mercury, 22 (1933), no. 1, 9-13.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5687. Gray, Christopher M. "The Struggle for the Soul of American Foreign Policy." Orbis 43, no. 3 (1999): 497.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews books on foreign policy in the United States. What America Owes the World: The Struggle for the Soul of Foreign Policy, by H.W. Brands; America's Imperial Burden: Is the Past Prologue?, by Ernest Lefever; War and the Illiberal Conscience, by Christopher Coker. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Even in liberal Britain evidence could be found for these irrational, illiberal emotions. Those two respectable Fabian Socialists, H. G. Wells and George Bernard Shaw, entertained fantasies of total war and mass euthanasia in their writings (pp. 26-30, 160-61). Just like the Nazis a generation later, Wells and Shaw believed in snuffing out lives unworthy of value. Even Arthur Conan Doyle, a fervent foe of capital punishment, published a novel in 1912 that glorified the massacre of a subhuman race...."
5688. Green, Deidre. "On...the...Net@cma.ca." CMAJ: Canadian Medical Association Journal 160, no. 6 (1999): 873.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the Canadian Medical Association's online service, called Ovid Search: Link to Electronic Resources (OSLER) and information on the first annual OSLER contest. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Now that we have a significant number of seasoned searchers, we're throwing out a searching challenge. Here are the details. Only 1 article in the entire MEDLINE database was written about 2 famous physicians, Sir William Osler and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. What is the Unique Identifier number assigned to this article?"
5689. ———. "We have a WINNER!" CMAJ: Canadian Medical Association Journal 160, no. 11 (1999): 1546.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Identifies the winner of the Ovid Search: Link to Electronic Resources (OSLER) contest. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...In our contest, we asked users to provide the Unique Identifier number attached to the only article in the MEDLINE database written about 2 famous physicians - Osler and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. The correct answer was this reference: Key JD, Rodin AE. William Osler and Arthur Conan Doyle versus the antivivisectionists: some lessons from history for today. Mayo Clin Proc 1984;59(3): 189-96; 84166571...."
5690. Greene, David Mason. "Guide to records." American Record Guide 60, no. 2 (1997): 142.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the music recordings 'Willow, Willow,' 'Six Dukes Went Afishin,' 'British Waterside,' and many more by Percy Grainger. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...The New Grove offers two closely-printed pages of Grainger's works, divided about half-and-half into original compositions and folksong settings. But they include no major works--no operas, no symphonies, no concertos. What they do include is innumerable settings of the same piece for different solo and instrumental combinations. This is Volume 2 of 'The Grainger Editio'. Of the 21 songs, 13 are in some measure arrangements. Part of the attraction is that 14 are first recordings. The remainder are settings of Kipling (6), Longfellow (1) and Conan Doyle (1)...."
5691. Greenway, Betty. "William Forever: Richmal Crompton's Unusual Achievement." The Lion and the Unicorn 26, no. 1 (2002): 98-111.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...As did Conan Doyle with his famous creation, Richmal Crompton wanted periodically to give up William. She never did, continuing to make notes for another William story up to her death....":
5692. Greenwood, Scott C. "Contracting revisited: Lessons learned in literacy differentiation." Journal of Adolescent & Adult Literacy 46, no. 4 (2002): 338.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Argues that learning contracts provide the balance between teacher choice and student initiative that is necessary for differentiation of instruction. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...This is a trendy age, and serial books are very popular, but I found my students willing to tackle Jack London and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, in addition to V.C. Andrews and Christopher Pike...."
5693. Gregg, Robert. "Unreal Cities: Bombay, London, New York." Radical History Review, no. (1998): 18p.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an article on teaching the history of cities, Bombay, London and New York which will provide students with a comparative perspective that enables them to question assumptions about history. Origins of the course; Course description and outline; Use of movies in teaching the course.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...And the students revealed their abilities most clearly in their papers, which were of a uniformly high standard, dealing with a wide range of topics...from P. G. Wodehouse's New York, to Conan Doyle's London..."

5694. Gribben, Alan. "Mark Twain." American Literary Scholarship 2003, no. (2005): 83-109.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Critics also fail to recognize four limitations of authors' creativity: repeating themselves, failing to recognize or repeat a success (Arthur Conan Doyle is cited), being unable to shift genres, and failing in late work...."
5695. Grosvenor, Ian, Martin Lawn, and Kate Rousmaniere. "Imaging Past Schooling: The Necessity for Montage." Review of Education, Pedagogy & Cultural Studies 22, no. 1 (2000): 71.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on modernization in Northern Europe and North America. Demand for rapid accommodation to new conditions; Transformations in economic and industrial structures; Effects of mass migration on workforce; Description of the modern school and city. Includes a quotation from Doyle. "'Look at those big, isolated clumps of buildings arising up above the slates, like brick islands in a lead-coloured sea'. 'The board-schools.' 'Light-houses, my boy! Beacons of the future! Capsules with hundreds in each, out of which will spring the wiser, better England of the future.'" (Conan Doyle, "The Naval Treaty," 1893)
5696. Grove, Allen W. "Rontgen's Ghosts: Photography, X-Rays, and the Victorian Imagination." Literature and Medicine 16, no. 2 (1997): 141-173.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes multiple references to Doyle.
5697. Grove, Nicola. "English at the edge: a perspective from special needs." Changing English: Studies in Reading & Culture 5, no. 2 (1998): 161.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the tensions involved when English curriculum in Great Britain is differentiated to meet the needs of pupils with severe and profound learning difficulties. Argument that emphasis on cognitive and linguistic skills causes narrow definitions of literacy and literature; Alternative perspective which considers the needs of pupils. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...A teacher colleague attempted to use Conan Doyle short stories with the school leavers, but abandoned them after a few lessons because of the difficulty of holding their attention...."
5698. Grund, Gary R. "Do The Windows Open? Stories (Book)." Studies in Short Fiction 35, no. 4 (1998): 393.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book Do the Windows Open? Stories, by Julie Hecht. Includes passing references to Doyle. "...While Hecht's alienated, self-obsessed narrator and her vague sense of emptiness and disillusionment might suggest a minimalist approach to fiction--consider, too, the endless references to brand names, sitcoms, Gotham trivia--Hecht is no minimalist. Or the contrary, her collection is more akin, I think, to traditional short fiction, particularly to other synchronic series--each story at once both independent and interdependent with all the other stories in the collection--despite the fact that there is little character development and even less plot. This format was especially popular at the turn of the century in periodicals, but adapted by writers as diverse as Joyce, Lawrence, Hemingway, Faulkner, and Conan Doyle. Hecht's 'world-renowned reproductive surgeon Dr. Arnold Loquesto' is as ubiquitous as Doyle's Professor Moriarty, and traces of earlier episodes are highly recurrent, almost palimpsestic, in later ones...."
5699. Gubar, Susan. "Minstrelsy's Racechanging Numbers: A Postscript to Racechange and the Fictions of Identity." MFS Modern Fiction Studies 49, no. 3 (2003): 614-626.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Even the scholars of overtly racist British and South African literary productions emphasize how cross-racial representations function productively to open up the possibility of new conceptualizations or deconstructions of race. Jinny Huh's approach to Arthur Conan Doyle's stories and articles, and to their critical interpreters, links anxieties about failed racial detection to the emergence of a genre, detective fiction, that hinges on the very issues of specularity that obsess the authors of passing fiction...."
5700. Guttman, Robert. "Reviews." Military History 14, no. 3 (1997): 66.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book The Hollow Crown, by Geoffrey Richardson. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Like all serious students of the Wars of the Roses, Richardson has his own theory about England's most famous murder mystery: Who really killed the two princes in the Tower of London? Utilizing a process of deductive reasoning as subtle as anything contrived by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle or Agatha Christie, the author has come up with a surprising solution...."

5701. Gwiasda, Karl E. "Bibliography: Relations of Literature and Science, 1996." Configurations 6, no. 3 (1998): 403-493.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes entries with reference to Doyle: Hendershot, Cyndy. "The Animal Without: Masculinity and Imperialism in The Island of Dr. Moreau and The Adventure of the Speckled Band." NCS 10 (1996): 1-32; Frank, Lawrence. "Dreaming the Medusa: Imperialism, Primitivism, and Sexuality in Arthur Conan Doyle's The Sign of the Four." Signs 22 (Autumn 1996): 52-85; Thomas, Ronald R. "Making Darkness Visible: Capturing the Criminal and Observing the Law in Victorian Photography and Detective Fiction." In 22, pp. 134-168.

5702. Hackett, Abigail, and Robin Dennell. "Neanderthals as fiction in archaeological narrative." Antiquity 77, no. 298 (2003): 816-827.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The authors deconstruct the fictional image of Neanderthals, showing why we see them in the way we do. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...We also exclude novels set in the present but encountering survivals from the remote past. The most famous of these is, of course, Conan Doyle's The Lost World, first published in 1912, and featuring Professor Challenger's expedition to South America, and the rescue of a local tribe from primitive, Pirhecanthropine Neanderthal (or Piltown) ape-men...."

5703. Hall, Peter. "Gardening at Night." Print 57, no. 4 (2003): 41-49.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the photographs of Gregory Crewdson. Description of his cinematic suburbia; Information on his art film "Beneath the Roses"; Content of his book "Twilight"; Evaluation of his photographs. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...A popular pursuit among Victorian photographers was to exploit the supposed authenticity of the camera eye to fake the apparition of spirits in a print, and this practice was famously continued by the English girls Elsie Wright and Frances Griffith in 1917 with their creation of the Cottingley fairy photos, which were embraced by that eager spiritualist Arthur Conan Doyle...."

5704. Hanbury-Tenison, Robin. "Pistols, ticks and the lost world." Geographical 68, no. 7 (1996): 43.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the author's account on his search for ipecac in Brazil's wilderness. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...It was these cliffs, seen by Colonel Fawcett when he was surveying the international border, and described by him to his friend Conan Doyle, which were the model for The Lost World, and not Roraima in the Guiana Highlands, as it is often believed...."

5705. Handelsman, Jo. "Toward a New Synthesis? DNA and Cell Biology--Comparative and Controversial." DNA & Cell Biology 26, no. 10 (2007): 697-698.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The editorial article offers information about the changes in the content of the "DNA and Cell Biology" journal. It opens with a quote from Doyle: "Our ideas must be as broad as Nature if they are to interpret Nature."

5706. Hanson, Carter F. "Lost Among White Others: Late-Victorian Lost Race Novels for Boys." Nineteenth-Century Contexts 23, no. 4 (2001): 497.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines the popularity of lost race stories in British fiction. Delineations of ideology within British lost race tales; Racial similarity between the British race and the lost race; Social critics of lost societies reinforcing the superiority of the British culture. Includes multiple references to Doyle's The Lost World.

5707. Hardman, Francisco Foot. "On the planes of oblivion: The great Amazonian fault." Journal of Latin American Cultural Studies (13569325) 16, no. 3 (2007): 309-324.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article focuses on the works of Márcio Souza, a Brazilian writer of prose fiction and most of his productions addresses with themes concerning the Amazon regions in Brazil. Includes a

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- passing reference to Doyle. "...Besides these, only in one other novel, in our opinion, has the author succeeded in formally radicalizing his political and aesthetic beliefs. This was in O fim do terceiro mundo (1990a), which in making use of the hybridization of other parodic elements -- the fantasy science fiction novel (namely The Lost World (1912) by Conan Doyle), the conversion of authors past and present into characters, the incorporation of canonical literary works into the plot, essayistic digression, reportage, travel literature, etc. -- was always on the side of farce, of costume comedy and the theatre of the absurd...."
5708. Harlow, Barbara. "Sappers in the Stacks: Colonial Archives, Land Mines, and Truth Commissions." Boundary 2 25, no. 2 (1998): 179.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on the book Imperialism and Orientalism: A Documentary Source Book, edited by Mia Carter which is sourced from Edward Said's book Orientalism and Culture and Imperialism. Includes multiple references to Doyle.
5709. Harper, Margaret Mills. "Nemo: George Yeats and her Automatic Script." New Literary History 33, no. 2 (2002): 291-314.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Spiritualism was also changing as the Victorian period faded into the Edwardian and Europe slouched toward the transformations of the Great War, waning and then reasserting itself in the 1890s and through the War. The renewal featured a greater emphasis on voices, either spoken or written, and correspondingly somewhat less on physical phenomena, so that Arthur Conan Doyle could suggest in 1926 that 'materialisation may have been more common in the past than in the present,' and that 'in these days complete materialisation is very rare.'..." The note for this passage (12) continues the Doyle reference: Arthur Conan Doyle, The History of Spiritualism (New York, 1926), vol. 2, pp. 209-10. Doyle's wife Jean, it should be remembered, had conducted automatic writing a few years earlier. See Pheneas Speaks; direct spirit communications in the family circle, reported by Arthur Conan Doyle (London, 1927). See also Ruth Brandon, The Spiritualists: The Passion for the Occult in the Nineteenth and Twentieth Centuries (New York, 1983), p. 226.
5710. Harris, Marla. "Not Black and/or White: Reading Racial Difference in Heliodorus's Ethiopica and Pauline Hopkins's Of One Blood." African American Review 35, no. 3 (2001): 375.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on racial difference depicted in the novel 'Ethiopica' by Heliodorus and 'Of One Blood' by Pauline Hopkins. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...In imagining the lost Ethiopian city of Telassar, Hopkins borrows not only from contemporary debates about African history, but also from recent archaeology and literature. Although the buried cities of Pompeii and Herculaneum had been excavated over a century earlier, the nineteenth century witnessed a succession of important archaeological events, which appeared to lend historical credibility to what previously were thought to be myths or fictions: Karl Richard Lepsius's excavations at Meroe, Heinrich Schliemann's discovery of Troy, Sir Arthur Evans's finds at Knossos, and Karl Gottlieb Mauch's purported locating of King Solomon's Mines in Zimbabwe. In the popular fiction of the later nineteenth century, too, Hopkins would have found the 'lost civilization' theme widely deployed by writers like H. G. Wells, A. Conan Doyle, and H. Rider Haggard...."
5711. Harrod, Lois Marie. "Vellum." Literary Review 51, no. 2 (2008): 213-218.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Vellum," by Matt Donovan. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...There's 'Thumb Trick' tricked out with Houdini, Arthur Conan Doyle's diary with experiences from the other world...."
5712. Haslam, Richard. "'Melmoth' (OW): Gothic Modes in The Picture of Dorian Gray." Irish Studies Review 12, no. 3 (2004): 303-314.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the gothic mode of the literary work "Melmoth the Wanderer" by John Melmoth in Ireland. Notification of the influence of the book on the apparitions of Dorian Gray; Usage of the versions of "The Picture of Dorian Gray" to explore some of the artistic consequences of Oscar Wilde's engagement with the gothic mode; Importance of modes and moods for the books' aesthetics. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Dorian also suffers under a divided aim in style; it too is interesting from more than one point of view [40]. Even after his final revisions and the publication of the 1891 edition, Wilde confessed in a letter to Arthur Conan Doyle that the moral was still 'too obvious'(p.478)[41]. Note 41 reads: "Although the date of the letter is not definite, Doyle's comments suggest that the reference is to the 1891 edition; see Letters, p. 478, n. 1."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5713. Hastings, Max. "Battles and Hastings." History Today 49, no. 11 (1999): 62.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reflects on the roots of the author's interest in history. Books read by the author; Observations on the attitude of teachers and pupils toward history; Teachers who influenced the author's interest in history. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "I was born in 1945, into a generation in which history and romance were still inextricably entwined. We read historical fiction avidly from the age of eight or nine; Conan Doyle's medieval tales and his exploits of Brigadier Gerard. Rosemary Sutcliffe, D.K. Broster, G.A. Henty, and-from my teens - a lot of Scott...."
5714. Haubrich, Joseph G. "Subordinated Debt: Tough Love for Banks?" Economic Commentary, no. (1998): 4p.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines the reasoning behind mandatory subordinate-debt proposals in Cleveland, Ohio and assesses the evidence on their possible success. Includes a reference to Doyle and The Sign of Four. "...The changed incentives lead directly to subordinated debt's other advantage--increased information. Because sub-debt holders put their money on the line, they have an incentive to monitor and observe the bank. It's as if banking regulators (FDIC, Federal Reserve, Comptroller's Office, the states) have enlisted a group of 'Baker Street Irregulars,'(n3) an auxiliary force of interested persons who monitor changes in bank performance between regular examinations. The results of the 'irregulars' investigations become public knowledge through the price of subordinated debt...."
5715. Hawkins, Desmond. "Literary supplement: The glory of Gilbert and Sullivan." Contemporary Review 265, no. 1542 (1994): 46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book Gilbert & Sullivan: Interviews and Recollections, edited by Harold Orel. Includes a reference to another work about Doyle. "This is the latest addition to an interesting Macmillan series of composite biographies contributed by the contemporaries of their subjects. What we are given, in effect, is an anthology of the first impressions of the generation which responded to the swelling acclaim that matured into an enduring fame. The editor making this selection is Harold Orel whose previous subjects in the series have been Kipling and Conan Doyle. His depth of knowledge of the literature of the period adds a wealth of annotation which clarifies and enriches much that was in origin anecdotal and impromptu...."
5716. Haynes, Christine. "Reassessing "Genius" in Studies of Authorship: The State of the Discipline." Book History 8, no. (2005): 287-320.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Applying the notions of the 'literary field' and the 'communications circuit' developed by Pierre Bourdieu and Robert Darnton, respectively, to the careers of three modernist writers, Joseph Conrad, Arnold Bennett, and Arthur Conan Doyle, this study interprets the practices and products of these writers in terms of their structural positions within the late Victorian literary marketplace. Although its conclusions are limited somewhat by its focus on these three authors, this work does an admirable job of combining publishing history, nonliterary discourse analysis, and literary criticism...." The note for this passage cites Peter D. McDonald, British Literary Culture and Publishing Practice, 1880-1914 (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1997).
5717. Hays, Carl. "Venus on the Half-Shell and Others." Booklist 104, no. 8 (2007): 33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "Venus on the Half-Shell and Others" by Philip Jose Farmer, with a passing reference to Doyle.
5718. Hayward, Rhodri. "Demonology, Neurology, and Medicine in Edwardian Britain." Bulletin of the History of Medicine 78, no. 1 (2004): 37-58.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Note 6 includes a citation for Doyle: "Eighteen fifty-three was the date that most practicing spiritualists claimed for the movement's arrival in Britain: see Arthur Conan Doyle, The History of Spiritualism (London: Cassell, 1926)...."
5719. Healy, Benjamin. "Who's Who." Atlantic Monthly 295, no. 3 (2005): 140-140.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article presents subject index for the April 2005 issue of the periodical "Atlantic Monthly." Includes an entry for Doyle: "Conan Doyle, Arthur, calculated mournfulness of, 112"

5720. Heathcote, Graham. "80 Years Ago, Christmas Briefly Halted Fighting of World War I." Dayton Daily News (Dayton, OH), Dec 24, 1994: 8A.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The book quotes [Oswald Tilley]'s letter, and another by German Lt. Johannes Niemann of the 133rd Saxon Regiment: "Suddenly a Tommy came with a football, kicking already and making fun, and then began a football match. We marked the goals with our caps. Teams were quickly established for a match on the frozen mud, and the Fritzes beat the Tommies, 3-2."; Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, creator of Sherlock Holmes and a historian of the war, called the Christmas truce "one human episode amid all the atrocities."; Gen. Sir Horace Smith-Dorrien, commanding British II Corps, wrote in his diary Dec. 2, 1914: "Weird stories come in from the trenches about fraternizing with the Germans. . . . I therefore intend to issue instructions to my Corps not to fraternize in any way whatever with the enemy for fear one day they may be lulled into such a state of confidence as to be caught off their guard and rushed."

5721. ———. "Christmas 1914: A truce in the trenches/WWI foes briefly brothers in peace; [2 STAR Edition]." Houston Chronicle, Dec 24, 1994: 16.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The book quotes [Oswald Tilley]'s letter, and another by German Lt. Johannes Niemann of the 133rd Saxon Regiment: "Suddenly a Tommy came with a football, kicking already and making fun, and then began a football match. We marked the goals with our caps. Teams were quickly established for a match on the frozen mud, and the Fritzes beat the Tommies 3-2."; Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, creator of Sherlock Holmes and a historian of the war, called the Christmas truce "one human episode amid all the atrocities."; Gen. Sir Horace Smith-Dorrien, commanding British II Corps, wrote in his diary on Dec. 2, 1914: "Weird stories come in from the trenches about fraternizing with the Germans . . . I therefore intend to issue instructions to my Corps not to fraternize in any way whatever with the enemy for fear one day they may be lulled into such a state of confidence as to be caught off their guard and rushed."; There is no report of anyone being punished as a result of the Christmas truce. The war began again in earnest in January 1915, and further incidents of fraternization never matched the scale of the 1914 truce.

5722. ———. "Christmas spirit brought temporary peace 80 years ago; [M1,M2 Edition]." State Journal Register (Springfield, IL) 1994: 1.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The book quotes [Oswald Tilley]'s letter, and another by German Lt. Johannes Niemann of the 133rd Saxon Regiment: "Suddenly a Tommy came with a football, kicking already and making fun, and then began a football match. We marked the goals with our caps. Teams were quickly established for a match on the frozen mud, and the Fritzes beat the Tommies 3-2." Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, creator of Sherlock Holmes and a historian of the war, called the Christmas truce "one human episode amid all the atrocities."; Gen. Sir Horace Smith-Dorrien, commanding British II Corps, wrote in his diary on Dec. 2, 1914: "Weird stories come in from the trenches about fraternizing with the Germans . . . I therefore intend to issue instructions to my Corps not to fraternize in any way whatever with the enemy for fear one day they may be lulled into such a state of confidence as to be caught off their guard and rushed."; There is no report of anyone being punished as a result of the Christmas truce. The war began again in earnest in January 1915, and further incidents of fraternization never matched the scale of the 1914 truce.

5723. ———. "In 1915, War Came Briefly to a Halt, Combatants Called Spontaneous Truce on Christmas Day." St. Louis Post-Dispatch (St. Louis, MO), Dec 24, 1994: 09B.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Eighty years ago, on the first Christmas Day of World War I, British and German troops put down their guns and celebrated peacefully together in the no-man's land between their trenches.; In some places, festivities began when German troops lit candles on Christmas trees on their parapets so the British sentries a few hundred yards away could see them.; Pvt. Oswald Tilley of the London Rifle Brigade wrote to his parents: "Just you think that while you were eating your turkey etc., I was out talking and shaking hands with the very men I had been trying to kill a few hours before!! It was astounding!"

5724. ———. "In the trenches of WWI, Christmas delivered a truce. All along the line that day, before the generals found out, enemies asked why they were trying to kill each other." Orange County Register, Dec 24, 1994:

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

A09.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The book quotes [Oswald Tilley]'s letter, and another by German Lt. Johannes Niemann of the 133rd Saxon Regiment: "Suddenly a Tommy came with a football, kicking already and making fun, and then began a football match. We marked the goals with our caps. Teams were quickly established for a match on the frozen mud, and the Fritzes beat the Tommies 3-2."; Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, creator of Sherlock Holmes and a historian of the war, called the Christmas truce "one human episode amid all the atrocities."; Gen. Sir Horace Smith-Dorrien, commanding British II Corps, wrote in his diary Dec. 2, 1914: "Weird stories come in from the trenches about fraternizing with the Germans ... I therefore intend to issue instructions to my Corps not to fraternize in any way whatever with the enemy for fear one day they may be lulled into such a state of confidence as to be caught off their guard and rushed."; There is no report of anyone being punished as a result of the Christmas truce. The war began again in earnest in January 1915, and further incidents of fraternization never matched the scale of the 1914 truce.

5725. ———. "Truce: Foes Shared Holiday on Battlefield." Times - Picayune (New Orleans, LA), Dec 24, 1994: A10.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The book quotes [Oswald Tilley]'s letter, and another by German Lt. Johannes Niemann of the 133rd Saxon Regiment: "Suddenly a Tommy came with a football, kicking already and making fun, and then began a football match. We marked the goals with our caps. Teams were quickly established for a match on the frozen mud, and the Fritzes beat the Tommies 3-2."; Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, creator of Sherlock Holmes and a historian of the war, called the Christmas truce "one human episode amid all the atrocities."; Gen. Sir Horace Smith-Dorrien, commanding British II Corps, wrote in his diary on Dec. 2, 1914: "Weird stories come in from the trenches about fraternizing with the Germans. . . . I therefore intend to issue instructions to my Corps not to fraternize in any way whatever with the enemy for fear one day they may be lulled into such a state of confidence as to be caught off their guard and rushed."; There is no report of anyone being punished as a result of the Christmas truce. The war began again in earnest in January 1915, and further incidents of fraternization never matched the scale of the 1914 truce.

5726. Heathorn, Stephen. "The Highest Type of Englishman': Gender, War, and the Alfred the Great Commemoration of 1901." Canadian Journal of History 37, no. 3 (2002): 459.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The 1901 Millenary Commemoration of the death of Alfred the Great was a prescriptive event, designed both to honour the memory of the 'father of the English race' and to re-invigorate the supposed masculine virtues of the contemporary nation at a time of imperial crisis. Planned and staged during the politically divisive Anglo-Boer war, the commemoration was promoted by a variety of mostly liberal and progressive organizers." Includes a reference to Doyle. "...That the Anglo-Boer War loomed large behind both the planning and staging of the Alfred millenary is clear from references to the conflict that saturate the surviving speeches and discussions of the commemoration events themselves. To give but one example: at the January 1900 meeting of the executive committee formed to organized the commemoration, committee member Sir Arthur Conan Doyle recounted a currently circulating anecdote about the erection of a huge ladder against Nelson's Column in Trafalgar Square the previous month. The ladder was there to enable the stringing of New Year's decorations. However, a passer-by supposedly asked one in the assembled crowd watching the events, 'What are they doing [to Nelson's statue]?' To which another onlooker replied: 'Doing? Why they're gettin' him down; they'll be wanting him soon.' [20] The joke illuminates public concern about the critical situation of the war in South Africa: in December of 1899, with the Boers besieging Ladysmith and Mafeking, a great hero was felt to be needed. The war had gone disastrously so far. Conan Doyle intimated through the retelling of this quip a widely-shared view of the importance of the upcoming commemoration: that memorials to the great men of the nation served as an object of admiration in times of peace, and as sources of inspiration in times of crisis. Indeed, as we shall see, the same memorial could serve as a source of inspiration for people of widely differing views...."

5727. Heggland, Jon. "Mayhem and Murder: Narrative and Moral Problems in the Detective Story (review)." Modernism/modernity 8, no. 2 (2001): 364-366.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Mayhem and Murder: Narrative and Moral Problems in the Detective Story. Heta Pyrhönen. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 1999. Pp. viii + 338. $60.00 (cloth); $24.95 (paper). Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "... Pyrhönen's conclusions point toward the enclosed world of the classical detective story (e.g. those by Edgar Allan Poe, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, and Agatha Christie) as the model for both narrative analysis and moral reflection. These kinds of stories are ideal for the application of narrative theories as they follow an ex post facto investigation conducted by a detached, 'analytic' detective; in other words, they give an account of the retroactive formation of syuzhet (plot) out of the raw material of fabula (story)...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5728. Heise, Thomas. "'Going Blood-Simple Like the Natives': Contagious Urban Spaces and Modern Power in Dashiell Hammett's Red Harvest." MFS Modern Fiction Studies 51, no. 3 (2005): 485-512.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Such is the hitherto underappreciated discursive context of the American hardboiled crime novel of the 1920s and 1930s, which, unlike the so-called Golden Age genteel mysteries of Conan Doyle, Agatha Christie, and Ellery Queen, is noted for its naturalistic presentation of violence, its urban setting, and its representation of the milieu of poor, ethnic, and working-class Americans and of the criminal who is a product of these socially, economically, and spatially marginalized relations...."

5729. Henkel, Terry. "Journey through a lost world." Earth 4, no. 6 (1995): 52.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Describes the ecology of Guyana. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Our objective is to explore the Pakaraima Mountains, a remote region of savannah and rain forest where sandstone massifs called tepuis rise toward the sky and waterfalls thunder to the ground. Inspired by a description of this fantastic place, Arthur Conan Doyle in 1912 published The Lost World, a novel in which prehistoric plants and dinosaurs still survived on the tepuis. Doyle's work may have been a fantasy, but Guyana is indeed a country lost in time...."

5730. Henry Iii, William A. "Picks & pans: Pages." People 41, no. 24 (1994): 25.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'A Superior Death,' by Nevada Barr. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "A tough and resourceful female forest ranger--a description that fits the author as well as the lead character--gets this novel moving by rescuing two drunk men who can't handle their leaky boat. By the end of the tale she has come across apparent cannibalism and incest, not to mention murder deep beneath the waters of Lake Superior, where this slice of small-town life is set. Bart shares with Arthur Conan Doyle the assumption that evildoing in the countryside can be far more vile than anything in the mean streets of cities. But there's a modern feminism in her freewheeling heroine, who is up for everything from a fistfight to a one-night stand." (Putnam, $19.95)

5731. Heptonstall, Geoffrey. "Literary supplement: Myths and monsters." Contemporary Review 265, no. 1545 (1994): 223.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Managing Monsters: Six Myths of Our Time,' by Marina Warner. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Marina Warner seeks to discover the elements of myth in contemporary life. Her strikingly elegant prose reflects a gifted mind, yet it is not easy to find a thread through this labyrinth of observation. Ephemera are accorded a depth of meaning they cannot contain. A decade hence some of the references will look quaint. There are marks of fading even now. Jurassic Park was made for the moment, whereas Conan Doyle's masterpiece of popular narrative will be enjoyed in another century...."

5732. Herman, Marc. "Searching for El Dorado." Civilization 4, no. 3 (1997): 42.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Explores the gold rush in the land of El Dorado. Historical background on the Guiana Shield region; Voyages of several European explorers on El Dorado; Tragedy experienced in the mining industry. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Although El Callao was no El Dorado, and hardly vindicated the claims of Raleigh or the Spanish, at least it put a footnote to their faith. It remains one of the largest gold rushes in history. And it inspired new fictions about the Guiana Shield. Late in the century, Arthur Conan Doyle scaled Mount Roraima. Returning to England, he wrote an adventure novel, The Lost World, about dinosaurs living on the mountaintop. Locally, the stories were less romantic...."

5733. Hill, Logan. "Influences Emma Thompson." New York 39, no. 40 (2006): 85-85.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article presents an interview with actress Emma Thompson. She is asked about books she read as a child and answers works by Arthur Conan Doyle, Ray Bradbury, and Ian Flemming. She is also very influenced by Victorian novels. When asked about other comedic influences, she cites Lily

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Tomlin and Monty Python.

5734. Hinton, KaaVonia, and Theodorea Berry. "Literacy, literature, and diversity." Journal of Adolescent & Adult Literacy 48, no. 4 (2004): 284-288.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Analyzes the significance of multicultural literature in literacy classrooms. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...After fifth grade, literature in school emphasized standard American and classical readings. My classes included prose by Jane Austen, Geoffrey Chaucer, Charles Dickens, Arthur Conan Doyle, and F. Scott Fitzgerald and poetry by Elizabeth Barrett Browning, Ralph Waldo Emerson, Edgar Allan Poe, and Walt Whitman...."
5735. Hitchcock, James. "Murder as one of the liberal arts." American Scholar 63, no. 2 (1994): 277.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Asserts that the genuine crime story is a branch of history, and should be treated as such. Discussion of serial killers such as John Wayne Gacy, Theodore Bundy and others; The fascination of Victorian crimes; Classics of the genre--including the Borden murders and the murder of Julia Wallace, in Liverpool, in 1931; Walter Dew, author of 'I Caught Crippen'; The honor roll of crime stories. Includes multiple references to Doyle.
5736. Hitchens, Christopher. "The Boy Who Lived." New York Times, August 12, 2007.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Greater authors -- Arthur Conan Doyle most notably -- have been in the same dilemma when seeking closure. And, like Conan Doyle, Rowling has won imperishable renown for giving us an identifiable hero and a fine caricature of a villain, and for making a fictional bit of King's Cross station as luminous as a certain address on nearby Baker Street. It is given to few authors to create a world apart, and to populate it as well as illustrate it in the mind...."
5737. ———. "Literary Companion." Atlantic Monthly 300, no. 2 (2007): 124-128.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the books "Literary Essays and Reviews of the 1920s & 30s" and "Literary Essays and Reviews of the 1930s & 40s," by Edmund Wilson. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...But if this gives the impression of a sort of Jamesian loftiness, then the idea is counteracted by Wilson's decision to engage with popular fiction. His contempt for the slovenly and disgraceful habit of 'reading' detective stories--especially the dismal pulp produced by Dorothy L. Sayers--was offset by an admiration for Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, and by his readiness to respond to the many readers who wrote in to disagree with him...."
5738. ———. "Minority Report." Nation 270, no. 5 (2000): 9-9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "In the intervening period, Jack Straw used his tenure as British Home Secretary to make the asylum laws as inelastic as possible for impoverished and desperate refugees, while allowing the defendant in the world's landmark torture and kidnapping case to sit in a country house and receive regular teatime visits from politician Baroness Thatcher. It was not only the liberal press in Britain that made satirical mileage out of Straw's hypocrisy. The pro-Pinochet "The Sunday Telegraph" revealed what has long been common knowledge in a certain area of the left, namely that this political and not medical decision was actually taken in June of last year." Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Sir John Grimley Evans, who admittedly sounds like a Conan Doyle character and who is nonetheless professor of clinical gerontology at Oxford University, has given discrepant interviews about the relationship between Pinochet's medical state and his fitness for the dock...."
5739. Hitt, Jack. "Dinosaur Dreams." Harper's Magazine 303, no. 1817 (2001): 32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Depicts the discovery and the development of paleontological theories of dinosaurs as a projection of the nationalist psyche of the United States (U.S.). Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...It was an English scientist who first announced in 1841 that these giant bone discoveries belonged to some new order of creature he decided to call 'dinosauria.' And the first full dinosaur, the iguanodon, was an entirely British discovery. But those early dinosaurs say more about the Old World's pinched imagination than about its paleontology. Iguanodon refers to a reptile's tooth, and the image the English conjured from those bones was nothing more than an obese crocodile on four piano legs. Such are the rhinocerine quadrupeds that populate the first dino narrative, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Lost World. Until Darwin, one wasn't able, intellectually, to describe a world that didn't already exist...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5740. Holman, Valerie. "Carefully Concealed Connections: The Ministry of Information and British Publishing, 1939-1946." Book History 8, no. (2005): 197-226.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...It is worth recalling that propaganda has a dual effect: on the mass audience to whom it is addressed, but also on the organization from which it stems and whose survival or power depends on the desired response.(4) To avoid provoking the same negative reactions as recent German propaganda, the British solution was to distribute small books and pamphlets which gave no indication that they were other than trade publications: 'The existence of a publishing establishment at Wellington House, and, a fortiori, the connexion of the Government with this establishment were carefully concealed,' as the MOI admitted. 'Except official publications, none of the literature bore overt marks of its origin.'(5) This point is exemplified by a list of 120 publications whose named authors range from academic historians and philosophers to novelists such as G. K. Chesterton, H. G. Wells, and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Together with a further fifty anonymous short works, they were translated into seventeen different languages...."

5741. Holt, Peter. "Costly British Victory at Paardeberg." Military History 16, no. 6 (2000): 58.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Deals with information on the costly British victory at Paardeberg during the Boer War in 1900. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...In spite of the British army's ultimate victory, both Roberts' and Kitchener's conduct of the Battle of Paardeberg has remained the subject of considerable controversy. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, in his book The Great Boer War, supported Roberts, noting that 'there was only one thing which apparently should not have been done, and that was attack [Cronje].' The official British history of the war also backed Roberts. However, the Times, as well as some others, supported Kitchener's actions with the view that 'Paardeberg...did not teach them [the Boers] to fear the British soldier.'" 5742. Houston, James Kirk. "An appreciation of A.E. Malloch, MB, MD (1844-1919): a forgotten surgical pioneer." CMAJ: Canadian Medical Association Journal 160, no. 6 (1999): 849.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the life and career of Dr. Archibald Edward Malloch. Influence of Joseph Lister and his system of antiseptic surgery; Malloch's introduction of Lister's system to North America; Biographical background; Biographical information on Lister; Lister's career and the founding of the antiseptic system; Malloch's appointment as house surgeon under Lister; Lister's opinion of Malloch; Where Malloch's career led him; His success and influence as a surgeon. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...An aphorism attributed to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle runs 'Talent instantly recognizes genius.' [35] Such was the case with Malloch, a talented man who immediately recognized Lister's genius.... " The footnote cites: Doyle AC. The complete Sherlock Holmes. vol 2. New York: Doubleday; 1953. p. 908.

5743. Howsam, Leslie. "British Literary Culture and Publishing Practice 1880-1914 (Book Review)." Journal of Scholarly Publishing 29, no. 4 (1998): 231.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book British Literary Culture and Publishing Practice 1880-1914, by Peter D. McDonald. Includes references to Doyle. "...The third substantive chapter concerns 'Light Reading and the Dignity of Letters: George Newnes, Ltd. and the Making of Arthur Conan Doyle.' Conan Doyle was no purist, and the initial design and marketing of his popular books matched his reputation among what one commentator called 'the very Dogs of Bookland' (118). McDonald classes Conan Doyle, however, as neither a purist nor a profiteer, but rather 'a populist with high aspirations who became increasingly anxious about his own literary standing' (121). Part of Conan Doyle's self-presentation was attention to manliness, a dignified, gentlemanly stance that nonetheless firmly excluded women writers from the already contested territory of the literary field...."

5744. Hubbard, Kate. "Just the thing for a journey." Spectator 281, no. 8871 (1998): 32.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several fiction books. 'The Speckled Band,' by Conan Doyle; 'The Rocking Horse Winner,' by D.H. Lawrence; 'Bliss,' by Katherine Mansfield; 'Treasure Island,' by Robert Louis Stevenson; 'The Invisible Man,' by H.G. Wells.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5745. Hughes, William. "An angel satyr walks these hills.'" Gothic Studies 5, no. 1 (2003): 121-128.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Uncovers a recursion of empire and its strategies in such works as Algernon Blackwood's collection, "John Silence" of 1908 and L.T.C. Rolt's "Sleep No More," of 1947 and reveals the dialectics between cults and cultures in the suburbs of the post-empire world of modern England. Observation on Blackwood's works; Reflection on Gothic tourism; Significance of the closing remark on the sympathy of environment to inhabitant. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...it is possible to posit the existence of an effective mode or discourse within fiction which might be described as 'Gothic Tourism', if it cannot, because of its overt fictionality, be termed 'Gothic Social Reporting'. The discourse is broadly analogous to the late-Victorian and Edwardian Empire Gothic which Victor Sage has identified in the writings of Kipling, Conan Doyle and Chesterton. The fear in such works, as Sage identifies in his reading of Doyle's short story, 'The Speckled Band', is that the Empire has come home, or been brought back, to Britain, that the Gothic Otherness of India or Africa has been transplanted into the English countryside or onto the familiar street plan of an English city...."
5746. Hume, Kathryn. "Narrative Speed in Contemporary Fiction." Narrative 13, no. 2 (2005): 105-124.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This article discusses various issues related to narrative speed in contemporary fiction. Critical concern with portraying physical speed focuses on the modernist fascination with physical speed and how to represent it in painting, sculpture, and writing. This is only marginally relevant to the kind of frantic narrative the article author is trying to analyze, because narrative speed does not necessarily increase as one describes physical speed, though the two sometimes coincide. To map the ways that speed is functioning, one needs both to identify the main techniques that produce the effect and to study the evident authorial goals fostered by narrative rapidity. The article author discusses three techniques for producing the effect of narrative speed: multiplying elements, subtracting expected material, and rendering actions fantastic. While the techniques are separable in theory, they almost never function alone, so the exemplary texts cannot be neatly divided into three groups. After technique, one can consider the kind of effect encouraged by the speed--satire, mystery, protest, exaltation, and revolution." Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...A second way to theorize narrative pace--retardation--was propounded by Viktor Shklovsky....He analyzes retarding techniques such as defamiliarization, repetitious structures, and the framing of tales within tales. Even characters can count as such techniques: Conan Doyle's Dr. Watson, he avers, exists 'to retard the action' (104)...."
5747. Ione, Amy. "Neurology of the Arts: Painting, Music, Literature (review)." Leonardo 38, no. 1 (2005): 69-70.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...The section on literature relates to Shakespeare, Dostoyevsky, Conan Doyle, James Joyce and the poetry of one of England's most famous neurologists, Henry Head...."
5748. Ivanova, Natal'ia. "Cryptic Precision." Russian Social Science Review 44, no. 3 (2003): 79.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the works of Russian writers Boris Pasternak and Mikhail Bulgakov in Moscow, Russia. Importance of identifying the proximity of time and place in writing poems; Plan of Bulgakov for a bibliographical dictionary of Russian writers; Creation of the novel 'The White Guard.' Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Neither novel took its cue from the Russian classical tradition, from the 'Tolstoyan' novel. Pasternak's considered Dickens one of his predecessors, and he seems to have drawn his plotting techniques from Sir Walter Scott, Alexandre Dumas, and Arthur Conan Doyle...."
5749. ———. "Cryptic Precision." Russian Studies in Literature 39, no. 1 (2002): 60.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines the relationship between poet Boris Pasternak and novelist Mikhail Bulgakov in the Soviet Union. Things the two authors have in common; Excerpts from diaries and letters of their contemporaries, indicating the types of individuals they were; Important works from each author; Difference in lifestyles and views on art; Attitudes toward Russian literature; Impact of mutual influence. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Neither novel took its cue from the Russian classical tradition, from the 'Tolstoyan' novel. Pasternak's considered Dickens one of his predecessors, and he seems to have drawn his plotting techniques from Sir Walter Scott, Alexandre Dumas, and Arthur Conan Doyle...."
5750. Ives, Nancy R. "Book reviews: Arts & humanities." Library Journal 123, no. 5 (1998): 65.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Wormholes: Essays and Occasional Writings,' by John Fowles.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "Known primarily as the author of The French Lieutenant's Woman (1969) and A Maggot (LJ 8/85), English writer Fowles also has produced a number of essays and other nonfiction works. This entertaining yet thought-provoking collection includes literary criticism, personal musings, and commentaries that cover more than 35 years. His literary criticism discusses such notables as Kafka, Conan Doyle, Hardy, and William Golding, as well as lesser-known scribes...."

5751. J.C. "NB." TLS, no. (1999): 18.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on developments in the book publishing industry in Great Britain, as of October 22, 1999. Biography of Arthur Conan Doyle; Lesley Reader's 'Book Lovers' London' guide; Theft of expensive books from the London Library; Reviews of Mark Ramsden's book The Dark Magus and the Sacred Whore.'

5752. Jablovkov, Alexander. "The Boarder." Fantasy & Science Fiction 114, no. 3 (2008): 4-22.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article presents the short story "The Border," by Alexander Jablovkov. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Like all literate Russians, he had grown up with 'Mark Tven.' I'd seen the movie, thought the girl playing Becky Thatcher was kind of cute, but didn't really know much about him as an author, which distressed and irritated Vassily, as if, in turning my back on my great national literature, I had committed some kind of crime. He assumed that a boy my age would have read the complete works of Victor Hugo, Turgenev, and Conan Doyle as well...."

5753. Jackson, Donald Dale. "You Will Feel No Pain." Smithsonian 29, no. 12 (1999): 126.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the history of hypnosis as a medical solution for pain. Common misconceptions about hypnosis; Description of a hypnosis by clinical psychologist John F. Chaves; Lack of understanding by physicians of hypnosis and how it works; Doctors who have increased understanding of hypnosis, including the Viennese physician Franz Anton Mesmer, the British surgeon James Braid, and the British physician James Esdaile; Writers' interest in hypnosis, including Charles Dickens and Edgar Allan Poe. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Clemens was skeptical of mesmerism, but other writers were captivated by it. Charles Dickens practiced it often and even contemplated a career as a mesmerist. In Edgar Allan Poe's gripping story 'The Facts in the Case of M. Valdemar,' a man is suspended in a mesmeric trance between life and death. Honore de Balzac, H. G. Wells and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle all wrote stories built around hypnosis, but the most memorable hypno-novel was George Du Maurier's Trilby, in which the diabolical Svengali exerts total domination over the winsome and helpless Trilby...."

5754. Jackson, Shona N. "Guyana, Cuba, Venezuela and the "Routes" to Cultural Reconciliation between Latin America and the Caribbean." Small Axe 10, no. 1 (2006): 28-58.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...However, Jack informs Guyanese that 'it is also a domain of the imagination, where once men had sought in vain for the golden city of El Dorado, where the writer Hudson had created his 'bird girl' heroine Rima and where in more recent times Conan Doyle had sited his 'Lost World.'..."

5755. Jaffe, Audrey. "Trollope in the Stock Market: Irrational Exuberance and The Prime Minister." Victorian Studies 45, no. 1 (2003): 43-64.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Doyle mentioned in "Works Cited." Jaffe, Audrey. "Detecting the Beggar: Arthur Conan Doyle, Henry Mayhew, and 'The Man with the Twisted Lip.'" Representations 31 (1990): 96-117.

5756. Jagodzinski, Cecile M. "Consuming Literature." College & Research Libraries 66, no. 6 (2005): 554-556.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Kong, Shuyu. Consuming Literature: Best Sellers and the Commercialization of Literary Production in Contemporary China. Stanford, Calif.: Stanford Univ. Pr., 2005. 241p. alk. paper, cloth $55 (ISBN 0804749396); paper $21.95 (ISBN 080474940X). LC 2004-17604. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...At the same time, Kong faults the rise of popular literature (some of it pirated) as a factor in the decline of the production of 'serious literature.' Western authors such as Agatha Christie and Arthur Conan Doyle (throwbacks to another era), as well as Japanese and Hong Kong martial arts tales, romances, and pulp fiction flooded the marketplace...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5757. Jahn, Manfred. "Narrative Voice and Agency in Drama: Aspects of a Narratology of Drama." New Literary History 32, no. 3 (2001): 659-679.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Having established this formula (which conspicuously haunts all subsequent accounts), Searle then briefly turns to what he terms 'two special cases,' first-person narratives and 'theatrical plays.' In first-person fiction such as Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes stories the author is 'not in fact pretending to make assertions, he is pretending to be John Watson' (TLS 328)...."

5758. Jaynes, Gregory. "Pop fiction's prime provocateur." Time 143, no. 2 (1994): 52.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles failed physician and best selling author John Michael Crichton, 51, whose 24th book 'Disclosure,' about sexual harassment, is being published by Knopf this week. His medical education at Harvard; Why he chose to quit medicine and become a writer; His ability to marry his appetite for science and its frontiers to humans caught in perilous situations; Japan-bashing charges following his 'Rising Sun'; His argument against any 'special protection' for women. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...To catch a sense of Crichton, one must summon other failed physicians who turned to fiction, though failed, perhaps, is the wrong word. Conan Doyle. More recently, Walker Percy...."

5759. Jensen, Jeff. "Studios take supporting role for movie licensees." Advertising Age 67, no. 26 (1996): 45.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the plans of movie studios in the United States to help film licensees move products with more refined marketing support for 1997. Displaying of films at the 1996 International Licensing & Merchandising Conference in New York City; Prospects for the film industry in 1997; Creation of customized point-of-purchase programs for different retailers. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...For Viacom and others, a major key to launching '97 film properties, like Paramount Pictures' 'One Golden Afternoon'--based on a true story of two British girls whose photos of alleged fairies perplexed the likes of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle--will be the studio's ability to market the films to solid box office starts...."

5760. Johnson, George M. "'The Spirit of the Age': Virginia Woolf's response to second wave psychology." Twentieth Century Literature 40, no. 2 (1994): 139.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an essay concerning the views of writer Virginia Woolf on second wave psychology. Modernist ideas of Woolf concerning man; Continuity of culture and receptacles of cultural currents; Criticisms on the writings of Woolf; Description of the second wave psychology; Integration of the ideas of Woolf in her early published works. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Through Meyers's and other psychical researchers' work and their organization of the first four International Congresses of Experimental Psychology (1889,1892,1896,1900), psychical research very nearly became part of the psychological orthodoxy. It attracted both prominent psychologists[3] and the elite of British society, including Prime Minister Arthur Balfour, titled persons and writers (such as Tennyson, Ruskin, 'Lewis Carroll,' A. Conan Doyle, and Virginia Woolf's friends James Strachey, Goldsworthy Lowes Dickinson, and Roger Fry). Despite the enormous influence of the Society, historians of psychology typically ignore it, partly because its researches are no longer considered within the realm of the scientifically acceptable...."

5761. Johnson, Sarah Anne. "Walking on the dark side." Writer 116, no. 8 (2003): 22.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Interviews mystery author Donna Tartt on her works. Success of her first novel 'The Secret History'; Information on her book 'The Little Friend'; Factors that influence her work; Reasons for choosing murders and its aftermath as the topic of her books. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...What other writers have influenced you, and how? As anyone who has read The Secret History will know, I also love classical Greek and Roman literature--particularly Homer and the Greek tragedians. The books that inform The Little Friend are the books I read as a child by Kipling, James Barrie, Arthur Conan Doyle...."

5762. Jolly, Martyn. "Faces of the living dead." Photofile, no. 66 (2002): 35-39.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The artist Jolly discusses the history of spirit photography, with reference to his own use of spirit images from archives to create works for an exhibition. He outlines the interest in spirit photography of the author Arthur Conan Doyle, following the Second World War, with reference to a photograph of Doyle by the British photographer William Hope, studies the photography of Mrs Ada Deane, including attempts to discredit her images, and contrasts spirit photographs, which evoke life after death, with the tradition of fixing time in portrait photography. He comments on his use of images from an archive in Cambridge University Library, explores the appearance of spirits in an image taken at Whitehall in London (1922), and analyses the performativity of spirit photographs. He concludes by suggesting that the capturing a spirit image through the process of developing photographic emulsions evokes the physicality of the body.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5763. Joyce, Simon. "Sexual Politics and the Aesthetics of Crime: Oscar Wilde in the Nineties." ELH 69, no. 2 (2002): 501-523.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. "...Late Victorian readers could of course look to popular fiction--to Gothic novels, sensation fiction, and the Sherlock Holmes detective stories--for a more elevated style of criminality, or to newspaper accounts of Jack the Ripper: indeed, it became a commonplace of contemporary commentary to highlight how strikingly literary these murders appeared, with noticeable parallels to Poe, Sade, and especially to Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde (1886)....Such speculations about the Ripper's identity--and his presumed resemblance to other literary figures--suggest a renewed interest in crime as not only imaginative and aesthetic, but as the province of the privileged classes: by the turn of the century, for example, we get the first appearance of Raffles, E. W. Hornung's aristocratic cat burglar, to place alongside Dr. Jekyll, Dorian Gray, and all those hard-up minor aristocrats who usually turn out to be the culprits in Conan Doyle...." Note 7 includes a Holmes reference: In his Atlas of the European Novel, 1880-1900 (London: Verso, 1998), Franco Moretti points out the astonishing fact that Holmes only once ventures into the East End, and even this is presumably in the doppelganger story, "The Man with the Twisted Lip," in which the culprit turns out to be a bourgeois journalist disguised as a beggar (Moretti, 34).

5764. Kahn, Richard J. "Women and Men at Sea: Gender Debate aboard the Hospital Ship Maine during the Boer War, 1899-1900." Journal of the History of Medicine and Allied Sciences 56, no. 2 (2001): 111-139.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Note 14 contains a reference to Doyle: See A. Conan Doyle, The Great Boer War (New York: McClure, Phillips & Company, 1900), A. Conan Doyle, The War in South Africa: Its Cause and Conduct (New York: McClure, Phillips & Co., 1902), and Winston S. Churchill, London to Ladysmith via Pretoria (London: Longmans, Green, 1900). An excellent bibliography of the Boer War is available on the Internet: Robert Wotton, USAMHI Bibliography of South African War Reference Material (USAMHI, 1994), <http://www.uq.net.au/fialzzrwotto/bib.html>.

5765. Kalof, Linda, Amy Fitzgerald, and Lori Baralt. "Animals, Women, and Weapons: Blurred Sexual Boundaries in the Discourse of Sport Hunting." Society & Animals 12, no. 3 (2004): 237-251.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The furor and public outrage surrounding the release of a fictionalized video in which naked women are hunted down and shot with paintball guns ("Hunting for Bambi") inspired this paper. Arguing that distressing representations of hunting as a sexually charged activity are resilient popular culture images, this paper examines the theoretical framework that links hunting with sex and women with animals and the empirical evidence of such linkages in the hunting discourse of a popular newsstand periodical...." Footnote 2 contains a reference to Doyle: "There also is a literary tradition of connecting hunting with sex. Hunting was often described as phallic and sexual in Hemingway's work (Strychacz, 1993), Shakespeare used blood sport to evoke sexual pleasure (Kane, 200), and Arthur Conan Doyle linked hunting with predatory sexuality in The Hound of the Baskervilles (Luke, 1998)."

5766. Kauffmann, Stanley. "Some History, Some Hysterics." New Republic 222, no. 24 (2000): 32-34.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the motion pictures "Sunshine," directed by Istvan Szabo; "Small Time Crooks," directed by Woody Allen. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...This new screenplay, too, is a lapse. It is a farce in which Allen is a failed minor crook who is married to a domineering wife and who is trying to make good somehow. He concocts a scheme to bore a tunnel under a bank and thus rob it. First, he rents a store two doors down (a hint of Conan Doyle's The Red-Headed League?) where his wife opens a cookie shop; then he and some pals dig a tunnel from below the shop that is meant to come up in the bank. The digging encounters accidents, and the tunnel comes up in the wrong place...."

5767. Kawana, Sari. "The price of pulp: women, detective fiction, and the profession of writing in inter-war Japan." Japan Forum 16, no. 2 (2004): 207-229.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Are women seemingly absent from detective fiction in interwar Japan because it

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- is a 'male' genre, or because male writers as gatekeepers of the genre conspired to exclude them? The absence of women from the genre is conspicuous given the significant presence of female readers. A close examination of the leading detective fiction magazines from the era reveals that male editors were spurred to seek out female authorship, and there indeed were some female detective writers who made the transition from consumer to producer. In light of such active recruitment by male colleagues, the relative inactivity of female writers after their arrival to the literary scene is even more mysterious. Some clues to this second mystery can be found in a larger investigation of the social and economic issues involved in the writing profession itself. This attempt to recover the lost female voice in detective fiction foregrounds the roles of consumer and producer in the publishing industry and elucidates the intertwined nature of gender, money, and the practice of writing." Includes a passing reference to Doyle (p. 213). "...Another female translator-writer, Nobuhara Katsuko (1905-unknown), enjoyed a similar connection to the publishing industry; Katsuko was the sister of the playwright Kishida Kunio (1890-1954) and the wife of Nobuhara Ken (1892-1977), the acclaimed translator of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle (1859-1930) and Agatha Christie...."
5768. Kelly, Joseph. "Hugh Kenner, Gentleman Scholar." New Hibernia Review 5, no. 2 (2001): 145-149.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...If you try to examine Kenner's assertions to see if they make any sense, let alone to decide if you agree, you will have to read Ibsen, Flaubert, Mallarme, Nietzsche, Conan Doyle, and Kierkegaard--a list I have compiled merely by opening the book at random...."
5769. Kelly, Kevin, Jay Kinney, Jay Allison, Tom Ferguson, and Rich Pyle. "Whole Earth cool tools." Whole Earth, no. (2002): 47p.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a catalog containing several tools, ideas and practices which are reviewed by the Winter 2002 issue of the 'Whole Earth' magazine. Under the entry for the book The Complete Walker IV is a passing reference to Doyle. "...Backpacking isn't all traveling. It's also sleeping and loitering and eating, for example. So backpacking pleasure is also comfortable sleep, cozy warmth at all times, and perhaps a few heavy luxuries -- short of the complete works of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle -- not to mention a full belly...."
5770. Killheffer, Robert K. J. "Books." Fantasy & Science Fiction 96, no. 6 (1999): 33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several adventure fiction books. 'The Good Old Stuff,' edited by Gardner Dozois; 'The Good New Stuff,' edited by Gardner Dozois; 'A Deepness in the Sky,' by Vernor Vinge. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "This might come as a surprise to readers who have been following my commentary in these pages over the years, but I'm a dedicated devotee of adventure fiction. That's right: the stuff of full-blooded action, colorful settings, and breakneck pacing, heavy on the plot and light on the more cerebral literary concerns. Of course, like many readers, that's the stuff on which I cut my teeth -- Robert Louis Stevenson, Alexandre Dumas, Arthur Conan Doyle, Robert E. Howard, Edmond Hamilton. And I've never lost my taste for it. Images from Carl Stephenson's 'Leiningen Versus the Ants' and Jack London's 'To Build a Fire' will live vividly in my memory forever...."
5771. Kimball, Roger. "'Realism coloured by poetry': rereading John Buchan." New Criterion 22, no. 1 (2003): 16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the criticisms of various writers on the poetry of John Buchan. Theme of the poem 'Pilgrim's Way'; Publication of the book 'The Thirty-Nine Steps' during the First World War I; Characters of the book 'Nelson's History of the War.' Includes a passing reference to Doyle (p. 17). "...Buchan did not invent a genre with The Thirty-Nine Steps. Conan Doyle, Wilkie Collins, and others beat him to it...."
5772. King, Paul. "Side dishes." Nation's Restaurant News 34, no. 3 (2000): 28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents news items concerning the food service sector as of January 17, 2000. Story behind the Cafe Ole on the menu board at one Manhattan, New York Starbucks; Impact of the city council's issuance of preservation order on the plan of McDonald's Corp. to put up a unit on a boyhood home of author Arthur Conan Doyle in Edinburgh, Scotland; British study which indicates that eating cheese can prevent tooth decay.
5773. King, W. Davies. "'Shadow of a Mesmeriser': The Female Body on the 'Dark' Stage." Theatre Journal 49, no. 2 (1997): 189-206.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reference to Doyle in the note about the author. "W.D. King is Associate

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Professor of Dramatic Art at the University of California, Santa Barbara. He is the author of Henry Irving's 'Waterloo': Theatrical Engagements with Arthur Conan Doyle, George Bernard Shaw, Ellen Terry, Edward Gordon Craig, Late-Victorian Culture, Assorted Ghosts, Old Men, War, and History and Writing Wrongs: The Work of Wallace Shawn."

5774. Kippen, Rebecca. "Counting Nineteenth-Century Maternal Deaths." Historical Methods 38, no. 1 (2005): 14-25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The author considers three methods of counting maternal deaths, and hence of calculating maternal mortality levels, in the nineteenth century. The first method counts maternal deaths classified in contemporary statistical publications. The second method examines nineteenth-century death registers for records of maternal deaths. The third method identifies maternal deaths through family reconstitution. The author finds that each method, in isolation, leads to underestimating maternal mortality levels because maternal deaths were often misregistered or misclassified under nonmaternal causes and were often not associated with live, registered births, as required for family reconstitution." Note number 3 and the references mention Doyle. Note 3 reads: "A Dictionary of Medicine Including General Pathology, General Therapeutics, Hygiene and the Diseases Peculiar to Women and Children, edited by Richard Quain, went through several English and American editions from the early 1880s to the early 1900s; it was probably the best-known publication of its type in the late nineteenth century. It was quoted authoritatively by numerous people and agencies, including tasmania's Central Board of Health (Graham 1887, 6), and it made an appearance in the medical fiction of Arthur Conan Doyle (1894: 'He laid out his large Quain's Dictionary of Medicine in the forefront of the table so as to impress the casual patient that he had ever the best authorities at his elbow')...The dictionary provides a wonderfully detailed snapshot of the state of medical knowledge in the English-speaking world in the late nineteenth century." The reference in the note is to Doyle's 1894 publication, Round the Red Lamp: Being Facts and Fancies of Medical Life. London: Methuen.
5775. Kirschstein, Bette H. "Ford Madox Ford and the City." Studies in the Novel 39, no. 2 (2007): 251-253.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents a review of the book "Ford Madox Ford and the City," edited by Sara Haslam. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...The first section of the volume, titled 'London,' contains seven articles relating to that city. Several authors treat Ford's 1905 The Soul of London, which leads to some repetition of passages from the book and to some overlap in ideas. For instance, three articles in the London section treat the subject of literary Impressionism as well as the ways in which modern modes of transportation such as motor cars and electric trams presented new ways of seeing London. In 'London and Englishness in Ford, Stoker and Conan Doyle,' Sita Schutt ventures beyond Ford's own views of London to explore how two of his contemporaries 'evoke London and Englishness' differently from him...."
5776. Klein, Scott W. "Book Review: The Subaltern 'Ulysses', and: Shaw and Joyce: 'The Last Word in Stolen Telling'." MFS Modern Fiction Studies 42, no. 4 (1995): 883-887.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Conan Doyle's 'The Blue Carbuncle' is at best an opaque window upon the economics of commodity and knowledge in 'Sirens,' and Duffy's willingness to cite postcolonial authors from Asia and Africa to illuminate Joyce's Ireland threatens at times to homogenize the political particularities of colonial struggles in different cultures...."
5777. Kleiner, Elaine, and Angela Vlaicu. "The Collector of Island/The Happy Island/An Island in Space (Book Review)." Utopian Studies 8, no. 2 (1997): 113.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews three books by Horia Arama. 'The Collector of Islands'; 'The Happy Islands'; 'An Island in Space.' Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Arama contrasts the possibilities of doctors to create 'utopia in a white robe' with catastrophes engineered by Wells's evil Dr. Moreau and others of his kind. He then turns to the larger subject of the role of education in the utopian creations of writers from Plato to Tolstoy, including the Romanian writer Liviu Rebreanu. He considers the significance of the word 'utopia' in the context of Dostoevski's Brothers Karamazov, Conan Doyle's detective novels, games, and the absurd...."
5778. Knight, John. "Cricket's grace abounding." Contemporary Review 273, no. 1592 (1998): 160.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'W.G. Grace: A Life,' by Simon Rae. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "'With the beard of a Goth or a Vandal', which he tugged vigorously when agitated, and

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography

Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

standing six-foot two in his stockinged feet, the man 'generally admitted to be the most wonderful cricketer that ever handled a bat' must, as Simon Rae reminds us in his new biography of W. G. Grace, have been an imposing physical presence. A 'bulky sprite', G. K. Chesterton called him, 'a prodigious Puck in a truly midsummer day's dream.' Sir Arthur Conan Doyle remembered the high-pitched voice -- he never lost his Gloucestershire accent -- 'which seemed so queer from so big a body'...."

5779. Koehl-Krebs, Héléne. "Spiritisme et Piété Luthérienne in Toscane, avant le "Grand Marché". (French)." Aries 7, no. 2 (2007): 185-206.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Footnote 16 includes reference to Doyle. "Dans son History of Spiritualism, parue en deux tomes en 1926/1927, Arthur Conan Doyle parle de même façon de la compatibilité du spiritisme avec 'n'importe quelle religion' (Doyle, Histoire du spiritisme, 40 & 365) et cite des prêtres favorables au spiritisme (Ibid., 374-376). Le temps est à l'optimisme scientiste: d'un point de vue analytique, Doyle argumente pour l'hypothèse selon laquelle ces manifestations seraient dues à des dons inconnus de l'homme que la science ne tardera pas à révéler."
5780. Kramer, Paul Alexander, and John Plotz. "Pairing Empires: Britain and the United States, 1857-1947." Journal of Colonialism and Colonial History 2, no. 1 (2001).
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Observations on papers drawn from the November 2000 conference "Pairing Empires: Britain and the United States, 1857-1947" at the Johns Hopkins University. "The goals of the conference were open-ended: to ask both what might be gained by juxtaposing the British Empire and the United States within one analytic frame and to inquire what scholars working on imperial themes might learn from each other across traditional academic boundaries of both area and discipline." Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Some papers focused on the increasingly dense literary, imaginary, and political exchanges of the turn of the twentieth century, with its Anglo-American 'rapprochement.' Kate-Louise Thomas, for example, here situates Arthur Conan Doyle's A Study in Scarlet within broader discussions of Anglo-American racial 'reunion' as the making of an interimperial body politic...."
5781. Kraus, Joe. "How The Melting Pot Stirred America: The Reception of Zangwill's Play and Theater's Role in the American Assimilation Experience." Melus 24, no. 3 (1999): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines the message depicted by the play 'The Melting Pot,' by Israel Zangwill. Critics' evaluation of the message of the play; How the play portray the promise of the United States; Diversity of the cast of characters in the play. Note 1 includes a reference to Doyle. "For some measure of Zangwill's stature as a world writer, see the New York Times (18 October 1908: V, 5) for interviews with five 'master(s) of the craft' of playwriting, including Zangwill, Booth Tarkington, Clyde Fitch, Percy Mackaye and Charles Klein. In addition, Zangwill was one of a select group of writers testifying before the British Parliament in the course of a several months-long discussion of censorship laws. The others cited in the discussion included Thomas Hardy, Henry James, Arnold Bennett, Joseph Conrad, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Maurice Maeterlinck and Sir Arthur Wing Pinero (Times [of London], 13 August 1909, 4; 25 September 1909, 7; and 17 October 1910, 6)."
5782. Kreyche, Gerald F. "A Wal-Mart Joy Ride." USA Today Magazine 134, no. 2724 (2005): 82-82.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Describes the author's experience in shopping at a Wal-Mart store. Trouble encountered in using an electric cart; Experience at the check-out counter; Realization in using the electric cart. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Sir Arthur Conan Doyle wrote in The Hound of the Baskervilles that the powers of evil are exalted at midnight. He had it wrong. They are exalted at high noon. Little did I realize this was the shopping 'rush hour' as the store seemed to be carpeted with customers. It was like navigating the Chicago Loop...."
5783. Krystal, Arthur. "Rereading." American Scholar 67, no. 2 (1998): 148.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on the author's rereading of the book 'The Leather Pushers,' by H.C. Witwer. Influence of the book on the author; Reading habits of the author as a young boy; Information on Witwer; Author's feeling after rereading the book. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...I saw myself as a svelte Caspar Gutman traveling the world over in search of the black bird; but without benefit of title or author, mine was a rather messy quest. I asked around. But the people who knew literature didn't know beans

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

about boxing books, and the people who knew boxing didn't read all that much. I checked out every secondhand bookstore in every city I visited, looking for--well, anything that might lead me further. I found plenty of rare books that way, including a copy of Conan Doyle's The Croxley Master and Other Tales of the Ring and Camp, but no novels about a fighter named Kid Roberts. One winter afternoon in the multi-lampshaded reading room of the New York Public Library, I ran my eye down tiny-lettered columns in old volumes of Books in Print. What was I looking for?...Those repelled by boxing, or simply indifferent, may be surprised to learn of the vast literature devoted to it. R. A. Hartley's History and Bibliography of Boxing Books mentions 2100 pugilistic titles published in the English language. One finds in it such names as Thackeray, Dickens, Byron, Hazlitt, Arthur Conan Doyle, Bernard Shaw, and Arnold Bennett...."

5784. Kucich, John. "Olive Schreiner, Masochism, and Omnipotence: Strategies of a Preoedipal Politics." Novel: A Forum on Fiction 36, no. 1 (2002): 79-109.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Addresses the confinement of writer Olive Schreiner's masochism to the realm of sexuality. Reasons critics have judged her as racist and imperialist; Psychic pathways through which preoedipal pain might be transformed into fantasies of omnipotence; Result of linking feminist demands and an idealization of suffering. Includes passing reference to Doyle. "Late-Victorian culture was saturated with masochistic phenomena--self-destructive New Woman heroines; the 'winter' Dionysianism of Beardsley, Swinburne, Pater, and other decadents; the imperial suffering glorified by Kipling, Haggard, and Doyle; the self-flagellations of Hopkins' Catholicism; even the self-martyring spectacle of the Oscar Wilde trials and of De Profundis (1897)....But it was in the middle class that divisions of opinion hit hardest, as can be measured in the number of middle-class families that suffered serious rifts--families like W.H. Lecky's, or Arthur Conan Doyle's, for instance, or, for that matter, Olive Schreiner's own family (her husband and her brother Will campaigned publicly against the war, while her brother Theo toured England campaigning for it)...."
5785. Kumar, Ravinda. "Dying, Death and After Death." Journal of Religion & Psychical Research 23, no. 3 (2000): 143.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "Hinduism, Buddhism, Zen and tibetan Buddhism, Theosophy, Gnostics, Egyptians, Eckankar, Pithagoras and Plato believe(d) in reincarnation, and, it has also been proved by researchers such as, Professor Ian Stevenson (1969), Sir Arthur Conan Doyle (1918) and Edgar Cayce, besides several others...." Bibliography references Doyle's The New Revelation.
5786. Kumar, Ravindra, and Margaret Dempsey. "Letting Go and Knowing God." Journal of Religion & Psychical Research 26, no. 1 (2003): 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Proposes a scientific world religion based on the findings of spiritual investigators in various faiths and traditions. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "Michael E. Tymn attempts to prove the survival after death based on the findings of highly respected and recognized people such as Dr. Oliver Lodge, Dr. James Hyslop, Dr. Alfred Russel Wallace, Sir William Crookes, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Frederick W. H. Myers, Dr. Ian Stevenson and many others...."
5787. Landfester, Ulrike. "Das Verhör. Geschichte--Theorie--Fiktion (review)." MLN 121, no. 3 (2006): 780-783.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // In German. Reviews the book by Michael Niehaus, Das Verhör. Geschichte--Theorie--Fiktion. München: Wilhelm Fink Verlag, 2003. 592 pages. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Auf der einen Seite entbindet die Möglichkeit, Texte von so unterschiedlichen Autoren wie Sophokles und Agatha Christie, Theodor Fontane und Arthur Conan Doyle, Adolf von Müllner, Franz Kafka und Stefan Zweig und nicht zuletzt Filme wie Ingmar Bergmanns Der Ritus und Roman Polanskis Der Tod und das Mädchen im Zeichen des Verhörs zusammenzudenken, eine Fülle von bestechend einleuchtenden Querverbindungen, mit der der Verfasser sein Anliegen noch einmal auf das Beeindruckendste rechtfertigt...."
5788. Landy, Joshua. "Proust, His Narrator, and the Importance of the Distinction." Poetics Today 25, no. 1 (2004): 91-135.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Picon and Rorty are making inadvertently eccentric claims when they place the mortal Marcel Proust on the same ontological level as imaginary entities, such as Doncières, Saint-Loup, and Gilberte. It is as though they spoke of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle dreading Moriarty, Vladimir Nabokov vividly recalling the time that he went out for a drive with

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Dolores Haze, and J. R. R. Tolkien making a pattern out of the events of his life on Middle Earth...."

5789. Lane, Christopher. "Filth: Dirt, Disgust, and Modern Life (review)." Victorian Studies 48, no. 1 (2006): 185-188.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews Filth: Dirt, Disgust, and Modern Life, edited by William A. Cohen and Ryan Johnson; pp. xxxvii + 317. Minneapolis: University of Minnesota Press, 2005, $22.95. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...More often than not, though, Filth offers fresh insights into the vast number of topics that its title encompasses--so many, in fact, that it's difficult for a reviewer to cover them in such limited space. Alongside interpretations of the above works are vivid essays on Victorian debates about the burial and cremation of corpses (Christopher Hamlin); the problem of smell in Felix Holt (1866) and Bleak House (1852-53) (David Trotter); how London and Paris differed in their topographical organization of waste (David L. Pike); the medical and figurative purpose that cholera and other disease maps served (Pamela K. Gilbert); the domestic impact of elaborate art historical and architectural debates about 'sanitation in decoration' (Eileen Cleere); George Du Maurier's nostalgia in Trilby (1894) for the dirty pleasure of preservable filth (Joseph Bristow); Alfred Jarry's spectacular violation of bourgeois propriety in Ubu Roi (1896) (Neil Blackadder); Arthur Conan Doyle's anxiety about the contaminating influence of foreign peoples and substances in The Sign of Four (1890) and A Study in Scarlet (1887)..."
5790. Langan, John. "On Skua Island." Fantasy & Science Fiction 101, no. 2 (2001): 131.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the short story 'On Skua Island.' Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...The mummy is different,' I replied. 'It's a relic from a different time, the imperial age, from when the sun never set on the British Empire. Has anyone read any of the original mummy stories, the ones Arthur Conan Doyle wrote?' Only Bob nodded. 'I shouldn't call them the original stories; I don't know for sure whether they are or not. I assume they were among the first. Anyway, Conan Doyle's mummy is very different from what we're accustomed to when we hear that name; at least, from what I think of. His mummy is a weapon....'" 5791. Lapham, Lewis H. "Stupor Mundi." Harper's Magazine 300, no. 1799 (2000): 9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Deals with a personal narrative on reading the book 'H.M.S. Surprise,' by Patrick O'Brian. Childhood recollection of literary reading; Theme of the book; Characters and dialogues in the book. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...To readers brought up in the modernist schools of literature, O'Brian's novels might seem insufficiently ambiguous, a trifle too Edwardian in their diction, books for boys belonging on the shelf with the tales told by Rudyard Kipling and Arthur Conan Doyle. All such criticism is not without a point...."
5792. Laurence, Dan H. "A Supplement to Bernard Shaw: A Bibliography." SHAW The Annual of Bernard Shaw Studies 20, no. (2001): 3-124.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Two entries in this bibliographical supplement mention Doyle: A316 Agitations ("The volume contains 155 letters to editors, as well as letters from Ernest Barker, Edward A. Baughan, G. K. Chesterton, Arthur Conan Doyle, C. H. StJ. Hornby, and H. G. Wells in epistolary debates with Shaw.) and B466 King, W. Davies, Henry Irving's "Waterloo": Theatrical Engagements with Arthur Conan Doyle, George Bernard Shaw, Ellen Terry, Edward Gordon Craig: Late-Victorian Culture, Assorted Ghosts, Old Men, War, and History. Berkeley: University of California Press. CONTAINS: Brief comments by Shaw on proof copy of a letter written by Gordon Craig to The Observer (1930). P. 216. Also contains extract from a Shaw letter to Ellen Terry (1897), hitherto unpublished. P. 170. Full text of this letter (31 January 1897) published in Theatrics, 1995. [Suppl., A329] 5793. Lawson, Kate. "Bleak Houses: Marital Violence in Victorian Fiction." Letters in Canada 76, no. 1 (2007): 446-447.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Bleak Houses: Marital Violence in Victorian Fiction," by Lisa Surridge. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "Lisa Surridge's Bleak Houses: Marital Violence in Victorian Fiction is an intriguing and penetrating analysis of fictional representations of domestic violence and marital cruelty by authors as various as Charles Dickens, Anne Brontë, George Eliot, Wilkie Collins, Anthony Trollope, Mona Caird, and Arthur Conan Doyle...."
5794. Leapman, Michael. "Crime novels." New Statesman 126, no. 4363 (1997): 52.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the different detective and crime novels produced in the 90s. Novels relying on e-mail and psychology; The Wire in the Blood; Fifth Member; A Certain Justice; Unnatural exposure. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...It is a sign of the times that Dr Scarpetta spends long periods in front of her computer reading e-mail messages. The computer is now established as an essential plotting tool for crime writers -- as the telephone was for Agatha Christie and the hand-delivered letter for Arthur Conan Doyle. It crops up again in Val McDermid's well-paced thriller, The Wire in the Blood (HarperCollins, 16.99), where cracking a computer code helps track down the culprit...."
5795. Lears, Jackson. "Now You See Him, Now You Don't." New Republic 216, no. 7 (1997): 32-37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "Houdini!!! The Career of Ehrich Weiss," by Kenneth Silverman. Contains multiple references to Doyle.
5796. Leerssen, Joseph Theodoor. "The Rhetoric of National Character: A Programmatic Survey." Poetics Today 21, no. 2 (2000): 267-292.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This article studies the notion of 'national character' as it is formulated in literature and as it influences literary praxis...." Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...The entire genre of the rustic novel, from George Sand to Thomas Hardy to Marcel Pagnol and Graham Swift's Waterland, partakes of this commonplace as much as the topos in late Victorian adventure romances that explorations into the undiscovered corners of the world may lead us to the remains of a still-persisting past: the dinosaurs in Arthur Conan Doyle's Lost World, the traces of a masonic civilization founded by Alexander the Great in Rudyard Kipling's Man Who Would Be King, King Solomon's mines in H. Rider Haggard's book of that title..."
5797. Lella, Joseph W. "Bliss's Osler." Bulletin of the History of Medicine 75, no. 4 (2001): 760-766.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on Michael Bliss's William Osler: A Life in Medicine. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...It is precisely Bliss's devaluation of these elements of Osler's 'character' and spirituality that led him, in my view, to misinterpret his legacy. Osler's nephew W. W. (Willie) Francis, the first librarian of the Osler Library, is called an Oslerolater, a high priest of the Osler cult who 'literally wore' Osler's coat tails and contributed precious little to serious work (p. 493). Esther Rosenkrantz is styled a 'demonic collector' of Osleriana, the 'high priestess' of the Osler cult (p. 493). Cushing's image of the spirits of the great filing past Osler's bier evokes those 'disembodied wandering souls that poor Arthur Conan Doyle' spent his 'dotage trying to detect' (p. 483)...."
5798. Lemkau Jr, Henry L. "Constants, context, and change: the pursuit of purpose." Journal of the Medical Library Association 96, no. 1 (2008): 12-19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This lecture addresses the history and philosophy of librarianship, in general, and medical librarianship, in particular." Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Interestingly, physician-authors such as Treves and Conan Doyle attempt to tell the patient's story, so that we can be sure to get the right message and meaning from individual suffering...."
5799. Levin, Michael. "Blockmail." Criminal Justice Ethics 18, no. 2 (1999): 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Offers views on the essay written by Walter Block regarding the blackmail. Reason behind the objection on the legalization of blackmail; Conjecture as to why blackmail is unique. Note 3 includes a reference to Doyle. "The model here is the eponymous Charles August Milverton of Conan Doyle's story."
5800. Levine, Philippa. "Battle colors: Race, sex, and colonial soldiery in World War I." Journal of Women's History 9, no. 4 (1998): 104.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides an historical overview of the discourse of imperial racism and its associated sexual anxieties between men and women during World War I. Changes which the enormity of the First World War catalyzed; Information on the problems encountered with the transmission of venereal diseases during the war. Includes a reference to Doyle (pp 108-109). "...Conan Doyle wrote to The Times about 'harlot-haunted' areas of London where, 'these harpies carry off the lonely soldiers to their rooms, make them drunk often with the vile liquor which they keep there, and finally inoculate them, as likely as not, with one or other

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

of those diseases which, thanks to the agitation of well-meaning fools, have had free trade granted to them amongst us. Our present policy is to shut the museums--the most pitiful economy ever effected by a great nation--but to keep open the brothels.'...Conan Doyle's juxtaposition of the museum and the brothel is highly suggestive of the class politics of his day--of Britain surrendering its cultural heritage to the sordid commercialism the bordello invoked..."

5801. Lewis, Arthur O. "The Natural History of Make-Believe, A Guide to the Principal Works of Britain, Europe, and America." Utopian Studies 8, no. 1 (1997): 173.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'The Natural History of Make-Believe, A Guide to the Principal Works of Britain, Europe, and America,' by John Goldthwaite. Includes a passing reference to Doyle.

"...Goldthwaite delights in the stories that use 'the offstage trick of making a miracle story about critters in pants seem as normal to the reader as a new Trollope or Conan Doyle' (319)."

5802. Lifson, Amy. "State by state." Humanities 18, no. 1 (1997): 36.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a roundup of activities of state humanities councils throughout the United States in January and February of 1997. Includes exhibitions; Book launching; Radio programs; Reading and discussion series; Meetings. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Wyoming--Twenty-eight book discussion groups will meet throughout the 100,000 square miles of Wyoming in January and February. In Sundance, people will be discussing Owen Wister's The Virginian on January 16; in Piney Bluffs it will be Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's A Study in Scarlet; and in Big Piney it will be Dashiell Hammett's The Maltese Falcon on January 27."

5803. Lightbody, James. "Canada's Seraglio Cities: Political Barriers to Regional Governance." Canadian Journal of Sociology 24, no. 2 (1999): 175-191.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle (p. 187). "...To assess whether those 'life-style' choices so acclaimed by local concillors had any impact in hard spending decisions, a standard rank order correlation was calculated between the income and dwelling variables...The findings...are, very simply, most interesting by their absence, as Sir Arthur Conan Doyle might have noted...."

5804. Littlewood, Kenneth R. "Ludwik Zamenhof: a colleague of rare distinction." Clinical & experimental ophthalmology 35, no. 3 (2007): 281-283.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Ludwik Zamenhof trained as an ophthalmologist in Vienna at the end of the 19th century. He is best known as the originator of Esperanto and devoted his life to the ideals of secular humanism and ethnic tolerance. Few individuals left a nobler legacy, yet in a tragic irony when the Nazis invaded Poland in World War Two his family were singled out for persecution." [Abstract from author]. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...In 1885 he graduated and entered general practice in Lithuania but soon realized he lacked the temperament for this vocation. Using his savings he travelled to Vienna in 1886 to study ophthalmology, where the famous teacher Ernst Fuchs had been appointed Professor the previous year. (Another famous colleague, Arthur Conan Doyle, followed him in 1890.) At the same time he began trying to publish his first Esperanto book but was frustrated by insufficient funds...."

5805. Llana, Sara Miller. "Getting clean by staying green." Christian Science Monitor, June 4, 2008: 13-14.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "From the air, this 3.7-million-acre national park in northeastern Bolivia seems a vast carpet of lush timberland, cloaking jaguars, howler monkeys, and giant anteaters beneath. Outside the tiny window of a three-seat plane, the terrain rises from rainforest to flooded savannah. There is not a person in sight. But in the distance is a trail of lighter, younger canopy the width of a road, a remnant from when logging paths carved this forest into pieces. That was before The Nature Conservancy, its Bolivian partner Fundación Amigos de la Naturaleza (FAN), the Bolivian government, and three international energy companies devised a plan to protect 1.5 million acres threatened with deforestation and degradation. The idea was simple: This national park in the Amazon basin, perhaps the inspiration for Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's 'The Lost World,' would do its part to fight climate change...." Also includes a photograph with this caption: "'Lost World.' The Ahlfeld Waterfall and the Arco Iris Waterfall are highlights of the Noel Kempff Mercado National Park in Bolivia. The falls may have inspired Conan Doyle's 1912 novel."

5806. Loesberg, Jonathan. "Recent studies in the nineteenth century." Studies in English Literature (Rice) 34, no. 4

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

(1994): 877.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Evaluates studies in 19th century literature which appeared in the 'Studies in English Literature 1500-1900' journal in 1994. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Another somewhat anomalous entry here--indeed a nearly entirely anomalous book--is W.D. King's Henry Irving's 'Waterloo': Theatrical Engagements with Arthur Conan Doyle, George Bernard Shaw, Ellen Terry, Edward Gordon Craig, Late Victorian Culture, Assorted Ghosts, Old Men, War, and History. This laundry list of a title gives some idea of the book's wit as well as its occasionally grandiose claims for itself. King starts with an account of Irving's performance in a short play by Arthur Conan Doyle about a dying Waterloo veteran, its generally popular reception, and George Bernard Shaw's devastating review of it. He uses this event as a springboard to consider the shift from the Victorian sentimental drama to twentieth-century realist drama, the mechanics and psychology of audience response, the myths and histories of Waterloo at the time of the play's writing and performance (1892-1894), Henry Irving's importance to the contemporaneous theater, and a number of other topics. Essentially, the book is a meditation on the resonances of a piece of stage and reviewing history. More a critical tour de force than a work of scholarship that will lead anywhere outside itself, it provides all the pleasures such anomalies can afford...."

5807. Lough, Francis. "National Identity and Historiography in Jose Saramago's A Jangada de Pedra." Journal of Iberian & Latin American Studies 8, no. 2 (2002): 153-163.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the national identity and historiography aspects of Jose Saramago's novel, 'A Jangada de Pedra.' Theme of the novel; Significance of the novel to Latin literature. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...The echoes of Camões in the novel have to be taken in the context of the multitude of literary and cultural references scattered throughout the text which include, amongst others, Cervantes, Unamuno, Shakespeare, Conan Doyle, Jules Verne, Wagner, Pigalle, Hitchcock and even Lassie...."

5808. Louis, Margot Kathleen. "Swinburne." Victorian Poetry 40, no. 3 (2002): 340-345.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Swinburne's 'The Leper,' one of the most sensational texts in Poems and Ballads, and perhaps for that reason lately discovered as one of his most teachable poems and anthologized with increasing frequency, has received attention in two quarters this year. Rod Edmond in 'Without the Camp': Leprosy and Nineteenth-Century Writing' (VLC 29 [2001]:507-518) provides the medical and historical context for Victorian anxieties about leprosy, and contrasts Swinburne's poem with two fictional treatments of the disease. Edmond stresses the way in which Swinburne's text transgresses fundamental boundaries between life and death, and between the self and the world--boundaries which Kipling and Conan Doyle, in their tales of leprosy, are concerned to sustain (pp. 510-511)...."

5809. Lovell, Stephen. "Ogonek: The crisis of a genre." Europe-Asia Studies 48, no. 6 (1996): 989.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a study focusing on the role of the Russia's 'Ogonek' magazine in mobilizing the intelligentsia under glasnost. Redefinition of the role of Ogonek in an effort to ward off financial crisis and respond to social change; Ogonek's role in Gorbachev's campaign for social reconstruction; Comparison between Ogonek and other Russian magazines. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Vigilyansky says quite simply that 'the crisis of Ogonek was a manifestation of the crisis of perestroika in its 'Gorbachevite' and--more broadly--in its 'shestidesyatnik' version'. Vigilyansky saw a danger of Ogonek becoming no more than a 'lacklustre appendix to the collected works of Dumas, Conan Doyle and the 'Library of Satire and Humour'".

5810. Lowry, Donal. "When the World Loved the Boers." History Today 49, no. 5 (1999): 43.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Relates how the Boers were able to count on world-wide support in their struggle with Great Britain. War between the British Empire against the Boers; High point of the pro-Boer campaign; Information on British imperialists. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Even advocates of imperial victory such as Arthur Conan Doyle tended to romanticise the Boers as comprising a unique blend of descendants of Dutch insurgents against imperial Spain and of French Huguenots, made more rugged by centuries of hard apprenticeship in the hostile environment of Africa. 'Napoleon and all his veterans', Conan Doyle wrote, 'have never treated us so roughly as these hard-bitten farmers with their ancient theology and their inconveniently modern rifles.'"

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5811. Luke, Brian. "Violent love: Hunting, heterosexuality, and the erotics of men's predation." Feminist Studies 24, no. 3 (1998): 627.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Shows how contemporary hunting by North American white men is structured and experienced as a sexual activity. Background on related literature; Comparison of hunting with sex; Details on the erotics of hunting. Includes a reference to Doyle. "In his novel, The Hound of the Baskervilles, Arthur Conan Doyle tells a story concerning a cruel nobleman named Hugo Baskerville. Hugo desired a neighboring woman who consistently avoided him....In linking hunting with predatory sexuality, Doyle's imagination matches reality. From the perspective of the man hunting with hounds, the chase is hot, charged with phallic sexuality..."
5812. Luzzatto, Lucio. "David Galton and the evolution of somatic cell populations." Leukemia & lymphoma 48, no. 12 (2007): 2288-2289.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An obituary for doctor and professor David Galton is presented. The second reference is to a work by Doyle: Conan Doyle A. Notes on a case of leucocythaemia. Lancet 25 March 1882;490.
5813. M.V. "Spirits enter into an electronic medium." Nature 374, no. 6517 (1995): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on a sample of high-resolution digital images mounted on a prototype viewing system set up by the British Library to coincide with a G-7 ministerial conference on the Information Society in Brussels, Belgium. Historical image of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle; Aim of speeding access to images in the library's holdings of books, manuscripts and photographs.
5814. MacKenzie, John. "Another Little Patch of Red." History Today 55, no. 8 (2005): 20-26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Suggests that imperial rule and the possession of empire were an essential component of British identity, life and culture. Debate about the role of the British Empire in British culture and society; Interest of the British people in their empire; Diversification of historical interests of the British society. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...The writings of Anthony Trollope are full of empire. In Phineas Finn (1869), the colonies are the central interest of the leading character. Later Victorian writers like Wilkie Collins, Rider Haggard and Arthur Conan Doyle projected images of Colonial places and peoples...."
5815. Mahy, Brian W. J. "Book review." Emerging Infectious Diseases 4, no. 3 (1998): 513.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Emerging Infections,' edited by R.M. Krause. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Chapters on emerging bacterial diseases include a superb one on Persisting Problems in Tuberculosis, by McKinney, Jacobs, and Bloom, which is right up to date yet includes fascinating literary quotes, from Charles Dickens to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle...."
5816. Maier-Katkin, Birgit, and Daniel Maier-Katkin. "At the Heart of Darkness: Crimes Against Humanity and the Banality of Evil." Human Rights Quarterly 26, no. 3 (2004): 584-604.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This article, while rooted in critical literature, is interdisciplinary, drawing upon political and social theory, history, law, and social sciences to address the problem of evil in an environment dominated by crimes against humanity: the Congo during the reign of the Belgian King Leopold...." Note 11 contains a reference to Doyle. William Roger Louis, Morel and the Congo Reform Association, 1904-1913, in E.D. Morel's History of the Congo Reform Movement 171, 205 n.1 (Wm. Roger Louis & Jean Stengers eds., 1968) (quoting letter from E.D. Morel to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle (7 Oct. 1909)).
5817. Malatesta, Parisina, and Nena Terrell. "Lost land of water and rock." Americas 48, no. 6 (1996): 28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features the Gran Sabana in Venezuela. Strangely shaped columns of rock formed by millions of years of uplift and erosion; Scientific exploration of the tepui; Angel Falls; Canaima National Park. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Twenty-five years after Im Thurn's climb, none other than the creator of Sherlock Holmes himself, Arthur Conan Doyle, was surprised by the discovery of dinosaur bones belonging to a Cretaceous iguanodon, practically at his doorstep in Sussex. The excitement of this find, the influence of Charles Darwin, and Schomburgk's accounts of the Gran Sabana inspired him to write The Lost World, published in 1912. The Gran Sabana never lost the name Doyle gave it...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5818. Malwitz, Norman. "Book reviews: Social sciences." Library Journal 123, no. 10 (1998): 125.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews two books about Atlantis. 'Atlantis Destroyed,' by Rodney Castleden; 'Imagining Atlantis,' by Richard Ellis. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...His [Castleden's] most interesting revelation is that Arthur Conan Doyle wrote a novel featuring an underwater Atlantis...."
5819. Marchesini, Manuela. "Literature as the Experience of Boundary Crossing: Gadda's Descent to Hell and the Solution to That Awful Mess of Via Merulana." MLN 119, no. 1 (2004): 109-134.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "I will attempt a reading of Carlo Emilio Gadda's second and last novel, Quer pasticciaccio brutto de via Merulana, published by Garzanti in 1957, through an interpretation of its vexata quaestio par excellence: Pasticciaccio's supposedly open ending...." Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Even so, a solution to Pasticciaccio would, by itself, take us only thus far, as many authoritative interpreters have pointed out, since this novel is not a mystery in the sense of Agatha Christie's or Conan Doyle's--although it is most certainly endowed with the logical rigor and consistency one can expect from an engineer who graduated from Milan's Politecnico...."
5820. Marcou, David J. "Book reviews." British Heritage 18, no. 7 (1997): 54.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'A Reader's Guide To Writer's Britain,' by Sally Varlow. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...The stories relating to why William Shakespeare was the 'Soul of the Age'; how Charles Dickens used the British Museum and Library to rehearse his craft; how Beatrix Potter illustrated her picture-book House of the Tailor of Gloucester; how North Yorkshire's town of Thirsk became Darrowby in James Herriot's tale of a country veterinarian; and how Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's special patch near granitestrewn Dartmoor became the setting for 'The Hound of the Baskervilles' are among the stories that will make you want to read more, as well as visit the settings...."
5821. Margolin, Uri. "Telling in the Plural: From Grammar to Ideology." Poetics Today 21, no. 3 (2000): 591-618.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This article aims to provide a definition, description, and typology of collective narrative agents and of collective narratives...." Includes a reference to Doyle. "...The typology that follows is based on the nature and strength of the bond between members of a group, yielding groups that range in nature from collections of disparate elements to unified wholes. A. The simplest kind of collection of individuals is an instantiation class: the class of all individuals who possess a certain property or fulfill a certain condition. But such individuals may not be otherwise similar or interrelated and may not interact with one another at all. A literary example would be Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's Red-headed league...."
5822. Marrero-Ponce, Yovani, Francisco Torrens, Ysaías J. Alvarado, and Richard Rotondo. "Bond-based global and local (bond, group and bond-type) quadratic indices and their applications to computer-aided molecular design. 1. QSPR studies of diverse sets of organic chemicals." Journal of computer-aided molecular design 20, no. 10 (2006): 685-701.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a short quotation from Conan Doyle. "You know my methods. Apply them."
5823. Martin, Douglas. "Harold J. Berman, 89, Who Altered Beliefs About Origins of Western Law, Dies." New York Times, November 18, 2007: 37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Harold J. Berman, a scholar whose expertise in Russian law took him to a Soviet courtroom to fight for royalties owed Arthur Conan Doyle, and whose forceful scholarship altered thinking about Western law's origins, died on Nov. 13 in Brooklyn. He was 89. His daughter Jean Berman announced his death." [Abstract from publisher] 5824. Martinez, Juan. "The Death Pictures." Publishers Weekly 255, no. 26 (2008): 37-37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article profiles Simon Hall, author of the book "The Death Pictures." He was born in Bedford, England, but now lives in Exeter, Devon. His favorite authors include George Orwell and Arthur Conan Doyle. He became a crime correspondent for BBC TV before becoming a crime writer. His toughest challenge in writing the book was intertwining the dark inspiration that comes from television crime reporting with a detective's shady arts.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5825. Martinez, Susan B. "Candles Burning Blue: Part One." Journal of Religion & Psychical Research 27, no. 3 (2004): 150-161.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An excursion to the hinterland of psi research brings us to the wilderness of SHC (Spontaneous Human Combustion), its thorn and bramble having dismayed the best of explorers. Bewildering though it is, its auxiliary phenomena (blue flame, ozone smell, "microwave" induction, negligible damage to garments and nearby objects) give the adventurer more than enough clues to go on. Each factor of relevance is explored in turn, Part One concentrating on anecdotal evidence to set the stage for a critique based on mediumistic (and magnetic) energies. The discourse circumambulates related puzzles: fire immunity, human effluvium ("odic flame"), "fiery marks" left by phantoms, apports that arrive burning hot, poltergeist fires, and ball-lightning -- all leading to afresh look at materialization and de-materialization. The present study purports not to solve the enigma of spontaneous combustion, but to narrow down the search, while the psi-nice developed in the process promises to enhance the student's appreciation of forces unseen but very real. [Abstract from author]. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...One is inclined to push it aside,' mused Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, in reference to the unexplained world. 'If one cannot get a document into a pigeon-hole, one is too ready with a wastepaper basket, and it is this human tendency which has retarded our advance in this new science.' (Doyle, 1930) The new science to which Sir Arthur alludes, rather than discarding or discrediting 'these extraordinary phenomena,' is inclined to embrace them, regarding their very strangeness as entree to the secrets of the unknown...."

5826. ———. "Two Worlds." Journal of Religion & Psychical Research 28, no. 2 (2005): 110-118.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A discussion is given of whether or not Christianity should embrace mediumship, healing and reincarnation. Includes multiple references to Doyle.

5827. Marty, Martin E. "Characters." Christian Century 122, no. 6 (2005): 47-47.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Recalls personalities featured in the column "M.E.M.O." of the periodical "Times Literary Supplement." Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Next take Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, creator of Sherlock Holmes (February 7, Jon Barnes), who after he lost a son in World War I 'began to believe in almost everything. He believed in ghosts, telepathy, psychic powers, automatic writing, clairvoyance, fairies, communications with the dead, ectoplasm and the promise of golf in heaven.' A candidate for New Age guruhood, he also kept his feet on the ground--as attested by the 'startling fact that in 1909 Doyle was the referee of the World Heavyweight Boxing Championship.'"

5828. Maryles, Daisy. "Paperback Bestsellers/Mass Market." Publishers Weekly 254, no. 22 (2007): 20-20.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews several books including "The Witness," by Sandra Brown, "Gone," by Jonathan Kellerman and "Don't Look Down," by Jennifer Cruise and Bob Mayer. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...On his Web site, Kellerman cites among his literary influences James T. Farrell, Conan Doyle, Dumas, Verne, Ross McDonald and Stephen King, who, he says, 'will be read centuries from now--he's the Edgar Allan Poe of our generation.'" 5829. Matheson, Catherine, and David Matheson. "Languages of Scotland: culture and the classroom." Comparative Education 36, no. 2 (2000): 211-221.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The indigenous languages of Scotland are in a precarious position faced with the massive presence of English. This essay examines the state and nature of the Scots and Gaelic languages. It places them in their historical context and traces how each has had its heyday in Scotland, in the case of Gaelic to be supplanted by Scots and in the case of Scots to be supplanted by English. Both have become marginalised in Scottish life and in the Scottish school. Both have been subject to various concerted campaigns aimed at their destruction. Gaelic, however, has at least had the consolation of being regarded as a language while Scots has not. The changing relationship between the school and these languages is examined in the context of the current revival of Scottish culture on a multiplicity of fronts. [Abstract from author]. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Beyond these, almost the entirety of written output from Scotland has been in English (Kay, 1986). This applies equally well to the philosophers and economists of the Enlightenment, such as David Hume, John Bonar Law and Adam Smith, and to the majority of writers of the nineteenth century, such as Sir Walter Scott, Robert Louis Stevenson and Arthur Conan Doyle, as it does to the majority of their counterparts in the twentieth century...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5830. Max, D. T. "Final Destination." New Yorker 83, no. 16 (2007): 54-71.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses the literary manuscripts held at the Harry Ransom Humanities Research Center at the University of Texas at Austin. The center's director Thomas Staley is profiled. On hand are works such as a Gutenberg Bible, a first edition of "Alice in Wonderland," and the corrected proofs of James Joyce's "Ulysses." The article reports on Staley's method for acquiring new material and his passion for the field. Former University of Texas dean Harry Hunt Ransom's development of the archive center is covered. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Ransom acquired books and manuscripts so rapidly that they piled up in the halls and stairwells. 'G.T.T.' -- Gone to Texas -- became a recognized abbreviation in the rare-book business. He was also innovative. He bought the collections of the living or only recently dead writers whom Harvard and Yale considered too green. Ransom, who earned the nickname the Great Acquisitor, not only bought these writers' manuscripts and letters; he tried to gather everything from baby book to death mask. As a result, the center has Arthur Conan Doyle's undershirts, Evelyn Waugh's writing desk, a pair of beaded moccasins worn by D. H. Lawrence, Anne Sexton's glasses, and Isaac Bashevis Singer's Yiddish typewriter...."

5831. May, Scott A. "Back to school with multimedia." Compute! 16, no. 9 (1994): 62.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Surveys a number of new multimedia educational software products for preschoolers to postgraduates. How multimedia makes learning fun; Products for toddlers, including Busytown (Paramount Interactive) and Busiest Neighborhood Ever (Activision); Reading products such as Sound It Out Land 1 and 2 (Conexus); Oceans Below (Software Toolworks); Microsoft Dinosaurs (Microsoft); Microsoft Encarta (Microsoft); Many more; Prices. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Turn your PC into an instant literary archive with Library of the Future, Third Edition (World Library, 800-443-0238, $149.95), featuring unabridged text from over 1750 titles. A showcase for CD-ROM's incredible storage capacity and database functions, this latest edition features the complete works of Aesop, Hans Christian Andersen, Aristotle, William Cullen Bryant, Lewis Carroll, Arthur Conan Doyle, the Brothers Grimm, John Keats, Rudyard Kipling, Edgar Allan Poe, William Shakespeare, Oscar Wilde, and dozens more...."

5832. Mayer, Robert. "Not Adaptation but "Drifting": Patrick Keiller, Daniel Defoe, and the Relationship between Film and Literature." Eighteenth Century Fiction 16, no. 4 (2004): 803-827.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Explores ways in which British filmmaker Patrick Keiller's movies "London" and "Robinson in Space" are mindful of and influenced by author Daniel Defoe's 18th-century novels "Robinson Crusoe" and "A Tour Through the Whole Island of Great Britain." Link between film and literature; Intrication of the complex borderline status of the novel; Intersection of film and literary prose; Ways in which text and films evince a sense of England as a political and moral space that is constructed by the observers themselves; Correspondence in the ways that the films and text interrogate generic and formal borders; Films' problematization of the distinction between documentary and fiction films. Includes a passing reference to Doyle (p. 808).

5833. Mayer, Wayne E. "There's Green in Green." Americas 60, no. 4 (2008): 5-5.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses the highlights of the Second Latin American Congress of National Parks and Other Protected Areas held in Bariloche, Argentina. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "Ever since Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's 1912 novel The Lost World introduced readers to 'the grandest, richest, most wonderful bit of earth upon this planet,' conservationists have been designing creative ways to protect Latin America's wildest places...."

5834. Maynard, Patrick. "Portraits as displays." Philosophical Studies 135, no. 1 (2007): 111-121.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle and "the Cottingley fairy photo fraud."

5835. McArthur, Ian. "Henry Black, rakugo and the coming of modernity in Meiji Japan." Japan Forum 16, no. 1 (2004): 135-164.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The Australian-born storyteller ( rakugoka ) Henry (Kairakutei) Black lived in Japan between 1865 and 1923. During those years, he affiliated with the San'yu school of storytelling, and performed kabuki roles, conjuring, and hypnotism. His achievements include the adaptation of the modern European detective and sensation fiction novel genres of Mary Braddon and Charles Dickens, as well as

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- possibly Charles Reade and Alexandre Dumas, to the Japanese yose stage. In the process, Black participated in the Meiji debate over reform and the meaning of modernity. Stenographic book (sokkibon) versions of Black's narrations show that he presented audiences and readers with characters and settings which combined European and Japanese characteristics in stories which served as prototypes of the new Meiji nation-state. His narrations also served as blueprints for survival in an age of rapid change. Black's entertaining and instructive narrations reveal how he and his contemporaries interpreted Meiji reforms and their impact. They are a social historian's tools for mapping the development of the literary sensibility and intellectual history of the Japanese. [Abstract from author] Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Black's favoured genres were the Victorian sensation and detective novel. Both were modern for their time....Among the genres' finest writers were Mary Braddon, Charles Dickens, Wilkie Collins, Arthur Conan Doyle and Fergus Hume...."
5836. McCabe, Susan. "To Be and to Have: The Rise of Queer Historicism." GLQ: A Journal of Lesbian and Gay Studies 11, no. 1 (2004): 119-134.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews Deep Gossip. Henry Abelove. Minneapolis: University of Minnesota Press, 2003. xviii + 104 pp.; Making Girls into Women: American Women's Writing and the Rise of Lesbian Identity. Kathryn R. Kent Durham: Duke University Press, 2003. xi + 355 pp.; Strangers: Homosexual Love in the Nineteenth Century. Graham Robb. London: Picador, 2003. viii + 341 pp. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...The fact that the line between Romantic friendship and passionate love is hard to find does not mean that no line existed,' Robb asserts, and proceeds with novelistic flair to present circumstances in which this line was crossed (115). Among his biographical 'outings,' he scrutinizes the composer Tchaikovsky, who came 'closer than almost any other public figure to living an openly homosexual life' (127)...Hans Christian Andersen, patron saint of the queer fairy tale; and, as the book spills into the twentieth century, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, doubled in his homoerotic detective. In risking some anachronism through these outings, Robbpoints toward a queer reinterpretation of the closet...."
5837. McCarver, Sam. "Finding the Queen of Mystery." Writer 118, no. 10 (2005): 43-44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the challenges facing writers in incorporating real people into a fictional work. Importance of researching information on the person; Approach that can be taken to present a real person as a character in a mystery novel. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Still later, I have her saying: 'Someday, I'll capture it all in my stories. I'll travel and write. The field is opening up for women. Conan Doyle hasn't written a new Sherlock Holmes story for years. I think women can put a new face on the mystery novel.'" 5838. McCloskey, Donald N. "The unquashed masses." Reason 26, no. 3 (1994): 60.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'The Intellectuals and the Masses: Pride and Prejudice Among the Literary Intelligentsia, 1880-1939,' by John Carey. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...The modernist baddies are Nietzsche (Great Satan to all buddies) and his English-writing progeny Yeats, Pound, Eliot, Russell, Lawrence, Joyce, Woolf, Wyndham Lewis, Evelyn Waugh, Aldous Huxley, Graham Greene. The tiny band of bourgeois goodies down to the present includes Bennett, G.K. Chesterton. Conan Doyle, George Orwell, Stevie Smith, Philip Larkin, Ted Hughes...."
5839. McElmeel, Sharron L., and Lin Buswell. "Vote for the 100 most important authors in young adult." Book Report 15, no. 5 (1997): 23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on a challenge issued to readers of the periodical 'The Book Report' to identify one hundred of the most important authors of novels for young adults. Basis used for the preparation of the survey; Description of the forms used for the survey; Procedure for the survey; Return address for the surveys. Survey includes Doyle as one of the listed authors.
5840. McGarry, Molly. "Spectral Sexualities: Nineteenth-Century Spiritualism, Moral Panics, and the Making of U.S. Obscenity Law." Journal of Women's History 12, no. 2 (2000): 8-29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The United States Congress passed the first national obscenity law in 1873, largely due to the lobbying of Anthony Comstock. The passage of the Comstock Law marked a historically new federal involvement in fighting vice. It vastly accelerated censorship by enlarging the category of 'obscene literature' to include all printed matter, and, for the first time, made it a crime to circulate information about contraception or abortion. At the center of the controversy that ultimately led to the passage of the Comstock Law--and typically missing from modern accounts--was a Spiritualist feminist, Victoria Woodhull. The author argues that the tangle of Spiritualist affinities, as well as the ghostly logic of Spiritualism itself, provides a means to follow the phantom-like fears around obscenity, publicness, gender, and sexuality at the inception of national obscenity regulation. Restoring Spiritualism to the history of censorship illuminates the complicated workings of this formative moral panic, one which may be termed America's first 'sex war.' Doyle mentioned in note 46: Crookes's many supporting testimonies of Katie include letters to the editor of the Banner of Light, reprinted in the Spiritualist (London), 17 April 1874, 29, and William Crookes, Researches in the Phenomenon of Spiritualism (London: James Burns, 1874). Crookes's photographs were reproduced in James Coates, Photographing the Invisible (Chicago: Advanced Thought, 1911). See also Arthur Conan Doyle, The Case for Spirit Photography (New York: George H. Doran, 1923). For Owen's "disclaimed" testimony, see Robert Dale Owen, "Touching Spiritual Visitants From a Higher Life: A Chapter of Autobiography," Atlantic Monthly, January 1875, 247-48.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5841. McKinstry, E. Richard. "Great Lives from History: The 19th Century 1801-1900." Reference & User Services Quarterly 46, no. 4 (2007): 89-89.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Great Lives From History: The 19th Century 1801-1900," edited by John Powell. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Because people do not necessarily fit neatly into one century or another, readers of Great Lives from History: The 19th Century should know that some of the biographical sketches include information from both the eighteenth and twentieth centuries. For instance, the essay on Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, who lived thirty of his seventy-one years in the twentieth century, notes his contributions in literature, war reporting, political life, and the Spiritualist movement, 1901-1930...."
5842. McLellan, N. Faith, and Anne Hudson Jones. "Why literature and medicine?" Lancet 348, no. 9020 (1996): 109.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews developments in the field of literature and medicine as a background for characterizing its most important conceptual issues. Changes in medical education in the 1960s; Symbolization by Apollo of the affinity between literature and medicine; Contributions of novels that portray the history of medicine. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Physicians and literary scholars alike have traditionally explored certain relationships between literature and medicine, including images of physicians and works of physician-writers, such as Francois Rabelais (c 1494-1553), Tobias George Smollett (1721-71), Oliver Goldsmith (1730-74), John Keats (1795-1821), Sir Arthur Conan Doyle (1859-1930), Anton Chekhov (1860-1904), William Somerset Maugham (1874-1965), William Carlos Williams (1883-1963), AJ Cronin (1896-1981), and Walker Percy (1916-90)...."
5843. McLemee, Scott. "Losing Friends and Influencing People." Chronicle of Higher Education 48, no. 19 (2002): A12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles intellectual historian Richard Wolin. Criticisms on his book 'Heidegger's Children: Hannah Arendt, Karl Lowith, Hans Jonas, and Herbert Marcuse'; Interest in cultural criticism; List of philosophical works. Includes references to Doyle. "...Inspired by Arthur Conan Doyle's The Hound of the Baskervilles, in which Sir Charles Baskerville's fear of the hound leads him to die of a heart attack, David P. Phillips, a professor of sociology, and colleagues investigated whether fear could create a spike in death rates. They analyzed computerized death certificates of more than 47 million Americans who died from 1973 to 1998. The researchers were particularly interested in whether more Americans of Chinese or Japanese descent died of heart attacks on the fourth day of the month, because of superstitions many have inherited about the number four. (The Mandarin, Cantonese, and Japanese words for "four" bear nearly the same pronunciation as the words for "death.") Sure enough, cardiac deaths were 7.3 percent higher on the fourth day than on the other days of the first week of any month among Chinese- and Japanese-Americans, but not among whites, the researchers wrote in the British Medical Journal last month. For Chinese- and Japanese-Americans with chronic heart problems (like Conan Doyle's Sir Charles) the increase was even greater: 13 percent higher on the fourth day than on other days. Mr. Phillips calls the increase the "Baskerville effect." Finding a suitable real-life trigger for the Baskerville effect was not easy, reports Mr. Phillips. The trigger had to cause psychological stress among one group of people but not another without creating physical danger or changes in medical service. A lab test was untenable, the researchers write: "Doyle's intuition is consistent with many laboratory studies, which show cardiovascular changes following psychological stress. However, for ethical reasons, only nonfatal stressors can be studied in the laboratory. ..."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5844. McLoughlin, Stephen, and Vivi Vajda. "Ancient Wollemi Pines Resurgent." American Scientist 93, no. 6 (2005): 540-547.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article focuses on the ancient wollemi pines, a rare tree from the Cretaceous Period. Includes a passing reference to Doyle (p. 540). "...Within months, media outlets around the world reported the discovery of a 'tree from the age of the dinosaurs,' bringing to mind Arthur Conan Doyle's Lost World...."

5845. McPherson, Stewart. "A lost world above the clouds." Geographical 80, no. 11 (2008): 44-49.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents information about the first successful ascent of Mount Roraima in the Guiana Highlands in South America. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...The existence of a remote, isolated plateau towering above the rainforests in the heart of South America led Victorian scientists to speculate earnestly that its summit might have been completely cut off for millions of years and might therefore harbour prehistoric life or even isolated, ancient human civilisations. Such speculation would go on to inspire Arthur Conan Doyle to write his adventure classic The Lost World...."

5846. Memmott, Carol. "Roundup: Mysteries/Thrillers." USA Today, no.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a brief review of The Front by Patricia Cornwell (Putnam, 180 pp., $22.95) and a passing reference to Doyle. "This classically written crime novel (think Sir Arthur Conan Doyle) is the follow-up to the best-selling forensic crime writer's 2006 At Risk...."

5847. Merrington, Peter. "A Staggered Orientalism: The Cape-to-Cairo Imaginary." Poetics Today 22, no. 2 (2001): 323-364.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Cecil Rhodes's vision of an all-British 'Cape-to-Cairo' road, rail, and telegraph route is addressed by a reconstruction of the cultural matrix that appears to have held this concept before the public eye for nearly five decades. This cultural matrix constitutes a kind of colonial and imperial imaginary, which generated a particular founding myth for the colonial state of the Union of South Africa in 1910 and which also lent to foreign visitors, tourists, and immigrants a readily understood interpretation of South Africa and the Cape as 'Mediterranean' rather than as 'African.'..." Note 21 mentions Doyle: This trend was evident at the close of the nineteenth century in the popular fascination with spiritism (pursued with keen interest by Kipling and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle) and the emergence of new cults, such as Mary Baker Eddy's Christian Science, Annie Besant's Hare Krishna movement (with which the imperial architect and colleague of Herbert Baker, Sir Edwin Lutyens, became involved via his wife's theosophical interests), Madame Blavatsky's theosophical movement, Rudolf Steiner's anthroposophy, and the cult that developed around the person of Gurdjieff. See also Nicholas Goodrick-Clarke 1985 for links between occultism and Freemasonry in Austria-Germany in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries.

5848. Michael, Terry. "That's Victoria." Victoria 17, no. 6 (2003): 10.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses lifestyle events, art, and products. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Writer and editor 'please just call me a reader with a capital R!'" Michele Slung has cherished good short stories all her life. For The Victoria Reader: A Treasury of Timeless Tales, she has assembled thirty wonderful stories -- from thrilling intrigues to cherished fables. Among the legendary literary luminaries she has included are Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Oscar Wilde, P. G. Wodehouse, Edith Wharton and Sarah Orne Jewett. To order: (800) 467-9195."

5849. Milius, Susan. "A Fly Called Iyaiyai." Science news 159, no. 21 (2001): 330.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses humorous nomenclature of species by taxonomists and entomologists. Neal Evenhuis, who advocates fun once in a while when naming species; Sly wordplay which can be present in nomenclature; Rules of the International Commission on Zoological Nomenclature which must be obeyed when validly naming species. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Some names just sound funny: Zaa, Mops mops, Bla nini, and Awuka spazzola. Some names evoke celebrities, from Ludwig van Beethoven and Arthur Conan-Doyle to Frank Zappa and the Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles, and some make eye-crossingly awful puns...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5850. ———. "Lightening Up in the Name of Science." National Wildlife 40, no. 6 (2002): 68.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the contribution of taxonomist Neal Evenhuis on scientific names of flies. Number of animal species named; Influence of the genus on species name; Commemoration of the names on the people who collected the specimen. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Despite the precision of this science, taxonomist preserve a tradition of sly wordplay. Some names just sound funny: Zaa, Mops mops, Bla nini and Awuka spazzola. Some names evoke celebrities, from Beethoven and Arthur Conan Doyle to Frank Zappa and the Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles..."
5851. Miller, Andrew H. "Scenes of Sympathy: Identity and Representation in Victorian Fiction (review)." Victorian Studies 43, no. 4 (2001): 667-668.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Scenes of Sympathy: Identity and Representation in Victorian Fiction, by Audrey Jaffe; pp. vii + 184. Ithaca, NY and London: Cornell University Press, 2000, $39.95, GBP24.95. Includes a reference to Doyle. "Scenes of Sympathy is especially rich in its demonstration of the remarkable range of preoccupations, Victorian and current, which find their underpinning in sympathy. The opening section of the book, with chapters on Charles Dickens's A Christmas Carol (1843) and on Arthur Conan Doyle's 'The Man with the Twisted Lip' (1891) and Henry Mayhew's London Labour and the London Poor (1851), argues that the sorts of exchange imagined in acts of sympathy had their material analogue and support in the exchange of commodities; not surprisingly, these exchanges destabilize rather than consolidate the sympathetic self..."
5852. Miller, Kenneth, and Harry Benson. "Psychics: Science or seance? A reporter visits the twilight zone." Life 21, no. 7 (1998): 80.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the world of parapsychology. Brief details about the Rhine Research Center, established in 1927 by parapsychology's founding father, J.B. Rhine; The popularity of psychic hot lines since their debut in the mid-1980s; Comments from Rhine Center's chief parapsychologist, Richard Broughton, about psi and from Joe Nickell, editor of the book 'Psychic Sleuths'; Psi and the gambler. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Scientists have been gathering data on psi since 1882, when a handful of British scholars formed the Society for Psychical Research. The SPR conducted field experiments and exposed as frauds a number of alleged spirit mediums, including the famous Madame Bla-vatsky. Then, in 1922 in Chicago, a lecture on spiritualism by Sherlock Holmes's creator, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, inspired Joseph Banks Rhine and his wife, Louisa, to give up their careers in botany...."
5853. Miner, Heather. "Bleak Houses: Marital Violence in Victorian Fiction." Virginia Quarterly Review 82, no. 3 (2006): 269-269.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Bleak Houses: Marital Violence in Victorian Fiction," by Lisa Surridge. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...In abrading traditional conceptions of the marital function, both realist and sensational tales thus inaugurated fictional exploration of late-Victorian feminism and the problematic of the New Woman in the fin de siecle fiction of Mona Caird and Arthur Conan Doyle."
5854. Minzesheimer, Bob. "Science inspired his fiction." USA Today, Nov 6, 2008: 01d.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profile and obituary of Michael Crichton. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...He cited his major influences as Arthur Conan Doyle, Mark Twain and Alfred Hitchcock. As a novelist, his plots were often better than his writing. But Crichton didn't seem bothered that he was more popular with readers than critics...."
5855. Mitchell, Angus. "New Light on the 'Heart of Darkness.'" History Today 49, no. 12 (1999): 20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Deals with Joseph Conrad's 'Heart of Darkness' and the novel's story based on the Congo slavery by Belgian King Leopold II. Literary debate on the book; Reasons behind the emergence of the British and Foreign Anti-Slavery Society and the Aborigines' Protection Society in the 19th century; Impact of 'The West African Mail' newspaper on the exposure of the Congo slavery; Role of Roger Casement, Great Britain's consul to Africa, in the crusade against slavery. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Expensive libel suits by companies defending commercial practices in imperial enclaves attracted leading lawyers such as Rufus

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Isaacs and Sir Edward Carson. Public indignation was further excited by the contribution of other important literary heavyweights. Mark Twain wrote King Leopold's Soliloquy. Arthur Conan Doyle penned The Crime of the Congo. Thousands attended Congo Reform rallies across the country...."

5856. Moffett, Mark W. "Travels With Charlie." International Wildlife 31, no. 2 (2001): 44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Recounts a journey to Venezuela with entomologist Charles Brewer-Carias. Diversity of plants and wildlife in Venezuela; Unique species of insects that are found in the Lake Leopold area; Brewer-Carias' recollection of an expedition to the Cerro de la Neblina mountain. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...The appeal of exploration has captivated humankind for ages, and Venezuela's wildlands carry a special allure. 'Why shouldn't somethin' new and wonderful lie in such a country? And why shouldn't we be the men to find it out?' wrote Sir Arthur Conan Doyle of these mountains in The Lost World. This novel about prehistoric life in Venezuela was inspired by British botanist Everard Im Thurn, who in the 1890s brought back specimens almost as startling as Darwin's from the Galapagos...."
5857. Mokrousov, Aleksei, and Deming Brown. "The bestseller." Russian Social Science Review 39, no. 3 (1998): 87.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on what makes books popular in Russia. Types of books which are popular; Reference to the book 'Children of the Arbat,' by Deti Arbata; Details on the advertising of books; Information on books written by Michael Crichton. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...In all likelihood, the skeptical ideas are precisely what draw new readers, believing in their own intellectuality, to Crichton's bestsellers. The fiction of the beginning of the century--from Conan Doyle to Charskaia--was preoccupied more with plot, or, at best, cognitive pathos ... la Jules Verne...."
5858. Monagan, John S. "A visit with Anthony Powell." American Scholar 65, no. 3 (1996): 433.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Relates the author's relationship with author Anthony Powell. Author's fascination with Powell's book 'A Dance to the Music of Time'; Powell's writing habits, principles and personal qualities; Author's first visit with the Powells in November 1976; Powell's lifestyle. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Immediately, I understood the meaning of the veiled reference to Conan Doyle's Lost World, which had been dropped at the house before our departure...."
5859. Moore, Jim. "The Puzzling Origins of AIDS." American Scientist 92, no. 6 (2004): 540-547.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses several theories on the origin of AIDS. Explanation for the theory on the use of an experimental oral polio vaccine in Africa; Transmission of simian immunodeficiency virus to hunters via blood-to-blood contact with an infected primate; Introduction of disposable plastic syringes in 1950s. Timeline on page 546 includes a passing reference to Doyle. "1890s-1913: Congolese natives suffered countless atrocities--murder, slavery and the severing of hands and feet--institutionalized crimes that Joseph Conrad, Mark Twain and Arthur Conan Doyle helped to expose."
5860. Moretti, Franco. "Structure, Change, and Survival: A Response to Winthrop-Young." diacritics 29, no. 2 (1999): 41-42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...At any rate, I would say that literary selection (the choice, say, of Conan Doyle over his many competitors in the field of detective fiction) always operates for a reason (readers choose Doyle because they like certain aspects of his work: for instance, his use of clues), although this reason may not be a conscious one (readers may 'select' clues without being aware that they are doing it)...."
5861. Morgan, Susan. "Recent Studies in the Nineteenth Century." SEL Studies in English Literature 1500-1900 40, no. 4 (2000): 745-778.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Annual review of English studies for the year 2000. Includes references to Doyle. "Joseph McLaughlin's Writing the Urban Jungle: Reading Empire in London from Doyle to Eliot is also concerned with the cultural processes involved in nation making, here through bringing colonial rhetoric back to represent life in London. Fine chapters on General William Booth and T. S. Eliot alongside the usual suspects make this an extensive as well as an intelligent study....Paula M. Krebs's Gender, Race, and the Writing of Empire: Public Discourse and the Boer War focuses on the Boer War of 1899-1902 to investigate 'assumptions about British imperialism and what sustained it in public discourse . . . as well as analyzing the ways various kinds of public discourse functioned to support and critique that imperialism' (p. 8)....Gender and race are given a thorough treatment in the chapters on the controversy over the refugee camps, which were segregated by race and then again by gender, focusing on the contrasting opinions of Emily Hobhouse and Millicent Fawcett, two prominent women in the public debates over the war and camps. Krebs also looks at late-Victorian writers such as Arthur Conan Doyle and W. T. Stead and how both writers used the Victorian refashioning of chivalry to characterize the sexual honor of the British soldier in their war propaganda...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5862. Morris Jr, Roy. "Battle of Magersfontein." Military History 16, no. 5 (1999): 38.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Describes the Battle of Magersfontein of the Second Boer War in South Africa. When the war began; Leaders of the combatants; Result of the battle. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Indeed, so great were the losses suffered by the Highlanders that all Christmas parties were canceled that year, and a general state of mourning was declared. Author Arthur Conan Doyle observed that 'it may be doubted if any single battle has ever put so many families of high and low into mourning from the Tweed to the Caithness shore.'..."

5863. Morss, John R. "Crime Stories: Posnerian Pragmatism, Rawlsian Pure Procedural Justice, and the Fictional Problem." Deakin Law Review 9, no. 2 (2004): 643-654.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // There are many different ways in which law and truth may be said to be related. It is perhaps in the criminal trial that connections between them are of most significance. An orthodox way of describing a criminal trial is that the criminal procedure is seeking to establish the truth concerning some past event, and that success of the procedure is measured by how close its outcome converges with that truth. Criminal justice presents the community with challenging dilemmas in this regard, such as those arising from the notion of double jeopardy. This paper discusses the Rawlsian notions of 'imperfect', 'perfect' and 'pure' procedural justice, and suggests against Rawls that it is pure procedural justice that best represents what we want from a criminal justice system. Good procedure makes good criminal law. A comparison is made with the writings of Habermas and Posner, and given that pure procedural justice eschews transcendental truths, some brief comments are made on the convergence of that position with the realm of the fictional. [Abstract from Author] Includes references to Doyle (pages 651, 654). Note 35, page 651 references comments on the Hound in the text. "The question can certainly be asked as to whether Stapleton's guilt is convincing in terms of the content of the tale; his questionable prospects of obtaining his hound-assisted Baskerville inheritance presents a 'formidable difficulty': Arthur Conan Doyle, The Hound of the Baskervilles (Penguin ed 1982) 173. But this difficulty is still within the story-world." Page 654 reads: "The effect of confession is governed by procedure. Similarly, for a murder victim to come back to life, or to reappear having been presumed dead--as in Conan Doyle's The Norwood Builder--would not of itself challenge a conviction...."

5864. Murphy, Cullen. "Feudal Gestures." Atlantic Monthly 292, no. 3 (2003): 135.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Looking on medieval characteristics of the 21st century, one could point to the growing prevalence of attacker as a form of economic transaction. One could note the emergence of something akin to heresy trials, as outspoken people in academe and other areas of public life are subjected to harassment or worse for their political and cultural views. One could cite the new federal insistence that able-bodied people in public-housing projects devote time to community projects -- a dusting off of the ancient corvee, which entitled an overlord to acts of service from those living on his estates. There is a far more basic parallel between medieval times and 21st century. The precise definition of 'feudalism' is one of those things on which medievalists can't quite agree -- the field is divided into warring fiefdoms -- but the historian F. L. Ganshof discerned in feudal society 'a dispersal of political authority amongst a hierarchy of persons who exercise in their own interest powers normally attributed to the State.' Power was no longer a form of property. Social services and protections became a consequence of citizenship, not a private deal between a lord and his vassals, or between a private entity and its clients." Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Those medieval 'companies,' like the Famous White Company of Arthur Conan Doyle's novel, are the lineal ancestors of ArmorGroup and Halliburton, Saladin Security and Sandline...."

5865. ———. "Second Opinions." Atlantic Monthly 287, no. 6 (2001): 16.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the interest of the United States medical profession in deceased historical personages. Ailment suffered by Catherine the Great according to investigations of modern

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

physicians; Medical scrutiny of literary characters; Comparison of the medical investigation of pathology in fiction and history. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Literature, too, has come under newly intensive medical scrutiny. I remember once, years ago, attending a lecture at a gathering of Sherlockian scholars in Washington, D.C., at which a distinguished local pathologist went on for an hour about the possible ailments afflicting young Jack Ferguson in 'The Adventure of the Sussex Vampire.' (Conan Doyle, writing in the voice of Dr. Watson, had provided some clues. For instance: 'The boy went off with a curious, shambling gait which told my surgical eyes that he was suffering from a weak spine.')

5866. Myers, B. R. "Tradecraft." Atlantic 295, no. 3 (2005): 111-116.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This article focuses on the book 'Absolute Friends,' by John le Carre. Though highly literate, and endowed with greater gifts of observation and imagery than most of today's prizewinners, le Carre is hardly an intellectual writer. At times le Carre seemed not to care whether the average American reader understood him at all, an attitude that never fails to make the average American critic sit up and take notice. There can be no excuse for Absolute Friends, but there is an explanation. The third or so of the text that most people will consider the actual story was clearly inspired by the invasion of Iraq, which was only a few months old when the manuscript was finished, in June of 2003." Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Take The Spy Who Came In From the Cold: the gloomy tone lends plausibility to a story in desperate need of it, as gloom has done since Conan Doyle and continues to do in Hollywood...."

5867. Nahin, Paul J. "Hesiod's Anvil: Falling and Spinning through Heaven and Earth." SIAM Review 50, no. 1 (2008): 191-192.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Hesiod's Anvil: Falling and Spinning Through Heaven and Earth," by Andrew J. Simoson. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...The author, Andrew Simoson, is a professor of mathematics at King College in Bristol, Tennessee, and is clearly a man who loves both his mathematics and a good story. The book, which is generally about gravity and how it makes things fall and spin under a wide variety of situations, is bursting both with equations (calculus and differential equations abound) and numerous relevant connections to the fictional literature. Jules Verne, H. G. Wells, Arthur Conan Doyle, and Arthur C. Clarke are as likely to show up on a page as are Newton, Descartes, and l'Hôpital...."

5868. Nash, Andrew. "William Robertson Nicoll, the Kailyard Novel and the Question of Popular Culture." Scottish Studies Review 5, no. 1 (2004): 57-73.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Criticizes the popular culture identification of the Kailyard novel. Authors who are associated with the popular culture identification of the Kailyard novel; Conflicts in the identification of Kailyard with popular culture; Significance of the Kailyard novel to the understanding of Scottish literature in the twentieth century; Strategies of critic and reviewer William Robertson Nicoll in promoting the Kailyard. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Nicoll's considerable industry made him a master of the art of multiplereviewing, a famous case being the tremendous debunking of Arthur Conan Doyle's comic work of fiction, A Duet. When this book appeared in 1899 no less than six reviewers charged it as immoral. The six were anonymous writers in the Daily Chronicle, the American Bookman and the London Bookman; 'Claudius Clear' and 'A Man of Kent' in The British Weekly and 'O.O.' in The Sketch. All six were Robertson Nicoll, and when Conan Doyle found out he wrote in protest to the Daily Chronicle, precipitating an exchange of letters with Nicoll on 'The Ethics of Criticism'." Note 37 gives the citation. "The correspondence is reprinted in The Unknown Conan Doyle: Letters to the Press, ed. John Michael Gibson and Richard Lancelyn Green (London: Seeker & Warburg, 1986), 54-7."

5869. Nash, David. "The Boer War and Its Humanitarian Critics." History Today 49, no. 6 (1999): 42.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the impact of the Boer War. Explanation of the pro-Boer viewpoint; Criticisms on the Boer War; Consequences and benefits. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Even after the war had ended, Robertson continued to attack both the glorification of empire and what to him appeared to be the need to popularise it for its galvanising patriotic effect. These two tendencies seemed to him to come together in the person of Sir Arthur Conan-Doyle, whose War in South Africa (1902) appeared to be aimed at both audiences. In an attempt to refute this book Robertson produced an open letter denouncing what he saw as the surrender of reason which Conan Doyle's work actively encouraged...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5870. Neff, Nancy E. "Book notes." Annals of Internal Medicine 128, no. 6 (1998): 512.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'ABC of Healthy Travel,' by E. Walker, G. Williams and others. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Sample physician-patient interviews are used effectively to illustrate major points made in the text. The attractive two-color format makes the book easy to read. Interesting quotes from Shakespeare, Arthur Conan Doyle, Oscar Wilde, and others introduce each chapter, and each chapter ends with a summary."
5871. Nelson, Victoria. "Faux Catholic: A Gothic Subgenre from Monk Lewis to Dan Brown." boundary 2 34, no. 3 (2007): 87-107.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article discusses Gothic literary depictions of the Catholic church by non-Catholic authors dating back to the eighteenth century. Includes a passing reference in note 11 to Doyle. "After Jane Austen's contemporary satire Northanger Abbey (finished by 1803; published posthumously in 1818), the definitive Victorian parody of the by then dated Gothic conventions remains Arthur Conan Doyle's The Hound of the Baskervilles, which presents seemingly supernatural scares (killer ghost animal roaming the lonely moors, etc.) only to expose them as the props of a cunning murderer."
5872. ———. "Symmes Hole, Or the South Polar Romance." Raritan 17, no. 2 (1997): 136.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Deals with the human tendency to project inner psychological contents onto the physical contours of planet Earth. Holes at the North and South Poles; Samuel Taylor Coleridge's unique amalgam of physical and soul journey; Theories of natural philosopher John Cleves Symmes; Theory of the hollow earth. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...As the nineteenth century wore on, the Romantic world view suffered its own continental drift into the Victorian sentimentality of Arthur Conan Doyle on one hand--whose supernatural story 'The Captain of the 'Pole-star' (1883), in which a tormented ship's captain meets his end on an Arctic ice floe, pursuing a white insubstantial female form (presumably the ghost of his dead fiancée back in Cornwall), contains more than an echo of Pym as well as of Frankenstein--or, on the other, the techno-literality of Jules Verne in works like The Sphinx of the Ice Fields (1897), which Verne composed, according to William Butcher, not only to 'completely superimpose itself on Poe's [novel] but also to cover it so completely as to virtually block it out.'..."
5873. Nemerov, Alexander. "Haunted supermasculinity." American Art 13, no. 3 (1999): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on Carl Rungius' early 20th century American painting entitled 'Wary Game.' Portrayal of mountain lions; Painting as an objective view of a creature known as Dall sheep; Casting of sheep in racial terms; Rungius' basing of the painting on his experiences in the Yukon Territory in the summer of 1904; Exploration of the Yukon with hunter Charles Sheldon. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...In 1910 N.C. Wyeth painted The First Cargo (fig.6), an illustration for Arthur Conan Doyle's story of the same name. The story, concerning the fourth-century arrival of Saxons in Britain, was the second installment of 'Through the Mists,' a three-part tale Doyle published in Scribner's in late 1910 and early 1911 concerning late Roman Europe...."
5874. Nilsen, Don L. F. "Humorous contemporary Jewish-American authors: An overview of the criticism." Melus 21, no. 4 (1996): 71.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an overview of criticism on funny contemporary Jewish-American authors and suggests new areas of research on this topic. Includes Woody Allen; Saul Bellow; Art Buchwald; Stanely Elkin; Jules Feiffer; Bruce Jay-Friedman; Allen Ginsberg; Erica Jong; Paul Krassner; Frances Ann Lebowitz. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Although Lebowitz was addicted to reading, she was expelled from the private school her parents sent her to. She did, however, later pass the GED certification examination. Reviewers like the bite of the 'hard-boiled, down-to-earth, aphoristic sentences' in her 1978 Metropolitan Life, which satirizes not only her own field of journalism, but also such treasures as Arthur Conan Doyle's stories...."
5875. Noah, Timothy. "Tony's final chapter." Washington Monthly 29, no. 10 (1997): 49.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Big Trouble: A Murder in a Small Western Town Sets Off a Struggle For the Soul of America,' by J. Anthony Lukas. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Steunenberg's assassination triggered a massive response by the governors of both Idaho and Colorado,

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- prodded by (and in large part paid for by) the mine owners, who immediately pinned the crime on Haywood and two other top leaders of the radical Western Federation of Miners. Their arrest in Colorado, transfer to Idaho, and subsequent trial were all orchestrated by James McParland, an aging Pinkerton operative who'd become something of a celebrity for infiltrating and then helping to prosecute the infamous Molly Maguire labor terrorists; among other things, he'd been turned by Arthur Conan Doyle into a character in a rare Sherlock Holmes story set in the United States...."
5876. Nolan, Andrew. "Making Modern Men: The Scopes Trial, Masculinity and Progress in the 1920s United States." Gender & History 19, no. 1 (2007): 122-142.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The article discusses on the issues regarding masculinity in the U.S. in the 1920s. It focuses on the court trial of John Scopes for allegedly breaking an enacted state law that made it illegal to teach evolution in publicly funded schools. The trial evoked broader debates about the need to protect the role that men should play in shaping the post-war nation which helped reinforce the illusionary transparency and naturalness of gender." Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Perhaps the lack of criticism arose because Hunter's ideas about gender and race were not uncommon in the 1920s. Popular novels and films such as Tarzan of the Apes and The Lost World reinforced the idea that Progressive civilisation depended upon strong white men, and that other races needed the support and guidance of such men...."
5877. Norman, Philip. "Derek Taylor, 1932-1997." Rolling Stone, no. 772 (1997): 23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles Derek Taylor, music publicist and mentor for the Beatles, at the time of his death on September 7, 1997 at the age of 65. His articulate comments and svelte, well-dressed impression; His forthright approach to conveying information to the public about various members of the Beatles; Taylor quotations; Details concerning his office at Apple Corps. and the atmosphere surrounding the Beatles; The author's personal recollections of Taylor. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Still a writer at heart, he poured his quirky, oblique style into Apple press releases and an Apple Corps. newsletter full of incidental musings on such topics as the racist element in Arthur Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes stories...."
5878. Novak Jr, Frank G. "Sin and Evil: Moral Values in Literature." Christianity & Literature 57, no. 2 (2008): 322-329.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Sin and Evil: Moral Values in Literature," by Ronald Paulson. Includes references to Doyle.
5879. Nuttall, A. D. "Why Scholarship Matters." Wilson Quarterly 27, no. 4 (2003): 60.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the essay "Why Scholarship Matters," by A. D. Nuttall, which was adapted from the book "Dead from the Waist Down: Scholars and Scholarship in Literature and the Popular Imagination." Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...The number of those for whom it is true must be small, and many people read Agatha Christie over and over again with the greatest of pleasure. If I examine my own sensibility, I have to say that not Agatha Christie, whom I can't read, but Arthur Conan Doyle has given me a little more pleasure than Donne has. Yet it is clear to me that Donne is better than Doyle, and the excellence of Donne interests me deeply...."
5880. Oakes, Edward T. "Wimsey surpassed." Commonweal 121, no. 2 (1994): 28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'A Mind in Love,' by Barbara Reynolds. Biography on Dorothy L. Sayers; Sayers as writer of detective stories; Reasons for Sayers' achievements; Author as a friend and collaborator of Sayers. Includes a reference to Doyle. "Nowadays Dorothy L. Sayers is known by the reading public mostly for her detective fiction; but after reading this fascinating account of her life by a close friend and collaborator in her later years, I wonder how pleased she would be by her posthumous fate: 'She had come to the conclusion,' says Reynolds, 'that detective stories tended to have a bad effect on people, making them believe that there was one neat solution for all human ills, and she would have no more part in encouraging such an attitude.' And like Conan Doyle before her, she grew rather tired of letters from fans (not to mention her publisher) pleading with her to continue to pump more life into her detective, Lord Peter Wimsey, especially now that he had married Harriet Vane, a suspect in one of the earlier novels...."
5881. Odden, Karen M. "'Able and intelligent medical men meeting together': The Victorian Railway Crash, Medical

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- Jurisprudence, and the Rise of Medical Authority." Journal of Victorian Culture 8, no. 1 (2003): 33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the importance of the fact that medical practitioners were called into law courts as expert witnesses in railway injury trials that occurred in the second half of the 19th century in England. Opportunities for medical men to elevate their social standing; Surgeons and physicians that produced medico-legal treatises and articles on railway injuries; Theories about trauma and the practices of psychoanalysis. Article begins with a reference to Doyle. "Writing to his mother in 1878 about the difficulty he was having in establishing his medical practice, Arthur Conan Doyle complained that '[t]hese Sheffielders would rather be poisoned by a [medical] man with a beard than be saved by a man without one.' Conan Doyle's suggestion that possessing a beard would establish his authority as a medical man sounds farcical; but, unfortunately for many Victorian medical practitioners, it too closely resembled the standards that lay people used to judge them to be amusing...."
5882. Oldstone, Michael B. A. "Travels along the viral--immunobiology highway." Immunological reviews 185, no. 1 (2002): 54.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "The general road map for my eventual life's work first unfolded in junior high school through the reading of three books whose tales of adventure and accomplishments foreshadowed my professional path. The books were Microbe Hunters by Paul De Kruif, Rats, Lice and History by Hans Zinsser, and The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. In college, those stories inspired me to take just those few courses required for medical school entry, then spend most of my time studying history and literature...."
5883. Olijnyk, Zena. "Let's make a deal." Canadian Business 74, no. 17 (2001): 78.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights Astral Media Inc., a media company based in Montreal, Canada. History of the company, which began as a small camera store founded by chief executive officer Ian Greenberg and his brothers; Television, radio and billboard advertising businesses owned by Astral; Greenberg's business strategy; Information about the Greenberg family; Outlook for Astral's future. Accompanying photograph makes reference to Doyle. "Astral logic: William B. Davis plays Sir Arthur Conan Doyle on the Family Channel's Mentors."
5884. Olivas, Michael A. "State College Savings and Prepaid Tuition Plans: A Reappraisal and Review." Journal of Law & Education 32, no. 4 (2003): 475-514.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "... There is some truth to all three scenarios, and states may further confuse audiences by camouflaging or dismissing the state role in the plans. Consider the recent following advertising for New Mexico's 'The Education Plan's College Savings Program,' which appeared in the State Capital's daily Santa Fe New Mexican. As in Arthur Conan Doyle's The Hound of the Baskervilles, this publicity piece is more interesting for what it does not show: nowhere does the official, legal name of the program appear ('The Education Plan's College Savings Program'), nor is there a local or state address for the program itself. The plan is presented as 'Scholar'sEdge,' a trademarked program of Smith Barney/Citigroup, Schoolhouse Capital, LLC, and Oppenheimer Funds...."
5885. Olsen, Ted. "C.S. Lewis." Christian History 19, no. 1 (2000): 26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles former atheist scholar-turned Anglican and apologist C.S. Lewis. Family; Educational and career background; Reason why he rejected Christianity during the early years; Books written and published; Conversion from atheism to Christianity. INSETS: Timeline; You Are There. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Lewis was born into a bookish family of Protestants in Belfast, Ireland. 'There were books in the study, books in the dining room, books in the cloakroom, books (two deep) in the great bookcase on the landing, books in a bedroom, books piled as high as my shoulder in the cistern attic, books of all kinds,' Lewis remembered, and none were off limits to him. On rainy days--and there were many in northern Ireland--he pulled volumes off the shelves and entered into worlds created by authors such as Conan Doyle, E. Nesbit, Mark Twain, and Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.... ' 5886. Olson, Catherine Applefeld, Carrie Bell, and Trudi Miller-Rosenblum. "Reviews & Previews: General Media." Billboard 111, no. 11 (1999): 30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several audio-visual materials for the week ending March 13, 1999

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- including the audiobook 'Other Worlds' by Barbara Michaels, read by Barbara Rosenblat. Includes a reference to Doyle. Other Worlds By Barbara Michaels. Read by Barbara Rosenblat. HarperAudio 3 hours (abridged), $18 ISBN 0-694-52082-9. "This intriguing and atmospheric tale takes place in a Victorian-era gentlemen's club whose members include escape artist Harry Houdini, mystery novelist Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, psychoanalyst Dr. Nandor Fodor, and a mysterious female writer. The group gathers to discuss cases of supposedly supernatural occurrences and offer possible explanations. Two tales of haunted houses and malevolent spirits are told on this tape. Michaels writes in an elegant and intelligent style, and the tales are presented as puzzles to be solved, not scary horror stories. As always, veteran narrator Barbara Rosenblat gives a polished and professional performance, using her distinctive vocal talents to bring each character to life."
5887. O'Neil, Mary Anne. "Book Review: Between Doctors and Patients: The Changing Balance of Power." Philosophy and Literature 22, no. 2 (1998): 518-521.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Between Doctors and Patients. The Changing Balance of Power, by Lilian R. Furst; xxi & 287 pp. Charlottesville: University of Virginia Press, 1998, $37.50. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Many realist novelists--Flaubert and Conan Doyle, for example--came from medical backgrounds and incorporated ordinary, everyday medical situations such as childbirth, death and illness, into their plots. Their novels, with their multiplicity of characters, are especially useful in presenting the viewpoint of the patient...."
5888. O'Reilley, Mary Rose. "Revising Thérèse." Literary Review 51, no. 4 (2008): 3-20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An essay is presented on the memoir "The Story of a Soul," by Thérèse Martin. It discusses the childhood and monastic experience of Saint Thérèse as she wrote in her memoir and reflects on masochistic pietism. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...In his novel, Arthur and George, the contemporary British author, Julian Barnes, situates his hero, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, as a dutiful Catholic in this transitional epoch. Conan Doyle inquires of his more skeptical friend, George, 'What is the church threatened by?' 'By science,' replies George...."
5889. Orlans, Harold. "The Boy from Tabriz." Change 36, no. 2 (2004): 6-8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses Vartan Gregorian's autobiography, The Road to Home (Simon & Schuster, 2003). Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...He wore hand-me-down clothes and beat-up shoes. To avoid his remarried father's hostility, he read a lot: Dumas, Scott, the great Russian novelists, Maupassant, Conan Doyle, Shakespeare, and Armenian novelists...."
5890. ———. "Copyright extension." Change 30, no. 4 (1998): 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the effect of the European Union's extension of copyright from 50 to 70 years after an author's death. List of authors who are back in copyright in Britain; Views of Patrick Parrinder, author, on literary estate; Objectionable aspect of copyright from a scholarly standpoint. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Authors who are now back in copyright in Britain include James M. Barrie, John Buchan, Arthur Conan Doyle, F. Scott Fitzgerald, John Galsworthy, Thomas Hardy, James Joyce, Rudyard Kipling, D.H. Lawrence, Edith Wharton, Thomas Wolfe, and Virginia Woolf...."
5891. Ozick, Cynthia. "Against modernity: The American Academy in the '20s." New Criterion 13, no. 1 (1994): 19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the American Academy of Arts and Letters in the 1920s. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...The centennial program, subtitled 'In Celebration of the Unity and Power of the Literature of the English-speaking People,' was intended to emphasize the ongoing link with the Mother Country. To further this connection, invitations went out to, among others, Prime Minister Herbert Asquith, Robert Bridges (the Poet Laureate), Rudyard Kipling, James Barrie, Conan Doyle, G. K. Chesterton, Gilbert Murray, Arthur Quiller-Couch, Edmund Gosse, Alfred Noyes, and John Galsworthy. Ambitious though this roster was, only the last two accepted and actually arrived--Galsworthy with the proviso that he would attend the gala luncheon 'so long as this does not entail a speech.' Stephen Leacock came with a troop of notables from Canada, and Australia was represented by one lone guest...."
5892. Pai, Sanjay A. "Death and the doctor." CMAJ: Canadian Medical Association Journal 167, no. 12 (2002): 1377.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents several unique deaths of doctors in the past. How professor Johann

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Wirsung was murdered by a student fighting over who was responsible for the discovery of a pancreatic duct which became known as the duct of Wirsung; Doctors who died of septicemia after performing autopsies; Examples of doctors dying of the disease they researched including Evarts A. Graham who died of lung cancer after performing the first pneumonectomy for carcinoma of the lung; German physician Hans Queckenstedt, who fell from a horse and was killed by a passing munitions truck in World War I. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Men die of the disease which they have studied most....It's as if the morbid condition was an evil creature which, when it found itself closely hunted, flew at the throat of his pursuer.' So states a surgeon in a story by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle (who gave up the practice of medicine in order to write stories -- for which he was more highly paid -- and who died a natural death)...."

5893. Pearl, Nancy. "Mysterious Europe: Crime in the Old World." Library Journal 128, no. 6 (2003): 156.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An annotated bibliography of mystery books from European countries other than Great Britain is presented. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...When we think about mysteries written by non-Americans, the books that first come to mind are all those old favorites from Great Britain that have become such a central part of our mystery reading-everyone from Agatha Christie and Arthur Conan Doyle to P.D. James, Peter Dickinson, and Ian Rankin. But there are some terrific mystery writers, old and new, from across the English Channel...."

5894. Pennavaria, Katherine. "Representation of Books and Libraries in Depictions of the Future." Libraries & Culture 37, no. 3 (2002): 229.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the visions of authors, essayist and library professionals for the future of books and recorded knowledge. Discussion on the issue of documentation; Bibliographic survey of stories and articles conveying predictions and visions; Efforts to preserve the knowledge of humanity. Includes a passing reference to Doyle (p. 236). "...Numerous nineteenth- and twentieth-century writers not especially noted for their interest in the future also tried their hand at such tales, among them Rudyard Kipling, Anthony Trollope, H. H. Munroe (Saki), Jack London, P. G. Wodehouse, and Arthur Conan Doyle. For the most part, their stories convey more about the authors' own time than about the future...."

5895. Peppis, Paul. "'Surrounded by a Multitude of Other Blasts': Vorticism and the Great War." Modernism/modernity 4, no. 2 (1997): 39-66.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to Doyle. "...The Department of Information's propaganda war against Germany was directed by the well-known writer and Liberal M. P., Charles Masterman.(4) Within a month of the declaration of hostilities, he held a meeting of 'well-known men of letters' for the 'organisation of public statements of the strength of the British case . . . in the war.'(5) Two weeks later, the Times published a 'Declaration by Authors' on 'Britain's Destiny and Duty' in which fifty-two leading writers publicly proclaimed their support for 'the cause of the Allies . . . with a full conviction of its righteousness,' declaring Germany an outlaw nation driven to aggression by the 'iron military bureaucracy of Prussia.'(6) Among the worthies who affixed their names were H. Granville Barker, J. M. Barrie, Arnold Bennett, Robert Bridges, G. K. Chesterton, Arthur Conan Doyle, John Galsworthy, Thomas Hardy, Rudyard Kipling, Arthur Pinero, May Sinclair, and H. G. Wells, a veritable who's who of Edwardian culture...."

5896. Perez Canado, Maria Luisa. "English and Spanish spelling: Are they really different?" The Reading Teacher 58, no. 6 (2005): 522-530.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // There are marked similarities between the Spanish and English orthographies that may be used to facilitate spelling instruction in both languages. Although there are undeniable differences between Spanish, with its shallow, transparent orthography, and English with its deep, asymmetrical spelling system, distinct similarities can be discerned on closer examination. English and Spanish spelling deviate from the universal phonemic principle in much the same way, the psychological processes involved in spelling acquisition and production are parallel for both languages, similar causes underlie the commitment of spelling mistakes in both languages, comparable didactic errors have traditionally been made when implementing spelling instruction in both languages, and equivalent didactic principles can be followed in this instruction. The pedagogical implications of these observations are discussed. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Demands for rationalization go back to the late 16th century, when John Hart took an active interest in the problems of written English and Thomas Scott suggested a restoration of letters from the Old English alphabet

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

to allow a more phonetic rendering. Such outstanding figures as Benjamin Franklin; Noah Webster; Mark Twain; Charles Darwin; Alfred, Lord Tennyson; Sir Arthur Conan Doyle; Andrew Carnegie; Theodore Roosevelt; and George Bernard Shaw have advocated spelling reform and supported movements for that cause...."

5897. Peter, Chris Maina. "The Magic Wand in Making Constitutions Endure in Africa: Anything (Lessons) to Learn from East Africa?" African & Asian Studies 6, no. 4 (2007): 511-535.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Footnote 13 includes a reference to Doyle's Our African Winter (London: Duckworth, 2001).

5898. Pettingell, Phoebe. "Leithauser's Reconciliations." New Leader 85, no. 2 (2002): 29.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Darlington's Fall: A Novel in Verse,' by Brad Leithauser. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Leithauser captures the presumptions and prejudices of the day: unselfconscious racism, an abiding concern about 'moral' failures like alcoholism (or indeed madness). He understands its enthusiasms as well: the heady exhilaration of reading Jules Verne, or Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Lost World; of seeing paintings that re-create prehistoric scenes from a world we never saw; or of studying trailblazing scientists and explorers...."

5899. Pfeiffer, John R. "A Continuing Checklist of Shaviana." SHAW The Annual of Bernard Shaw Studies 25, no. (2005): 260-288.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // One entry contains a reference to Doyle: C., J. "NB." TLS (30 July 2004): 14. J. C. needs updating when he says Bernard Shaw has "two societies" and only one writer, Conan Doyle, has three. Currently there are quite a number for Shaw. They are inventoried and described at the International Shaw Society website: <http://chuma.cas.usf.edu/~dietrich/iss.html>

5900. ———. "A Continuing Checklist of Shaviana." SHAW The Annual of Bernard Shaw Studies 20, no. (2001): 265-289.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Two entries with reference to Doyle. The first: Stashower, Daniel. Teller of Tales: The Life of Arthur Conan Doyle. New York: Henry Holt and Company, 1999. "There was substantial connection between Doyle, and Shaw, and Stashower presents it here, drawing upon the Holroyd Bernard Shaw and the Laurence Collected Letters as well as the Doyle archive. The most extensive example is in 'The Ruthless Vegetarian,' an even-handed chapter detailing the Shaw/Doyle newspaper duel over the report of the Titanic disaster. Shaw's posture was that the newspapers had lied in their descriptions of the acts of heroism, especially by the captain of the ship. Doyle's view was sentimental, rationalizing that glossing the brutal facts (if such facts were present) was salutary since there was already immense shock and pain from the tragedy. He believed, in addition, that Shaw's attack was not sincere, but a typical Shavian ploy of self-advertisement. The exchange was bitter but did not change their 'kindly personal relations.' Doyle wrote, 'Shaw is a genial creature to meet, and I am prepared to believe that there is a human kindly side to his nature though it has not been presented to the public. It took a good man to write Saint Joan.'..." The second entry: Hampton, Aubrey. GBS & Company: A Biographical Celebration in Two Acts Presided Over by Bernard Shaw. Tampa: Organica Press, 1989 (1988). "Copies may be ordered from Organica Press, 4419 North Manhattan Avenue, Tampa Florida 33614. World premiere production at Gorilla Theatre (Tampa, Florida), 5 February 1999. From the playbill: 'Where else can you spend the evening with Ellen Terry, Mrs. Patrick Campbell, Albert Einstein, Houdini, Oscar Wilde, W. B. Yeats, Henry George, Bo [sic] & Sidney Webb, H.G. Wells, Gene Tunney, Bertrand Russell, Beerbohm Tree, Richard Mansfield, Harley Granville-Barker, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Madame Blavatsky, Annie Besant, Florence Farr, and, of course, George Bernard Shaw.'" 5901. Pfeiffer, John R., and Richard E. Winslow Iii. "A Continuing Checklist of Shaviana." Shaw: The Annual of Bernard Shaw Studies 23, no. (2003): 181-201.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Lists books by and about the Irish playwright George Bernard Shaw. Includes one entry (p. 200) with reference to Doyle. 'The Titanic.' The Chronicles of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. April 2002. 19 April 2003; www.siracd.com/life\_titanic.shtml. "This article is virtually entirely devoted to a recollection of the disagreement between Shaw and Doyle about how the Titanic disaster was characterized in the press. This entry is offered as an example of the choice to mention GBS by this Doyle Web site, reporting as well in a

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

sidebar that Shaw once called Sherlock Holmes 'a drug addict without a single amiable trait.'" 5902. Plant, Sadie. "The great toyshop of Europe." New Statesman 132, no. 4640 (2003): 30.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the city of Birmingham, England. Network of extensive canals that the city built in the 18th century; City that produced metal goods; Economic life that continues to be varied and inventive; City that is full of cultures. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Birmingham makes all the usual claims to fame - great achievements, great people, great events. It can show off its magnificent pre-Raphaelite paintings, offer some outstanding architectural sights, music and food, not to mention countless shiny bars and waterside cafes. It was home to famous writers, too: JR R Tolkien, Hilaire Belloc and Benjamin Zephaniah; Samuel Johnson, whose first essays appeared in the Birmingham Journal; Washington Irving, who was living in the Jewellery Quarter when he wrote Rip Van Winkle and The Legend of Sleepy Hollow; and Arthur Conan Doyle, who, as a young city doctor, bought his first violin from a shop on Sherlock Street...."
5903. Plümper, Thomas, and Christina J. Schneider. "Too much to die, too little to live: unemployment, higher education policies and university budgets in Germany." Journal of European Public Policy 14, no. 4 (2007): 631-653.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "German educational spending per student has dramatically declined since the early 1970s. In this paper, we develop a theory of fiscal opportunism and argue that state governments exploit higher educational policies as an instrument of active labour market policy." Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...However, ever since the days of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle (and possibly earlier), a convincing case against a suspect who does not confess depends on the provision of sufficient evidence of means, motive, and opportunity...."
5904. Poirier, Suzanne. "Performing Alzheimer's disease." Lancet 354, no. 9190 (1999): 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the authors experience in a readers' theater production as a means of educating medical students. Description of preparations for the production in which actors read from a hand-held script; Selection of three short autobiographical stories from 'Alzheimer's on Stage'; How the performance details the changes that the disease makes on the families' lives. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...At this point, I would be hard pressed to identify any one person who originated the use of readers' theatre in medical settings, but performances go back at least to the early 1980s, in medical schools as far flung as Michigan State University, East Carolina University, the University of North Carolina, Rush University in Chicago, and the University of Illinois at Chicago. Among the plays that have been performed are adaptations of Eudora Welty's 'A Visit of Charity', William Carlos Williams' 'Old Doc Rivers' and 'The Use of Force', Arthur Conan Doyle's 'The Doctors of Hoyland', and Richard Selzer's 'Imelda'...."
5905. Porter, Jennifer. "The spirit(s) of science: paradoxical positivism as religious discourse among spiritualists." Science as Culture 14, no. 1 (2005): 1-21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Language is but the means the spirit employs to give expression to itself [and] as the development of spirit progresses, words have to be laid aside, to give place to those more suitable to the growth of the spirit, as it advances in knowledge and refinement [but] whatever term may be applied to any condition of life, to give it comprehension in our minds, does not change the nature of the object spoken of ... In regard to those internal principles of life ... that give birth to worlds and creations vast, --the God-power, in other words, pervading immensity ... we give today the scientific terms of ... magnetism and electricity (Woodruff, 1862, pp. 156-158). [Abstract from Author] Includes references to Doyle. "Figure 1. Professor Crookes's Test to Show That the Medium and the Spirit Were Separate Entities. From a drawing by S. Drigin. Credit: Arthur Conan Doyle, History of Spiritualism"... "Prominent nineteenth and early twentieth century Spiritualists such as Emma Hardinge Britten (1870, 1884), John Arthur Hill (1918) and Arthur Conan Doyle (1919, 1921, 1926) all argued that their personal experiences, duly witnessed by reputable observers, constituted scientific proof of Spiritualist claims. References at end of article include Doyle: Doyle, A. (1919) The Vital Message (London, Toronto, New York: Hodder and Stoughton). Doyle, A. (1921) The Wanderings of a Spiritualist (London: Hodder and Stoughton). Doyle, A. (1926) The History of Spiritualism, 2 volumes (London: Cassell Press).
5906. Pow, Tom. "Where the hell is Quinzi Oniack?" New Statesman 128, no. 4460 (1999): 37.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on poetry in London, England. Description of south London; Information on a tour around the area; Poetry as rock 'n' roll. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "A couple of weeks ago I had cause to visit London. I lived there for two stretches in the seventies. On the first occasion, I stayed in Stamford Hill and worked in Walthamstow. For all I saw of central London during the week, I may as well have been living in Motherwell. Nothing wrong, of course, with living in Motherwell -- except it is not famed for the range of broadening experiences young men and women dream are on offer in the metropolis. There were a couple of these, I recall; but, living where I did, I rarely got near the London that sparks the imagination so much -- the one that was mapped out so clearly by Dickens and Conan Doyle and recently revisited by such writers as the Peters Ackroyd and Carey...."

5907. Priestman, Martin. "Crime in Literature: Sociology of Deviance and Fiction (review)." Modernism/modernity 11, no. 4 (2005): 850-851.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A review of Crime in Literature: Sociology of Deviance and Fiction. Vincenzo Ruggiero. London: Verso, 2003. Pp. 257. $60.00 (cloth); $19.00 (paper). Contains a passing reference to Doyle. "...Heralded by an intriguing selection of positive accounts of drug-taking, from De Quincey and Conan Doyle to Walter Benjamin, the chapter on addiction involves considerable twisting of evidence to dovetail its two main texts into an argument about the wrongs of prohibition...."

5908. Pritchard, William H. "The last man of letters." American Scholar 65, no. 1 (1996): 107.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on the book 'The Rise and Fall of the Man of Letters' by John Gross. Details on Julian Symons; Symons' early apprenticeship; His series of crime novels; His successful operation for colon cancer; His death. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...As a writer, Julian never resigned anything, and the last fifteen years of his life yielded ten works of fiction, among the best of which are The Blackheath Poisonings (1978), The Criminal Comedy of the Contented Couple (1985), and Death's Darkest Face (1990), his most complex if not most satisfactory work. Playing Happy Families, which appeared last year, revealed not the least loss of energy or technical inventiveness. Besides these, he brought out among other works of non-fiction, short biographies of Dashiell Hammett and Conan Doyle, a highly readable and idiosyncratic account of modernism (Makers of the New, 1987), and an anthology of Wyndham Lewis's writings with interspersed commentary (The Essential Wyndham Lewis, 1989), in which he had his last say about the old Enemy who was his precursor...."

5909. Rabate, Jean-Michel. "Ghostwriting Modernism (review)." Modernism/modernity 10, no. 1 (2003): 214-216.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Ghostwriting Modernism. Helen Sword. Ithaca, NY: Cornell University Press, 2002. Pp. 212. $42.50 (cloth); $18.95 (paper). Contains a passing reference to Doyle. "...However, Sword demonstrates convincingly that the age of Modernism saw an explosion of these meetings, societies and publications. Still poised between popular superstition and money-making scams, spiritualism or the mediumistic impersonation or recreation of dead people's words gained legitimacy. There is the obvious case of Yeats's early and late fascination for mediums of all sorts, including his wife, and Conan Doyle's 1922 The Coming of the Fairies which can be blamed on old age. But Sword demonstrates that Modernism as a whole was deeply and seriously obsessed with the phenomenon...."

5910. Radice, Giles. "Taylor Made." History Today 54, no. 11 (2004): 94-95.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an article on the importance of history in the structure of politics, society and civilization. Background on several historians and their works; Role of history in politics and the society; Information on how to be an effective historian. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...A year or two later, now reading for myself, I was enthralled by Conan Doyle's Adventures of Brigadier Gerard, in which Gerard, formerly a dashing hussar in the imperial army, recounts his exploits in Napoleon's campaigns. Conan Doyle may have poked fun at the Brigadier's boastful tales but I was wholeheartedly on Gerard's side, even though he was a Frenchman...."

5911. Ragen, Brian Abel. "Reading Becomes Electric: The Amazon Kindle." Papers on Language & Literature 44, no. 3 (2008): 328-332.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...We are now at another point where life imitates Star Trek. Especially in the later series, we see how Star Fleet officers read as well as talk. While in the original series we see only glowing screens in fixed positions, later Star Fleet officers read pads, which can display not just reports, but all the literature of many worlds. (For some reason, their recreational reading tends to focus on Arthur Conan Doyle, Charles Dickens, and Shakespeare, which some doubtless read in the original Klingon.)..."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5912. Rakel, Robert E. "Book notes." Annals of Internal Medicine 128, no. 6 (1998): 512.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book The Medical Interview: Mastering Skills for Clinical Practice, by J.L. Coulehan and M.R. Block. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Interesting quotes from Shakespeare, Arthur Conan Doyle, Oscar Wilde, and others introduce each chapter, and each chapter ends with a summary...."
5913. Ramos, Manuel. "The Postman and the Mex: From hard-boiled to huevos rancheros in detective fiction." Hopscotch: A Cultural Review 2, no. 4 (2001): 160-167.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...The abundant variety of crime itself, from the intricate plotting of Conan Doyle's Moriarty to the spontaneous, greedy, lust-driven spree of Frank and Cora in The Postman Always Rings Twice, requires writing that reflects the diversity of crimes and criminals that have plagued this planet since Cain mumbled his excuses and feigned ignorance of his brother's whereabouts...."
5914. Randolph, Justus J. "Angela Thody. Writing and Presenting Research. London: Sage Publications, 2006. Pp. xvi, 264. Paper: ISBN-13 978-1-4129-0293-9, UKGBP19.99." Journal of Scholarly Publishing 38, no. 3 (2007): 174-182.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Writing and Presenting Research," by Angela Thody. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...My red pen is more important to me than a spell checker, and I think more clearly away from a computer screen. I wonder if this approach is plausible only for those of us who regularly travel by public transport or otherwise have regular chunks of time to kill (shades of the writing habits of the young Arthur Conan Doyle)?..." Footnote to this part of article is from Daniel Stashower, Teller of Tales: The Life of Arthur Conan Doyle (London: Penguin 2000), 63-5.
5915. Raney, David. "No Ties Except Those of Blood': Class, Race, and Jack London's American Plague." Papers on Language & Literature 39, no. 4 (2003): 390-435.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Analyzes the incidence of class and race discrimination in the novel "The Scarlet Plague," by Jack London. Origin of the germ theory; Link between contagion and the poor; Influence of Nietzsche's philosophy on London's work. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Stories of cavemen and other primitives were a popular genre at the time. Kipling, Burroughs, H.G. Wells, Arthur Conan Doyle, and many lesser authors penned stories full of animal hides and bare feet, struggles for food and battles with ravening beasts. London was accused, in fact, of plagiarizing Stanley Waterloo's caveman book The Story of Ab (1897) for his own Before Adam (1906)...."
5916. Reiss, Tom. "Imagining the Worst." New Yorker 81, no. 38 (2005): 106-114.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses the manner in which the literary genre of invasion fiction anticipated the modern world. The invasion of England was depicted by the book "The Battle of Dorking," by George Tomkyns Chesney. The fiction described the invasion of England by German-speaking people. The British government attempted to downplay the impending threat of invasion as depicted in the book. Other books on invasion convinced British military officials that England was rife with German spies in 1909. This led to the creation of the domestic intelligence service M15. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...It is a measure of the increasing dour of invasion fiction that in 1914, when Arthur Conan Doyle published 'Danger,' a short story warning that German submarines posed a lethal threat to British civilian ships, a number of British admirals publicly contested his claims. The story appeared in Strand Magazine, accompanied by a two-page illustration showing a torpedoed ocean liner going down. The narrator, a U-boat commander--who went on to become a stock character in modern British thrillers--describes sinking dozens of ships, both military and civilian. 'I do not myself think that any civilized nation will torpedo unarmed and defenseless merchant ships,' one of the admirals wrote. Another wrote, 'No nation would permit it, and the officer who did it would be shot.' Two months after the story was published, German U-boats off the Atlantic coast began attacking British

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

boats, including passenger ships. The following spring, the Lusitania was torpedoed off Ireland's southern coast, killing eleven hundred and ninety-eight civilians...."

5917. Renner, Coop. "Grades 5 & up: Fiction." School Library Journal 44, no. 9 (1998): 208.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Detective Stories,' compiled by Philip Pullman. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Authors include masters such as Arthur Conan Doyle and Agatha Christie and lesser known or newer writers such as Andrew Vachss and Raymond Smullyan...."

5918. Reyes, Damaso. "The League of Extraordinary Gentlemen' (Film)." New York Amsterdam News, July 10, 2003: 20.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The stranger thing about the film 'The League of Extraordinary Gentlemen,' which stars Sean Connery as the expat Allan Quatermain, is that it depends on a tremendous amount of exposition and literary knowledge to come close to really understanding it. For a film targeted at 16- to 25-year-olds, it assumes that one has read about six or seven classic novels by such authors as Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and Mark Twain. The year is 1899, and the plot consists of a diabolical maniac intent on either conquering the world or profiting by its destruction. This movie is so full of literary conceits that it is almost saved by them. The performances by Stuart Townsend and Peta Wilson really saved the film.

5919. Reynolds, Herbert Y. "In Choosing a Research Health Career, Mentoring is Essential." Lung 186, no. 1 (2008): 1-6.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...The combination of musical ability and artistic talents seem to blend well with health care interests. There are many examples of writers and musicians who were educated as physicians and dentists. As examples, Arthur Conan Doyle, Anton Chekhov, Somerset Maugham, Zane Grey, and violinist Fritz Kreisler all received a medical or dental education...."

5920. Riede, David G. "Guide to the Year's Work: General Materials." Victorian Poetry 38, no. 3 (2000): 392-399.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to Doyle. "...As always, some of the year's best books about Victorian culture scarcely discuss poetry explicitly at all. Audrey Jaffe's Scenes of Sympathy: Identity and Representation in Victorian Fiction provides a remarkably fresh and stimulating perspective on the much discussed topic of the cultural construction of the Victorian subject....All of this is laid out with compelling clarity in the introductory chapter, but of course the real power of the book appears in Jaffe's superb readings of A Christmas Carol, Conan Doyle's 'The Man with the Twisted Lip,' Gaskell's Ruth, Eliot's Daniel Deronda, and Wilde's Dorian Gray. In each of these works, a main character is given the unusual ability to observe an alternate possible version of himself, so that the interiority of feeling surfaces as representation, even as spectacle...."

5921. Rieschick, Kurt. "Who am I?" Biography 2, no. 9 (1998): 14.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a quiz the aim of which is to identify celebrities through biographic information. One quiz question is: "I was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, in 1859, and studied medicine at Edinburgh University. My first book, A Study in Scarlet (1887), introduced literature's most famous detective, Sherlock Holmes. Later in life, I became an ardent spiritualist. Today, my Sherlock Holmes stories have been translated into dozens of languages and have delighted readers the world over."

5922. Riippa, Laurele, Lyn Andriani, Dena Croog, Cindi DiMarzo, Karole Riippa, and Bella Stander. "Trade Paperbacks." Publishers Weekly 247, no. 33 (2000): 272.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a list of trade paperback books. Includes Carroll & Graf title The Exploits of Baron de Marbot (Oct., $12.95) by Baron de Marbot "is the classic that inspired Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's stories of Brigadier Gerard and the Napoleonic wars." Taylor title The Sherlock Holmes Trivography and Quiz Book (Oct., $10.95) by Kathleen Kaska "provides hundreds of trivia questions about the detective and other characters created by Conan Doyle."

5923. Riippa, Laurele, and Robert Dahlin. "Spring 2003 Trade Paperbacks: Fiction/Mystery & Suspense." Publishers Weekly 250, no. 4 (2003): 204.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features several mystery and suspense books including a reprint from Berkley

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- Prime Crime: The True Crime Files of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle (Mar., $13) by Stephan Hines.
5924. Roberts, David, and Kay Chernush. "On the frankincense trail." Smithsonian 29, no. 7 (1998): 120.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Follows archaeologist George Hedges and Juris Zarins as they travel ancient trade routes of the Arabian Peninsula in search of the Incense Road. What frankincense and myrrh are; The history of the priceless resins; The importance of the incense trade to Western civilization; Details of Hedges' journeys. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...We followed Hedges and without warning came to a precipice that overhung 200 feet of empty space. A huge crater in the plain, like some hanging valley out of Conan Doyle's The Lost World, gaped beneath our feet. At the bottom of the pit, giant palms and figs shaded two crystalline pools of water...."
5925. Roberts, Daphne, and Bob Duckett. "The Bradford Library and Literary Society, 1774-1980." Library History 22, no. 3 (2006): 213-226.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines the history of the proprietary Bradford Library and Literary Society over two centuries following its establishment in 1774 as a major cultural institution for the town's prosperous middle classes. Describes and discusses the institution's locations, its membership, finances, regulatory arrangements, as well as the contributions of its librarians and the complexion of its book stock, book loans and book selection. [Abstract from author]. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Much later, the 1900 Annual Report noted that From Capetown to Ladysmith by G. W. Stevens and The Great Boer War by A. Conan Doyle were the most popular books of the year...."
5926. Roberts, James. "Adult fun: James Roberts on Adam Chodzko." Frieze, no. 31 (1996): 62-67.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Explores the work of the British artist Adam Chodzko. The author refers to the work of two British writers, Arthur Conan Doyle and Joseph Conrad, to suggest that webs of connecting activity underlie various sectors of society, and describes Chodzko's placing of bogus advertisements in a popular small ads newspaper in the works Transmitters (1990-96) and The God Look-Alike Contest (1992-93), and in a personal contacts magazine in the project Involva (1995). He examines works in which Chodzko has brought a group of people together on a pretext such as owning the same product or having appeared as extras in a particular film, including Product Recall (1994) and From Beyond (1996). Commenting on several other projects, such as Shadow Inhaler (1994), the Secretors series (1993-96) and Out of the Distance (1996), the author focuses on Chodzko's role as a facilitator, creating connections and meeting points between seemingly disparate individuals.
5927. Rodriguez Persico, Adriana. "'Las reliquias del banquete' darwinista: E. Holmberg, escritor e científico." MLN 116, no. 2 (2001): 371-391.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reference to Doyle in note 6: ...La práctica médica, que diagnostica a través del síntoma, le permite a Ginzburg trazar el paralelo entre el género policial, un método pictórico para reconocer originales y el psicoanálisis freudiano: "Freud era médico; Morelli tenía un diploma en medicina; Conan Doyle había ejercido la profesión antes de dedicarse a la literatura. En los tres casos se presiente la aplicación del modelo de la sintomatología, o semiótica médica, la disciplina que permite diagnosticar las enfermedades inaccesibles a la observación directa por medio de síntomas superficiales" (146). Véase Carlo Ginzburg. "Indicios. Raíces de un paradigma de inferencias indiciuales." En Mitos, emblemas, inicios. Morfología e historia (Barcelona: Gedisa, 1989): 138-75.
5928. Rogers, Michael. "Book reviews: Classic returns." Library Journal 123, no. 7 (1998): 120.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Mentions books reprinted as of April 1998. 'The Thin Red Line,' by James Jones; 'The Slide Area,' by Gavin Lambert; 'The Girls of Slender Means,' by Muriel Spark; 'James Joyce,' by Chester G. Anderson; 'Art Deco,' by Victor Arwas; 'The Coming of the Fairies,' by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle; Others.
5929. ———. "Classic returns." Library Journal 130, no. 11 (2005): 118-118.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several books that are being republished. "Queen of Atlantis," by Pierre Benoit; "Four Novels," by Charles Dickens; "The White Company," by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle; "Julius," by Daphne Du Maurier; "Diary of a Mad Housewife," by Sue Kaufman; "The Life of the Buddha," by Patricia M. Herbert; "Born on the Fourth of July," by Ron Kovic; "A View of the World," by Norman Lewis.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5930. ———. "Classic Returns." Library Journal 125, no. 7 (2000): 129.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several reprinted books. 'Slumber Mountain: A Western Trio,' by Max Brand; 'The White Company & Sir Nigel,' by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle; 'A Woman Beyond Price,' by Freda Lightfoot; 'Before Adam,' by Jack London; 'The Last of the Just,' by Andre Schwarz-Bart; 'Last Reflections on a War,' by Bernard Fall; 'Wisconsin Death Trip,' by Michael Lesy; 'Ted Bundy: Conversations with a Killer; The Death Row Interviews,' by Stephen G. Michaud and Hugh Aynesworth.
5931. Rogers, Michael, Norman Oder, and Andrew Albanese. "UVA Library's Free E-Books a Success." Library Journal 125, no. 19 (2000): 14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports the success of the Electronic Text Center at the University of Virginia. Program which allows students to download free electronic books; Hopes for the future of digital books; Competition faced by publishers and bookselling industries from digital libraries. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...E-books currently available range from the Bible and all of Shakespeare, to classic authors like Charles Dickens, Lewis Carroll, Robert Frost, Arthur Conan Doyle, Shelley, Charles Darwin, and Jane Austen...."
5932. Rohan, Liz. "I Remember Mamma: Material Rhetoric, Mnemonic Activity, and One Woman's Turn-of-the-Twentieth-Century Quilt." Rhetoric Review 23, no. 4 (2004): 368-387.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This essay examines the annotated description of a quilt produced by one woman to memorialize her mother who died in 1902. The quilt's function is analyzed in relationship to nineteenth-century mourning rituals and to other mnemonic aides produced and used in the nineteenth-century domestic sphere to remember--like scrapbooks and later, photography. This study promotes memory-making as a rhetorical end and suggests a study of technologies employed in the nineteenth-century domestic sphere might reshape our conception of mnemonic activity and also a perceived separation between the rhetorical canons. [Abstract from author] Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Went to the doctor's. Worked a long day. Walked both ways. Went to pay Miss Hull the $1.50. She wcnddn 't take it. Said buy a birthday present with it. I was reading in Conan Doyle's [Through the] Magic Door, a criticism of Pepys' diary. He wondered so much why Pepys wrote it--all those trivial things. He even spoke of those who seriously and soberly wonder if Pepys wrote it on purpose to give long distant posterity a glimpse of his times. How absurd. Might as well say that is why I write all this stuff...."
5933. Rollyson, Carl. "The Triumph of the Thriller: How Cops, Crooks, and Cannibals Captured Popular." Magill Book Reviews, no. (2007).
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of "The Triumph of the Thriller." "A reviewer of thrillers for the Washington Post, and a writer of thrillers himself, Patrick Anderson provides a lively and opinionated survey of the thriller, focusing primarily on the contemporary fiction that has come to dominate the best seller list and advanced the sophistication of the genre. Includes a passing reference to Doyle." "Patrick Anderson's definition of the thriller is quite elastic: It encompasses writers as various as Wilkie Collins and Mickey Spillane. Indeed, Anderson is short on definitions and explorations of what precisely the thriller is. Although it has emerged as a dominant category in contemporary fiction, he still seems to regard the thriller as a subgenre evolving out of the mystery story as pioneered by Edgar Allan Poe, Arthur Conan Doyle, and Agatha Christie...."
5934. Román, Reinaldo L. "Governing Man-Gods: Spiritism and the Struggle for Progress in Republican Cuba." Journal of Religion in Africa 37, no. 2 (2007): 212-241.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article explores the contrasting careers of two Spiritist healers, one Spanish-born and the other Afro-Cuban. It suggests that the prosecution of the black man-god (Hilario Mustelíer) and the public celebration of the ministry of the Spaniard (Juan Manso) attest to the consolidation of a political rationality burgeoning in Cuba at the turn of the twentieth century. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...That Manso came to Spiritism via Mustelíer, rather than through the writings of Allan Kardec or Conan Doyle, argues against teleological assumptions about who imparted which cultural forms to whom. In this instance, Spiritism did not trickle down from the white literate classes, nor did Afro-Cuban religion rise from the bottom of the social hierarchy through capillary attraction...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5935. Rosen, Judith. "Distribution Daybook." Publishers Weekly 247, no. 36 (2000): 32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents issues related to book distribution in the United States as of September 4, 2000. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Common Reader Editions, which are primarily reissues of classics by such authors as Christopher Morley and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, often with new introductions, will add several original books this fall, including Jonathan Schwartz's A Day of Light and Shadows, on the Boston-New York baseball playoff of 1978...."
5936. Rosoff, Douglas M. "Writing more than prescriptions." Cortlandt Forum 8, no. 10 (1995): 120.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Gives examples of physicians that have actively pursued writing fiction. Includes Michael Crichton; Robin Cook. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...A large number of other physicians have made a career of writing. Among the most famous are Arthur Conan Doyle, AJ Cronin, and William Carlos Williams...."
5937. Rotman, Brian. "Ghost Effects." Differences: A Journal of Feminist Cultural Studies 18, no. 1 (2007): 53-86.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The article discusses how communicational media can facilitate new psychic entities and objects of belief. It focuses on the concept of self-reference but not confined to the I of speech and interweaves narratives about the virtual and ghosts...." Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...It is hard to imagine spiritualist beliefs about the lives of the dead capturing the minds of a wide swathe of nineteenth- and early-twentieth-century artistic and scientific intelligentsia--from Thomas Edison to Conan Doyle--without the ever present telegraphic model of table-rapping and its Ouija board elaborations...."
5938. Rousseau, George Sebastian. "Ingenious Pain: Fiction, History, Biography, and the Miraculous Eighteenth Century." Eighteenth-Century Life 25, no. 2 (2001): 47-62.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Miller himself has provided some--but not all--of the answers. After drafting many versions of his novel in 1988-93, he deconstructed it in the form of a doctoral dissertation submitted to the University of Lancaster. Entitled 'The Ceryneian Hind'--an allusion to Virgil's Aeneid VI, line 802, where the hind is described--it is an autobiographical account of everything Miller read, thought, experienced, and even ate during the composition of the novel. Miller recounts how while writing the book he traveled through Spain, Holland, Japan, and Canada--travels that perhaps paralleled the great trek across the snow to St. Petersburg. He explains how he endlessly exhorted himself to revise for a Spartan style, how he shrank down sentences to a fraction of their word count, hugely quickening the pace and altering the illusion of past time. And he documents his reading: Defoe, Conan Doyle, Hardy, Henry James, Joyce, Kafka, Calvino, P. G. Wodehouse, Pound, Nabokov, Yourcenar, George Mackay Brown, and others--but no eighteenth-century novelist other than Defoe...."
5939. Rowe, John Carlos. "Henry James and Globalization." The Henry James Review 24, no. 3 (2003): 205-214.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Edward Said has demonstrated how the novel's Anglo-American contribution to nationalism is always entangled with the nation's reliance on foreign wealth, labor, and culture. In Jane Austen's lovely British romance, Mansfield Park, Sir Thomas Bertram's plantations in Antigua provide the borders of the fictional gardens (Said 85). Austen and Charlotte Bronte in Jane Eyre used the Caribbean contexts of slavery and feudalism primarily as factual backgrounds rather than for purposes of political critique, requiring Said and Jean Rhys's Wide Sargasso Sea (1962), respectively, for us to understand the ideological consequences of these famous love stories, but James consistently implicates culture in the work of imperial expansion and domination. Said observes that 'Henry James's Ralph Touchett in Portrait of a Lady travels in Algeria and Egypt,' but James uses such scenic details for far more critical purposes than such contemporaries as Kipling, Haggard, and Arthur Conan Doyle imagined the East (63)...."
5940. Rowland, Thomas J. "Irish-American Catholics and the quest for respectability in the coming of the great war, 1900-1917." Journal of American Ethnic History 15, no. 2 (1996): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines the quest for respectability by Irish Americans and the restructuring of their nationalist goals at the turn of the century. Tensions sparked by the outbreak of war in 1914 within the Irish American community; Catholic Church hierarchy and Americanists' efforts to suppress the more blatantly radical strains of Irish nationalism; Defiance to Protestant prejudice. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Another journal went after celebrated author, Arthur Conan Doyle, for his insulting portrayals of the Irish in a serial

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

story running in the London Times. Doyle's indiscretion, it would seem, was having Sherlock Holmes murdered by a villain named Mulligan...."

5941. Rubery, Matthew. "Joseph Conrad's 'Wild Story of a Journalist'." Elh 71, no. 3 (2004): 751-774.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article focuses on journalist Joseph Conrad. He is often remembered alongside journalist-writers such as Roger Casement, George Washington Williams, Richard Harding Davis, Mark Twain, and Arthur Conan Doyle in their criticism of the Belgian Congo, but studies are just beginning to address the elements of journalism in his own writing. Conrad's novels show his interest to lie not with the reformers but with the unprecedented influence of sensational journalists. He is one of the earliest authors to challenge the press for its psychological authority—indeed, its emergence as a mass media—rather than its subliterary status as panem et circenses for the public. The novel "Heart of Darkness," more than any other novel shows the influence of the newspapers on Conrad's fiction. News supplied factual sources and, more importantly, intellectual provocation for this novel. Discussions of Africa in the English and Belgian press made Conrad aware of journalism as a discourse influencing the way individuals see, talk about, and understand world events.
5942. Rubin, Merle. "Conquest of the Congo Told in Searing History." Christian Science Monitor, Oct 15, 1998: B7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'King Leopold's Ghost: A Story of Greed, Terror, and Heroism in Colonial Africa,' by Adam Hochschild. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...The crusade attracted the support of such eminent persons as Mark Twain, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Booker T. Washington, and Anatole France. But its prime movers and greatest heroes are hardly as well-known as they deserve to be, and this immensely compelling book should go a long way toward rescuing their good works from historical neglect...."
5943. ———. "Diving back: An atlas to Atlantis." Christian Science Monitor, Aug 6, 1998: B8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews two books about Atlantis. 'Imagining Atlantis,' by Richard Ellis; 'Atlantis Destroyed,' by Rodney Castleden. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Atlantis has also captured the imagination of fiction writers and film-makers, from Jules Verne and Arthur Conan Doyle to Ursula K. LeGuin and Marion Zimmer Bradley...."
5944. Rudman, Mark. "Reading Eliot on My Cousin's Farm in the Gatineau." American Poetry Review 33, no. 5 (2004): 47-58.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents excerpts from the book "Out of the Loop," by Mark Rudman. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...He is getting away with murder, but murder at the remove of a murder story, of which he was a fan. His allusion in 'East Coker' to being lost in a dark wood is not to Dante but to Conan Doyle. 'Grimpen' is derived from The Hound of the Baskervilles...."
5945. Rudnev, Vadim. "Run, Matrix, Run." Third Text 17, no. 4 (2003): 389-394.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Mass culture is the semiotic image of the reality that engenders it, but it is a profoundly derivative, secondary image. Traditional mass art is anti-modernist and employs extremely simple and well-polished cultural techniques. Such a convergence also creates a new class of cultural consumers, a cultural middle class of sorts. It is the target audience for movies like Run, Lola, Run and The Matrix. In order to allow the full complexity of serious modernist intertextual and neo-mythological connections to be elegantly incorporated into the mass-culture text, all of this had to be boiled in the cauldron of high culture." Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...The symptomatic text that marked the frontier of the transition from serious modernist intertext to the unserious postmodernist pastiche was The Name of the Rose by Umberto Eco. The meaning of this frontier was that the serious modernist text was introjected by 'high' or at least equal texts: the Gospels, the epic tradition, myth. The Name of the Rose staked out literature's right to introject Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes stories along with Borges's stories; this allowed the postmodernist intertext to be treated as a merry game rather than an agonised quest for intertextual identity, as it was treated by Mann and Kafka...."
5946. Rzepka, Charles J. "'I'm in the Business Too': Gothic Chivalry, Private Eyes, and Proxy Sex and Violence in Chandler's The Big Sleep." MFS Modern Fiction Studies 46, no. 3 (2000): 695-724.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...The assumption of endemic corruption common to the American hard-boiled novel has been attributed, in large part, to the political and social

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

displacements of the decades following the Great War. Similar disruptions occurred in England, resulting in the same widespread cynicism and disillusionment, but the English detective novel responded by becoming more pastoral, reflecting the virtues of deference and noblesse oblige that supposedly characterized relations between the lower and the landed classes during the pre-War period. Wealth and class trailed no such clouds of glory from the pre-War American tradition. The difference reflected, in part, America's lack of a structural analogue for the aristocratic classes that English and European Gothic writers had originally turned into sinister refugees from enlightenment and egalitarianism. This Gothic prejudice against the rich and titled had remained vigorous in English crime fiction throughout the nineteenth century, as evidenced in the work of Wilkie Collins and Arthur Conan Doyle, until the genre's post-War turn to pastoral...."

5947. Sabatini, Arthur. "Perform or Else: From Discipline to Performance (review)." Theatre Journal 54, no. 3 (2002): 505-507.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Perform or Else: From Discipline to Performance by John McKenzie. London: Routledge 2001; pp. 306. $24.95 paper. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...In order to engage today's unbounded eruptions of performance as genre, force, and desiring machine, McKenzie offers, in Part 3, his own performance challenge in the form of a counter-theory-cum-fiction called 'Perfumance.' Perfumance is a meta-performance theory emanating from the sense of smell. With an air of manifesto, McKenzie describes perfumance in terms of flows, fragments, rhizomic romplings, nonsense, concatenations, Nietzschean 'gay science,' Joycean yes-laughter, and antic gestures of 'temporal impropriety' (249). He traces the genealogy of perfumance through several 'challenger' precursors and events. These include Arthur Conan Doyle's sci-fi character, the anti-Holmesian Dr. Challenger, and his actual model, a controversial, gay University of Edinburgh professor, William Rutherford...."

5948. Sardar, Ziauddin, and Frances Stonor Saunders. "China syndrome." New Statesman 129, no. 4487 (2000): 46.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the representation and the transfer of Chinese to the United States' motion picture industry. Significance of the arrival of a genuine Chinese Hollywood hero on television; How the Hollywood people view Chinese; Information on the motion picture 'Broken Blossoms,' directed by D. W. Griffith and the book 'The Good Earth,' by Pearl S. Buck. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...The stock embodiment of Chinese cruelty and malign intent is Fu Manchu, whose name spells the Yellow Peril. Hammer Fu Manchu films gave this depiction of the evil Chinese an enduring and international form. By convention from Arthur Conan Doyle to Sax Rohmer, Chinatown became a den of iniquity and lurking menace...."

5949. Sawyer, Tomi K. "Inimitable Elements of Innovative Drug Discovery: Quest for Reverence and Truth, and Good Works." Chemical Biology & Drug Design 69, no. 5 (2007): 369-371.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The author reflects on the elements of innovative drug discovery in relation to the quest for reverence and truth as well as good works. He believes that as drug discovery scientists, they need to seek truth in their conceptualization, experimentation, and interpretation of research to provide confidence in the candidacy of new biologic medicines. For them, good works may impart a powerful motivating force to create breakthrough medicines. Includes a passing quote and reference to Doyle. "When you have eliminated the impossible, whatever remains, however improbable, must be the truth." "...Per the selected quotes of Aristotle, Doyle, and Churchill, the significance of truth is well articulated in various contexts with respect to accuracy, probability, and incontrovertibility...."

5950. Sayre, Henry M. "Perform or Else: From Discipline to Performance (review)." Modernism/modernity 10, no. 1 (2003): 200-202.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Perform or Else: From Discipline to Performance. Jon McKenzie. New York: Routledge, 2001. Pp. x + 306. $75.00 (cloth); $24.95 (paper). Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...And McKenzie is by no means done playing. As if remembering that his dominant metaphor is one of flight, not geology, he evokes the source of Deleuze and Guattari's Professor Challenger--the hero of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's sci-fi Professor Challenger Adventures--and turns to the invisible strata of the atmosphere, specifically to the realm of odor, which he calls 'perfumance' (203)."

5951. Schaefer, Bradley E. "Simon Newcomb." Physics Today 60, no. 2 (2007): 66-67.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Simon Newcomb: America's Unofficial Astronomer

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- Royal," by Bill Carter and Merri Sue Carter. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...The book is organized around a dozen events in Newcomb's life, leaving gaps that miss many fun anecdotes. For example, readers do not learn that Newcomb was the intentional prototype for Arthur Conan Doyle's archvillain Professor James Moriarty...."
5952. Schaffer, Talia. "'A Wilde Desire Took Me': the Homoerotic History of Dracula." ELH 61, no. 2 (1994): 381-425.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reference in footnote 1 to Doyle: Anne Cranny-Francis, "Sexual Politics and Political Repression in Bram Stoker's Dracula," Nineteenth-Century Suspense: From Poe to Conan Doyle, ed. Clive Bloom, Brian Docherty, Jane Gibb, Keith Shand (New York: St. Martin's Press, 1988), 64-79.
5953. Scharf, Alan. "Your Photographic Style." PSA Journal 72, no. 3 (2006): 14-17.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article defines photographic style and describes several examples which may help photographers improve their craft. Style is the what of the image itself, not how it was made, the tools you used, or a photographer's social style. It is how one sees and reproduces an image through self-expression. One characteristic of a typical Ansel Adams photograph is the use of a relatively small number of tones in clearly different zones encompassing white to black. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...A style can be thought of as the work an artist creates over and over again. Think Edward Weston, Julia Margaret Cameron, Salvador Dali, Arthur Conan Doyle, Bach, Stravinsky, Bob Dylan...."
5954. Scharnhorst, Gary. "General Reference Books." American Literary Scholarship 1999, no. (1999): 519-529.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...One of the most provocative reference books of the year, Multicultural Detective Fiction: Murder from the "Other" Side, ed. Adrienne Johnson Gosselin (Garland), contains 16 essays treating the modern evolution of the detective-story genre in the fiction of such writers as Linda Hogan, Tony Hillerman, Lucha Corpi, Nikki Baker, Louis Owens, Chester Himes, and Walter Mosley. Readers familiar only with the classical detective formula popularized by Arthur Conan Doyle and Agatha Christie and the hard-boiled version of it practiced by Dashiell Hammett, Raymond Chandler, and Robert B. Parker will be surprised to discover the variations on and transgressions of these formulas featuring ethnic and women detectives...."
5955. Scheick, William J. "Reviews." Studies in the Novel 30, no. 3 (1998): 456.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book, 'High and Low Moderns: Literature and Culture, 1889-1939,' edited by Maria Dibattista and Lucy McDiarmid. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...In the most venturesome essay in the anthology, Maria DiBattista declares that the subject of modernist detective fiction 'is always, in the larger sense, retrograde humanity' (p. 183), especially 'the primal scene of sexual and social origins: the exchange of women' (p. 184). Her main proof for this original, contentious, and likely exorbitant assertion emerges in Arthur Conan Doyle's The Hound of the Baskervilles and Joseph Conrad's The Secret Agent. Novels such as these, DiBattista contends, reveal the limits of our social ability to understand and contain the mysterious struggle between vitality (masked as woman) and the fear of death...."
5956. Schmitt, Cannon. "A Geography of Victorian Gothic Fiction: Mapping History's Nightmares, and: Gothic Radicalism: Literature, Philosophy, and Psychoanalysis in the Nineteenth Century, and: Victorian Gothic: Literary and Cultural Manifestations in the Nineteenth Century (review)." Victorian Studies 44, no. 3 (2002): 543-547.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews of A Geography of Victorian Gothic Fiction: Mapping History's Nightmares, by Robert Mighall; pp. xxv + 312. Oxford and New York: Oxford University Press, 1999, GBP50.00, $74.00.; Gothic Radicalism: Literature, Philosophy, and Psychoanalysis in the Nineteenth Century, by Andrew Smith; pp. ix + 188. Basingstoke and New York: Macmillan, 2000, GBP45.00, $59.95. Victorian Gothic: Literary and Cultural Manifestations in the Nineteenth Century, edited by Ruth Robbins and Julian Wolfreys; pp. xx + 260. Basingstoke and New York: Palgrave, 2000, GBP47.50, $69.95. Includes a passing reference to Doyle.
5957. Schulman, Michael. "You Say Potato." New Yorker 83, no. 32 (2007): 60-62.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses how dialect coach Majella Hurley assisted with the speech of

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- actors in a revival of the theatrical production "Pygmalion." Hurley worked with actress Claire Danes to perfect the cockney accent required for her character. Actor Jefferson Mays commented on the difficulty in stressing the correct syllables. Dialect coach Beth McGuire discusses the accents and speaking styles of 2008 U.S. presidential candidates Hilary Clinton and Rudolph Giuliani. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...The drawback in using archival material as a guide was that not every old Brit was consistent in his accent. Mays noticed, for example, that Arthur Conan Doyle waffled between 'ask' and 'ahsk.' He said, 'Everybody betrays themselves, in a way that Higgins would pick up immediately and say, 'Ah, he comes from Selsey!'..."
5958. Sengoopta, Chandak. "A Passion for Diphthongs." History Workshop Journal 57, no. (2004): 263-270.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...After only a little bit of research, however, it was clear that no institution in Calcutta was interested in history of medicine or, indeed, in giving a home to a discontented doctor dreaming of being a historian. Why not go abroad, then? I had always had a strong Western streak in my soul (all that Conan Doyle was bound to take its toll), I was deeply interested in the history of Western medicine, the elite doctors of Calcutta had long had a tradition of training abroad and, perhaps most crucially, I was convinced that I could never escape entirely from medicine if I didn't escape from Calcutta. But go where? Since many of my non-medical contemporaries went to America for higher study, I had come to think of American universities as the best (and best-funded) places to try one's luck. (So much for Conan Doyle's fog-shrouded London!)..."
5959. Sevilla-Gonzaga, Marylis. "Grand manners." Opera News 60, no. 16 (1996): 22.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features the opening of the renovated structures of Place de l'Opera and the Grand Hotel in Paris, France. Architectural design; Historical significance of both establishments; Details of the building restoration. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Later guests included Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, a habitue of the celebrated Cafe de la Paix..."
5960. Shamson, Anatole. "Journey to the lost world." PSA Journal 63, no. 3 (1997): 20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features the Great Savannah in Venezuela. Physical description; History of the place; Features of the Roraima plateau in the savannah. Includes references to Doyle.
5961. Sherwood, Marika. "Engendering Racism: History and History Teachers in English Schools." Research in African Literatures 30, no. 1 (2005): 184-203.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "Racist stereotypes of black peoples are ubiquitous in Britain and are not class-bound. (Nor are they, of course, restricted to blacks; negative stereotypes of, for example, Irish and Roma [gypsies] are also abundant.) Such stereotyping is common in books for children and adults, in all genres of writing. Well-known examples of such writers are Sax Rohmer, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Rudyard Kipling, Joseph Conrad, and John Buchan, who bridged the worlds of literature, religion, and politics as he became Governor-General of Canada and Commissioner of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland. Among children's authors, the best known names are Enid Blyton, G. A. Henty, and Capt. W. E. Johns (see Rankin; Dabydeen; Clegg; and Castle)..."
5962. Shipman, Pat. "Freed to Fly Again." American Scientist 96, no. 1 (2008): 20-23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The article discusses the use of micro-computed tomography (CT) scans by paleontologist Nick Fraser of the Virginia Museum of Natural History in Martinsville following the discovery of a unique fossil from the Solite Quarry. Excavations have yielded a wealth of fossilized insects, even showing the veining on the delicate wings of waterbugs or caddis flies. The specimen was difficult to scan because the slab containing the fossil was thin and flat. What Tim Ryan of the Center for Quantitative Imaging and Fraser saw was an extraordinary creature about 25 centimeters long. The new species were named Mecistotrachelos apeoros." Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Time machines have been part of our cultural consciousness since at least 1895, when H. G. Wells launched the discussion with his novel The Time Machine. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle took up the idea of visiting the ancient past in the 1912 novel Lost World. I often wonder how many paleontologists and paleoanthropologists were influenced, as I was, by reading these works when they were children..."
5963. Simoson, Andrew J. "Sliding along a Chord through a Rotating Earth." American Mathematical Monthly 113, no.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

10 (2006): 922-928.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents a classic mathematical problem solving on sliding along a chord through a rotating earth using a bit of linear algebra. In solving the problem, the researchers begin by positioning the earth at the origin O in order for the equator to lie in the xy-plane and the North Pole on the positive z-axis. The researchers proceed by showing examples from using the chords parallel to the z-axis to chord used by Arthur Conan Doyle of Sherlock Holmes fame. In addition, the researchers show the answers by explaining the acceleration and velocity of the train.

5964. Skelton, John R. "Correspondence." Lancet 359, no. 9310 (2002): 974.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents letters to the editor on a number of medical topics as of March 16, 2002. One letter includes a reference to Doyle. "...How, we might then ask, do those of medical narratives differ from what all but the most supine of what relativists call great literature? Of relevance here, I would argue, are the formal similarities between Victorian academic medical writing and Dr Conan Doyle's development of the detective story. Both genres share the convention that they offer a narrative puzzle with one solution. The patient died of emphysema, we deduce: the butler killed Her Ladyship. But it is only genre fiction that is normally like this. Great literature is open-ended...."

5965. Smith, C. Brian. "Snoop: What Your Stuff Says About You." Library Journal 133, no. 9 (2008): 116-116.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article reviews the book "Snoop: What Your Stuff Says About You," by Sam Gosling. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "Gosling's (psychology, Univ. of Texas) first book will captivate those who like the CBS drama Criminal Minds or the works of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle...."

5966. Smith, David James. "Nietzsche's Hinduism, Nietzsche's India: Another Look." The Journal of Nietzsche Studies 28, no. (2004): 37-56.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes references to Doyle. "...Mysterious powers feature in one of the two other books of Jacolliot referred to by Etter, Le Spiritisme dans le Monde.(31) This work falls into two parts. In the first, larger part, he gives an account of life-stages and of various types of yogi and renouncer, with passing references to an earlier technologically advanced civilization. The second part, often cited by occultists, is the account of his experiences with a Hindu magician. Conan Doyle, the creator of Sherlock Holmes, was very much impressed by this part of the book. Jacolliot, Doyle reports, found among the 'native fakirs' 'every phenomenon of advanced European mediumship'--'levitation of the body, the handling of fire, movement of articles at a distance, rapid growth of plants, raising of tables. Their explanation of these phenomena was that they were done by the Pitris or spirits, and their only difference in procedure from ours seemed to be that they made more use of direct evocation. They claimed that these powers were handed down from time immemorial and traced back to the Chaldees.'(32)..." The citation in note 32 is to Arthur Conan Doyle, The New Revelation (London: Hodder and Stoughton, 1918), 23.

5967. Smith, Nick. "Exploration Fawcett." Geographical 79, no. 11 (2007): 77.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "There can be few controversies in the history of the exploration of South America as enduring as that surrounding Percy Harrison Fawcett, the British archaeologist, soldier and surveyor who disappeared without trace in 1925. He's said to have been looking for an ancient lost city in the jungles of Brazil - some say he was murdered by tribesmen, some say he was plundering the forest for gold, and others think that he staged his own disappearance in order to found a secret colony. One conspiracy theory says there is proof that he died of natural causes, and his remains have been found, but it's being suppressed in order to keep the controversy going. Whatever actually happened, what we do know is that under the supervision of his son Brian, his manuscripts, letters and log-books were published in 1953 as Exploration Fawcett....While nothing much of the mystery has been substantiated and the cause of his disappearance is still unknown, Fawcett's first-hand account of his travels in the 'Green Hell' of the Amazonian forest is still enormously readable, and far more astonishing than anything his friend, the author Arthur Conan Doyle, could have made up in The Lost World."

5968. Smithies, James. "Return Migration and the Mechanical Age: Samuel Butler in New Zealand 1860--1864." Journal of Victorian Culture 12, no. 2 (2007): 203-224.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents the idea of Samuel Butler, modernist experimenters and self-

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- conscious opponents of the Victorians' claimed writer, concerning return migration, a demographic trend that is often underestimated in narratives of colonization in New Zealand. Includes a reference to Doyle. "Yumna Siddiqi points out that 'returning colonials' were such a commonplace in England that by the turn of the century they had become stock characters in the work of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, representing rather menacing departures from civilized society. According to Siddiqi, Doyle's mongoose-owning and one-legged returnees represented deep-set concern about 'the emergence of an itinerant, transnational underclass of poor Europeans - the flotsam and jetsam of Empire' (Siddiqi, 233) who could only but contribute to the degeneration of British culture...." The reference for Siddiqi is: Yumna Siddiqi, 'The Cesspool of Empire: Sheriack Holmes and the Return of the Repressed', Victorian Literature and Culture, 34 (March 2006), 233-47.
5969. Smoler, Fredric. "Paradise lost?" American Heritage 49, no. 1 (1998): 58.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Interviews historian Michael Elliot about America's yearning for the years after World War II (WWII). Elliot's view of the thirty years after WWII; Perceived effect of compulsory military service in postwar America; People's earnings in the post-WWII. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Arthur Conan Doyle's books are always dotted with American businessmen in London. A figure worth considering in this light is Herbert Hoover...."
5970. Smyth, Edmund. "Noir Cityscapes." Romance Studies 25, no. 4 (2007): 267-268.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses various reports published within the issue, including one about the representation of Barcelona, Spain in the book "La Sombra del Viento" and another on Lorian Macchiavelli's Sarti Antonio series. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...From its roots in Poe and Conan Doyle to the contemporary period, the dark urban setting has become the predominant décor in crime and detective fiction and film...."
5971. ———. "Noir Cityscapes: An Introduction." Romance Studies 25, no. 2 (2007): 83-84.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses the concept of noir cityscapes, which, according to the author, has become a central part of modern and contemporary writing and film-making. Noir writing is a product of fears on social fracture and criminality. The difference between conventional crime writing and noir cityscape is presented. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...From its roots in Poe and Conan Doyle to the contemporary period, the dark urban setting has become the predominant décor in crime and detective fiction and film...."
5972. Spoo, Robert. "Preparatory to anything else." James Joyce Quarterly 31, no. 2 (1994): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the death of Kenneth Burke, American philosopher-critic and William D. Jenkins, a scholar of James Joyce and Arthur Conan Doyle. Second annual Bloomsday celebration at the Rosenbach Museum and Library in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania to commemorate James Joyce's work; Smiling likeness of James Joyce on the Irish ten-pound note; Solicitation of contributions for the poetry magazine 'Agenda'.
5973. Staels, Hilde. "Intertexts of Atwood's Alias Grace." MFS Modern Fiction Studies 46, no. 2 (2000): 427-450.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Contains a passing reference to Doyle. "...With reference to the psychoanalytic context of the narrative situation, the sewing room as the space of the analyst-analysand, it is worth mentioning that two literary critics discuss the relationship between psychoanalysis, the detective story, and the narrative act. Peter Brooks points out Sigmund Freud's familiarity with Conan Doyle's detective fiction and the connection drawn by Freud, in 'Beyond the Pleasure Principle,' between the detective and the psychoanalyst and between the story of the patient and the narrative act (Reading 90-112). William V. Spanos speaks of the antidetective story (and its antipsychoanalytical analogue) as 'the paradigmatic archetype of the post-modern literary imagination' (154), which aims, by its very design, to appeal to and yet frustrate the reader's desire to find a solution to the crime or to detect the cause of the neurosis. In his relationship with his neurotic patient Dora, Freud was frustrated as the reader-interpreter of her life story...."
5974. Stauffer, Suzanne M. "In Their Own Image: The Public Library Collection as a Reflection of Its Donors." Libraries & the Cultural Record 42, no. 4 (2007): 387-408.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article examines the influence of donors on the content and mission of the

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Ogden Carnegie Free Library in Utah. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Other popular works and authors included three novels, Rebel, Adventurers, and Galloping Dick, by H. B. Marriott Watson, an Australian writer of adventure, historical romance, and early science fiction; the complete works of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle;..."

5975. Stea, David. "[Maps of the Imagination]." Journal of Geography 104, no. 3 (2005): 139-140.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of The Writer as Cartographer by Peter Turchi (San Antonio, Texas: Trinity University Press, 2004). 246 pages. ISBN: 1-59534-005-X. $24.95 (hardcover). Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...While reading a work of fiction, some geographers have doubtless tried to construct 'mental maps' of the world that the writer portrays: Raymond Chandler's Los Angeles, Arthur Conan Doyle's London, Larry McMurtry's Texas or Anton Chekov's Mother Russia. Others have searched for already-drawn fictional images in An Atlas of Fantasy. Still others, looking for geographic influences upon the arts that are more abstract, may have longed for a work on metaphorical cartography...."

5976. Stecker, Robert. "Moderate Actual Intentionalism Defended." Journal of Aesthetics & Art Criticism 64, no. 4 (2006): 429-438.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article focuses on the theory of art interpretation and analyzes the propositions made by numerous philosophers and literature experts about art interpretation. The article presents the unified view and moderate intentionalism with the latter being emphasized. The difference between art interpretation and the interpretation of conversational utterances is revealed. It is stated that the art and literary works can be understood as artist's intentional activity. Includes passing references to Doyle. "...The first counterexample consists in cases where a work W means p, but p is not intended and the audience of W is justified in believing that p is not intended. In such a case, the present version of hypothetical intentionalism implies, ex hypothesi wrongly, that W does not mean p. Here is an example. According to the Sherlock Holmes stories, Dr. Watson received a wound during his service in the British Army. Unfortunately, the stories give the wound two different, incompatible locations. We know that Sir Arthur Conan Doyle did this unintentionally because it is impossible for one wound to be in two such different locations and the realistic style of the stories precludes the fictional assertion of impossibilities. Nevertheless, such impossibility is fictionally asserted and is part of the meaning of the story. However, an ideal audience would not attribute to Conan Doyle the intention to fictionally assert impossibility, so hypothetical intentionalism would falsely deny that it is part of the meaning of the story...."

5977. Steinkamp, Fiona. "1997 Parapsychological Association Bibliography." Journal of Parapsychology 62, no. 4 (1998): 353.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features the 1997 Parapsychological Association (PA) Bibliography which helps PA members inform each other on research in parapsychology and mainstream academic fields.

Parapsychological work in parapsychological journals and books; Other mainstream publications. One entry refers to Doyle: Biondi, M. (1997a). Arthur Conan Doyle-Harry Price. Luce e Ombra, 3, 257-266.

5978. Steyn, Mark. "Coming to America." American Spectator 30, no. 12 (1997): 54.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the possible scenario of the relocation of Martin Amis to America. Chance of living in America; Comments on the prospect of Amis in living in America. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Still, in the end, his dilemma is honest enough. For Amis, as for Louise Woodward, America--or, at any rate, the few bits they've heard of, like Manhattan and Hollywood--is the landscape of the imagination. A century ago, London was the place. But who wants to walk in Dickens's, or Conan Doyle's, footsteps?..."

5979. Stipp, David. "Inventor on the verge of a nervous Breakthrough." Fortune 139, no. 6 (1999): 104-117.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles inventor David Levy of Cambridge, Massachusetts, focusing on his palm-sized computer keyboard with full-sized keys. The difficulties he faces in selling his invention to a large company, with the example of his negotiations with Motorola; His interest in inventing even as a small child; His doctoral work at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) in Cambridge. Inset: Elfin Keys For Grown-Up Fingers. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Subway riders passing through Harvard Square a few months later witnessed a curious affair right out of Conan Doyle: Precisely 50 men boarded the train with yellow ink on their fingers. Even Watson could have guessed they had all just been fingerprinted. On further inspection he'd have spotted the perpetrator--a 30ish guy with a stamp pad was accosting males as they waited on the platform under the square, asking for their prints. But why? Elementary satisficing, old bean. Levy had hatched his idea to shrink the keyboard and needed to know how small he could make the 'finger-pressure zones' of its keys without crossing the border into Barbie-space, where fingers tend to hit more than one key at a time...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5980. Stockdale, Steve. "What we could Become." ETC: A Review of General Semantics 64, no. 4 (2007): 326-332.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a note about a speaker and a Doylean reference. "...Incidentally, any of you who are going to be in Denver in the next 5 or 6 weeks will have an opportunity, one of the last opportunities, to hear Alfred Korzybski speak in person....And it's much better to hear him speak than it is to read his books. He's limited by the fact that he's got to stick to the typewriter, to the printed word; but when he talks - when he talks it's another matter! He gestures, he's not tied down with his hands to the desk the way I am; he walks, stumps all around the state, and waves his hands; (audience laughs) ... and you really gather what he means. Incidentally--he looks like A. Conan Doyle's description of Prof Challenger if Prof. Challenger had shaved his beard. Dynamic character...."
5981. Strain, Ellen. "Exotic Bodies, Distant Landscapes: Touristic Viewing and Popularized Anthropology in the Nineteenth Century." Wide Angle 18, no. 2 (1996): 70-100.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to Doyle. "...The actual accounts of long journeys, venturesome heroes, and the occasional battle inspired colonial romance and adventure novels which enjoyed considerable popularity during this period.(2) In 1874, a new literary genre--the ethnographic novel--was born with G. A. Henty's first boys' book on the Ashanti campaign.(3) More notable literary works followed. Rider Haggard's King Solomon's Mines sold 31,000 copies during the twelve months following its 1885 release; Rudyard Kipling published Plain Tales From the Hills in 1888 and Jungle Book in 1895; and following a Cook's tour of Egypt, even Arthur Conan Doyle experimented with foreign settings in his 1898 tale of intrigue aboard a Nile steamer, The Tragedy of the Korosko...."
5982. Strauss, Jonathan. "Political Force and the Grounds of Identity from Rousseau to Flaubert." MLN 117, no. 4 (2002): 808-835.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...While rhetorical complexity baffled--and still baffles--legal theory, the nineteenth century police moved quickly and aggressively to master the semiotics of physical space. The rise, during this period, of detective fiction and the roman policier, from Poe to Wilkie Collins to Conan Doyle, represents an attempt to establish the legibility of this alienated, physical memory in the intelligible clues to the nature of a crime and the identity of its criminal...."
5983. Strout, Cushing. "Theatrical Magic and the Novel." Sewanee Review 111, no. 1 (2003): 169.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the use of theatrical magic in more serious forms of the novel. Affinity between classic fictional methods of detection and theatrical methods of deception; Use of theatrical magic in novels such as 'The Magician's Wife,' by Brian Moore, 'The Houdini Girl,' by Martyn Bedford and 'The Magician's Assistant,' by Ann Patchett. Includes references to Doyle and John Dickson Carr.
5984. Sumida, Jon Tetsuro. "A Matter of Timing: The Royal Navy and the Tactics of Decisive Battle, 1912-1916." The Journal of Military History 67, no. 1 (2003): 85-136.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "In 1912, the Admiralty adopted a secret tactical system that was supposed to enable a British battle fleet to destroy a German opponent through five minutes shooting at medium range. The quick destruction of the Germans was to be followed by a simultaneous turn away by the British, which would counter the threat of enemy torpedoes. Belief in this scheme interfered with the development of equipment and methods suitable to battle fleet action that involved long range and maneuver while shooting, which set the stage for much that went wrong for the Royal Navy at the battle of Jutland." Article opens with a quote from Doyle: "When you have eliminated the impossible, whatever remains, however improbable, must be the truth."
5985. Swanson, Kate. "'Bad Mothers' and 'Delinquent Children': Unravelling anti-begging rhetoric in the Ecuadorian Andes." Gender, Place & Culture: A Journal of Feminist Geography 14, no. 6 (2007): 703-720.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "In this paper I examine the rhetorics that circulate surrounding the lives of young indigenous women and children who beg on the streets of Quito, Ecuador. I focus particularly on rhetorics being produced and reproduced by urban planners, social workers, religious leaders and the media." One of the references points to Doyle: Jaffe, Audrey (1990) Detecting the Beggar: Arthur Conan Doyle, Henry Mayhew, and 'The Man with the Twisted Lip', Representations, 31, pp. 96-117.
5986. Swiffen, Alistair, Peter Hallward, and Daniel Bensaïd. "The mole and the locomotive." Angelaki: Journal of the Theoretical Humanities 8, no. 2 (2003): 213-226.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles Daniel Bensaïd, a teacher of philosophy at the University of Paris VII and an editor of the review Contre Temps. Primary concerns in theory and practice of militant politics, popular revolutionary traditions, contemporary significance of Marx and Marxism and the organisation of today's anti-capitalist movement; Works that inspire effective resistance to the ongoing subordination of social existence to the law of the market; Implications in theoretical humanities. Includes a passing reference to Doyle.
"...Between Edgar Allan Poe and Arthur Conan Doyle, the appearance of detective fiction, the development of rational modes of enquiry, and the scientific refinement of detection methods sum up the mindset of this period with its urban "mysteries": the loot passes from one hand to another, and all trace of the guilty party is lost in the anonymity of the crowd...."
5987. Sword, Helen. "Necrobibliography: Books in the spirit world." Modern Language Quarterly 60, no. 1 (1999): 85.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Contemplates on the portrayals of the afterlife as described by writers. Modern spiritualists' descriptions of the other world; Social conflicts, ideological agendas and innovations from which they emerge; Celebration of literary values in accounts of afterlife activities; Reflection of cultural pretensions and authorial aspirations; Reading and writing in the spirit world; Spirit mediums and the institutions of authorship. Includes references to Doyle.
5988. Tanner, Ron. "Terrible Lizard! The Dinosaur as Plaything." Journal of American & Comparative Cultures 23, no. 2 (2000): 53.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the popularity of the toy dinosaur in the United States. Increase in the production of toy dinosaurs; Impact of the dinosaur on the kids; Representation of the dinosaur remains. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Other O'Brien-animated films followed, culminating in the relatively sophisticated 1925 film, The Lost World, based on Conan Doyle's 1912 novel of the same name, which recounts the discovery of dinosaurs thriving today on a remote Amazonian plateau...."
5989. Taylor, John. "Poetry Today." Antioch Review 63, no. 3 (2005): 590-593.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a literary criticism of the poetics of American modernist and poet Melvin B. Tolson. Evolution of Tolson's poetics; Influence of Tolson's poetics on other African American poets; Similarity of Tolson's poetics with that of Domenico Ghirlandaio; Tolson's poetic reflection on racial identity and artistic responsibility. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...In this respect, his artistic sensibility nears him to Domenico Ghirlandaio (1449-1494). With characteristic eclectic humor verging on the absurd (which one might as well term 'post-modern'), Tolson introduces the Italian artist in Harlem Gallery as a 'sergeant' who 'knew his Conan Doyle from aardwark to zythum.'..."
5990. Teigen, Philip M. "William Osler, Again." Bulletin of the History of Medicine 75, no. 4 (2001): 745-755.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Turning to the climax of the Osler biographies, I will set aside Bliss's Osler for a moment and look at the climax of Harvey Cushing's Life of Sir William Osler. It occurs on the last page of the second volume, when Cushing describes Osler's bier in the Lady Chapel of Christ Church Cathedral, Oxford, after all the dignitaries have filed out. Osler lies near the bust of Robert Burton, with a 'single sheaf' of lilies and his favorite copy of Sir Thomas Browne's Religio medici resting on the casket. Cushing then imagines a procession of Osler's illustrious predecessors filing past the bier--just as the living had done earlier in the day. Leading this procession is Revere Osler (slain in Flanders sixteen months before), who is followed by Linacre, Harvey, Sydenham, and a few friends and colleagues, including Alfred Stillé, S. Weir Mitchell, and John Shaw Billings. The last and largest contingent in the procession are the recent war dead, 'doubly dead in that they died so young.' (23) Read three-quarters of a century after it was written, this paragraph appears opaque. For that reason, it is not surprising that Bliss

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

dismisses Cushing's climax with a quip about Arthur Conan Doyle's spiritualism (p. 483)...."

5991. Tetens, Kristan. "'A Grand Informal Durbar': Henry Irving and the Coronation of Edward VII." Journal of Victorian Culture 8, no. 2 (2003): 257.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the significance of the last performance of actor, Henry Irving during a reception to honor the participants of the coronation of King Edward VII in 1902. Principles represented by Irving; Importance of his performance in marking the end of his reign as the premier actor of the Lyceum Theatre. Doyle mentioned on p. 272 and in note 12.

5992. Thomas, Kate. "Post Sex: On Being Too Slow, Too Stupid, Too Soon." South Atlantic Quarterly 106, no. 3 (2007): 615-624.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The article discusses queer theory as it is used by some scholars and how, particularly, she herself was introduced to queer theory and the way the impact that it had on her own understanding. Her own research as a Victorianist led her to analyze the British postal system because it equalized society. The postal system could be understood through queer theory because both rely on the same exclusivity and 'virtual associations.' The poetry of 'Michael Field,' which was a pseudonym for Katharine Bradley and Edith Cooper, is discussed because the author is interested in their sense of the future." Endnote 7 includes a reference to Doyle: Kate Thomas, 'Racial Alliance and Postal Networks in Conan Doyle's 'A Study in Scarlet,' Journal of Colonialism and Colonial History 2.1 (Spring 2001): 9-23.

5993. Thompson, T. Jack. "Light on the Dark Continent: The Photography of Alice Seely Harris and the Congo Atrocities of the Early Twentieth Century." International Bulletin of Missionary Research 26, no. 4 (2002): 146.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the mission photography of Alice Seely Harris, an English missionary with the Congo Balolo Mission, concerning the Congo Atrocities of the early twentieth century. Her family background; Contributions of her photography to reforms in Congo; Description of her missionary photographs. Contains a couple of references to Doyle. "...A host of personalities, many of them well-known internationally, helped to bring the Congo atrocities to the attention of a wider public. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, famous as the creator of Sherlock Holmes, wrote a pamphlet, The Crime of the Congo....What was unusual was the international nature of the campaign against Leopold's rule. The campaign was due to the work of many people, some of whom have been mentioned in passing. Several of them, such as Mark Twain and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, were already figures of international repute; others such as E. D. Morel and William H. Shepherd became famous as a result of the campaign...."

5994. Thompson, Terry W. "Jame's Oh, Whistle, and I'll Come to You, My Lad." Explicator 59, no. 4 (2001): 193.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the ghost story 'Oh, Whistle, and I'll Come to You, My Lad,' by Montague Rhodes James. Reputation of James as the one who started ghost literature; Description of the main character; Use of golf in the story. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "The last few decades of the nineteenth century and the first two of the twentieth have frequently been called the golden age of the English ghost story. Authors on both sides of the Atlantic--but especially in Great Britain--produced supernatural tales at an unprecedented pace and of unmatched subtlety and style. Writers such as Sheridan Le Fanu, M. E. Braddon, F. Marion Crawford, Oliver Onions, and Algernon Blackwood gained tremendous popularity by tapping into the seemingly insatiable public appetite, at the turn of the century, for stories about the otherworldly, the mysterious, and the unexplained. Even such well-established, mainstream authors as Henry James, Edith Wharton, Arthur Conan Doyle, and H. G. Wells dabbled in the genre, as had Charles Dickens before them...."

5995. Tiedman, Richard. "Scott: Symphony 3; Piano Concerto 2; Neptune (Music)." American Record Guide 67, no. 6 (2004): 179-179.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews a piano and choral music release, featuring works performed by Cyril Scott and performed by Howard Shelley and the Huddersfield Choral Society. 'Symphony 3'; 'Piano Concerto 2'; 'Neptune.' Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "Cyril Scott was an English mystic, eccentric if not so dotty as Scriabin. His music enjoyed great popularity before the 1914 war, and his piano piece 'Lotus Land' was in the repertoire of every amateur pianist. Debussy was an extravagant admirer and obvious influence. He was also a poet of some distinction and a translator of the poems of Baudelaire and Stefan George. There are also books on occultism and nutrition, the last of plausible merit as he lived to 91, dying in 1970. He shared with Arthur Conan Doyle a belief in spiritualism, a popular fad at the time...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

5996. Toledo-Pereyra, Luis H. "Poetry and Surgery." Journal of Investigative Surgery 16, no. 6 (2003): 307-309.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...In the medical field, we have a different story. Books have been written about medical doctors expressing their poetic veins [5, 6]. Well-known physician writers like Oliver Goldsmith, John Keats, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Arthur Conan Doyle, and William Carlos Williams are among the good number of poets of medical origin...."
5997. Tomaiuolo, Nicholas G. "Answers.com and Xrefer." Searcher 13, no. 7 (2005): 44-50.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article compares the Answers.com and Xrefer Web-based ready-reference information resources. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Figure 1 shows the type of information you can expect from Answers.com. The brief biography of Arthur Conan Doyle comes from Who2 [http://www.who2.com], an external Web site, but the information appears within the Answers.com response. Note in the "Contents" box on the left of the screenshot that this entry contains considerably more information than I could capture, including an entry from The Columbia Electronic Encyclopedia, Sixth Edition, and a lengthy entry from Wikipedia...."
5998. Tonkin, Boyd. "Lost in translation." New Statesman & Society 8, no. 354 (1995): Xxvii.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Explores the single-market in literature for Europe. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Britain has proved typical in its warm welcome for such intellectual block busters. These works reflect a deep-seated Europeanism in the folk who write them, those who sell them--and perhaps in the readers too. The vogue began with Eco's The Name of the Rose in 1980: a first novel set in the pan-European middle ages, by a jet-setting Italian academic. Eco even called his Geordie sleuth William of Baskerville, in homage to Conan Doyle...."
5999. Tortora, Vincent R. "The seventh sense." Focus 45, no. 1 (1998): 15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the evolution of United States' license plates design for automobiles. History of taxed registration tags; Plate decoration; Functions of license plates; Economic implication of using specialized and customized license tags. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...In succeeding centuries there were a few references to licensing horse-drawn vehicles, but little archival evidence. We know, for example, that in London in the 1880s Hansom cabs were tagged. Those who have read Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Hound of the Baskervilles will recognize the carriage number 2704...."
6000. Travers, Peter. "Movies." Rolling Stone, no. 901 (2002): 76.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several motion pictures including "Minority Report" that includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Spielberg's source material this time is a 1956 short story by Philip K. Dick (whose fiction inspired Blade Runner and Total Recall), cannily adapted by Scott Frank and Jon Cohen and set in the year 2054. Cruise's John Anderton watched his life come apart six years ago when his son was kidnapped -- divorce and drugs ensued -- just as his Pre-Crime Unit took off. He's been using the skills of a trio of psychics named after three great mystery writers -- Arthur (Conan Doyle), Dash (Hammett) and Agatha (Christie). These pre-cogs lie in a pool in a secure space called the Temple and see murders-to-be, which computers then turn into images that Anderton orchestrates into police action...."
6001. Troev, Theodor. "From out of the blue." Geographical 68, no. 12 (1996): 28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the blue-green algae from Oregon's Upper Klamath Lake. Perception as nature's complete food; Geological background of the lake; Clarity of the lake; Abundance of minerals, vitamins and amino acids; Use of algae as homeopathic remedies. Insets: A supplement for expeditions; Nature's harvest. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "Researchers fascinated by the geological setting of Upper Klamath Lake have likened it to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's Lost World, a high, isolated plateau that acts as a biological 'time machine', preserving prehistoric plants and animals. The idea that dinosaurs live in Klamath County is fanciful, but there are lifeforms that have existed for millions of years...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6002. Trout, Steven. "Miniaturization and anticlimax in Evelyn Waugh's Sword of Honour." Twentieth Century Literature 43, no. 2 (1997): 125.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a critique of the novel 'Sword of Honour,' by Evelyn Waugh. Occurrence of anticlimaxes; Comparison of Waugh's literary style in the book with her earlier fiction; Miniaturization in Waugh's frustrations and vicissitudes as a wartime officer; Examples of deflationary language. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Since the phrase 'summoning to the advance' could also describe the actions of a bugler, such as Gunga Din, it evokes the martial literature of the New Imperialism, including the adolescent fiction of G. A. Henty (programmatic works with titles such as With Wolfe in Canada or With Roberts to Pretoria), the Napoleonic novels of Conan Doyle, and the barracks poetry and fiction of Kipling...."
6003. Troutner, Joanne. "Software review." Emergency Librarian 22, no. 2 (1994): 59.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a review of software for education. Includes the 'Library of the Future'; 'The Multimedia Workshop' by Davidson; 'Measurement in Motion' from Learning in Motion; 'McGraw-Hill Multimedia Encyclopedia of Science & Technology'; 'Learn About the Night Sky' by Sunburst/Wings. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Consider what impact the Library of the future will have on education and our roles. This CD-ROM contains the complete, unabridged text of over 1,750 literary rifles, as well as video clips. A few of the authors included are Aesop, Aristotle, William Shakespeare, Lewis Carroll, Arthur Conan Doyle, Chief Joseph and Oscar Wilde...."
6004. Twining, William. "R.G. Collingwood's Autobiography: One Reader's Response." Journal of Law & Society 25, no. 4 (1998): 603.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on the autobiography of philosopher R.G. Collingwood. Overview of his autobiography; Collingwood and legal theory; Views on teaching jurisprudence; Limitations of conversational reading; Activity of legal theorizing. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Back in England in late 1944 I suffered the standard fate of colonial waifs and was parked in a boarding-school. At my preparatory school I was unhappy, but this was hardly the school's fault. Indeed, it had some quite civilized ways and was really quite bookish. I remember with pleasure the Headmaster reading aloud to the whole school on Sundays: John Buchan, Dornford Yates, Conan Doyle, Agatha Christie, and P. G. Wodehouse; he even allowed older boys to sample his bookshelves for a quiet period on some evenings...."
6005. Tymn, Michael E. "Comparing the Afterlife Abodes of Religion With Those of More Recent Revelation." Journal of Religion & Psychical Research 26, no. 3 (2003): 158.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Compares the afterlife abodes of religion with contemporary revelation. Description of the state of eternal bliss; Survival of human consciousness from bodily death; Consideration of the proper station in the afterlife by religions. Contains references to Doyle.
6006. ———. "Examining the Mystery of the Buried Crosses." Journal of Religion & Psychical Research 28, no. 2 (2005): 62-76.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // In 1938, Pulitzer Prize-winning author Hamlin Garland successfully completed his search for crosses and other artifacts said to have been buried by North American Indians around Central and Southern California missions. The story began in 1914, when Violet Parent, a medium, started unearthing similar artifacts after spirits directed her to them. Over a 10-year period, she and her husband, Gregory, collected some 1,500 crosses and miscellaneous relics. After their deaths, the items along with 22 notebooks in which Gregory Parent recorded the spirit communication and their search for buried 'treasures' were given to Garland. Through another medium, Garland set out to communicate with the spirit world and search for more artifacts, believing it would prove spirit world and search for more artifact, believing it would prove spirit communication and life after death. The first part of this article summarizes the story as related by Garland in his 1939 book on the subject, while the second part examines the case as to its authenticity. [Abstract from author] Includes references to Doyle.
6007. ———. "Making Sense of a Horrific Hell and a Humdrum Heaven." Journal of Religion & Psychical Research 24, no. 2 (2001): 102.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Deals with the Catholic Church's teachings about the after life. Characteristics of hell as described by the Church; Effect of the idea of hell on men. Includes a reference to Doyle.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6008. ———. "Practicing Death: The Key to Enjoying Life." Journal of Religion & Psychical Research 26, no. 1 (2003): 44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides a different view of practicing death. Perspective regarding the practice of death as a way of life; Relation between the practice of death and the practice of freedom; Benefits of practicing death. Contains a reference to Doyle.
6009. Tyrrell, Jr R. Emmett. "A crestomathy of Christmas books." American Spectator 30, no. 12 (1997): 48.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several books recommended as Christmas gifts. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Old favorites -- Montaigne, Yeats, Nietzsche, Rimbaud, Rilke, Emerson's journals, Thoreau, Whitman, Frost, Dickinson, Eliot, Henry Miller, Anais Nin, Keats's letters, Lawrence, Jarrell, Blackmur, and a lot of other fairly conventional classics. Not much contemporary stuff can hold me more than 100 pages. Updike can write but hasn't got much to say. Also love Conan Doyle, Raymond Chandler, Elmore Leonard, Le Carre and Turow...."
6010. Tytler, Graeme. "Dickens's The Signalman." Explicator 53, no. 1 (1994): 26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses several aspects of Charles Dickens' short story, 'The Signalman.' Recent critical discussion of the story's supernatural, psychological and other aspects; Comments on the story as that of a man who is evidently suffering from a type of partial insanity known in the nineteenth century as 'monomania'; The idea of language as a universal signalling system. Note 1 includes a reference to Doyle: Nineteenth-Century Suspense: From Poe to Conan Doyle, ed. Clive Bloom et al. (New York: St. Martin's Press, 1988) 6011. Vagts, Detlev F. "Harold Berman and Soviet Law: from its Challenge to the West to Dissolution." Emory Law Journal 57, no. 6 (2008): 1451-1453.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article focuses on the life and works of deceased law professor Harold Berman who is also known as a prominent scholar of the Soviet law. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Cyrus Eaton, a Cleveland industrialist who took a serious interest in trying to diminish tensions between the two countries, held a reception for Khrushchev. Griswold, a fellow Clevelander, wrangled an invitation for Hal to the reception, and in the receiving line, Hal, in his fluent Russian, asked the Chairman for access to Moscow. The chairman told an aide to arrange it, and off they went. One thing they had to do before departing was to rent their house; somebody recommended a promising young instructor in Harvard's psychology department named Timothy Leary. Leary, in his haze of LSD and psilocybin, managed to wreck the interior of the Berman home. After their return, Ruth invited a group of faculty wives to tea; she had to warn them to walk carefully in the foyer so as to avoid the ceremonial hole that Leary and his friends had chopped in the floor. Thus Hal became acquainted with American litigation practices when he returned. Perhaps that experience helped Hal take part in Russian litigation on behalf of the holders of Arthur Conan Doyle's literary property...."
6012. Vicinus, Martha. "Fictions of British Decadence: High Art, Popular Writing and the Fin de Siècle/Vernon Lee: Decadence, Ethics, Aesthetics." Journal of Victorian Culture 12, no. 1 (2007): 158-162.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews two books "Fictions of British Decadence: High Art, Popular Writing and the Fin de Siècle," by Kirsten MacLeod and "Vernon Lee: Decadence, Ethics, Aesthetics," edited by Catherine Maxwell and Patricia Pulham. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Shiel loved the mannered style of the Decadents, yet he hoped to compete with Arthur Conan Doyle. Neither book achieved their authors' ambitions; in the aftermath of the Wilde trials, they won neither a coterie nor popular audience for their increasingly esoteric prose...."
6013. Vickers-Rich, Patricia, and Thomas Hewitt Rich. "Dinosaurs of the Antarctic." Scientific American Special Edition 14, no. 2 (2004): 40-47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // In the early Cretaceous period about 100 million years ago, Australia lay alongside Antarctica, which straddled the South Pole as it does today. If global cooling indeed killed the dinosaurs, as many paleontologists have suggested, then Australia's species were the ones most likely to have survived the longest. Although the Cretaceous fossil plants of southeastern Australia have been studied for more than a century, the animals remained mostly hidden until recently. Robert A. Spicer of the Open University in the

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- U.K. and Judith Totman Parrish of the University of Idaho instead deduce temperature from the structure of ancient plants, arriving at the somewhat higher mean annual temperature of 10 degrees C. Their research with colleagues has demonstrated that polar Australia supported conifers, ginkgoes, ferns, cycads, bryophytes and horsetails but only a few angiosperms, or flowering plants, identifiable by a sprinkling of pollen. These long-necked reptiles, not themselves dinosaurs, generally paddled the seas, but here they inhabited fresh water in the ancient valley between Australia and Antarctica. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...English writer Arthur Conan Doyle once dreamed of a plateau in South America that time forgot, Where dinosaurs continued to reign. Reports in the early 1990s that dwarf mammoths survived to early historical times, on islands off the coast of Siberia, give force to such speculation...."
6014. Vinitsky, Ilya. "Table Talks: The Spiritualist Controversy of the 1870s and Dostoevsky." Russian Review 67, no. 1 (2008): 88-109.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses modern spiritualism through a consideration of one remarkable séance that took place in Russia during the period 1875-1876 or what the author calls as the "spiritualist season." Footnote 34 refers to Doyle: Vagner's literary practice is beyond the purview of this article, but I would simply note that spiritualist themes are prominent in his "science-fiction" works of the 1870s: Vpot'makh (1877) and Ol'd-Diks (1877). The relationship between Modern Spiritualism and science fiction is an intriguing topic. The most representative Western examples of this fruitful cooperation include works of the French Kardecist Camille Flammarion and the British historian of experimental spiritualism Sir Arthur Conan Doyle...."
6015. Vrettos, Athena. "Displaced Memories in Victorian Fiction and Psychology." Victorian Studies 49, no. 2 (2007): 199-207.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "In late-Victorian literature and psychology, memories were frequently thought to transgress mental boundaries, drifting from one mind to another or assuming a spectral existence. Objects with powerful-and often traumatic-associations acted as an especially potent conduit by which memories could pass between people who were distant in time and space. Examining literary, psychological, and parapsychological writings by Thomas Hardy, Arthur Conan Doyle, George Henry Lewes, Samuel Butler, and F. W. H. Myers, this essay argues that these works provide a distinctive set of narratives about the potential displacement and uncertain ownership of memory. By offering a range of speculations about how emotions, memories, and experiences adhere to the material world, such narratives dramatize the permeability increasingly attributed to memory, consciousness, and individual identity at the end of the Victorian period." [Abstract from author] 6016. Wachter, Phyllis Ethel, and William Todd Schultz. "Annual Bibliography of Works about Life Writing, 2002-2003." Biography 26, no. 4 (2004): 625-711.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to Doyle. Simmons, Diane. "The Curse of Empire: Grandiosity and Guilt in the Stories of Arthur Conan Doyle." Psychoanalytic Review 89.4 (2002): 533- 56. "Examines Doyle's history of loss and his 'narcissistic dualism' to gain an understanding of the psychic life of the British public during the high point of imperialism."
6017. Walden, Daniel. "The Blues Detective: A Study of African American Detective Fiction (Book)." Journal of Popular Culture 31, no. 3 (1997): 189-191.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "The Blues Detective: A Study of African American Detective Fiction," by Stephen Soitos. Includes passing references to Doyle. "...The starting point for all Euro-American detective fiction is Edgar Allan Poe's 'Murders in the Rue Morgue' (1841), and the brilliant detective Dupin. Usually, histories go from there to Wilkie Collins, Arthur Conan Doyle, and by leaps and bounds to Dashiell Hammett and Raymond Chandler, thereby ignoring the blues detective. But Pauline Hopkins and J. E. Bruce (as Soitos is careful to point out) wrote at the turn of the century, and the use of double-conscious tropes, i.e., the 'masking' tropes, was defined by W.E.B. DuBois in The Souls of Black Folk (1903). Of course, Poe and Doyle were there first, but evidence from the black periodical literature shows that early African-American authors, popular from the 1890s on, used black detectives as early as Pauline Hopkins' Hagar's Daughter (1901-02) and J. E. Bruce's Black Sleuth (1907-09) to dramatize black political and social concerns...."
6018. Walker, Martin. "America's Romance With the Future." Wilson Quarterly 30, no. 1 (2006): 22-26.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article offers a look at how people in the U.S. perceive the future. It presents a historical perspective on the faith of people in the U.S. in the future. It discusses their willingness to sacrifice in order to achieve a better tomorrow. The article also addresses how politicians and the public depict optimism about the future. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Have we any clues as to how these new pressures are likely to affect human relationships and social change? We do--and these clues come from Americans. It is a remarkable feature of science fiction that, although Europeans invented the genre, Americans have produced its most thoughtful explorations of future societies. Jules Verne and Arthur Conan Doyle and H. G. Wells were fascinated by the future of things, of stupendous technology. American authors of science-fiction classics tend to have been intrigued rather by the future of people...."
6019. ———. "Wuthering Ike." National Interest, no. 94 (2008): 84-88.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Ike: An American Hero," by Michael Korda. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Conner became Eisenhower's commander during a tour in the Panama Canal Zone and took the young Kansan under his wing. Conner made him read, novels at first (including Conan Doyle's splendid swashbuckler The Exploits of Brigadier Gerard) and then military history and the Greek classics...."
6020. Watson, Andrew. "Improbable particles--or artifacts?" Science 275, no. 5296 (1997): 30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on the discoveries of scientists at CERN, the European Center for Particle Physics, one of the four detectors on the Large Electron-Positron Collider (LEP). Records of four jets of mesons and similar particles by the ALEPH detector; Comments from CERN theorist Carlos Wagner. Includes an opening quotation from Doyle. "'When you have eliminated the impossible, whatever remains, however improbable, must be the truth,' wrote Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Eliminating the impossible is just what researchers at CERN, the European Center for Particle Physics, are now trying to do...."
6021. Weales, Gerald. "Making much of a tiny play." Sewanee Review 105, no. 1 (1997): Xxx.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book titled 'Henry Irving's 'Waterloo',' written by W. D. King. Includes passing references to Doyle. "...The base is Waterloo (originally A Story of Waterloo), a one-act play that Arthur Conan Doyle adapted from his stow 'A Straggler of '15' and sold to Henry Irving in 1892....The only irony in the piece lies in a line from the newspaper account, conveniently read to the audience by one of the characters, describing the ceremony during which the prince regent presented a medal to the corporal: 'Long may the heroic Brewster live to treasure the medal which he has so bravely won' (for some vague dramatic reason Doyle/Irving breaks the line with an exclamation from Brewster's great-niece)...."
6022. Weinberg, Jo-Anne. "Reference books." School Library Journal 44, no. 8 (1998): 195.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Short Stories for Students,' 2 volumes, edited by Kathleen Wilson. Includes a reference to Doyle and a Holmes tale. "This set does everything for students but write the paper. Each volume contains entries for 20 stories arranged alphabetically by title. Classic authors such as Ernest Hemingway, Mark Twain, and James Joyce appear as well as Edwidge Danticat, Gabriel Garcia Marquez, and Doris Lessing. Selections include O'Henry's 'The Gift of the Magi,' Shirley Jackson's 'The Lottery,' Arthur Conan Doyle's 'The Red Headed League,' and Nathaniel Hawthorne's 'Young Goodman Brown,' as well as Richard Connell's 'The Most Dangerous Game' and W. W. Jacobs's 'The Monkey's Paw.'..."
6023. Weiner, Saul J. "From research evidence to context: The challenge of individualizing care." ACP Journal Club 141, no. 3 (2004): A-11-A-12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses the challenges of individualizing care starting from research evidence to context thereof. When strong research evidence supports a low-risk intervention that is easy to implement, the practice of medicine may seem straightforward. However, challenges abound as the possibility of harm increases, the evidence for efficacy diminishes, or the steps to implementation become more complex. The challenge is to ascertain what may be clinically relevant from the particulars of a patient's life. Includes a reference to Doyle. "...The concept of theory building was articulated best, perhaps, by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in the words of Sherlock Holmes, acknowledged to be modeled on Doyle's teacher, Joseph Bell, Professor of Medicine at the University of Edinburgh: 'You know my method. It is founded in the observance of trifles.'"

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6024. Weintraub, Stanley. "Shaw's Goddess: Lady Colin Campbell." SHAW The Annual of Bernard Shaw Studies 25, no. (2005): 241-256.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to Doyle. "...Actors and acting often surfaced in her columns, and she also risked writing plays and fiction. When the Charringtons (with Janet Achurch in each work) presented a quintuple bill at Terry's Theatre in June 1893, along with short plays by James Barrie, Conan Doyle, Thomas Hardy, and the forgotten Walter Pollock, they included a farce by Lady Colin, Bud and Blossom...."
6025. Weisbord, Robert G. "The King, the Cardinal and the Pope: Leopold II's genocide in the Congo and the Vatican." Journal of Genocide Research 5, no. 1 (2003): 35.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the genocide in the Congo colony of King Leopold II. Background of the event; Role of protestant missionaries in discovering the event in the Congo; Move of King Leopold to counteract the reformers; Relationship with James Cardinal Gibbons; Gibbons' service to King Leopold; Negotiations to transfer the Congo to the Belgian. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...In Britain and the United States, the humanitarian campaign against Leopold attracted personalities as diverse as Arthur Conan Doyle, creator of the Sherlock Holmes stories, and the humorist Mark Twain...."
6026. Welles, Licia. "AAO museum provides a glimpse of the past." Ophthalmology Times 21, no. 26 (1996): 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the holding of an exhibit by the American Academy of Ophthalmologists at McCormick Place, Chicago, Illinois. Replication of typical ophthalmologist office featuring diagnostic and surgical instruments; History; Display of ophthalmic atlases; Display of original programs from previous meetings. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Also included will be original materials from the academy's archives. Visitors, for example, can see the original programs from the academy's first two annual meetings. A computer monitor will display information about the medical advances, scientific technology, and cultural history of the day. For instance, some visitors may be surprised to know that Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, author of the famed Sherlock Holmes character, was an ophthalmologist and was at the height of his writing career in 1896...."
6027. Whincop, Michael J. "Conflicts in the Cathedral: Towards a Theory of Property Rights in Private International Law." University of Toronto Law Journal 50, no. 1 (2000): 40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines the choice of law and jurisdictional principles applicable to property cases. Exchange function of property law in conflicts cases; Definitive and regulatory functions of property law in problems with land in conflicts cases; Problems with lex situs in conflicts involving immovable property. Notes 17 and 58 make reference to Doyle: 17. The claim that choice of law rules can be derived logically is characteristic of the vested rights approach to conflicts, now discredited as pseudo-scientific formalism: see J.H. Beale, A Treatise on the Conflict of Laws (New York: Baker, Voorhis, 1935). That vested rights continue to be taken seriously in property conflicts is apparent in Tyburn Productions Ltd v. Conan Doyle, [1990] 1 All E.R. 909 at 913 (Ch.). See also Note, 'Modernizing the Situs Rule for Real Property Conflicts' (1987) 65 Tex. L.R. 585.; See Potter v. Broken Hill Pty. Ltd. (1906), 3 C.L.R. 479 (H.C. of A.); Def Lepp Music v. Stuart-Brown, [1986] R.P.C. 273 (Ch.); Tyburn Productions Ltd v. Conan Doyle, [1991] Ch. 75; Pearce v. Ove Arup Partnership Ltd, [1997] 3 All E.R. 31 (Ch.). Cf. 'Money Claims,' supra note 49 at 630-1.
6028. White, Stephen L. "Skepticism, Deflation, and the Rediscovery of the Self." Monist 87, no. 2 (2004): 275-298.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on skepticism, deflation, and the rediscovery of the self. Argument that the connection between internal experiential states and their external causes is contingent; Nature of perceptual experience; Suggestion that perception must ground language subject to Frege's constraint; Demonstrative version of Frege's problem; Transparency of experience; Deflation and the culture of skepticism. Includes a passing reference to Doyle (p. 276). "Imagine a world very much like ours but on which a constant cloud-cover prevents anyone's seeing anything more than a few yards away. (One might think of Conan Doyle's London.)..."
6029. Whitehead, Maurice. "'To provide for the edifice of learning': Researching 450 Years of Jesuit Educational and Cultural History, with Particular Reference to the British Jesuits." History of Education 36, no. 1 (2007): 109-

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

143.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Within Jesuit colleges, educational emphases on public speaking, debating, drama and literary studies played a formative role in the subsequent careers of a host of European men of letters: Calderón, Corneille, Goldoni, Molière, Racine, Tasso and Voltaire, and, at a later period, Arthur Conan Doyle and James Joyce, and the film directors, Luis Buñuel, Alfred Hitchcock and Louis Malle, all received a Jesuit education...."

6030. Whiter, Robert H. "Art of war R. Caton Woodville." Military History 13, no. 3 (1996): 42.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles painter, Richard Caton Woodville, focusing on his military painting 'The Charge of the Light Brigade.' How the painting is viewed; Other paintings by Woodville; Influences on Woodville and his work. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Woodville's output between 1870 and the early 1920s (he died in 1927) was truly amazing. In addition to the Illustrated London News, his work appeared in The Graphic, The Sphere, With the Flag to Pretoria, Black and White, The Illustrated Sporting and Dramatic News, Harpers Magazine, The Captain and The Boys Own Paper. That last-named publication is especially notable because it contained a serial by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle titled 'Uncle Jeremy's Household,' illustrated by Woodville, that ran weekly from January 8 to February 19, 1887. In March 1954, the story and illustrations were reprinted, prompting a letter that read: "When I bought my first copy of B.O.E, the Seventy-fifth Birthday Number, I was most surprised to see an illustration in it by my great-grandfather Richard Caton Woodville," signed Anthony Caton Woodville of Dawlish, Devonshire...."

6031. Whitney, Gleaves. "The Swords of Imagination: Russell Kirk's Battle With Modernity." Modern Age 43, no. 4 (2001): 311.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines the historical writings of Russell Kirk. Theme of his memoir 'The Sword of Imagination'; Factor which influenced his historical imagination; Evidence of his ability to enter and to understand past epochs. Includes a passing reference to Doyle (p. 317). "...Kirk heartily agreed with the sentiment of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle--'Where there is no imagination, there is no terror.' He had a number of works of mystery, suspense and fantasy published in such journals as London Mystery Magazine and Fantasy and Science Fiction...."

6032. Whittington-Egan, Richard. "A Murder for Christmas." Contemporary Review 287, no. 1679 (2005): 362-365.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article focuses on an a survey "Twentieth-Century Crime Fiction," by Lee Horsley, which examines representative exemplars from the vast and rapidly expanding corpus of crime and detective novels. Notable writers cited in the study include Conan Doyle, Arthur Morrison, Dorothy Leigh Sayers, Mary Allingham, Anthony Berkeley, Edmund Wilson, Thomas Harris, and John D. MacDonald.

6033. Wickens, Barbara. "Dental distractions." Maclean's 108, no. 50 (1995): 12.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features The Escape Mechanism, a product from the Birling Communications Group Inc. in Canada, designed to distract and entertain dental patients. Use of interactive compact disc technology that offers a variety of entertainment options including books, games and jokes. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "For some people, a trip to the dentist is nothing short of a nightmare. But a Halifax-based company is using the latest in interactive compact disc technology to put the bite on their misery. The Birling Communications Group Inc. says The Escape Mechanism will distract and entertain patients who have a problem settling into the dentist's chair. Wearing a pair of video eye shields with liquid-crystal screens and operating a hand-held controller, the patient can choose from a variety of entertainment options. For the reader, there are short stories by Edgar Allan Poe, Arthur Conan Doyle and others, as well as longer selections ranging from Anne of Green Gables to Dracula, and even the Bible...."

6034. Williams, Andrew. "Reconstruction: The Bringing of Peace and Plenty or Occult Imperialism?" Global Society: Journal of Interdisciplinary International Relations 21, no. 4 (2007): 539-551.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "As Arthur Conan Doyle wrote at the time: 'everything about the Boers was of the 17th century . . . except their rifles.'" 6035. Williamson, Emily. "High plains drifting." Travel Weekly: The Choice of Travel Professionals, no. 1815 (2006): 60-61.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article focuses on the tourist attractions of Venezuela. The country has the proud boast of having won the Miss World contest more times than any other county, with five of its beauties taking the crown. Camina National Park, one of the largest national parks in the world, here more than 100 huge tabletop mountains rise from the earth. The region was the inspiration for Arthur Conan Doyle's novel "The Lost World." Tourism is long established in the Margarita Island, but there's more to the island than huge resorts. Visitors can explore mangrove swamps and cloud forests--"clouds" of condensation that veil the mountaintops.

6036. Williamson, Jack. "Rocket to the Morgue, by Anthony Boucher (1942)." Fantasy & Science Fiction 104, no. 5 (2003): 162.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features Anthony Boucher, an author of science fiction novels. Details of his affiliation with science fiction organizations; Information on his book 'Rocket.' Includes a passing reference to Doyle.

6037. Willis, Chris. "'Out flew the web and floated wide': An overview of uses of the internet for Victorian research." Journal of Victorian Culture 7, no. 2 (2002): 297.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides an overview on the uses of the Internet for Victorian research. Growth of electronic mail discussion lists; Web sites providing opportunities for interaction between academics and people working outside academia; Recommended listing or research libraries. Includes a passing reference to Doyle (p. 303). "...There are hundreds, if not thousands, of sites relating to specific Victorian authors. There is not enough space here to list all of them. The number of sites devoted to Dickens, Eliot, Hardy and Conan Doyle alone would run to several pages...."

6038. Willis, Martin, and Lisa Hopkins. "Reviews." Gothic Studies 9, no. 1 (2007): 89-191.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews of books with references to Doyle. On the Truths Contained in Popular Superstitions with an Account of Mesmerism, by Herbert Mayo, reviewed by Martin Willis; Late Victorian Gothic Tales, edited by Roger Luckhurst, reviewed by Lisa Hopkins.

6039. Wilson, Bee. "Going bananas." New Statesman 131, no. 4573 (2002): 47.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on the banana producer, United Fruit Co. founded by Minor Keith. Marketing strategy of United Fruit Co.; Impact of banana wars between United States and the European Union on the business. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...The responsibility for turning bananas into a world-class commodity in the first place rests largely with a Brooklyn entrepreneur called Minor Keith, whose very name is reminiscent of the American adventurers of Conan Doyle...."

6040. Windholz, Anne M. "An Emigrant and a Gentleman: Imperial Masculinity, British Magazines, and the Colony That Got Away." Victorian Studies 42, no. 4 (1999): 631-658.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reference to Doyle in "Works Cited." Conan Doyle, Arthur. "J. Habakuk Jephson's Statement." Cornhill 49 (Jan. 1884): 1-32.

6041. Winter, Douglas E. "Books." Fantasy & Science Fiction 93, no. 1 (1997): 24.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several books about vampires and the undead. Includes the reprint of 'Vampires, Wine & Roses,' edited by John Richard Stephens; 'Classic Vampire Stories,' edited by Leslie Shepard; 'Dozen Black Roses,' by Nancy A. Collins; 'The Lost,' by Jonathan Aycliffe; 'The Bell Witch: An American Haunting,' edited by Brent Monahan; '48,' by James Herbert; 'Dead Heat,' by Del Stone Jr. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...There's a framed letter on the wall of my office, written nearly a hundred years ago on the stationery of the Lyceum Theatre. My brother, a historian, found it in a trove of documents concerning the American Civil War. Surely it had been misplaced: the letter was written by Bram Stoker, and his scurrying pen queries his literary agent, Colles, about money and his publisher's terms for the novel being prepared in the wake of Dracula. Beyond its confirmation that the writing life is not likely to improve, the letter is painfully ironic. Who remembers the novel that Stoker was writing in 1899? (it was The Mystery of the Sea [1902], which Conan Doyle found 'admirable' but which, along with so much else that Stoker wrote, is long out of print.)..."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6042. Winter, Sarah. "Victorian Animal Dreams: Representations of Animals in Victorian Literature and Culture." Victorian Studies 50, no. 4 (2008): 684-686.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Victorian Animal Dreams: Representations of Animals in Victorian Literature and Culture," edited by Deborah Denenholz Morse and Martin A. Danahay. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Several essays investigate symbolic and allegorical representations of animals as companions, criminals, aggressors, and victims. They also explore animals as figures for abjection, loss of identity, racial difference, social marginality, and the exploitation of women, workers, and colonial subjects. These themes are studied in narratives by Charles Dickens, Emily Brontë, George Eliot, Elizabeth Gaskell, Thomas Hardy, Rudyard Kipling, Robert Louis Stevenson, Arthur Conan Doyle, Anna Sewell, and W. H. Hudson. The collection does a particularly good job of showing how centrally Britain's imperial project should figure in our understanding of Victorian representations of animals and vice versa...."
6043. Wisneski, Ken, D. R. Martin, Mary C. Trone, Audrey DeLaMartre, and Fred Eckman. "Short takes; [METRO Edition]." Star Tribune (Minneapolis), Dec 4, 1994: 15F.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Illusionist Harry Houdini and author Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, creator of Sherlock Holmes, were friends and antagonists in real life. In "Nevermore," though their fictional versions strongly disagree on the subject of mediums, they are mostly friends.; Together they find themselves on the trail of a serial killer who preys upon people associated with Houdini. That would include Sir Arthur. As the killings continue, it appears Houdini himself is the ultimate target. And indeed the most famous escape artist in history eventually is pressed to use his skills to save his own life.; Set in New York City during the Roaring '20s, "Nevermore" captures the carefree spirit of the time, including the jazz scene, as the world famous odd couple of Houdini and Doyle zero in on the killer.
6044. Wokler, Robert. "The subtextual reincarnation of Voltaire and Rousseau." American Scholar 67, no. 2 (1998): 55.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the work of Theodore Besterman and Ralph Leigh in annotating and assembling the letters of philosophers Voltaire and Rousseau. Information on Besterman; Account on 'Correspondence of Voltaire,' by Besterman; Information on Leigh; Review given by Leigh to the work of Besterman; Work relationship of Besterman and Leigh. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...A student of parapsychology, Theodore Besterman was appointed, while still a young man, first the editor and then the chief investigating officer of the Society for Psychical Research in London. By the mid-1930s, his works on crystal gazing, divining rods, and mediums had established his reputation as one of the world's foremost authorities on mental telepathy and clairvoyance. In true Voltairean fashion, however, he was convinced that nearly all of the paranormal phenomena reported in his own journal were quackery, and his determination to expose most fortune-tellers as charlatans so enraged Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and the Society's other unshakeable believers in the existence of fairies that, before he resigned himself, Besterman managed to drive out most of the Society's members, leaving only the skeptics and scientists inside...."
6045. Wolfson, Susan J. "Reading for Form." MLQ: Modern Language Quarterly 61, no. 1 (2000): 1-16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Although all the essays described above are theoretically sophisticated, they are chiefly concerned with practical readings of form at work--in Pope, Pomfret, Dryden, Chudleigh, Jonson, Carew, Milton, Blake, Ginsberg, Moriarty, Austen, Shelley, Pater, Woolf, Dickens, Forster, Conan Doyle...."
6046. Wollaeger, Mark A. "Woolf, Postcards, and the Elision of Race: Colonizing Women in The Voyage Out." Modernism/modernity 8, no. 1 (2001): 43-75.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...It is thus not surprising that Mr. Flushing's exotic picture of what might await them up the Amazon captures Rachel's imagination: '...wonderful treasures lay hid in the depths of the land... there might be giant gods hewn out of stone in the mountain-side; and colossal figures standing by themselves in the middle of green pasture lands, where none but natives had ever trod.... Nobody had been there; scarcely anything was known' (VO, 225). Far from entering the 'lost world' of Conan Doyle's South America, however, the expedition party will travel into a world to which, as in the vision of India in The Waves, 'the standards of the West' have already been applied...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6047. ———. "The Woolfs in the Jungle." Modern Language Quarterly 64, no. 1 (2003): 33.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Analyzes novelist Virginia Woolf's works. Implications of the emergence of female modernism in Woolf's novels; Influence of the novel of Woolf's husband on one of her novels; Representation of Woolf in one of her novels' characters. Includes a passing reference to Doyle (p. 57).
 "...Their first embrace then takes place in a space reminiscent of Arthur Conan Doyle's 'lost world': 'Sounds stood out from the background making a bridge across their silence; they heard the swish of the trees and some beast croaking in a remote world'...."
6048. Woods, Paula L. "Decoding the History of Black Mysteries." Crisis (The New) 108, no. 5 (2001): 62.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on several Afro-American journalists and novelists. Information on several books written by Afro-American novelists; Description of the novels of Chester Himes; Popularity of Walter Mosley in mystery novels. INSETS: Essential African American Mystery, Crime and Suspense Fiction; In Memoriam. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...For Gar Anthony Haywood, whose eight published mysteries include six featuring South Central Los Angeles private investigator Aaron Gunner, that inspiration was science fiction. 'From the age of 13, I grew up writing science fiction short stories,' he says. 'But I was also reading classic crime and mystery fiction as well -- Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Raymond Chandler, Ross Macdonald....'" 6049. Wright, Jonathan. "Lost Worlds of the Guiana Highlands." Geographical 80, no. 11 (2008): 81-81.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Lost Worlds of the Guiana Highlands," by Stewart McPherson. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...There might not be dinosaurs roaming these mountains - the Highlands provided the inspiration for Arthur Canon Doyle's The Lost World - but there are many wonders to behold and McPherson does an admirable job of introducing them to us...."
6050. Wrigley, Chris. "A New England? Peace and War 1886-1918 By G. R. Searle." History 92, no. 307 (2007): 416-416.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "A New England? Peace and War 1886-1918," by G. R. Searle. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Searle draws on the literature of the period, H. G. Wells, Arthur Conan Doyle, John Buchan and others, to enrich his account of the social history of the period...."
6051. Wynn, Mark. "Knowledge of place and knowledge of God: contemporary philosophies of place and some questions in philosophical theology." International Journal for Philosophy of Religion 62, no. 3 (2007): 149-169.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The paper examines three themes from the recent philosophical literature on place: the status of places as 'concrete universals'; the narratively mediated agency of places; and the various ways in which human identity proves to be relative to place." Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...To think of places as unitary in this sense is not, of course, to suppose that their constituent parts all possess some precisely delimited property--as though all their parts were to have the same colour or shape, for example. Instead, we might suppose that a place such as Dartmoor (the English national park), to take just one example, has a unitary character in so far as there is a kind of 'atmosphere' which pervades the moor--where this atmosphere is defined by the set of moods, reflections and dispositions that are evoked by, among other things, the moor's geology (notably, the strangely weathered granite slabs or tors which mark the high points of the moor); its history (evident in the wreckage of various prehistoric and medieval settlements which lie across the landscape); its significance in literature (one thinks most readily perhaps of the hound of Conan Doyle's tale); and the characteristic cloud and other atmospheric effects of the region...."
6052. Young, Pamela. "From our Pages." Maclean's 118, no. 17 (2005): 9-9.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article discusses how many authors have written for "Maclean's" in the past 100 years. Apart from being fictitious, Sherlock Holmes, Duddy Kravitz and Princess Daisy have something in common: their creators' bylines have all appeared in Maclean's. The magazine contained a mix of original and previously published material when it reprinted Arthur Conan Doyle's "The life after death" in 1918. Few novelists have written more for Maclean's than Mordecai Richler, who died in 2001. Over the intervening decades, he contributed pieces on wrestling, the lighter side of communism, Quebec politics, bigotry as practised by Jews and Gentiles, and a host of other subjects. If success is measured in financial terms, the most

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

eminent novelist who ever freelanced for Maclean's may well be Judith Krantz. You can bet that whatever she made profiling the likes of Norman Jewison and Robert Goulet in these pages was a pittance compared with the US $3.2 million she received in 1980 for the paperback rights to Princess Daisy.

6053. Young, Suzanne. "The Simple Art of Detection: The Female Detective in Victorian and Contemporary Mystery Novels." MFS Modern Fiction Studies 47, no. 2 (2001): 448-457.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes passing references to Doyle. "...The lineage of the detective novel from Poe to Conan Doyle to Sayers, Christie, and Margery Allingham--a lineage diverted in America by the advent of hard-boiled detective fiction--must be redrawn to take into account these best-selling and important writers from the mid to late nineteenth century....Nickerson next scrutinizes two more familiar writers of domestic detective fiction, Anna Katharine Green and Mary Roberts Rinehart, both best-selling novelists whose work appealed to the middle-class educated reader. In her day, in fact, Green was understood as a bourgeois writer in contrast to the "proletariat" appeal of dime-store novels or the "patrician" appeal of Poe, Gaboriau, and Conan Doyle...."
6054. Zaleski, Jeff. "The High Concept of Michael Crichton." Publishers Weekly 246, no. 44 (1999): S3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles author Michael Crichton. Best-selling books he has written; Remarks from his colleagues; Theme of his novel 'Timeline'; Why his books were adapted into film; His educational background. INSET: Crichton: the Audio Sphere. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...At the same time, it must be noted that Crichton is willing to stand, albeit in his own fashion, on the shoulders of authors past. The influence of, for instance, Conan Doyle upon him is palpable (Rising Sun; Jurassic Park; The Lost World), and Crichton isn't the first major writer to depict modern man traveling back to medieval times: Mark Twain did it in A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court...."
6055. Zavisca, Jane. "The Status of Cultural Omnivorism: A Case Study of Reading in Russia." Social Forces 84, no. 2 (2006): 1233-1255.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...Interviewees in all groups rarely criticized mystery reading. One exception is Boris, the elderly journalist introduced earlier. I ask him if he has a dacha (summerhouse). He replies: 'No, I'd rather read.' I follow up: 'Can't one read at a dacha?' He explains: 'I engage in serious reading. There are three kinds of reading: naive, distractive and artistic. I, for example, never read mysteries. I know about their existence. I know the classics, for example, Conan Doyle. But Marinina, Akunin, etc., their books can be taken in at a glance. Some modern literature should be read, but only if it appears in thick literary journals.'"

13 PASSING REFERENCES -- DOYLE -- SILVER BLAZE (7)

6056. Archer, David. "Who Threw That Snowball?" Science 302, no. 5646 (2003): 791-792.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Climatological article with a passing reference to Doyle. "The geological record of Earth's climate resembles Arthur Conan Doyle's curious incident of the dog that didn't bark in the night."
6057. Hughes, R. I. G. "Theoretical Practice: the Bohm-Pines Quartet." Perspectives on Science 14, no. 4 (2006): 457-524.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Quite rightly, philosophers of physics examine the theories of physics, theories like Quantum Mechanics, Quantum Field Theory, the Special and General Theories of Relativity, and Statistical Mechanics. Far fewer, however, examine how these theories are put to use; that is to say, little attention is paid to the practices of theoretical physicists. In the early 1950s David Bohm and David Pines published a sequence of four papers, collectively entitled, 'A Collective Description of Electron Interaction.' This essay uses that quartet as a case study in theoretical practice. In Part One of the essay, each of the Bohm-Pines papers is summarized, and within each summary an overview is given, framing a more detailed account. In Part Two theoretical practice is broken into six elements: (a) the use of models, (b) the use of theory, (c) modes of description and narrative, (d) the use of approximations, (e) experiment and theory, (f) the varied steps employed in a deduction. The last element is the largest, drawing as it does from the earlier ones. Part Three enlarges on the concept of 'theoretical practice,' and briefly outlines the subsequent theoretical advances which

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- rendered the practices of Bohm and Pines obsolete, if still respected. [Abstract from author] Includes a passing reference to Doyle (p. 495): "The fourth and last instance of an occasion when empirical evidence is at issue is an instance of a slightly peculiar kind. It occurs very early in P IV (626-27) where, as in the third instance, Pines is comparing the collective account of electron behaviour with the account given by the independent electron model. On these occasions Pines is in the position of one who needs to explain the curious incident of the dog in the night time. As readers of Conan Doyle will recall, what made the incident curious was that the dog did nothing in the night time. In like manner Pines must explain the fact that the collective behaviour that he and Bohm ascribe to metallic plasmas has very little effect on the plasma's properties and behaviour..."
6058. Johnson, Calvin H. "The Four Good Dissenters in Pollock." Journal of Supreme Court History 32, no. 2 (2007): 162-177.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The overall theme of this lecture series is great dissenters. This contribution to the series is on the dissenters in the 1895 case of Pollock v. Farmers' Trust & Loan Co. In Pollock, the Supreme Court decided, by a vote of 5-4, that the 1894 federal income tax was unconstitutional. The four dissenters--Justice Henry Brown of Michigan, Justice John Marshall Harlan of Kentucky, Justice Howell Jackson of Tennessee, and future Chief Justice Edward D. White--would have upheld the tax. [Abstract from author]. Includes a reference to Doyle and a mistaken attribution to one of the tales. "No one for or against the Constitution understood at the time that apportionment was a killing requirement. Why? That is a deep historical puzzle, akin to asking the question from Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The Hound of the Baskervilles: 'Why did the hound not bark?' Solution to the first puzzle leads immediately into the second: What was the rationale beneath apportionment in the original meaning of the Constitution? What was apportionment trying to accomplish?..."
6059. Powell Iii, Adam Clayton. "Hongkong blues. (Cover story)." Reason 29, no. 2 (1997): 52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the changes in Hong Kong's media in 1997. Snapshots from the March 19 issue of a leading English-language Censorship daily newspaper, the Hong Kong Standard; Front-page news on March 17 about Xinhua, the official Chinese news agency; Interpretation of one veteran Hong Kong journalist about the news. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...One veteran Hong Kong journalist provided the interpretation: Who needs official propaganda when China no longer has any critics in the Hong Kong media? He's right. The Hong Kong media have become, to echo Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the journalists who don't bark. One by one, the newspapers, magazines, and broadcasters have imposed self-censorship, deleting any language that could be construed as even mildly critical of any Chinese policy...."
6060. Rossum, Ralph A. "The Textualist Jurisprudence of Justice Scalia." Perspectives on Political Science 28, no. 1 (1999): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights the book 'A Matter of Interpretation: Federal Courts and the Law,' by Antonin Scalia. Scalia's criticism of the text of the United States Constitution; Features of the book; Two conflicting systems of rights created by the Constitution; Reason Scalia rejects reliance on legislative history or legislative intent. Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "...As the Court colorfully puts it, if the dog of legislative history has not barked, nothing of great significance can have transpired....We have forcefully and explicitly rejected the Conan Doyle approach [see Silver Blaze] to statutory construction in the past...."
6061. Scott, P. J. "Clinically Integrated Studies in Pathology: their Contribution to Atherosclerosis Research." Pediatric Pathology & Molecular Medicine 21, no. 3 (2002): 239-257.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article, prepared in honor of Daria Haust, reviews some features of research into atherosclerosis and coronary heart disease over the past 150 years, and beyond. Attention is drawn to problems arising when people of strong personality dominate a particular field of research to the exclusion of pertinent observations that do not fit neatly into their particular paradigm. As the world becomes more complex and, in theory at least, communications between scientists become easier, these dangers are not necessarily diminished. Clinical medicine in its broadest sense must continue to relate in the traditional way to the specialties grouped within pathology. Undergraduates must receive instruction concerning the importance of the historical record and an understanding of the nature of science, its strengths, limitations, and boundaries. [Abstract from author] Includes a passing reference to Doyle. "Arthur Conan Doyle, the creator of Sherlock Holmes, was medically qualified. He drew attention to the importance of 'the dog that did not bark.'..."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6062. Wilkinson, Lori. "Factors Influencing the Academic Success of Refugee Youth in Canada." Journal of Youth Studies 5, no. 2 (2002): 173-193.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This study examines the education experiences of refugee youth in Canada. Using data obtained from a random sample of 91 refugee youths between the ages of 15 and 21, plus data from 123 of their parents, the purpose of this study is to identify the factors influencing their educational success. The study finds that the majority of refugee youth are doing well in the education system, with about 50 per cent expecting to complete high school and to continue to post-secondary education. The remaining 30 per cent are experiencing some difficulty finishing high school and about 20 per cent do not expect to finish their secondary education. Ethnicity, refugee camp experience, appropriate grade placement on arrival, parents' health, urban residence, and number of months in Canada are correlated with academic performance. [Abstract from author] Includes a reference to Doyle (and a mistaken reference to the correct tale). "The remaining individual factors and family influences do not have statistically significant effects on the educational status of refugee youth. Borrowing a phrase from Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in (1902) The Hound of the Baskervilles, these could be considered to be the 'hounds that did not bark'. One example of a hound that did not bark is English language ability...."

13 PASSING REFERENCES -- HOLMES (1224)

6063. "32-year index, part 1: Articles and notes." Studies in Short Fiction 32, no. 4 (1995): 521.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an index of articles and notes, arranged alphabetically by literary subject and author name, published in 'Studies in Short Fiction' from 1963 to 1995. Includes entry for: Hall, Jasmine Yong. "Ordering the Sensational: Sherlock Holmes and the Female Gothic." 28: 295-303.

6064. "35-Year Index, Part 1: Articles and Notes." Studies in Short Fiction 36, no. 1 (1999): 1-110.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The section presents an index of articles and notes published in the Studies in Short Fiction since 1964. Includes entries under: Hall, Jasmine Yong. "Ordering the Sensational: Sherlock Holmes and the Female Gothic." 28: 295-303; and "hook" reviews under Doyle.

6065. "72nd Syndicate Directory Section." Editor & Publisher 130, no. 31 (1997): 17S.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a directory of syndicates in the United States. Includes The Games Afoot-Sherlock Holmes Crime Scene Chronicles -- Jack Harris/Howard Bender; Modern Sherlock Holmes (Mystery) -- J. Sherrod.

6066. "1995 Study Tour Roundup." American Libraries 26, no. 3 (1995): 254.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Lists several study tours which may be of interest to librarians and educators. One tour includes a reference to Holmes. "British Myth and Mystery Tour. Participants will follow the trail of Sherlock Holmes, visit London's Old Bailey, and learn about some of the myths and legends of King Arthur."

6067. "Abstracts of the AMEE Conference, Vienna, Austria, 31 August to 3 September 1997, part 1." Medical teacher 20, no. 1 (1998): 49-65.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Part I. Presents the abstracts from the Association for Medical Education in Europe (AMEE) conference held in Vienna, Austria, from August 31 to September 3, 1997. Includes a passing reference to Holmes in the abstract for "Teaching Clinical Decision Making." "...There are masters who can combine these techniques to achieve success in clinical decision making. The best master to study is Sherlock Holmes. When examined critically, his methodologies mimic closely those of very good educators. An illustrative case will be presented."

6068. "All I want for Christmas." Newsweek 126, no. 23 (1995): 78.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a gift guide of music, books and other items for Christmas 1995. Photo caption reference to Rathbone as Holmes along with another Holmes reference. "Men who like their mayhem sedate and their detectives celibate will like Baker Street Studies (Otto Penzler. $8), first published in 1934: another anthology of gloriously stodgy essays in the Otto Penzler Sherlock Holmes Library. One essay defends

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Holmes against imputations of misogyny, and blames the sexless sleuth's cocaine habit on "frustrated desire." We've got our doubts: seems to us they could say the same thing about guys who watch eight hours of football every Sunday. Normal guys."

6069. "An appetising spread." Economist 389, no. 8606 (2008): 89-89.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article examines the market for corporate bonds. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Sherlock Holmes might have called it 'the curious case of the corporate-bond market'. Most commentators agree that bonds issued by companies offer spreads over treasuries that more than compensate for the risk that the issuer might default. But few investors are tempted to buy...."

6070. "Around the State." Texas Monthly 32, no. 12 (2004): 34-58.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the schedule of art and sports events in Texas from November 2004 to January 2005. Passing reference to Sherlock Holmes in the listing for the Houston Center for Photography show "Identifying Marks." Various photographers "play Sherlock Holmes with their camera, investigating the subjects on the other side of the lens."

6071. "As DVD approaches, video CD questions and actions grow." CD-ROM Professional 9, no. 1 (1996): 15.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports that Hollywood Select has released a line of MPEG-1 CD-ROMs featuring classic Hollywood films, cartoons and documentaries. Holmes is mentioned, but no specific titles given.

6072. "Ask Mary." Instructor 111, no. 1 (2001): 18.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Answers some queries on teaching in the United States as of August 2001. Passing reference to Holmes. "More advanced students can read Nancy Drew, or even Sherlock Holmes."

6073. "Biennial Spring Conference." Australasian Journal of Dermatology 48, no. (2007): A69-A139.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents abstracts related to dermatology. Includes "Sherlock Holmes in contact dermatitis" by A. Goossens, Contact Allergy Unit, Department of Dermatology, University Hospital, Katholieke Universiteit Leuven, Belgium.

6074. "Book & tape review." Total Health 20, no. 5 (1998): 13.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the compact-disc (CD) 'Junk Food Nation,' written, directed and produced by Robert Crayhon. Includes a reference to Holmes. "Crayhon and company regale listeners with sharp routines like the Sherlock-Holmes-talkalike in 'Murder by Refined Food'..."

6075. "A book in a day." Economist 369, no. 8355 (2003): 120-121.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article describes a workshop conducted by Joe DiVanna, a consultant, with the purpose of writing a book in a day. Reference to Holmes. "Strategic Thinking", with the subtitle "So what can you do for me this quarter?", will be published by Palgrave Macmillan in March. Jacky Kippenberger, the editor for business- and management-research books, says the result is "very accessible". It will sell for GBP 50 with an initial print run of 500. "It's part of my list of monographs," she says. Sherlock Holmes wrote monographs, which he researched himself, on subjects such as tobacco ash, and the different types of mud on people's shoes. Mr DiVanna completed a monograph which began as the work of many hands. But did it really finish that way?"

6076. "Britain honors Sherlock Holmes." Xinhua News Agency - CEIS, October 17, 2002: 1.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The great fictional detective Sherlock Holmes received a posthumous honorary fellowship on Wednesday from Britain's Royal Society of Chemistry. The honor marks the centenary of Holmes' most celebrated case, The Hound of the Baskervilles. The Royal Society of Chemistry is the United Kingdom's professional body for chemical scientists. Usually such honorary fellowships are reserved for Nobel Laureates and other distinguished academics, and industrialists. Holmes is the first fictional character to be awarded the fellowship...."

6077. "Buy a Top Book for Only GBP3." Birmingham Evening Mail, February 18, 2005: 32.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Sherlock Holmes was introduced in 1887's A Study in Scarlet and and his

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

popularity grew with each new story. The Hound of the Baskervilles is just the latest of our Great Family Reads. Future titles include Hans Christian Anderson's charming Fairy Tales and The Rainbow by DH Lawrence."

6078. "Cars of the Future." Professional safety 53, no. 12 (2008): 72-72.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The focuses on the initiatives of several auto manufacturers to create cars of the future. Includes a quote from Holmes along with a cameo illustration of the great detective. "When you have eliminated the impossible, whatever remains, however improbable, must be the truth."
6079. "Character Shows Its True Colors." Psychology Today 38, no. 2 (2005): 62-63.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on personality traits that are expressed either as personality styles or as personality disorders. Paranoid; Borderline; Avoidant. Sherlock Holmes listed under the schizoid trait.
6080. "Chinese chequers." Canada & the World Backgrounder 61, no. 4 (1996): 23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on China's foreign relations with the United States, with a passing reference to Holmes. "The world of international diplomacy can sometimes make a Sherlock Holmes plot look transparent and easy to solve."
6081. "Classification of Syndicated Features by Subject Matter." Editor & Publisher 136, no. 29 (2003): 84S.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a classification of syndicated features by subject matter. Lists Bender, Howard Games Afoot, The-Sherlock Holmes Crime Scene Chronicles, Harris, Jack Games Afoot. The-Sherlock Holmes Crime Scene Chronicles and Summer, E. Modern Sherlock Holmes (Mystery)
6082. "Classification of syndicated features by subject matter." Editor & Publisher 132, no. 32 (1999): 103S.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents newspaper syndicated features classified by subject matter. Includes Modern Sherlock Holmes (Mystery)--J. Sherrod.
6083. "Classification of syndicated features by subject matter." Editor & Publisher 131, no. 31 (1998): 102S.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Lists by-lined syndicated features by subject matter. Includes The Games Afoot, The-Sherlock Holmes Crime Scene Chronicles -- Jack Harris/Howard Bender; Modern Sherlock Holmes (Mystery)--J. Sherrod.
6084. "Classifications of syndicated features by subject matter." Editor & Publisher 129, no. 31 (1996): 101S.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Lists syndicated newspaper features by subject matter. Includes advice columns; Astrology; Automotive; Beauty; Books; Business; Children's features; Comics; Commentary; Consumerism; Editorial art; Education; Entertainment; Family; Fashion; Food and wine; Health; Hobbies; Legal.
6085. "Classifications of syndicated features by subject matter." Editor & Publisher 128, no. 30 (1995): 119S.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a listing of syndicated features in the United States classified by subject matter. Includes frequency; Size of feature; How feature is furnished.
6086. "A Concept-Structured Life." Russian Social Science Review 47, no. 2 (2006): 79-108.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reference to genre of "comic" or ironic detective stories and Sherlock Holmes Magazine awarding "prestigious annual prizes in three categories, that being one of them."
6087. "A Concept-Structured Life." Russian Studies in Literature 41, no. 4 (2005): 66-95.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reference to genre of "comic" or ironic detective stories and Sherlock Holmes Magazine awarding "prestigious annual prizes in three categories, that being one of them."
6088. "Crime solvers challenged at Whodunnit?". The Press (Christchurch, New Zealand), April 19, 2001: 9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Whodunnit? gives visitors the opportunity to live out their favourite Sherlock Holmes fantasies as they try to solve a murder mystery. A victim, a knife, and three suspects provide the main clues."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6089. "Current Wisdom." American Spectator 37, no. 4 (2004): 68-69.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents summaries of articles published in "The New York Review (NYR) of Books" periodical in the U.S. from February 2004 to April 2004. Reference to Holmes in the March 25, 2004 New York Review of Books. From the notes: "An engage reviewer for the incomparable NYR contemplates two tomes devoted to poofter ideology and identifies one of the hitherto unrecognized giants of the 19th century erotic ghetto, Sherlock Holmes!... Art, aestheticism, and homosexuality made a rich trio in the nineteenth century, with mystery and detection as their friends and allies. 'Like a true Decadent,' writes Robb, Holmes enjoys 'introspective' German music and listens to it with 'languid, dreamy eyes.'... 'Art for art's sake' is one of his mottoes--applied, not to poetry, but to the incongruously useful art of criminal detection...."
6090. "A Dangerous Affair." Publishers Weekly 255, no. 48 (2008): 31-31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "A Dangerous Affair," by Caro Peacock. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Liberty Lane returns in Peacock's newest Victorian London melodrama....The mystery flows smoothly, with well-placed red herrings, excellent reveals and pleasing surprises. Readers should look forward to their next meeting with Liberty and her friends, particularly gruff, wise groom Amos, the Watson to Liberty's would-be Sherlock Holmes."
6091. "Deaths of Fellows." Astronomy & Geophysics 48, no. 6 (2007): 6.37-6.38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article lists the names of Royal Astronomical Society Fellows who died from March 2006 to July 24, 2007 which includes Bernard Pagel (and a passing reference to Holmes). "...He will be remembered with great affection by several generations of colleagues and students, particularly for the beady-eyed look over his pipe and the quick and brilliant intelligence that would put even one of his heroes, Sherlock Holmes, to shame."
6092. "Delivering a healthy dose of health education: An interview with Betsy Aumiller." Curriculum Review 45, no. 8 (2006): 14-15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An interview with Betsy Aumiller, director of adult education and e-learning at the Susan P. Byrnes Health Education Center, which provides on-site health education for schools in central and southern Pennsylvania and northern Maryland. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...We wanted to create a superhero group of senses. Because that was so well-received, we worked with our animation company to come up with characters for each of the five senses. For the other two kits, we just brainstormed. We have a Sherlock Holmes theme in Tobacco and Inhalants, and in Adolescence we have the Coach and Gang...."
6093. "Denny's Challenges a 'Real' Breakfast Straw Man and Loses." Brandweek 49, no. 6 (2008): 21-21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The author discusses a television advertisement from the chain restaurant Denny's. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The print and in-store promotion delivers the 'Real breakfast 24/7' tagline but in equally tired fashion. A stanchion sign gives 'clues' to spotting a tare breakfast complete with a photo of 'ye ole Sherlock Holmes spy cap....'" 6094. "A dialectic of didactics." South African Journal of Science 91, no. 8 (1995): 390.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a dialogue regarding academic staff development, and includes one line with Holmes reference. "But this is hard: what Sherlock Holmes would class as a problem requiring a three-cigar solution."
6095. "DVM duties conflict in ownership case." DVM: The Newsmagazine of Veterinary Medicine 35, no. 4 (2004): 40-41.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Raises the ethical issue and the veterinarian's duty associated with a case where a client adopts a stray pet that is microchipped by its previous owner. Debate on the course of action that the DVM should take when faced with dual ownership of a pet; Highlights of a case faced by Melinda Striyle. Passing reference to Sherlock Holmes by Dr. Warren Kaplan.
6096. "Elementary, My Dear Watson." Environment 42, no. 10 (2000): 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on a report regarding premature deaths caused by motor vehicle emissions

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- in London, England according to the National Health Service of Great Britain. Includes a reference to Holmes. "As any mystery reader can tell you, London's famous fog has concealed many a foul deed. Now, however, it is becoming a sinister force in a way never envisioned by Sherlock Holmes."
6097. "Elementary: Science Group Honours Sherlock Holmes." Birmingham Post, October 17, 2002: 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Victorian supersleuth Sherlock Holmes has become the first fictional character to be granted an honorary fellowship by Britain's prestigious Royal Society of Chemistry, for bringing scientific methods into detective work."
6098. "Encourage dramatic play with a prop box activity." Curriculum Review 42, no. 4 (2002): 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on activities to encourage the imagination of young children from the book 'Prop Box Play: 50 Themes to Inspire Dramatic Play.' In the "Detective Prop Box" a "Sherlock Holmes pipe" is listed as an additional prop.
6099. "Entertainment king." Architecture 86, no. 9 (1997): 73.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an interview with entertainment architect David Rockwell, including a passing reference to Holmes. "I worked for Roger Morgan, a lighting designer and theater consultant while he was doing a show called 'Crucible of Blood,' which is a Sherlock Holmes piece...."
6100. "Events." Nation 265, no. 17 (1997): 33-33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents information on various events that took place in the U.S. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Bidart insists: 'Sherlock Holmes was somebody or something before cracking its first case but not Sherlock Holmes, act is the cracked mirror not only of motive but self, no other way, tiny mirror that fails to focus in small the whole of the great room.'..."
6101. "Examination procedure, examination method, and examination principle." Apmis 112, no. s117 (2004): 57-59.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses and defines the concepts of examination procedure, examination method and examination principle. Definitions of principle of measurement, method of measurement and measurement procedure; Relations between the concepts defined. Opening quote from CROO at head of article: "You know my methods, Watson."
6102. "Exploring the far distant past." South African Journal of Science 93, no. 10 (1997): 485.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features the Raman spectrograph facility at the physics department of the University of Witwatersrand in South Africa, with a passing reference to Holmes. "Until fairly recently, an understanding of geological history was, to a large extent, based on observation of rock formations, analysis of rock chemistry, Sherlock Holmes-like deduction, and a touch of guesswork."
6103. "Fantastic Voyages." Discover 19, no. 12 (1998): 62.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Lists books that inspired gifted science thinkers such as author Arthur Clarke and virtual-reality visionary Jaron Lanier. Includes a reference to Holmes by Marc Hauser, psychologist and anthropologist at Harvard.
6104. "Features by Author, Artist." Editor & Publisher 136, no. 29 (2003): 71S.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a list of authors of syndicated articles and columns in the U.S. Lists Bender, Howard Games Afoot, The-Sherlock Holmes Crime Scene Chronicles, Harris, Jack Games Afoot. The-Sherlock Holmes Crime Scene Chronicles and Summer, E. Modern Sherlock Holmes (Mystery)
6105. "Features by authors, artists." Editor & Publisher 132, no. 32 (1999): 87S.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents newspaper syndicated features by authors and artists. Includes The Games Afoot, Sherlock Holmes Crime Scene Chronicles--Jack Harris/Howard Bender and Modern Sherlock Holmes (Mystery)--J. Sherrod.
6106. "Features by authors, artists." Editor & Publisher 131, no. 31 (1998): 74S.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Lists authors and artists of syndicated features. Includes The Games Afoot, The-

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Sherlock Holmes Crime Scene Chronicles -- Jack Harris/Howard Bender; Modern Sherlock Holmes (Mystery)--J. Sherrod.

6107. "Features by Title." Editor & Publisher 136, no. 29 (2003): 38S.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a list of syndicated articles and columns in the U.S. as of August 2003. Lists Games Afoot, The-Sherlock Holmes Crime Scene Chronicles and Modern Sherlock Holmes (Mystery) Summer, E.
6108. "Feet in the trough." Economist 381, no. 8509 (2006): 88-90.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The article discusses the history, merits, and procedures of various ancient cultures preservation methods of meat. The technique of salting and drying meat predates the Romans (who may have learnt it from the Gauls and Celts), and existed in cultures in the Far East who had no direct contact with Rome. The article points out that tracing the history of the methods of salting and curing meats means tracing the history of man as carnivore." Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Listen in on the reunion between two former shipmates--a wealthy reformed criminal and a poor, bitter shipmate--in the Sherlock Holmes thriller 'The Gloria Scott': 'Why, it's 30 year and more since I saw you last,' sneers Hudson, the mate, strolling onto the expansive estate of his old rival. 'Here you are in your house, and me still picking my salt meat out of the harness cask.'" 6109. "A few ribs short of a picnic." Economist 330, no. 7849 (1994): 91-92.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'The Man In the Ice,' by Konrad Spindler with a passing reference to Holmes. "Sherlock Holmes could not have asked for a better bunch of clues."
6110. "Fiction." Library Media Connection 22, no. 3 (2003): 50.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents description of various books based on child fiction. Under "Graphic Books" listing is one for Ruse. "Imagine a detective with skills of observation and insight equal to Sherlock Holmes and a partner much more attractive and clever than Watson (and a bit more magical, as well), up against enemies with more than a little supernatural influence, in a Victorian setting that is unsettling like, yet not like, London; and you have Ruse."
6111. "Fish and chips, Monty Python and Sherlock join icons of England." Daily Post (Liverpool), August 1, 2006: 22.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Fish and chips, the Oxford English Dictionary and the pint have joined Monty Python and Robin Hood as 'icons' of England. The newest set of national treasures, which also include Sherlock Holmes and the bowler hat, were drawn up by experts and voted for by the public as part of the Icons - A Portrait of England collection....The vote is part of the Icons project, which aims to encourage people to explore and celebrate the country's cultural treasures online and in the real world. People can view the unveiled icons online at www.ICONS.org.uk" 6112. "Fool's mate." Economist 343, no. 8015 (1997): 18-18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on the 1997 chess match between world champion Garry Kasparov and Deep Blue, a computer built by International Business Machines Corp. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "There is certainly room, as Sherlock Holmes observed to his biographer, for scheming in chess."
6113. "Francis Crick." Economist 372, no. 8387 (2004): 71-71.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article profiles the life and work of scientist and DNA research pioneer Francis Crick, who died on July 28th, 2004. Passing reference to Holmes: "Ultimately, however, as Sherlock Holmes observed, you need data to test a hypothesis. You cannot make bricks without straw. And in the case of DNA, that straw was X-ray photographs."
6114. "From Al-Afghānāi to Bin Laden." Interventions: The International Journal of Postcolonial Studies 4, no. 1 (2002): 1-6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on resentments and anticolonial movements against western nations. Passing reference to Holmes. "Sherlock Holmes' Dr. Watson was wounded but rescued from 'the hands of the murderous Ghazis' at the battle of Maiwand in the course of the Second."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6115. "From Universal Studios Home Entertainment: Five Feature-Length Installments of the Genre-Busting TV Crime Series Starring Primetime Emmy(R) Winner Peter Falk, 'Columbo Mystery Movie Collection 1989'; An All-New Collection Featuring TV's Most Disarming Detective Comes to DVD April 24, 2007." PR Newswire, no. (2007).
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // With his perpetually disheveled attire and trademark stubby cigar, Lt. [Columbo] of the LAPD hunts down some of the city's most resourceful criminals in this all-new DVD collection of movies from 1989.... After lulling suspects into a false sense of security, the shambling Sherlock closes in with razor sharp insights that prove that appearances can be deceiving...."
6116. "Get away-with murder." Travel Weekly: The Choice of Travel Professionals (Reed), no. 1768 (2005): 85.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article informs about two nights of murder mystery -- one with a Sherlock Holmes theme and the other featuring Chicago gangsters -- left travel agents well and truly stumped at hospitality industry firm Cendant Vacation Rental Group's event, held to present the group's fourth annual awards.
6117. "Global Briefs." American Libraries 33, no. 7 (2002): 33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Offers world library news for August 2002. Resolution to the theft of materials from the locked abbey library at Mont Sainte-Odile near Saverne, France, which had a secret passageway. "How did the suspect discover the secret passage? Apparently he had read about the library in a rare journal he found in the Strasbourg University library. Charles Dass, a former director of the abbey library, told the Associated Press May 24, 'Very few people knew of the passage. It was a real enigma. Sherlock Holmes would have torn his hair out.'" 6118. "The Grand Bard goes online." Economist 373, no. 8406 (2004): 90-90.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article focuses on the Cornish language. Passing reference to Holmes: "Sherlock Holmes, the fictional detective, was fascinated by the language, believing (wrongly) that it was a legacy of Phoenician tin-traders."
6119. "The Great Indoors and Sherlock Holmes." The Irish Times, February 15, 1997: 15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A change: from the great out doors of yesterday, and fishing for trout, to one of the greatest indoors men of all: Sherlock Holmes. A turnout of books brought to the surface three heavy volumes, bound copies of the Strand Magazine of over a century ago. Six months of the magazine per volume; blue hard cover, January to June 1893, in which are six of Conan Doyle's famous short stories about the detective. The previous owner bought these three at sixpence apiece from sixty years ago...."
6120. "Grounds." Starr Report: Independent Counsel's Report to the United States House of Representatives, no. (1998): 134.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information obtained by the Office of the Independent Council of the United States which may provide grounds for the impeachment of President Bill Clinton. Note 181 includes a Holmes reference. "These included a Sherlock Holmes game sometime after Christmas 1996..."
6121. "Healthcare industry symptoms indicate dealmaking overdose." Modern healthcare 28, no. 32 (1998): 42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Editorial. Comments on the mergers of healthcare companies. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "If Buffett follows the health care industry, he must be as suspicious as Sherlock Holmes at a murder scene...."
6122. "History in the Making. (Cover story)." University Business 11, no. 6 (2008): 58-62.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Finding the right materials for a historic building can turn project team members into detectives. Here's where project teams at four institutions, searching a la Sherlock Holmes, had to go:..."
6123. "History of Civilization, Archaeology, Biography." Reference & Research Book News 20, no. 4 (2005): 31-33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents a list of books on the history of civilization, archaeology,

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

biography. The list includes "European Notebooks: New Societies and Old Politics 1954-1985," by Francois Bondy, a collection of essays that include observations on Sherlock Holmes and socialist realism. (Transaction Publishers, 2005) 364p. ISBN 0-7658-0271-6

6124. "Hot Deals." Publishers Weekly 249, no. 43 (2002): 14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents updates on several deals between authors and publishers, as of October 28, 2002. Neil Gaiman at HarperCollins and Bloomsbury. Also note on Michael Capuzzo's The Arms of Angels. "The new book is a true tale about a mysterious group of skilled detectives who use their skills to solve only the most despicable of crimes, led by a figure who seems to be a contemporary Sherlock Holmes."
6125. "In Brief: New Fellow." Chemical & Engineering News 80, no. 44 (2002): 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the grant of an honorary fellowship award upon the fictitious [sic] character in mystery films and stories, Sherlock Holmes. Use of chemical science for solving detective mysteries; Details about the award.
6126. "Integrated activities for a who-dun-it unit." Teaching PreK-8 26, no. 8 (1996): 66.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the teaching unit created by the students of Stamford, Connecticut's Rogers Elementary Magnet School. Suggestion of possible themes; election of 33 do-able activities; Activities for fingerprinting and playing detectives. Passing Holmes reference. "Make detective hats from felt or paper. Use Sherlock Holmes' cap as a model."
6127. "It's not nice to fool Father Time." Electronic Media 20, no. 46 (2001): 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Editorial. Comments on the fraud regarding the television coverage of KDKA TV station of a live Pittsburgh Steelers game broadcast in the United States, with a passing Holmes reference. "A local newspaper columnist happened to be listening to the game on the radio while watching the 'live' TV picture on KDKA and noticed that the video was running behind the audio. It didn't take Sherlock Holmes to deduce that something was amiss."
6128. "It's official: fish and chips are a national treasure." Birmingham Post, August 1, 2006: 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Fish and chips, the Oxford English Dictionary, the pint and The Archers have joined off-beat comedians Monty Python and the mythical Robin Hood as 'icons' of England. The newest set of national treasures, which also include Sherlock Holmes and the bowler hat, were drawn up by experts and voted for by the public as part of the Icons - A Portrait of England collection...."
6129. "Jazz up your class with a yearlong theme: an interview with Ann Litzler Coyne." Curriculum Review 41, no. 5 (2002): 14-15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // In an interview, Ann Litzler Coyne, a teacher and the author of Creating A Year Long Theme: A Teacher's Journey, discusses the use of a yearlong theme in the classroom. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...The next year, when I moved from Illinois to Ohio and taught in a single-age classroom, I had a mystery theme, and that was neat. I had big magnifying glasses and Sherlock Holmes--it was the mystery of learning. So every topic we covered, there was some sort of mystery behind it. For instance, we had to study the skeletal system. So for the mystery, I came in with a mysterious bone and we explored that...."
6130. "JCE at NSTA 2004." Journal of chemical education 81, no. 6 (2004): 790.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // JCE staff researchers Diana Mason, Erica Jacobsen, Kevin Cunningham, Faith Yarberry and Christina Forsbach were on hand on April 1, 2004 to April 4, 2004 at the NSTA 2004 National Convention in Atlanta to speak to attendees about benefits of becoming a journal subscriber. Researchers spoke to several hundred educators as they stopped by the JCE booth on their trek through the multiple football field sized exhibit hall. NSTA was one of the first chances to see and purchase JCE's most recent reprint "The Chemical Adventures of Sherlock Holmes." Many teachers were happy to see a collection of chemistry and forensics based stories to share with students.
6131. "JCE Online Store Grand Opening." Journal of chemical education 82, no. 1 (2005): 176-176.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reports on the opening of Journal of Chemical Education (JCE) Online Store, for buying JCE products online. At the convenience of a desktop one can purchase subscription renewals and software. Products currently available from the JCE Online Store are journal subscriptions, JCE Software CD-ROMs, videotapes, and videodiscs, and the JCE Books Chemical Adventures of Sherlock Holmes and TA Handbook. The JCE Online Store uses open source e-commerce software and VeriSign security technology so one can be assured that online transactions are safe and secure. Future plans for the JCE Online Store include the ability to purchase and immediately download selected JCE Software titles.

6132. "Jottings by Saquarrah." Medical teacher 28, no. 8 (2006): 753-754.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article provides information on several publications related to medical education. It includes "Getting Education Right: First Step in Quality Assurance for Tutors and Students," a handbook which developed for higher education tutors in the countries, by Imelda Bates, Helen Nabwera and Sue Purnell, "Evidence-Based Medicine in Sherlock Holmes' Footsteps," an introduction to EBM for medical students and other healthcare professionals, by Jorgen Nordenstorm, and "Medical Hypothesis," an editorial edition by Bruce Charlton.

6133. "The journal of Lynton Charles MP." New Statesman 127, no. 4375 (1998): 13.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Opinion. Presents the author's views on the politics in Great Britain. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "So here I am, dressed in a borrowed Barbour, a deerstalker and large, sensible shoes, looking like a cross between William Hague and Sherlock Holmes...."

6134. "Justice Blackmun and the Little People." Human Life Review 30, no. 3 (2004): 86-127.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles the late Harry A. Blackmun, a Supreme Court justice of the U.S. Description of his personality and character; Discussion of his family and career background; Views of people regarding him and his work. Passing reference to Holmes. "While often unavailable to family because of his workaholic ways, Blackmun was a good father when he was paying attention to that role. His daughter Nancy recalled that when she was in the eight grade, 'a difficult year for most new teenagers, he smoothed my path by reading me Sherlock Holmes and helping me prepare for, of all things, home economics quizzes. We got an A, of course.'"

6135. "King William's College Quiz Pupils of King William's College, Isle of Man, had just one hour to complete the general knowledge paper, and will resit it next term to improve their marks. Answers in January." The Guardian (Manchester), December 24, 1994: Guardian Weekend Page.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Holmes mentioned as part of quiz.

6136. "Leaves from the Note-Book of a New York Detective: The Private Records of J.B." Publishers Weekly 255, no. 33 (2008): 48-48.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Leaves From the Note-Book of a New York Detective: The Private Records of J. B.," by John Babbington Williams. "First published in 1865, this story collection featuring New York City private detective James Brampton will intrigue Sherlock Holmes fans, given the number of eerie parallels between the two characters. For example, Brampton remarks, 'It is the observation of small things that makes a good detective, for it is often the most trivial circumstance which supplies the first link in the chain,' a comment quite similar to one of Holmes's...."

6137. "Letters from Readers." Commentary 112, no. 1 (2001): 3.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents several letters to the editor regarding socio-economic and political events around the world as of July 2001. Passing reference to Holmes in one letter. "A bit more Sherlock Holmes effort on Mr. Halkin's part and he could have discovered that, too."

6138. "Mahathir's high hopes." Economist 336, no. 7922 (1995): 30-31.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Looks at the planned completion of the Petronas Tower in Kuala Lumpur, a monument to industrialization and growth in Malaysia. Views of Mahathir Mohamad, the Malaysian prime minister, with a Holmes reference. "Dr Mahathir is an intellectual, still a rarity in Malaysia. He is a solver of problems: for relaxation he likes to read Sherlock Holmes stories...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6139. "McCormick's Quick Takes on Biographies." U.S.Catholic 65, no. 4 (2000): 38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on four books on biographies, including 'The Professor and the Madman,' by Simon Winchester, with a passing reference to Holmes. "Simon Winchester's fascinating account of Professor James Murray and Dr. William Chester Minor has all the elements of a Sherlock Holmes adventure."
6140. "Miscellany." Writer 117, no. 4 (2004): 8-10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features several writers and the factors that they consider in making a good story. Reason behind the success of Mary Higgins Clark... Passing reference to Holmes. "When I was 15, I was picking out clothes that I would wear when I became a successful writer," Mary Higgins Clark says. Often dubbed the "queen of suspense," she offers this tip for writers who hope to become successful: "Turn around, look at your shelves and ask yourself, 'What do I like to read?' I'd started with Nancy Drew. I remember reading The Bobbsey Twins when I was 6. Then I went on to Agatha Christie, of course, and Sherlock Holmes, and I was always trying to keep up with the author."
6141. "Mixed company." New Yorker 70, no. 42 (1994): 42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Criticizes the article from the 'Times Book Review' entitled 'The Joy of Compulsion' evaluating the tones of various specialties of celebrities. Writer Anne Perry on Sherlock Holmes; Museum director Thomas Hoving on collectors; Claus von Bulow on Newport mansions.
6142. "Multimedia source guide." T H E Journal 22, no. 10 (1995): 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Offers a listing of multimedia sources for 1995-96. Computers; CD-ROM drives; Presentation Devices; Video & graphics devices; Audio products; Networks; Mass storage devices; Distributors and vendors. Includes entry for Creative Multimedia Corp. "Sherlock Holmes on Disc."
6143. "Mummies and Rocket Ships Blast Off for Reading." American Libraries 28, no. 8 (1997): 23-23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Shows participants in summer 1997 reading programs at several public libraries. Includes a photo caption with reference to Holmes. "A Sherlock Holmes exhibit attracted Grace Kim and Jolina Warren to Fullerton (Calif.) Public Library's 'Library Detectives, Inc.'" 6144. "The New New Media." New Republic 239, no. 12 (2008): 45-47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The Future of the Internet (And How to Stop It)" by Jonathan Zittrain. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...During this decade, the fates of the Internet and the media industries have become as linked as Sherlock Holmes and Professor Moriarty during their Swiss hike. The two industries are in the midst of an epic struggle between two competing economic systems that are almost as different as communism and capitalism...."
6145. "New products." Telephony 227, no. 19 (1994): 42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Introduces information and communications equipments and products in the United States. Includes DominoLAN and DominoWAN network analyzers from Wander and Goltermann; Testing equipment for digital cellular telephones from IFR Systems Incorporated; Fiber optic temperature sensor from Photonic Power Systems Incorporated; Sherlock 54770 WAN monitor and protocol analyzer from International Data Sciences Incorporated.
6146. "New Sherlock software is elementary." Birmingham Post, July 3, 2003: 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Detectives who are stumped by a murder case could soon get help from a software Sherlock Holmes. Researchers in Scotland have programmed a computer to investigate suspicious deaths. Like Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's famous Victorian sleuth, the software uses lateral thinking to solve mysteries. It is specifically designed to avoid obvious lines of inquiry and make the kinds of connections that so amazed Holmes's assistant Dr Watson...."
6147. "News Digests." Nation's Restaurant News 39, no. 3 (2005): 14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses news related to restaurant industry in the United States. Big

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Boy Restaurants in Michigan and Ohio launched a "Three-Point Play" promotion, which features a meal comprising three of the chain's signature products; A chain of 10 Sherlock Holmes-theme restaurants in Texas launched a Mardi Gras-theme promotion, which will culminate in what they bill as a "festive shopping-cart parade"; Finz seafood restaurant joined with a local beauty spa in a cross-promotion designed to generate business for both operations during the sluggish winter months in this tourist town.

6148. "Nicos Sampson." Economist 359, no. 8222 (2001): 87-87.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an obituary of Nicos Sampson, the former president of Cyprus, who died on May 9, 2001. His work as photographer and reporter for the 'Cyprus Times,' and ties with EOKA, a militant group which demanded union of Cyprus with Greece. With a passing reference to Holmes. "It did not take a Sherlock Holmes in the British security forces to suspect that Mr Sampson was a member of EOKA and involved in the killings."

6149. "No Man Is An Island: The Axiom of Subjectivity." Journal of Consciousness Studies 13, no. 5 (2006): 17-42.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Western thought since the seventeenth century has been dominated by methodological solipsism (Krieger, 1991). The famous sound-bite of Rene Descartes 'cogito, ergo sum': 'I think, therefore I am', became the starting point for most discourse on the nature of things. This dictum does not advocate idealism. It does not assert that everything is necessarily a construct of the human mind. But it assumes that the world of things and beings is surveyed and interpreted from the point of view of a single individual. Nowhere is this stance more entrenched than in the philosophy of science. To a remarkable degree the scientist is represented as studying the natural world as if alone in it, served only by mindless assistants who might as well be replaced by machines. Scientific theories are presented as systems of thought conjured up and tested by that same individual in a further series of single-headed operations. Research results are formulated and treated philosophically as the independent findings of lone explorers, each reporting the evidence of their own eyes and their rational inferences concerning the hidden mechanisms by which these personal percepts might be generated. Our epistemological role models are Robinson Crusoe and Sherlock Holmes, self-sufficient intellectuals to whom their human companions, Friday and Watson, are mere stooges." [Abstract from Author]

6150. "Nuclear diaper." Modern healthcare 37, no. 32 (2007): 36-36.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "The radioactive diaper tipped them off. It sounds like the start of a twisted thriller, but truth is stranger than fiction sometimes, especially at the troubled Martin Luther King Jr.-Harbor Hospital in Los Angeles. The adult diaper, used by an intensive-care patient in a routine test, set off a radiation-detection alarm at a nearby recycling and waste transfer facility in July, alerting the county Public Health Department to the illegal dumping. Tracing the offending diaper back to the hospital didn't take Sherlock Holmes. Whoever disposed of it threw personal patient information into the same trash bag...."

6151. "One German, at least, is retiring." Economist 346, no. 8049 (1998): 48-48.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports that the German television program 'Derrick' will end in September of 1998. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "The hero, played by Horst Tappert, now 74, rarely does anything exciting, like pulling a trigger. Much of the time he looks pensively sorrowful like a basset-hound denied a bone. Batman is niftier, Sherlock Holmes cleverer, by far."

6152. "Online." Chronicle of Higher Education 48, no. 40 (2002): A29.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the online-writing project of Nottingham Trent University in England. Notes that "participants who want more involvement can enter the story by adopting characters from English history and literature, such as Richard the Lion-Hearted and Sherlock Holmes."

6153. "Part III. Nature of Archaeology." Acta Archaeologica 72, no. 1 (2001): 32.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the methodological nature of archaeology. Detective activities performed by archaeology. Passing reference to Holmes. "Like the disciples of Sherlock Holmes he seeks to recover the activities of men in past time from clues which compensate for their incomplete and often vestigial character by abundance and diversity." (p.40)

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6154. "Pluck a flamingo." Economist 389, no. 8611 (2008): 140-142.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // In this article the author discusses cookbooks, noting that a significant number are published every year. A variety of issues are discussed including the history of cookbooks the domestic management taught by Isabella Beeton in 19th century Great Britain and the impact of Fannie Farmer on American cookery. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Although the recipes in one book are often similar to those in another, their presentation varies wildly. There are Lutheran cookbooks, Wiccan cookbooks, feminist vegetarian cookbooks ('The Political Palate') and satirical cookbooks. There are instructions on cooking the food that Jane Austen, Sherlock Holmes and Thomas Jefferson might have eaten...."
6155. "Poetics of Clay." Ceramics Monthly 50, no. 1 (2002): 45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the 'Poetics of Clay' exhibition held at the Philadelphia Art Alliance in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Passing reference to Holmes with the following observation: "'Poetics of Clay' related to the mnemonic role that places and images serve, according to Drutt English. 'It connected strongly to the art of memory as one moves through one's imagination, recalling the works observed during the past four decades and, like Sherlock Holmes, searching for their current places of residence.'" 6156. "Pollution wizards." Machine Design 66, no. 11 (1994): 167.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the systems used by the United Kingdom's National Rivers Authority against water pollution. Merlin system to monitor stretches of waterway; Sherlock transportable bankside system to monitor discharge outlets; Response to abnormal changes.
6157. "PowerGen news international." Power Engineering, no. (1995): 8p.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on 1995 conferences related to the electric power industries. Includes the 1995 Power-Gen America Conference and Exhibition, with a reference to Holmes in the form of a product locating device: "As a visitor to POWER-GEN, are you tired of walking the aisles searching for that one company that has specific solutions to your problems? Great, because you're just the person Sherlock is looking for! Sherlock, the product locator (electronic touch-screen monitor), provides solutions by pinpointing the exhibitor(s) that can best fulfill your requirements. Sherlock will be located in the registration area, lobby, PennWell Power Team House Booth, and throughout the exhibit area. Details on how to use and benefit from Sherlock will be available at each product locator station. Just look for the big kiosk with a silhouette of Sherlock Holmes on the side!"
6158. "Production, Industry, Commerce." Reference & Research Book News 23, no. 2 (2008): 124-158.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews several books including one with a passing reference to Holmes. Forensic procedures for boundary and title investigation. Wilson, Donald A. John Wiley & Sons, ©2008 448 p. $90.00 978-0470-11369-1. "A land and boundary consultant in New Hampshire, Wilson has stopped being embarrassed about admitting the influence Sherlock Holmes has had in his life and work as an investigator. He explains standard techniques, but more importantly general approaches and inspirations, to using science to solve legal problems involving real estate. His topics include the thought process, directions and distances, interviewing and interrogation, water-related problems, and ethics."
6159. "Q&A." Curriculum Review 41, no. 5 (2002): 14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an interview with teacher Ann Litzler Coyne with a passing reference to Holmes. "The next year, when I moved from Illinois to Ohio and taught in a single-age classroom, I had a mystery theme, and that was neat. I had big magnifying glasses and Sherlock Holmes--it was the mystery of learning. So every topic we covered, there was some sort of mystery behind it."
6160. "Q&A." Electronics Now 65, no. 10 (1994): 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents answers to reader's questions on electronics, with a passing reference to Holmes. "When you're faced with a problem like this, the best approach to solving it is the Sherlock Holmes method--the process of elimination."
6161. "Q+A with a Pain Guru." Health 14, no. 6 (2000): 32.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Interviews neurosurgeon Frank Vertosick on his views about pain. Includes reference to Holmes. "As a doctor, I'm like Sherlock Holmes: I need clues."
6162. "Recordings." Rolling Stone, no. 754 (1997): 70.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the music recording 'Animal Rights,' by Moby. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "East coast DJ, producer and techno giant Moby is painfully aware of his surroundings. His major-label debut, Everything Is Wrong, reflected his need to fix the world's ills. Similarly, it doesn't take Sherlock Holmes to decipher the theme of Moby the vegan's fourth LP, Animal Rights...."
6163. "Reflections on Literary Darwinism." Style 42, no. 2 (2008): 244-246.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...I would also suggest that the research Don Symons and I conducted on slash stories (romantic/erotic narrative, written almost exclusively by women and for women, in which both protagonists are expropriated male media characters, the stars of various cop, spy, and science fiction television shows and movies as well as literary works, think Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson, or Kirk and Spock from Star Trek) and their readers (Salmon and Symons, 'Slash Fiction' and Warrior Lovers) demonstrates the new perspective that evolutionary minded thinking brings to a study of literature, reinforcing Carroll's argument that the Darwinist framework is useful to literary studies...."
6164. "Reviewed Elsewhere." Biography: An Interdisciplinary Quarterly 31, no. 4 (2008): 776-820.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A passing reference to Holmes. The article reviews several books including Simon Fraser: In Search of Modern British Columbia. Stephen Hume. Madeira Park, BC: Harbour, 2008. 336 pp. $36.95. "'Simon Fraser: In Search of Modern British Columbia' is an impressive book, studded with historic paintings and contemporary photos, and driven by the passion of a quest. . . . Hume is a history buff 's Sherlock Holmes, following in the footsteps . . . of the fur trader who trekked across Canada to reach the Pacific in 1808. . . ."
6165. "Rollers take Sony BMG to court over royalties." Music Week, no. (2005): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the lawsuit between the Bay City Rollers against their producer Phil Wainman regarding a court battle with Sony BMG over the claim for unpaid royalties in Great Britain. Efforts of Wainman to secure his pensions; Issuance of a writ against the publishing administration company Sherlock Holmes Music which claims that it did not collect royalties derived from the music tracks Wainman produced; Terms and conditions of the writ.
6166. "Ron Unz, swimming instructor." Economist 346, no. 8066 (1998): 32-32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights Ron Unz for his ballot initiative that would abolish California's practice of teaching immigrant children mainly in their native tongues for several years, until they are deemed ready to join normal classes in English. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "The mystery is why, just one month before the vote on June 2nd, the Clintonites have come out against a measure that is both wise and popular. It does not take Sherlock Holmes to unravel this one."
6167. "Scientific Notebook." Science news 174, no. 3 (2008): 4-4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents various items related to science. A quotation is presented from developmental psychologist Uta Frith on her image of a scientific hero that includes a passing reference to Holmes. "[Dr.] Frankenstein is so incredibly courageous and ambitious as to want to find the secret of life. He works very hard and with great imagination, and he tragically fails.... Sherlock Holmes is the opposite of romantic, and he never fails. He shows the dash of autism that may be as vital for the genius detective as for the genius scientist.... The deeply romantic and the obsessively pedantic are both part of my image of a scientific hero."
6168. "Search for England's first king." Earthwatch: The Journal of Earthwatch Institute 17, no. 1 (1998): 111.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the Earthwatch project lead by Dr. Eric Klingelhofer, and Kenneth Qualmann. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Winchester, England--You are about to enter on a search for a quarry as elusive and as sought-after as the Holy Grail itself. Whether you just read this story or take the plunge and join this project, you'll be diving into a mystery so sunk in the distant past and so riven with

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

historical complexities that it would have left Sherlock Holmes declaring it a "three-pipe mystery," for the number of pipes he would have to smoke to work his way through it. It is the search for the tomb of Alfred the Great, the first King of England."

6169. "The sex trade in colonial West Africa." New African, no. 466 (2007): 80-82.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...It does not take a Sherlock Holmes to spot a French lady of easy virtue when she arrives at Dover. But I doubt whether even the eagle eye of Capt. Nottingham [commissioner of police in the Gold Coast] could discern the difference between a Calabar petty trader and a Calabar prostitute,' argued Blackall...."
6170. "The Shadow Year." Fantasy & Science Fiction 114, no. 5 (2008): 31-34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book The Shadow Year by Jeffrey Ford. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Mary, the youngest child, is able to predict where Mr. White will strike next, and this concession to the mechanics of supernatural fiction gives The Shadow Year a passing similarity to works like King's Hearts in Atlantis, the stories in Joe Hill's 20th Century Ghosts, and in particular Glen Hirshberg's spooky, underrated The Snowman's Children. Yet The Shadow Year is better than all of these, because it is a more nuanced, far more delicate novel. 'Delicate' seems an odd word to describe a book wherein Sherlock Holmes appears as a leitmotif, described thus: 'The great detective came across to me like a snob, the type my father once described as 'believing that the sun rose and set from his asshole;'" 6171. "Shakespeare and Popular Culture." College Literature 31, no. 4 (2004): insert4-insert5, 1-170.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A special issue investigates the place of Shakespeare in the contemporary popular culture of the United States. Includes a reference to Holmes in the article by Donald Hedrick. "...I want to gesture finally toward the appropriateness of this genre of film noir, in its relevant theoretical formulation. Here I adopt the approach of Slavoj Zizek (1993), drawing on a distinction that he makes using the history of detective fiction. Our traditional image of the scholar is, it seems, that of the independent, and therefore objective, investigator, the traditional and typical model for which is Sherlock Holmes. As explorer, the Holmesian detective is an excavator of truth; his literary scholar counterpart uncovers latent meaning, ironies, structures, social and historical contexts, all within the 'objective' text. The Holmesian detective, then, is essentially an overviewer of the crime. The noir detective, by way of contrast, becomes enmeshed in the crime itself, like the example of Raymond Chandler's Philip Marlowe. Often this entanglement with the shady occurs through the fascination or involvement with a femme fatale, but in any case the noir investigator is 'immersed in the destructive element,' as it were, rather than probing it, at a distance, and with dean hands. Drawing from theories of postmodernism, we might describe this in Linda Hutcheon's description of the political postmodern as complicit critique (1988)...."
6172. "Sherlock Holmes investigates the EPR paradox." Physics World 8, no. 4 (1995): 39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
6173. "Shop front." New Statesman & Society 8, no. 359 (1995): 38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a list of best selling books in Great Britain for the week of June 23-30, 1995. Includes Matthew Benson: The Sherlock Holmes Encyclopedia (Pavilion)
6174. "Signs That an Adolescent Is Using Narcotics." Russian Education & Society 43, no. 11 (2001): 29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Interviews Iurii Aleksandrovic Zakharov, director of the Scientific Research Center and a medical specialist in reflexotherapy, regarding the signs that an adolescent is using narcotics. Passing reference to Holmes. "In general, you have to act like Sherlock Holmes: if the adolescent's behavior has started to make you suspicious, you ought to check the contents of his pockets and his backpack, and the drawers in his desk."
6175. "The Silver Swan." Kirkus Reviews 76, no. 4 (2008): 3-3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The Silver Swan," by Benjamin Black. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...In real life we know very little of the motives of others, possibly because we are too busy trying to discover what our own might be. Quirke is a bit of a dope, just like the rest of us. I

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

suppose if you wanted the opposite of Sherlock Holmes, Quirke would be it.'..."

6176. "Sociology." Reference & Research Book News 23, no. 3 (2008): 158-193.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews several books on sociology, including one with an opening passing reference to Holmes. Ballistic imaging. Ed. by Daniel L. Cork et al. National Academies Press, ©2008 322 p. $59.00 (pa) "From the times of Sherlock Holmes, analysis of spent cartridge cases and bullets has been essential to crime scene investigations and has served as significant pieces of evidence...."
6177. "A space oddity." Economist 349, no. 8087 (1998): 81-82.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports that a tiny error in the paths of two spacecraft may require the rewriting of some of the laws of physics. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "As Sherlock Holmes observed: when you have eliminated the impossible, whatever remains, however improbable, must be the truth. In this case, the improbable conclusion-given that the anomalous acceleration is towards the sun-is that the laws of gravity need an extra post-Einsteinian tweak."
6178. "[Spiderman, Sherlock Holmes, Al Capone, Robin Hood and Cruella De Ville joined an assortment of fairytale characters at West Island School ... ]." South China Morning Post, Feb 26, 2005: 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Spiderman, Sherlock Holmes, [Al Capone], [Robin Hood] and Cruella De Ville joined an assortment of fairytale characters at West Island School this week in a literary character dress day as part of reading week.
6179. "Stock and Science." Farmers Weekly 147, no. 18 (2007): 24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An interview with Hugh Pennington that includes a passing reference to Homes. "...In your spare time how do you relax? I enjoy Sherlock Holmes and Lord of the Rings and I watch TV dramas based on forensic science - mainly to spot the mistakes!"
6180. "Students in Footsteps of Sherlock Holmes." Birmingham Post, January 1, 2001: 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Students at a Midland college are to be given the chance to become super-sleuths by enrolling on one of the first crime-busting courses in Britain. Scholars will follow in the footsteps of Sherlock Holmes by studying the art of solving murders. The Forensic Science and Criminal Psychology course at Sutton Coldfield College consists of how to search murder files and hunt for vital clues through fire-damaged buildings. Students will also learn the gory reality of a real murder hunt away from the fictional detective TV shows. So far, some 70 students have signed up for the two-year diploma...."
6181. "Summer gifts." World of Hibernia 4, no. 1 (1998): 169.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Suggests several Irish gift items, including smoking products. "For over 130 years Peterson of Dublin have been manufacturers and purveyors of fine smoking products. For further information on the Sherlock Holmes Collection and the many other fine Peterson products...."
6182. "Syllabus." Chronicle of Higher Education 49, no. 13 (2002): A12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features chemistry associate professor Bradley T. Jones who uses fiction [sic] detective Sherlock Holmes to teach analytical reasoning to freshmen. Personal data that can be determined from an empty wallet; Assignments given to students.
6183. "Syndicated features listed by authors, artists." Editor & Publisher 129, no. 31 (1996): 85S.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an alphabetical listing of authors and artists of syndicated features. Reference: Sherrod, J. -- Modern Sherlock Holmes (Mystery).
6184. "Syndicated features listed by authors, artists." Editor & Publisher 128, no. 30 (1995): 95S.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a listing of syndicated features by authors and artists in the United States. Includes "Sherrod, J. -- Modern Sherlock Holmes (Mystery)" 6185. "Table of Contents." Library Journal 131, no. 7 (2006): 3, 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Listing of the table of contents. Includes Holmes reference on page 128 The

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Reader's Shelf, Beyond Sherlock Holmes: British Crime Fiction

6186. "Tearing up phone-books." Economist 334, no. 7897 (1995): 71-71.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Tells of the work of Pro CD of Danvers, Massachusetts, with a couple of reference to Holmes. "The enterprising villains whose scheme Sherlock Holmes foiled in 'The Red-headed League' put their dupe to work transcribing the first volume of the Encyclopedia Britannica while they tunnelled from his cellar into the vaults of a neighbouring bank. A century later, American entrepreneurs have set 450 computer scribes at the Beijing Aviation and Aeronautical University an equally painstaking task-copying 4.5m telephone directory entries a week-while they go after the even richer coffers of the world's telephone companies...."
6187. "Terms of Use: The Rules Have Changed." Information Today 24, no. 9 (2007): 1-37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses terms of use found on Internet web sites. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Users should not have to be Sherlock Holmes to discover the new terms that apply to them...."
6188. "Then and now: what's in Sherlock Holmes... a Victorian Cracker." The Guardian (Manchester), December 28, 1994.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Shows a printed table of "then" and "now"--1895 and 1995.
6189. "Titles." CD-ROM Professional 8, no. 11 (1995): 24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents titles of books on various topics. The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes listed under the Entertainment section.
6190. "Titles of by-lined features." Editor & Publisher 132, no. 32 (1999): 55S.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents titles of syndicated by-lined newspaper features. Includes The Games Afoot, Sherlock Holmes Crime Scene Chronicles--Jack Harris/Howard Bender and Modern Sherlock Holmes (Mystery)--J. Sherrod.
6191. "Titles of by-lined features." Editor & Publisher 131, no. 31 (1998): 54S.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Lists the titles of by-lined syndicated features. Includes The Games Afoot, The-Sherlock Holmes Crime Scene Chronicles -- Jack Harris/Howard Bender; Modern Sherlock Holmes (Mystery)--J. Sherrod.
6192. "Titles of by-lined features." Editor & Publisher 129, no. 31 (1996): 53S.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the titles of by-lined syndicated features in newspapers and their corresponding authors. Includes "Modern Sherlock Holmes (Mystery)-- J. Sherod"
6193. "Titles of by-lined features." Editor & Publisher 128, no. 30 (1995): 81S.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an alphabetical listing of by-lined features in periodicals in the United States. Includes "Modern Sherlock Holmes (Mystery)" - J. Sherrod and "Sherlock Holmes Quiz."
6194. "Tried and Terrific Explore London up close with guided walking tours." Providence Journal (Providence, RI), November 30, 1994: H-25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to Holmes. "...We had been intrigued by brochures in our hotel lobby advertising two-hour guided walking tours with various themes, ranging from the sedate (London's gardens) to the literary (the London of Dickens and Sherlock Holmes) to the macabre (an evening tour of the spots where Jack the Ripper's victims were found)...."
6195. "Under new management." Economist 333, no. 7884 (1994): 21-23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on some of the successes of Russian capitalism, but suggests that progress may be impeded by erratic government policy-making. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...You do not have to be Sherlock Holmes.' he thinks, 'to work out that the directors of the refinery and of the shell company are splitting the money' which is made when the shell company sells the products on to real customers...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6196. "The Valley of the Shadow of Death (Cover story)." Texas Monthly 36, no. 3 (2008): 112-210.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article focuses on the alleged role of Crossroads Baptist pastor Matt Baker in the death of his wife, Kari in Waco, Texas. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Periodically, the women met for lunch at their favorite Mexican restaurant, notebooks in hand, and asked one another Sherlock Holmes-like questions. Why would Kari leave two pills in her Unisom bottle? Wouldn't she have taken all the pills, to make sure she would die?..."
6197. "View From City Road:; [3 Edition 1]." The Independent (London) 1994: NOPGCIT.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Meanwhile, outside the department's budget, the Treasury will receive an estimated pounds 5bn from the privatisation of Railtrack, though you need to be a bit of a Sherlock Holmes to deduce this from the figures. The amount Railtrack is worth depends crucially on the level of subsidy the Government grants to the rail operating companies. Lo and behold, the long-term forecasts show that the level of government expenditure on the railways soars back to former levels in 1997/8. All this spending will be subsidy to private sector companies. No matter, because by then the Government will either be returned to power on the back of an orgy of tax cuts or it will be out of office with Labour left to pick up the pieces.
6198. "The way it is." Lancet 356, no. 9231 (2000): 777.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Introduces two anecdotes that contain medical humor, with a passing reference to Holmes.
6199. "The Week." National Review 57, no. 1 (2005): 4-12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses political and social developments around the world during the preceding week. Passing reference to Sherlock Holmes. Notes passing of Guy Davenport, professor of English at the University of Kentucky. "In his spare time, he translated Heraclitus and Diogenes, and illustrated Hugh Kenner's Counterfeiters. (Sherlock Holmes and Karl Marx in the same picture? Why not.)"
6200. "What the world is reading." Economist, no. (1997): 4/5p.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Looks at the bestselling non-fiction in America and in Great Britain as of June 21, 1997. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "For Sherlock Holmes it would have posed a three-pipe problem: What makes readers of newspapers so different from readers of books?..."
6201. "Where wizards stay up late." Educom Review 31, no. 5 (1996): 53.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an excerpt from the book 'Where Wizards Stay Up Late: The Origins of the Internet,' by Katie Hafner and Matthew Lyon, providing a profile of Joseph Carl Robnett Licklider, whose vision inspired computer networking. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "The idea was that you take this powerful computer and feed it all this qualitative information, such as 'The air force chief drank two martinis,' or 'Khrushchev isn't reading Pravda on Mondays,'" recalled Ruina. "And the computer would play Sherlock Holmes and conclude that the Russians must be building an MX-72 missile or something like that."
6202. "While We Were Out." Yankee 67, no. 2 (2003): 98.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides information on several tourist destinations in the New England region. Passing reference to "the Sherlock Holmes mysteries" as something gaining popularity in 1891.
6203. "Whodunit?." Economist 347, no. 8073 (1998): 100-100.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews three economics related books. 'Hidden Agenda: In the Eyes of the Tiger,' by Lim Kok Wing, Robert Ho You Chai, and Yee Mee Fah; 'Asia Falling,' by Callum Henderson; 'Asia Under Siege: How the Asian Miracle Went Wrong,' by Ranjit Gill. Passing reference to Holmes. "It is not the authors' intention, they say, to 'play Sherlock Holmes in dusting for fingerprints in order to catch the culprit.'" 6204. "Witch Hunt." People 42, no. 24 (1994): 13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the television program 'Witch Hunt,' starring Dennis Hopper and Penelope Ann Miller, on HBO. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "This is sort of a second-cousin sequel to HBO's 1991 movie Cast a Deadly Spell, which was a savory parfait of mystic fantasy and hard-boiled detective yarn, a shadow world where shaman meets shamus, where warlock meets Sherlock."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6205. "Women in physics, did Sherlock Holmes solve the EPR paradox?, a scientific look at dowsing." Physics World 8, no. 5 (1995): 19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
6206. "You know my methods." Economist 332, no. 7873 (1994): 81-81.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Asserts that recent technological advances have made it possible for detectives to perform their jobs much more effectively. Includes a reference to Holmes. "Dr. Watson did not record the forum in which his friend's 'little monograph on the ashes of 140 different varieties of pipe, cigar, and cigarette tobacco' appeared. Had Sherlock Holmes been writing today, however, it would no doubt have appeared in the Journal of the Forensic Science Society, next to 'The examination of black wax shoe polish stains after ageing and weathering,' or the more gruesome 'Analysis of opiates in fly larvae sampled on a putrefied cadaver.'" 6207. Abend, Sander M. "Unconscious Fantasy and Modern Conflict Theory." Psychoanalytic Inquiry 28, no. 3 (2008): 117-130.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article traces the evolution of the concept of unconscious fantasy from its origins in Freud's early clinical writings to its place in the theory and practice of modern conflict theory. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...It will come as no great surprise to add that my inner preferences and tendencies also contribute to important recreational interests of mine, like my devotion to the literature of espionage and detective stories, to codes and ciphers, and so on. I certainly thought of the model typified by Sherlock Holmes in my pleasurable immersion in the challenge of medical diagnostics during my preparatory education, and this imagery, reinforced to be sure by its childhood antecedents, carried over quite naturally to my early conceptualization of the work of psychoanalysis...."
6208. Adamovich, Marina. "Judith with the Head of Holofernes." Russian Studies in Literature 38, no. 1 (2001): 85.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines pseudoclassicism in Russian literature during the 1990s. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "By persisting in calling his Seagull a 'comedy,' Akunin is therefore not imitating the genre of Chekhov's piece in the same way that Fandorin imitates Sherlock Holmes."
6209. Akst, Daniel. "The Forgotten Plague." American Heritage 51, no. 8 (2000): 72.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Details United States doctor Joseph Goldberger's discovery of the cure for pellagra in 1915. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "The conquest of pellagra was a triumph of epidemiology over an affliction perhaps as ancient as the Bible, but it was also a triumph of one remarkable man, a medical Sherlock Holmes who fought ignorance, politics, and injustice as well as the disease."
6210. Aldrich, Gary. "Modernizing the FBI Is an Open-and-Shut Case." Human Events 57, no. 32 (2001): 10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Urges the modernization of the United States Federal Bureau of Investigation, with a passing reference to Holmes. "And who can dispute the tremendous advances in technology that enables law enforcement agencies to find records and persons with a rapidity that would make Sherlock Holmes' head spin?"
6211. Ali, Lorraine, and Rob O'Connor. "Recordings." Rolling Stone, no. 735 (1996): 46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the music recording 'To the Faithful Departed' by The Cranberries. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Among the best potential hit material is 'Free to Decide' (it shouldn't take Sherlock Holmes to guess what this song is about), which moves along gracefully despite O'Riordan's need to be extra meaningful."
6212. Allen, Brooke. "Adventures in Pop Culture." New Leader 88, no. 3 (2005): 36-38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on the plot of two adventure-related fiction books. "The Mysterious Flame of Queen Loana," by Umberto Eco; "Zorro," by Isabel Allende. Includes passing reference to Holmes.
6213. Allen Jr, John L. "Power, secrecy feed conspiracy theories in Vatican City. (Cover story)." National Catholic Reporter 34, no. 35 (1998): 15.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on deaths, money scandals and descendants of Jesus. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "According first to Hugh Schonfield in his 1967 book, The Passover Plot, and expanded later into a near-cosmic conspiracy stretching over two millennia by Michael Baigent, Richard Leigh and Henry Lincoln in Holy Blood, Holy Grail (Dell, 1982), those events are indeed mysteries, but of the Sherlock Holmes rather than the supernatural sort."
6214. Allison, Graham, and Andrei Kokoshin. "The New Containment." National Interest, no. (2002): 9p.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Assesses the Alliance Against Nuclear Terrorism of the U.S. and Russia, with a passing reference to Holmes. "Contemplating the possibility of a criminal act, Sherlock Holmes investigated three factors: motive, means and opportunity."
6215. Amato, Ivan. "Bird's-Eye View." Fortune 151, no. 7 (2005): 34-36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on people who have ultraviolet vision. Reference to the book Ms. Holmes of Baker Street, by Alan Bradley, another person with ultraviolet vision.
6216. Amiel, Barbara. "Hitting below the belt." Maclean's 114, no. 33 (2001): 16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Responds to media criticism of the late Canadian writer Mordecai Richler, with a passing reference to Holmes. "Eliminate the impossible, as Sherlock Holmes would say, and whatever remains, however improbable, must be the truth."
6217. Amo, Michael F. "Incident investigations." Nursing Homes: Long Term Care Management 46, no. 9 (1997): 28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on several approaches used in the incident investigation process by nursing homes in the United States, with a passing reference to Holmes.
6218. Anderson, Daryll. "Physicians as Detectives in Detective Fiction of the 20th Century." Southern medical journal 95, no. 10 (2002): 1134.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Surprisingly few detectives are physicians in 20th-century detective fiction...." Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Dr. John Evelyn Thorndyke, probably the most renowned physician-detective, appears in about 30 novels and a number of short-story collections by R. Austin Freeman.... His broad knowledge of dust, fibers, decomposition, and jewels far exceeds that of Sherlock Holmes."
6219. Anderson, Elijah. "The Ideologically Driven Critique." American Journal of Sociology 107, no. 6 (2002): 1533-1550.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Responds to sociologist Loic Wacquant's review and criticisms of the author's book entitled Code of the Street: Decency, Violence and the Moral Life of the Inner City. Opens with a quote from Holmes: "It is a capital mistake to theorise before one has data. Insensibly one begins to twist facts to suit theories, instead of theories to suit facts."
6220. Anderson, Michael. "R. W. B. Lewis: an appreciation." New Criterion 25, no. 9 (2007): 77-70.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The American Adam," by R. W. B. Lewis. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...A writer's voice is never stilled. Dick's books will illuminate the treasures of Henry James, Whitman, Edwin Arlington Robinson, Poe with the incidental delights of a reference to Sherlock Holmes (as befits a man devoted to murder mysteries)..."
6221. Anderson, Poul. "Ideas for science fiction." Writer 111, no. 9 (1998): 23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Opinion. Examines how the ideas for writing science fiction is generated, questioning where writers get their ideas. Reference to Holmes in the note on the author. "Among his many honors are seven Hugo and three Nebula Awards, the Tolkien Memorial Award for lifetime achievement in fantasy, and two Morley-Montgomery Awards for year's best essay on Sherlock Holmes."
6222. Ansfield, Jonathan, Melinda Liu, and Grace Liu. "Gumshoes and 'Mistress-Killers'." Newsweek 145, no. 19 (2005): 33-33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on growth of private investigators after the 2001 amendment of China's Marriage Law which allowed married women to receive a fair divorce settlement if solid evidence was presented that their husbands were being unfaithful. Includes a reference to Holmes in the form of an investigative firm's name: the Sherlock Holmes agency.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6223. Apelian, Diran. "ASM News." Advanced Materials & Processes 158, no. 6 (2000): 213.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents updates related to the American Society for Metals (ASM) International as of December 2000. Includes a photo caption with reference to Holmes. "The Air Products and Chemicals booth at the entrance to the 2000 Heat Treat Show attracted crowds of attendees with a magic show performed by a gentleman dressed as Sherlock Holmes."
6224. Appelboom, Thierry, and Julien Struyven. "Medical imaging of the Peruvian mummy Rascar Capac." Lancet 354, no. 9196 (1999): 2153.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on paleopathology and the use of computed tomographic scan imaging. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...This story is a pastiche of elements drawn from different sources: The curse of Tutenkamon, published in the press of the time, the serial The three circles of fear with Harry Dickinson (the American Sherlock Holmes) and his assistant Tom Wils..."
6225. Arenofsky, Janice. "What Mentors & Role Models Can do for You." Career World 27, no. 3 (1998): 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Offers advice on how to find a mentor or role model who can inspire toward career success. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "How can you find a mentor? Where should you look for clues? Try thinking like detective Sherlock Holmes."
6226. Argument, Barbara. "There may be just NOTHING to it for Sherlock Holmes but finding this address in Baker Street isn't easy." Middlesbrough Evening Gazette, January 13, 2009: 13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Tracking down Michelle Hudson's Middlesbrough jewellery shop is just the job for legendary detective Sherlock Holmes. Customers need all the cunning of the ace sleuth to find her glitzy little gem of a business. That's because Michelle's place has one of the weirdest addresses. It's based at Number 0, Baker Street, Middlesbrough...."
6227. Armstrong, Linda. "McKinley Henderson sinks his teeth into Van Helsing role." New York Amsterdam News, Sept 23, 2004: 21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article presents information about the actor Stephen McKinley Henderson, with a passing reference to Holmes. "...The actor prepared for the role by listening to the original Bram Stoker version on tape, recalling the book he read in grad school and added that being a Sherlock Holmes fan helped because Van Helsing is part detective...."
6228. Arnold, Martin. "Serial Sleuths, Spreading Glee." New York Times, October 8, 1998: E3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Deals with the depiction of private investigators in American novels, including reference to Holmes.
6229. Aron, Leon. "A Champion for the Bourgeoisie." National Interest, no. (2004): 9p.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines virtue and citizenship in Boris Akunin's novels. Description of Fandorin, a character in Akunin's novels who is the descendant of a German knight, with a passing reference to Holmes. "In the tradition of Sherlock Holmes, Hercule Poirot and Lord Peter Wimsey, Fandorin is an individualist, fiercely guarding his independence."
6230. Arosio, Elisabetta. "An Interview with Jaakko Hintikka." Diogenes (Blackwell Publishing Limited) 48, no. 4 (2000): 71.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Interviews Finnish philosopher Jaako Hintikka and includes a passing reference to Holmes. "In one sense I believe it is true that the popular conception of logic which is called the Sherlock Holmes's conception of logic and according to which logic is the secret of the gist of all good reasoning is essentially correct. I think Sherlock Holmes is right as always!!"
6231. Ashbacher, Charles. "ProMath: crime stoppers." Mathematics and Computer Education 33, no. 1 (1999): 95.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // ProMath: Crime Stoppers ($175), from HRM Video, is an approximately 26-

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

minute video that features a state prosecutor, a chief of police, and a noted forensic criminologist describing how math is used in their work. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Given the popularity of crime novels from the exploits of Sherlock Holmes to police shows on television, many of us no doubt harbor a secret desire to be a crime fighter."

6232. Atwood, Brett. "VH1 adds original music programs." Billboard 108, no. 19 (1996): 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on cable television network VH1's scheduling of original programming for the summer of 1996, which it hopes will bring new viewers to the channel at a time when networks are offering reruns. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "I feel kind of like Sherlock Holmes," says [Bill] Flanagan. "Tracking these things down is difficult."
6233. Ayala, Francisco, and Laurence de Looze. "The breach." Antioch Review 56, no. 1 (1998): 61.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Relates the story of a lieutenant at war who killed a Republican soldier who happens to be his countryman. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...While the other soldiers played cards, Santolalla killed time by reading for the hundredth time a Sherlock Holmes novel...."
6234. Badoe, Yaba. "Christmas with aunt Ama." Critical Quarterly 39, no. 4 (1997): 56.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an anecdote about a Christmas which the author spent with an aunt known as Ama. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...Yet the memory of my aunt remains vivid for the same reason I brough Seanie Richards over to peek at her. She was British. When she spoke I saw the Trooping of the Colour. I heard Sherlock Holmes patronising his sidekick Watson..."
6235. Baird, John D. "Humanities." Letters in Canada 67, no. 1 (1997): 308.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book, 'Graham Greene's Thrillers and the 1930s,' by Brain Diemert, with a passing reference to Holmes. "In a familiar tale, Sherlock Holmes rejects the story of the Red-Headed League, and replaces it with a story of attempted bank-robbery, which he confirms by capturing the robbers in the act."
6236. Baker, Stephen, and Bremen Leak. "Math (will rock your world)." Business Week, no. 1/23/2006 (2006): 54-62.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article looks at the effect of math in today's world of increasing data and the ways to process it in all sectors of the economy including consulting, advertising, police and intelligence, media, and other areas. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Whether in law, journalism, or criminal detective work, sleuths have relied for centuries on the human brain to pick through strands of disparate evidence and to find patterns. Sherlock Holmes sometimes looked for them in plumes of pipe smoke...."
6237. Baldwin, Carol Margaret. "Teaching Self-Reflection and Meta-Cognition." ETC: A Review of General Semantics 59, no. 1 (2002): 71.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses strategies for teaching self-reflection and meta-cognition, with a passing reference to Holmes in footnote 6.
6238. Balkin, Jack M. "Humanities." Letters in Canada 74, no. 1 (2004): 305-610.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several books about humanities including Mariana Valverde. Law's Dream of a Common Knowledge Princeton University Press. xii, 248. US$35.00 The review includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...There has been much recent focus on how scientific and expert knowledges have invaded and transformed the practice of law. Valverde takes a contrarian position, arguing that a large part of legal regulation still eschews scientific expertise in favour of a melange of so-called 'common sense,' social stereotype, and what she calls the 'forensic gaze' -- searching for clues or signifiers of social disorder in the style of Sherlock Holmes...."
6239. Bange, Stephanie. "Multimedia Review." School Library Journal 51, no. 12 (2005): 81.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a review with a reference to Holmes. Arthur King and the Curious Case of the Time Train (unabr.). 4 cassettes. 3:57 hrs. Prod. by Oliver's Children's Audio Books. Dist. by BBC Audiobooks America. 2005, ISBN 1-4056-5050-8. $32.95. Gr 5-8 "Arthur King channels Sherlock Holmes in this second tale about the nerdy boy by Dean Wilkinson (published in the UK by Scholastic Ltd, 2003).

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Strange occurrences are the norm at Basselton School this year, Rips in the fabric of time are leaving bewildered people hours out of sync with their lives. Cavemen mug Arthur's best friend in the restroom at school. Nightly rumblings are heard beneath the town; some say it's the sound of a ghost train. Arthur believes there is a link between the unsavory new physics teacher and these unusual incidents, Arthur enlists the help of several people, including the girl he has a crush on, to help him solve the mystery. British actor Steven Pacey employs different British accents for the characters, some so thick that they are difficult to understand. Boys will especially enjoy the toilet humor found here. British slang is used liberally throughout the book, and some of the strong language may be offensive."

6240. Barday, Dave. "Who Put the Science in Forensic Science?" IEE Review 49, no. (2003): 6-8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the use of scientific process and technology in forensic science. Use of nuclear DNA to establish identities of people involved in the crime; Establishment of the profiles of criminals. Includes a passing reference to Holmes.
6241. Barnes, Clive. "Making an Evening of It." Dance Magazine 75, no. 7 (2001): 90.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Deals with creating a full-evening narrative ballets, with a passing reference to Holmes.
6242. Barnes, Trevor J. "History and philosophy of geography: life and death 2005-2007." Progress in Human Geography 32, no. 5 (2008): 650-658.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A personal narrative is presented which explores the author's experience of doing her first progress report on the history and philosophy of geography. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Keighren (2006) makes the point in his wonderful case study of Influences of geographic environment by Ellen Churchill Semple. With Sherlock Holmes' astuteness, Keighren (2006: 525, 532) tracks down the geography of the varied reactions to the book, and which are varied indeed (and in deed): from the Glasgow Herald's a 'monument of erudition and arrangement' to the anonymous Oxford undergraduate's (or maybe School of Geography staff member's) scribbled marginal comment, 'bunkum!'..."
6243. Barolsky, Paul. "Leonardo, Satan, and the mystery of modern art." Virginia Quarterly Review 74, no. 3 (1998): 393.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on fables about art, with a passing reference to Holmes. "...As with Sherlock Holmes and Professor Moriarity, the detective and the criminal are each the double of the other...."
6244. Barr, Jean. "Universities after postmodernism." International Journal of Lifelong Education 21, no. 4 (2002): 321-333.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // With reference to Holmes in the bibliography. Ginzburg, C. "Morelli, Freud and Sherlock Holmes: clues and scientific method. History Workshop Journal, 9: 5-36.
6245. Barrett, Wayne M. "Beavis and Butt-head." USA Today Magazine 123, no. 2592 (1994): 86.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on the social content of the television program 'The Beavis & Butt-head Show' with a passing reference to Holmes. "...Moreover, it is parents' responsibility to monitor their children's TV viewing habits, and no one yet has shown a direct link to seeing violence on television and then acting on it. If that were so, then kids shouldn't be watching the nightly news or, for that matter, such public television staples as 'Masterpiece Theatre' and 'The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes.'" 6246. Barro, Robert J. "Mysteries of the Gaping Current-Account Gap." Business Week, no. 12/13 (2004): 32-32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Considers the high U.S. current-account deficit, with a passing reference to Holmes. "Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan recently expressed concern about the stubbornly high U.S. current-account deficit. I share his concern, but I find that understanding it is like unraveling a Sherlock Holmes mystery. There are lots of clues, but I am not enough of a sleuth to put them all together...."
6247. Barry, Donald T. "Mathematics in search of history." Mathematics Teacher 93, no. 8 (2000): 647-650.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Part of a special section on mathematics history and history in the mathematics classroom. Bibliography includes a reference to Holmes. Buck, R. Creighton. "Sherlock Holmes in Babylon."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

American Mathematical Monthly 87 (May 1980): 338-45.

6248. Bartusiak, Marcia. "The new dark age of astronomy. (Cover story)." Astronomy 24, no. 10 (1996): 36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the existence of dark matter in the universe, with a passing reference to Holmes. "I have this dream that there will be a sort of Sherlock Holmes event,' says Princeton astrophysicist James Peebles. 'Someone will look at this great pyramid of evidence that is building up and exclaim. 'Yes, Watson, I think I see it. By Jove, that must be it.'" 6249. Barwell, Ismay. "Levinson and the resisting reader: Feminist strategies of interpretation." Journal of Gender Studies 4, no. 2 (1995): 169.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Compares the philosophical and authorial intention approaches in determining the textual meaning of The Resisting Reader, by Judith Fetterley. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Often these fictional narrators have names and are fully characters in the story. For example, Ishmael in Moby Dick, Dr Watson in the Sherlock Holmes stories and the narrator of Tom Jones...."
6250. Bassett, Patrick F. "Class, Popular Media, and Independent Schools." Independent School 65, no. 2 (2006): 9-12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article describes the relationship between social class and U.S. private schools, with a passing reference to Holmes. "...I would say that CSI, as well as the clones it has spawned, is far less Dragnet or Dirty Harry and much more Sherlock Holmes -- i.e., the triumph of the rational over the irrational...."
6251. Bates, Jane. "Whodunnit?" Nursing Standard 19, no. 13 (2004): 27-27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article focuses on disappearance of medical equipment, spoons, from hospital department. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...There is more to being a detective than meets the eye. Perhaps I should listen to Puccini and drink whisky like that Oxford sleuth Morse, or go all Sherlock Holmes on the violin--and then let fly with the accusations...."
6252. Batschelet, Margaret. "The Vanished Child and the Deconstruction of the Classic Detective." Journal of Popular Culture 40, no. 5 (2007): 764-784.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The Vanished Child," by Sarah Smith. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...This 'gifted amateur' is the hero of the novel, Alexander von Reidsen, an Austrian scientist and exemplar of the rationalist, empirical approach (he is introduced in the first chapter dissecting frogs in his Swiss laboratory). Reidsen, like Sherlock Holmes, is a master of various disciplines: he is a gifted and widely sought-after biochemist, a trained diplomat, an accomplished dancer, actor, driver, theatrical director, rider, and marksman...."
6253. Bauer, Susan Wise. "Satan with a stethoscope." Christianity Today 42, no. 11 (1998): 58.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // States that greed is the greatest factor that could corrupt doctors and the medical profession, with a passing reference to Holmes. "'When a doctor does go wrong,' Sherlock Holmes once remarked to Watson, 'he is the first of criminals. He has nerve and he has knowledge.' This view of the doctor as occupying a plane above common humanity (Holmes's opponent in 'The Speckled Band,' Dr. Grimesby Roylott, can bend a poker double with his bare hands) persists."
6254. Beadle, Jeremy. "10 Questions a Quiz by Jeremy Beadle (Answers on Page 52)." The Independent (London), December 18, 2004: 9.52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // First question in the quiz reads: "What links Napoleon, Sherlock Holmes, Edmund Hillary and Utah?"
6255. Beattie, Ann. "Buried Treasure." Ploughshares 22, no. 2/3 (1996): 9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents Ann Beattie's 'Buried Treasure,' a short story about three estranged friends who were reunited after one of them received a letter that leads to where a chest of music equipment is buried. Includes a passing reference to Holmes.
6256. Bechtel, Mark, and Stephen Cannella. "Go Figure." Sports Illustrated 101, no. 16 (2004): 16-16.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article presents figures related to the sports world. Includes reference to Holmes. "...2,7000: Miles former soccer player Lloyd Scott of England will pedal across Australia on a 119-year-old bicycle, while dressed as Sherlock Holmes, to raise money for leukemia research...."
6257. Becker, Lucille Frackman. "Celebrating the Georges Simenon Centennial." World Literature Today 77, no. 3/4 (2003): 59-61.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the literary works of French-language novelist Georges Simenon who celebrated a centenary of his birth in 2003. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Maigret is unimaginable without his city--it is as tightly linked to him as is London to Sherlock Holmes."
6258. Beech, Anthony. "Offender profiling." Journal of Mental Health 4, no. 1 (1995): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Editorial. Discusses the changes in the public perception of the discipline of psychology. Includes a reference to Holmes in the notes. "Canter, D. (1994b). The death of Sherlock Holmes. Division of Criminological and Legal Psychology Newsletter, 367, 5-7."
6259. Beedle, Andrew. "Modal fatalism." Philosophical Quarterly 46, no. 185 (1996): 488.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines the claim that David Lewis' modal realism should change the way in which we care about what happens. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...If we think of worlds as stories, our world may be a Sherlock Holmes tale or a Kafka short story...."
6260. Begley, Sharon, and Adam Rogers. "Disturbing the universe." Newsweek 131, no. 10 (1998): 54.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on two studies concluding that the universe is pervaded by a bizarre force. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Once the researchers eliminated mundane explanations for this, they had to heed Sherlock Holmes: 'Whatever remains, however improbable, must be the truth.'" 6261. Begley, Sharon, Karen Springen, and Kurt Soller. "Why we Believe." Newsweek 152, no. 18 (2008): 56-60.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses why people believe in paranormal phenomena. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...As scientists began studying belief in the paranormal, it quickly became clear that belief requires an open mind--one not bound by the evidence of the senses, but in which emotions such as hope and despair can trump that evidence. Consider the Tichborne affair. In 1854, Sir Roger Tichborne, age 25, was reported lost at sea off the coast of Brazil. His inconsolable mother refused to accept that her son was dead. Twelve years later a man from Wagga Wagga, in New South Wales, Australia, got in touch with her. He claimed to be Sir Roger, so Lady Tichborne immediately sent him money to sail to England. When the claimant arrived, he turned out to be grossly obese, E.J. Wagner recounts in her 2006 book 'The Science of Sherlock Holmes.'..."
6262. Beland, Nicole, and Mike Zimmerman. "Ask the Girl Next Door." Men's Health (Rodale Inc.) 19, no. 3 (2004): 26-26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents questions from men about women. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...So I recommend that you ask the direct, but always welcome, question 'Did you come?' instead of trying to play Sherlock Holmes during a shagfest...."
6263. Belzen, Jacob A. "The Historicocultural Approach in the Psychology of Religion: Perspectives for Interdisciplinary Research." Journal for the Scientific Study of Religion 36, no. 3 (1997): 358.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...In his exposition of the 'indication paradigm,' Ginzburg (1986/1989) puts both groups of practitioners of the individualizing approach in the same category as Sherlock Holmes...."
6264. Benford, Gregory. "Alt.fans." Reason 27, no. 8 (1996): 43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the evolution of science fiction fandom in the Internet, with a reference to Holmes. "...Well before the 1970s, fandoms devoted to other areas had begun, including the Baker Street Irregulars for Sherlock Holmes, 'zines for the mystery and romance genres, even for model railroaders...."
6265. Berglas, Steven. "Know when to fold." Inc. 20, no. 3 (1998): 31.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the perseverance entrepreneurial people. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...There are more subtle, pernicious factors than hubris that block successful entrepreneurs from seeing or hearing warnings that they need to change course. Sherlock Holmes once remarked to Watson, 'You see, but you do not observe.' That's what is at issue here...."

6266. Berman, David. "Mytec's secret identity." Canadian Business 70, no. 11 (1997): 19.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the efforts of Mytec Technologies Inc. in using fingerprint technology as a security measure to protect against credit card fraud and Internet scams as of September 1, 1997. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The idea dates back to long before the first Sherlock Holmes novel, but now biometrics is moving beyond a life of crime and is set to radically change the way we perform many of our most basic transactions..."

6267. Berman, Milton. "Time Lord: Sir Sandford Fleming and the Creation of Standard Time." Magill Book Reviews, no. (2001).

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A study of the man who convinced the world to adopt a unified standard for telling time. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...However, some assertions--such as claiming the success of Sherlock Holmes detective stories rested on the concept of standard time--seem farfetched."

6268. Bernstein, Rob. "Find it." Yahoo! Internet Life 7, no. 7 (2001): 57.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features the Internet search engine of Vivisimo.Com in the United States, with a passing reference to Holmes. "...This new metasearch tool attacks the link overload problem by organizing Web pages into folders, which it calls 'clusters' For instance, if you run a search on the word Holmes, the site will divvy up the results into such categories as 'Sherlock Holmes,' 'Katie Holmes,' and 'Oliver Wendell Holmes'...."

6269. Bessman, Jim. "Words & Music." Billboard 114, no. 46 (2002): 82.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides an update on the music recording and publishing industry as of November 16, 2002 with reference to Sherlock Holmes Music. "...Music Sales has also entered into an agreement with Sherlock Holmes Music to sub-publish the Moody Blues' Justin Hayward's Nightswood BV catalog in the U.S., Canada, France, Scandinavia, Spain, and Portugal...."

6270. ———. "Words & Music." Billboard 114, no. 8 (2002): 37.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents news briefs related to the songwriting and publishing industries as of February 23, 2002, including reference to Holmes. "...Keyboardist Ray Manzarek stopped by the Bottom Line in New York last month to perform solo and to promote his new novel, The Poet in Exile--A Journey Into the Mystic (Thunder's Mouth Press), whose central character is his not-even-thinly disguised late Doors bandmate Jim Morrison....It turns out that Manzarek and Carroll first got together five years ago and commenced work on an album project. 'We recorded about half a dozen tunes, including 'Street of Crocodiles,' 'Shapeshifter,' and 'Just Like Sherlock Holmes,' Manzarek says."

6271. Bethune, Brian. "Men of the Deep." Maclean's 116, no. 47 (2003): N.PAG-0.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "The Far Side of the World," by Patrick O'Brien, opening with a reference to Holmes. "'Here, though the world explode, these two survive / And it is always 1895,' wrote the American author Vincent Starrett about his fictional heroes, Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson, and their world of gaslit intrigue. Some historical eras, illuminated as much by their literary characters as their inherent drama, never die...."

6272. Biemiller, Lawrence. "The Road Once Taken." Chronicle of Higher Education 51, no. 43 (2005): A40-A40.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Mr. Liebs has a sharp eye for roadside relics like tourist cabins and gravity-feed gas pumps. He tells the students to work 'almost like Sherlock Holmes, going down the street and looking for evidence....'" 6273. Bilchik, Gloria Shur. "Are You The Problem?" H&HN: Hospitals & Health Networks 76, no. 5 (2002): 38.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on chief executive officers (CEO) of hospitals as obstacles to personnel

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- management. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Paging Sherlock Holmes..."
6274. Billen, Andrew. "Not just tolerated, but loved." New Statesman 131, no. 4596 (2002): 46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the television program 'Shipman.' Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Once the investigation started, it was relatively quick, for the equally boring reason that you did not need to be a Sherlock Holmes to work out what was happening...."
6275. ———. "Space oddity." New Statesman 135, no. 4775 (2006): 48-48.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the television program "Life on Mars," starring Philip Glenister and John Simm. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...In the three episodes I have seen of this eight-part series, Sam, with his newfangled ways, is right a little too often and is in danger of becoming a smart-arse Sherlock Holmes to Gene's garbage-mouthed Dr. Watson...."
6276. Billen, Andrew, and Lisa Allardice. "Kiss and sell." New Statesman 132, no. 4648 (2003): 33-33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the television program 'James Hewitt: Confessions of a Cad,' directed by Mike Warner and Ariel White. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Hewitt was intermittently taken with the concept of portraying himself as Terry-Thomas. In his chalet in Switzerland, he was interviewed sitting in a bubble bath. There were extra bubbles, he explained, extracting a curly, Sherlock Holmes-type pipe from his mouth, 'because I'm a big boy....'" 6277. Binelli, Mark. "Coldplay." Rolling Stone, no. 864 (2001): 39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features the music group Coldplay. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. Band member Chris Martin indicates that one of his influences is Holmes. "...Those stories made me want to move to London. They glamorize London the same way Woody Allen glamorizes New York...."
6278. Birkerts, Sven. "Read at Your Own Risk." Esquire 132, no. 3 (1999): 118.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses information on adventure books, with a passing reference to Holmes. "For me most of the original reading thrills, before Sherlock Holmes or James Bond or items more furtively imported into the home, were all about man and nature--and disaster..."
6279. Bledsoe, Wayne. "CD fun & games; [Metro Edition]." Cincinnati Post (Ohio), November 26, 1994: 1B.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // CD players are multifunctional. A CD drive on your computer or video game will also play audio CDs. A CD-I (Interactive) player will play CD-I discs, audio CDs, CDs with graphics and CD movies.; CD drives are becoming more portable. The "Library of the Future" disc from World Library features an astounding 1,750 complete works on one CD - including the complete works of Shakespeare, most of the classics of Greek and Roman literature, the complete Sherlock Holmes stories, the complete tales of the Brothers Grimm, three novels by John Steinbeck, the King James Bible, the Koran, the Bhagavad Gita and The Book of Mormon.
6280. Bloomfield, David C. "Life Imitates Pokemon: The Virtues and Necessities of Technology-Based Peer Education in Today's Schools." Social policy 30, no. 1 (1999): 13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article focuses on the virtues and necessities of technology-based education peer education in today's schools and includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Deeply engaged in productive play, the team is both process- and end-driven since, as Sherlock Holmes might exclaim, 'The game's afoot!' and even the Watson-like learner can contribute companionship and the odd insight...."
6281. Bogan, Jesse. "The Night In Question." Texas Monthly 36, no. 4 (2008): 130-137.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article describes the result of criminal investigation pertaining to the murder of Texas Border Patrol agent Jose Gamez Jr., whose body was dumped in an irrigation canal on April 21, 1978. In South Texas, Gamez's disappearance made headlines for days, a few of them hinting that the killer could have been his fellow Border Patrol agent Frank Lugo. It did not help that he seemed to change his story each time he told it. He contradicted himself about the events leading up to the encounter with the immigrants. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...As we talked, Lugo lounged on a sofa. I quickly realized what investigators meant about his being hard to follow. His thoughts seemed to bounce in every direction. Sometimes he closed

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

his eyes and scanned the inside of his skull while he spoke. One minute he was telling me about how his partner's death had helped him discover who he really was, the next minute he was rambling on about the definition of 'truth' according to Sherlock Holmes...."

6282. Bollinger, Marty. "Did a Soviet Merchant Ship Encounter the Pearl Harbor Strike Force?" Naval War College Review 60, no. 4 (2007): 92-110.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes (p. 95). "...In 1990, Michael Slackman went farther, claiming without reservation that the ship 'of a third nation' encountered on 5 December (Hawaii time) was in fact Uritskii citing Agawa and Layton as his sources. Slackman further argues, in the spirit of Sherlock Holmes, that the absence of a radio transmission from Uritskii following this encounter raises the possibility of collusion, as put forward by Layton, though it 'by no means prove[s] that the Soviets knew of the Japanese plans.'..."
6283. Bond, Jon R. "The Scientification of the Study of Politics: Some Observations on the Behavioral Evolution in Political Science." Journal of Politics 69, no. 4 (2007): 897-907.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article examines the evolution of the discipline of political science over the century since its founding in the early 20th century. The ongoing debate as to whether politics is an art or a science is surveyed, with the author favoring a scientific approach. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Thus, the scientific method proceeds not by the scientification of the study of politics proving what is true, but rather by eliminating what is false. It is much like Sherlock Holmes' description of how he solved mysteries: 'when you have eliminated all which is impossible, then whatever remains, however improbable, must be the truth.'..."
6284. Borchard, David C. "The Future High-Tech Career Center." Futurist 34, no. 3 (2000): 22.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the innovation of services designed to assist the growing number of adults needing professional career counseling. Includes a passing reference to Holmes.
6285. Bornstein, Melvin. "What Freud Did Not Write About Dora." Psychoanalytic Inquiry 25, no. 1 (2005): 54-70.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...In this paper, you create a narrative with a plot of discovery that progresses like a Sherlock Holmes novel and brings clarity to Dora's life..."
6286. Borysenko, Joan. "Coping with a Critical Mom." Prevention 57, no. 5 (2005): 113-116.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Offers suggestions for daughters dealing with critical mothers. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Some mothers are more observant than Sherlock Holmes about your hair, your recent weight gain, or that blotch on your skin...."
6287. Bos, Jaap. "Everyday life objectivity." Social Epistemology 18, no. 2/3 (2004): 123-138.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Bibliography includes Holmes reference. Reve, K. van het. 1994. Dr. Freud und Sherlock Holmes. Frankfurt: Fischer.
6288. Boschetti, Egisto, Bernard Monsarrat, and Pier Giorgio Righetti. "The 'Invisible Proteome': How to Capture the Low-Abundance Proteins Via Combinatorial Ligand Libraries." Current Proteomics 4, no. 4 (2007): 198-208.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // References at end of article include one related to Holmes: Righetti, P.G. and Boschetti, E. (2007). Sherlock Holmes and the proteome - a detective story. FEBS J. 274: 897-905.
6289. Bosteels, Bruno. "The Truth is in the Making: Borges and Pragmatism." Romanic Review 98, no. 2 (2007): 135-151.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes in the text and notes. Text reads: "...Carlo Ginzburg, for example, has written some illuminating pages about the coincidence of new, indexical types of information such as fingerprints and other clues in the work of police detectives, or lapsus and inadvertent little gestures in the kind of case-study that is central to psychoanalysis. In both lines of work and in the absence of ready-made rules or laws, the need arises to think on the spot in terms of creative hypotheses or conjectures by which to interpret the unique fact of a crime or a singular perversion. Sherlock Holmes and Sigmund Freud thus are strict contemporaries, not just in terms of history or biographical coincidences but also for their place

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- in the larger paradigm shift toward a generalized epistemological model of abduction, as was to be have been theorized by Peirce...." Note is: Ginzburg, Carlo. "Clues: Morelli, Freud, and Sherlock Holmes." The Sign of Three: Dupin, Holmes, Peirce. Ed. Umberto Eco and Thomas A. Sebeok. Bloomington: Indiana University Press, 1988. 81-118.
6290. Bottum, Joseph. "Children's Books, Lost and Found." First Things: A Monthly Journal of Religion & Public Life, no. 188 (2008): 13-16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents the author's reflections on the nature of children's literature. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Genre fiction has always had a tendency to slide down the scale from popular adult book to children's classic. Many Victorian and Edwardian stories made this move from the grown-ups' shelves to the juvenile section-- Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea, The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes, The Count of Monte Cristo, King Solomon's Mines, The Prisoner of Zenda--but the same process was at work as late as The Lord of the Rings, published in 1954...."
6291. Bould, Mark. "The Incomplete Projects: Marxism, Modernity and the Politics of Culture." Historical Materialism 14, no. 4 (2006): 233-243.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The Incomplete Projects: Marxism, Modernity and the Politics of Culture," by Carl Freedman. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Unlike such detectives as C. Auguste Dupin and Sherlock Holmes, who are little more than ratiocination devices, the hardboiled detective -- like Hammett's Op and Sam Spade, Raymond Chandler's Philip Marlowe -- does not proceed by the painstaking gathering and piecing together of clues. Instead, he stirs thing up..."
6292. Bourne, Leah. "Modern Pastoral." Time 172, no. (2008): 14-14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The author reports on the various articles of men's clothing which are being made out of tweed during the Fall of 2008. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Sherlock Holmes became a tweed icon at the turn of the last century after sporting nubby wool capes while on the trail of London's miscreants...."
6293. Boyd, Kelly. "Reviews." Contemporary British History 21, no. 3 (2007): 389-403.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews several books including "Relocating Britishness" Manchester University Press, 2004 275 pp., ISBN 0 7190 7026 0 (GBP50.00). Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Chapman and Hilton explore the meaning of several popular fictional creations who radiate Britishness: Sherlock Holmes, Bulldog Drummond, The Saint and James Bond. All embodied stereotypes which reflected certain aspects of male middle-class Britishness...."
6294. Bradbury, Ray. "The Finnegan." Fantasy & Science Fiction 91, no. 4/5 (1996): 109.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the short story 'The Finnegan,' by Ray Bradbury, about a giant spider. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Soon after, Sir Robert Merriweather, pretender to the throne of Sherlock Holmes but modestly refusing the claim, moved through the ten dozen doors of his antique house to come forth to search for this terrible thief of life...."
6295. Brady, Lois Smith. "Love at Last!" Good Housekeeping 230, no. 2 (2000): 90.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents four happy brides and how they met their match. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...No one thought Mike Riezenman, now 59, would ever get married. He had many passions-- Sherlock Holmes, Gilbert and Sullivan, wry jokes, and Chinese food--but domesticity was not one of them...."
6296. Braus, Patricia. "Strokes and the South." American Demographics 20, no. 5 (1998): 26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents statistical information on the percentage of death risk from stroke in the Southern part of the United States. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The failure to find a satisfactory explanation for the stroke belt has driven researchers to speculate. 'It's sort of like Sherlock Holmes. If all the common things have been discussed, you look at the uncommon things,' says Howard...."
6297. Bremner, Charles. "A mademoiselle Maigret." The Times (London), Dec 7, 1994: 16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "In the mid 1970s, women graduates were finally allowed to compete in the tough

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

examinations for the high-flyer level of entry, at commissaire level, and Mlle Monteil, with a law degree, was one of the few selected. At the Quai des Orfèvres (the PJ headquarters) lots of the old inspectors when I joined remembered me as a kid, she says. She worked her way up from local officer to a senior job at the Stupes, or drug squad, and then, in 1989, to the head of la Mondaine, the old name for the prostitution squad, a fixture of Paris folklore.; She is, she says, a devoted detective. I am a complete fan of the PJ, everything that's Sherlock Holmes, she says. I couldn't conceive of the police any other way. Others prefer the intelligence side or keeping public order. What I love is the investigation. It means starting out with a jigsaw puzzle, a body, and working backwards. You have to put together the pieces, follow people around. It's a hunt and it's up to you to be sly and have flair and intuition, which all makes it impossible to get bored...."

6298. Brenchley, Fred, and Elizabeth Brenchley. "Gallipoli's deep secret." Australian Geographic, no. 89 (2008): 60-69.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents information on the Royal Australian Navy submarine AE2, which is 73 meters below the surface of the Sea of Marmara ever since the Gallipoli, Turkey invasion in the World War I. All crew members of the submarine died in the invasion. The invasion took place on the night of April 24, 1915. AE2 created history by being the first submarine to penetrate the Dardanelles underwater as well as the first Australian Navy vessel to attack an enemy warship. The AE2 story is the story of the passion of three men including the Lieutenant Commander Dacre Stoker. Before conceding defeat, Stoker and the AE2 harassed Turkish shipping by firing off pot shots, frightening fishing boats and generally getting out the message that Marmara was no longer a Turkish lake. Article inset, "The Forgotten Crew," includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Prison life had its brighter moments. Inmates organised entertainment such as plays, and it was acting in the POW camp that inspired Stoker to start a successful stage and film career after the war. Through the 1920s and '30s, he carved out a career in niche character roles on stage (left) and film, playing the professional, whether officer, doctor or even Watson to Sherlock Holmes. In a late 1930s movie he played the part of a British naval captain ordering his crew to abandon ship under German fire -- a role he knew only too well."

6299. Briggs, Asa. "Victorian Culture and the Idea of the Grotesque (Book)." Literature & History 11, no. 2 (2002): 121.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Victorian Culture and the Idea of the Grotesque,' edited by Colin Trodd, Paul Barlow and David Amigoni. Includes a passing reference to Holmes.

6300. Briggs, Pamela Beere, and Natalie Cole. "Women of Mystery." American Libraries 34, no. 10 (2003): 44-47.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on the film "Women of Mystery: Three Writers Who Forever Changed Detective Fiction," completed by filmmakers Pamela Beere Briggs and William McDonald and librarian Natalie Cole. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "... I remember seeking fun-to-read, engaging mystery fiction following my graduation from college in 1980, but all I found were the books I had already read as a teenager: Sherlock Holmes, Miss Marple, and thrillers. By the time Sara Paretsky's and Sue Grafton's books first appeared in 1982, I had given up my search and gone on to other kinds of books and then to graduate film school, where my schedule no longer allowed any time to read fiction...."

6301. Brisben, J. Quinn. "Spinning wheels of home." Progressive 58, no. 11 (1994): 40.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book Women's Work, the First 20,000 Years: Women, Cloth, and Society in Early Times, by Elizabeth Wayland Barber. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Like Sherlock Holmes, she repeatedly makes brilliant deductions from evidence that previous students have seen but not observed...."

6302. Brogaard, Berit O. "Peirce on Abduction and Rational Control." Transactions of the Charles S. Peirce Society 35, no. 1 (1999): 129.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights Charles Peirce's abduction theory as a form of reasoning distinct from deduction and induction. Includes references to Holmes.

6303. Bronaugh, Whit. "Looking for Georgia's Lost Franklinia." American Forests 113, no. 4 (2008): 30-33.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents the author's experience of searching for the Franklinia plant in

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- North America. Includes passing references to Holmes. "...The search for something lost or unknown is always powered by an engine of hope, based on a mixture of fact, faith, and fantasy, whether you are Sherlock Holmes or Ponce de Leon. When I first researched and considered this quest, Sherlock shook his head. But when I read, 'Perhaps wild specimens will be rediscovered,' in my field guide. Ponce pushed me out the door...."
6304. Brons, Martijn R. E., Henri L. F. De Groot, and Peter Nijkamp. "Growth Effects of Governmental Policies: A Comparative Analysis in a Multi-Country Context." Growth & Change 31, no. 4 (2000): 547.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to Holmes in the notes: McAleer, M. 1994. Sherlock Holmes and the search for truth: A diagnostic tale, Journal of Economic Surveys 8:327-351.
6305. Brookhiser, Richard. "Acts of Mercy." National Review 60, no. 15 (2008): 58-58.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The author reflects on health workers in his neighborhood who work at a dialysis outpatient facility. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Researchers interrogate the life force for cures; physicians strain to apply knowledge to the mysteries of specific cases (in his profession, every Dr. Watson is a Sherlock Holmes); and the men and women on the sidewalk draw the blood, take the pulse, push the gurneys, and check the drips...."
6306. ———. "The Final Analysis." National Review 50, no. 22 (1998): 41-44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article focuses on the Culture and Conflict show which featured the works of artist Sigmund Freud, on view in Washington D.C. in 1998. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...This is not just offering explanations in the manner of Sherlock Holmes...."
6307. Brottman, Mikita. "Nutty Professors." The Chronicle of Higher Education, no. (2005): B7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Ask anybody what adjective goes best with the word 'professor,' and the answer will almost certainly be 'absent-minded,' or possibly 'nutty.' Popular culture is full of addlebrained academics, whether they be villainous madmen like Professor Morbius in Forbidden Planet or Sherlock Holmes's archenemy Professor Moriarty; crazy cranks like Professor Emmett Brown in Back to the Future, or well-meaning but harebrained eccentrics like Professor Brainard in The Absent-Minded Professor, Professor Branestawm in Norman Hunter's children's television series, Professor Pat Pending in the Hanna Barbera cartoon Wacky Races, or Professor Dumbledore of Harry Potter fame...."
6308. Brown, Craig. "Winston Churchill? He never existed." The Scotsman, February 4, 2008: 13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "He was one of Britain's greatest leaders: a man who guided the country through its darkest hour with iron determination and unshakeable resolve. But for a significant number of people nowadays, it seems Winston Churchill is merely a fictional figure who exists in films and books about history. This is one of the claims of a new survey that shows Britons may be starting to lose their grip on reality, with nearly one in four believing Churchill and Florence Nightingale are mythical figures, and more than half thinking the fictional detective Sherlock Holmes actually existed...."
6309. Brown, Donald E. "Human Nature and History." History & Theory 38, no. 4 (1999): 138.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Text and note include a reference to Holmes: Carlo Ginzburg, "Morelli, Freud and Sherlock Holmes: Clues and Scientific Method," History Workshop 9 (1980), 5-36.
6310. Brown, Douglas M. "CMCC's persistent pursuit of university affiliation Part III: the push for union with the University of Victoria, BC, 1988 to 1992." Journal of the Canadian Chiropractic Association 40, no. 2 (1996): 87.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Perhaps Sherlock Holmes could help to solve the mystery of who or what killed CMCC's changes to affiliate with University of Victoria...."
6311. Brown, Jeanette. "Gifts for Budding Astronomers." Astronomy 26, no. 12 (1998): 86.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features gift suggestions for budding astronomers in the United States. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The search for answers to these and other questions will make a little Sherlock Holmes of your child..."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6312. Brown, Kerry, Gerald Chan, Kenneth C. Walker, Michael Sheringham, J. E. Hoare, Reinhard Drifte, and David Secher. "East Asia." Asian Affairs 39, no. 1 (2008): 153-166.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews several books including Okamoto Kido, translated by Ian Macdonald. The Curious Casebook of Inspector Hanshichi: Detective Stories of Old Edo, University of Hawai'i Press, Honolulu, Hawai'i, 2007. pp. xxxvii þ 335. Bibliog. Notes. Map. Pb. $24. ISBN 9 7808 2483 1004. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "In Japan, the Hanshichi stories are well known and have retained their popularity since they first began to appear in 1916. The author, Okamoto Kido, was the son of a samurai, Okamoto Keinosuke, who worked for many years until his death in 1902 for the British Legation in Tokyo, and who arranged for his son to be taught English by the legation staff. Okamoto Kido began his career as a journalist but he always wanted to write for the kabuki theatre, and indeed achieved success in this field. But it was Inspector Hanshichi who really made his name. Although there are echoes of other detectives, including Sherlock Holmes, in the depiction of Hanshichi, what gives the stories their special flavour, as Ian Macdonald, the translator of this collection, points out in his introduction, is that the setting is wholly in pre-modern Japan, a world that was already remote by the time Hanshichi appeared in print...."
6313. Brown, Rich, and Tricia Harris. "Quick Clips." PC Magazine 22, no. 9 (2003): 137.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents several computer games used in different parts of life. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Post Mortem (from the company that brought us last year's terrific adventure game Siberia) offers enough plot twists to keep the story interesting, and the beautiful graphics set the right mood. But you won't feel like Sherlock Holmes cracking this case; solve some mostly simple puzzles and you're done...."
6314. Browne, Ray B. "Dorothy Quick: Mark Twain's 'Little Fish.'" Journal of American & Comparative Cultures 23, no. 1 (2000): 35.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the influence of writer Mark Twain on literary style of novelist Dorothy Quick in the United States. Overview of the book The Stolen White Elephant by Mark Twain with a passing reference to Holmes. "...Meanwhile, one detective, an obvious satire on Sherlock Holmes whom Twain envied and despised for his success, telegraphs from Monroe, Michigan, that he is on to some fresh tracks and will have the elephant back within a week...."
6315. Bryant, Eric, and Ahmad Wright. "Book reviews: Fiction." Library Journal 123, no. 12 (1998): 134.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'The Coffin Dancer,' by Jeffery Deaver, with a passing reference to Holmes. "If you could imagine James Bond as Brenda K. Starr and Sherlock Holmes as a quadriplegic with a penchant for solving arcane forensic clues, this suspenseful cat-and-mouse exercise should be easy to enjoy...."
6316. Brynko, Barbara. "Generate: Introducing the g2 Toolbar." Information Today 25, no. 2 (2008): 32-32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Announcement of a new technology tool, with a passing reference to Holmes. "Generate, Inc. unleashed its latest on-demand business intelligence application, turning the new Version 3 into a virtual Sherlock Holmes of enterprise data...."
6317. Buchlotz, Chris. "Whos, whats and wheres of the Web." Telephony 233, no. 9 (1997): 38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on a new generation of Web analysis tools that give Web site creators the ability to know their audiences better and provide Internet service providers (ISPs) with a new value-added service. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "... 'With a little 'Sherlock Holmes,' you can find out a lot of cool stuff about how a site has been used,' said Shank...."
6318. Buck, R. Creighton. "Sherlock Holmes in Babylon." The American Mathematical Monthly 87, no. 5 (1980): 335-345.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Let me begin by clarifying the title 'Sherlock Holmes in Babylon.' Lest some members of the Baker Street Irregulars be misled, my topic is the archaeology of mathematics and my objective is to retrace a small portion of the research of two scholars...."
6319. Bukoski, Anthony. "Report of the Guardian of the Sick." War, Literature & the Arts: An International Journal of

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- the Humanities* 19, no. 1 (2007): 47-56.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents the short story "Report of the Guardian of the Sick," by Anthony Bukoski. Contains a passing reference (p. 52) to Holmes.
6320. Buncombe, Andrew. "Adulterers watch out! India's No.1 ladies' detective agencies are on the case." The Independent (London), Sep 26, 2008: 38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "'We are seeing a new trend now,' says Ms [Lahiri], sitting in the offices of the detective agency she heads in south Delhi. 'It is not just the men who are involved in these activities.' There have been cases where women were seen 'parking their car in one place, getting out and then into getting into somebody else's car. They are very smart,' she said. Later, sitting down with the 27-year-old woman whose elaborate marriage ceremony was scheduled to take place within two weeks, MsPaliwal handed her a box of tissues and broke the bad news. Then she had to confront the young man's family. At first they refused to believe it, but the detective had secretly videoed the maid's confession. The marriage was immediately called off. 'All the preparations for the wedding were ready,' said Ms [Paliwal], who keeps a copy of Sherlock Holmes detective stories on the desk in her Delhi office....'The private detective has now become just another part of India's vast wedding industrial complex.'" 6321. Burgi, Michael. "Arts & Entertainment revamps format." Adweek Western Edition 44, no. 6: 12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on changes in the Arts & Entertainment network of cable television. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...The term 'Mysteries' refers to the increasing number of whodunit-type shows on the schedule: Lovejoy Mysteries, Sherlock Holmes Mysteries, A&E Mystery Movie, etc...."
6322. Burke, Peter. "Picturing History." History Today 51, no. 4 (2001): 22.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the importance of visual sources on the range of men's historical inquiry with a passing reference to Holmes. "...In the reading of images, historians may be well advised to follow the model of Sherlock Holmes, Sigmund Freud and the connoisseur Giovanni Morelli (as described by Carlo Ginzburg in his famous essay on 'clues'), and concentrate their attention on significant details, especially the details which the artists took for granted - on what they did not know they knew...."
6323. Burrows, Lynette. "Britain's Cultural Conspiracy?" Human Life Review 26, no. 2/3 (2000): 99.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Looks at the concerns of the book The Sex Change Society: Feminised Britain Neutered Mate, by Melanie Phillips, regarding the culture of divorce and illegitimacy in Great Britain. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...However, it would not take Sherlock Holmes to work out that with homosexuals at 2% of the population and committed feminists at probably about the same, they are far too few in number to have wrought such havoc on public life unless there was some other power using them as a front...."
6324. Bush, Vanessa, Daren Fonda, Andy Lewis, and Sora Song. "Life & Times." Life 22, no. 7 (1999): 43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents news briefs relating to people as of June 1999. Includes a passing reference to Holmes under the "Crime" heading. "...The 18 eerily realistic dioramas (among them: a dark bathroom, a disheveled bedroom) were built in the '30s and '40s by a New Hampshire socialite fascinated with Sherlock Holmes and unsolved crimes..."
6325. Byfield, Eli. "Bad news Ralph." Report / Newsmagazine (National Edition) 29, no. 8 (2002): 24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses taxation on tobacco products and liquor under the political leadership of Premier Ralph Klein in Alberta. Passing reference to the Sherlock Holmes Pub in West Edmonton Mall.
6326. Byrne, John A., and Ben Elgin. "Cisco Behind the Hype. (Cover story)." Business Week, no. 1/21 (2002): 54-61.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article deals with the financial woes facing Cisco amid questions surrounding its aggressive accounting practices. Inset includes reference to Holmes. "Howard Schilit, a former American University accounting professor, has been dubbed 'the Sherlock Holmes of accounting.' As the director of the Maryland-based Center for Financial Research & Analysis, he and his team of forensic accountants attempt to unravel financial results for major investors. But Cisco's latest quarterly results confused even him. If the most prominent forensic accountant couldn't get it right, what chance do investors have?"

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6327. Cairns, John. "Sustainability, Exceptionalism, and Exemptionalism." Ecosystem Health 7, no. 3 (2001): 147-154.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...As fictional detective Sherlock Holmes is reputed to have said (his apprentice quotes him on p. 300 of King 1996), 'When faced with the unthinkable one chooses the merely impossible.'" 6328. Callister, T. A., Jr., and Nicholas C. Burbules. "Just Give It To Me Straight: A Case Against Filtering The Internet." Phi Delta Kappan 85, no. 9 (2004): 648-655.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Notes that Internet filtering prevented students and library patrons from seeing such things as "the complete texts of famous works, including the Bible, Moby-Dick, The Book of Mormon, and The Complete Adventures of Sherlock Holmes....Needless to say, a great deal is sacrificed when a young person cannot access information about Marx, anti-hate speech, Sherlock Holmes, or the Declaration of Independence...."
6329. Cameron, Amy. "Books." Maclean's 116, no. 5 (2003): 50.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book The Little Friend, by Donna Tartt and includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Although her book is for adults, Tartt wanted to recapture that 'really deep, dreamlike state of childhood reading -- breathlessness and having your heart pound.' So the author, who wrote both her novels in longhand, returned to well-crafted favourites of her youth, such as Treasure Island and Sherlock Holmes to create the right atmosphere for The Little Friend...."
6330. Caplan, Lincoln, and Peter Annin. "And now, for the defense." Newsweek 125, no. 24 (1995): 70.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. Focuses on the lead defense lawyers in the Oklahoma City bombing case and asserts that they share tenacity, a flair for the theatrical and a strategy that puts the government, not their clients, on trial. Mike Tigar, attorney for Terry Nichols. "...Tigar, the Joseph D. JAmail Professor of Law at the University of Texas...had already quoted Shakespeare, the Bible and Sherlock Holmes at one preliminary hearing...."
6331. Carey, Benedict. "Chance of a lifetime." Health 8, no. 3 (1994): 90.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on pre-implantation genetic diagnosis which allows doctors to fertilize an egg in the laboratory and examine its genes before inserting it back to the uterus. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...For another, interpreting a PCR pattern--which looks a little like the bar code on a cereal box--requires knowledge, lots of practice, and, sometimes, a detective's intuitive eye. Where one doctor sees a normal pre-embryo, another may sense something out of whack. Where Dr. Watson sees only footprints, Sherlock Holmes sees a six-foot-tall man who walks with a limp...."
6332. Carlin, John. "A little bit of Che, a little bit of Posh." New Statesman 130, no. 4529 (2001): 14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the virtual warfare launched by Subcomandante Marcos or Rafael Guillen, leader of the Zapatista National Liberation Army in Mexico. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...French, Italian and Spanish intellectuals make pilgrimages to see Mexico's answer to Robin Hood. They marvel at his wise words; thrill to his masked Zorro get-up, his Sherlock Holmes pipe..."
6333. Carlson, Larry A. "Isn't Justice Always Unfair?: The Detective in Southern Literature (Book)." Journal of American Culture 21, no. 2 (1998): 91.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Isn't Justice Always Unfair?: The Detective in Southern Literature,' by J.K. Van Dover and John F. Jebb. Includes a passing reference to Holmes.
6334. Casals, F., and A. Navarro. "Chromosomal evolution: Inversions: the chicken or the egg?" Heredity 99, no. 5 (2007): 479-480.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The author reflects on chromosomal evolution. The article ends with a reference to Holmes. "...As Sherlock Holmes said while solving the Boscombe Valley Mystery [sic], 'Evidence is a very sticky thing...it may seem to point very straight to one thing, but if you shift your own point a little, you may find it pointing in an equally uncompromising manner to something entirely different.'"

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6335. Case, Thomas E. "World literature in review: Spanish." World Literature Today 68, no. 2 (1994): 345.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Respiracion artificial,' by Ricardo Piglia. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "The author of several novels and collections of essays, Ricardo Piglia is a convincing Sherlock Holmes or G. Chesterton in the weaving of his intriguing discourses."
6336. Cathcart, Brian. "Baiting the goody-goody." New Statesman 136, no. 4848 (2007): 17-17.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The author reflects on a recent headline stating "BBC guilty of liberal bias" and how it might not be exactly true. He mentions several members of the British Broadcasting Corp. (BBC) including John Humphrys and Jeremy Clarkson whom the author implies are not liberally biased. He mentions that the BBC is required by law to be impartial and that its bias varies according to time, place, and type of program and that impartiality is not necessarily found in the middle ground. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...A few weeks ago Ingrams himself referred in the column to 'Haines's account'. (When I spotted that I said 'Aha!' aloud, just as Sherlock Holmes would on finding a vital clue with his magnifying glass. Perhaps I need a holiday.)" 6337. ———. "Nothing like Sherlock Holmes." New Statesman 127, no. 4387 (1998): 30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the 1998 murder trial into the racially inspired death of Stephen Lawrence in Great Britain. Includes references to Holmes and the computer software "Home Office Large Major Enquiry System or Holmes (if the acronym is a little forced, it is in homage to Sherlock)...."
6338. Cawley, Janet. "Gene Wilder: twice blessed." Biography 3, no. 1 (1999): 80.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles United States-based comedian Gene Wilder. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Wilder's current project is Murder in a Small Town, an original A&E movie scheduled to air this month. A self-described 'longtime mystery fan and Sherlock Holmes nut,' Wilder cowrote the script with his brother-in-law, Gilbert Pearlman..."
6339. Centrone, Rosie. "Worth a thousand words." Child Life 73, no. 2 (1994): 16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents pictograph puzzles, or pictures that stand for words, of famous fictional characters. Holmes is one of the answers to the puzzle.
6340. Chakwin Jr, Stephen D. "Wagner: Tristan & Isolde." American Record Guide 68, no. 3 (2005): 193-194.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the orchestral music release "Tristan & Isolde," featuring works composed by Richard Wagner and both performed by the Bulgarian Festival with conductor Glen Cortese and the Philadelphia Grand Opera with conductor William Smith. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The great surprise of this set is the conducting of William Smith, the perennial assistant conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra (and an expert on Sherlock Holmes), who sounds like a musical giant here...."
6341. Chen, Anne. "Digital Detectives Track Hacks." eWeek 18, no. 16 (2001): 58.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the increasing demand for digital detectives adept in solving hacking and intellectual property cases in the United States. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "If e-business had a modern-day Sherlock Holmes, his name would be David Dittrich...."
6342. Chen, Tina. "Towards an Ethics of Knowledge." Melus 30, no. 2 (2005): 157-173.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article focuses on the ethics of knowledge. Includes two references to "the Sherlock Holmes of a letter."
6343. Chevreière, J. P., and J. G. Munisteri. "Why many experts are wrong in forecasting capital investments and other emerging events." Hydrocarbon Processing 87, no. 2 (2008): 127-130.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...As Sherlock Holmes would say: Rex ipsa loquitur (Let the facts speak for themselves)...."
6344. Christianson, Eric S. "The Big Sleep: Strategic Ambiguity in Judges 4-5 and in Classic film noir." Biblical Interpretation 15, no. 4 (2007): 519-548.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Describing Raymond Chandler's Philip

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Marlowe, Andrew Spicer suggests that unlike 'Sherlock Holmes, Marlowe realizes that although he may solve an individual case, it is part of a wider corruption that is too deep to be eradicated'..."

6345. Christman, Ed. "Grabbing Sales By The Long Tail. (Cover story)." Billboard 118, no. 9 (2006): 22-22.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article deals with the application of statistical theory Long Tail to the music industry. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Also, the original source masters need to be located and cleaned up, which in the words of Rhino's Dorn, can 'really turn into a Sherlock Holmes expedition.'" 6346. Church, Ellen Booth. "Motivating Children at Group Time." Early Childhood Today 19, no. 6 (2005): 43-44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Suggests ways to motivate children to participate in group-time meetings. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Just for fun, you can pass out magnifying glasses to add a Sherlock Holmes effect to the investigation...."
6347. Cillpam, Polly. "New multimedia products." Compute! 16, no. 6 (1994): 72.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews new multimedia products, including Holmes software. "...The Sound Blaster Edutainment CD 16 kit is aimed at the high-technology-entertainment enthusiast. It has a Sound Blaster 16; The Software Toolworks Multimedia Encyclopedia; Aldus PhotoSyler SE Photo CD software; Secret Weapons of the Luftwaffe; The Secret of Monkey Island; Loom; Lemmings; Indianapolis 500: The Simulation; and Sherlock Holmes, The Simulation...."
6348. Clark, Stuart. "Cannibal stars." New Scientist 194, no. 2598 (2007): 32-36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The differences between Retter and Soker remain unresolved, but most astronomers are now ready to consider cannibal models. 'It's a bit like Sherlock Holmes: when you have eliminated everything else, you have to consider what's left,' says Bond. 'Maybe Retter and Soker are right: it is not a nova but a merger.'..."
6349. Clinton, Dan. "Looking Back." Popular Science 266, no. 1 (2005): 108-108.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Recalls some articles about science and technology featured in the March 1931 issue of "Popular Science" magazine. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "No Sherlock Holmes of fiction ever disguised himself with more versatility" than wildlife photographer Arthur N. Pack, we wrote. Clad as a succulent, Pack enticed shy desert animals to let him approach and take pictures...."
6350. Cockburn, Lyn. "Women of mystery." Herizons 8, no. 2 (1994): 21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on women mystery writers in Canada. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "[Frances Shelly] Wees, originally from Toronto, introduced her suave sleuth, Dr. Jonathan Merrill in the dirty '30s and not until the '50s did she retire him. While not indulging in her passion for world travel, she chronicled the adventures of her debonair Canadian Sherlock in over 20 books, much to the delight of her many avid fans...."
6351. Cockey, Linda, and Kathryn Kalmanson. "Annotated Bibliography on Musician Wellness." The American Music Teacher 52, no. 6 (2003): 34-49.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An updated annotated bibliography of literature and an updated list of videos, Web sites, and professional organizations relating to musician wellness are provided. The entry for Westney, William The Perfect Wrong Note and Other Musical Breakthroughs, Amadeus Press (2003) includes a reference to Holmes in Chapter 10. "Chapter Ten, 'Adventurous Amateurs,' is really about 'grown-up practicing' and maturing as a student and a teacher. The comparison to Sherlock Holmes and Albert Einstein and what they have in common make for fun reading."
6352. Cohen, Jack, and Ian Stewart. "Beyond all reasonable DNA." Lancet 345, no. 8965 (1995): 1586.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Opinion. Comments on the alternative explanations needed to prove the validity of DNA fingerprinting. Includes reference to Holmes. "'Once you have eliminated the impossible, then whatever remains, however improbable, must be the truth.' So said Sherlock Holmes, and so do prosecutors argue in criminal cases that hang upon the evidence of DNA fingerprints. The difficulty, which the great fictional detective swept under the carpet, is in deciding what remains....The uncertainties associated with DNA

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

fingerprinting, especially when exaggerated by lawyers, have left juries in a state of mind very different from Sherlock Holmes's certainties. Once you have eliminated the impossible, then whatever remains, however improbable, may well be false--because what you think is impossible might actually be commonplace...."

6353. Cohen, Sacha. "Digital detective." Training & Development 51, no. 6 (1997): 16.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses how companies can use the Internet for competitive intelligence.

Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Even if you don't aspire to be another Sherlock Holmes or Kinsey Millhone, you still may want to use the Net for competitive intelligence...."

6354. Cole, Bruce. "On Learning from the Greeks." Humanities 26, no. 3 (2005): 4-41.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Interviews Donald Kagan, historian and recipient of the 2005 Jefferson Lecturer in the Humanities award, about the teaching of history. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...The truth of the matter is I read widely among detective stories until I ran into Nero Wolfe. He was so much better than everybody else that I lost interest in all the others. I never much cared about whodunit. I don't love to guess who did it or work the solution. I enjoy the characters. Nero Wolfe and Archie are what those books are for me--the interplay between these two personalities. It's a more sophisticated and enjoyable version of the Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson relationship...."

6355. Colebatch, Hal G. P. "World Narrowing: Notes on Britain's Culture-War." National Observer, no. (2002): 15p.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Explores the status of popular culture and publications in Great Britain, with a passing reference to Holmes.

6356. Coleman, Andy. "Folk: Sherlock Holmes Helped." Birmingham Evening Mail, April 22, 2005: 35.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Singer songwriter Edwina Hayes found herself on the road to musical success when she delivered a car to one of America's southern states....With the car safely handed over to the new owner in Georgia, Edwina paid a visit to neighbouring state, Tennessee, and America's Music Capital, Nashville. 'I came across the Sherlock Holmes, an English pub that put on music nights. When I returned to the UK I kept in touch with the people I'd met in Nashville and went back there in 2002. A job in the kitchen of the Sherlock Holmes meant that Edwina could regularly perform her music at the pub as well as earn a wage. It also led to her big break...."

6357. Collier, Ellen Mansoor. "The children's crusader." Biography 2, no. 2 (1998): 70.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features Mark Miller, founder of the American Association for Lost Children.

Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Like a modern-day Sherlock Holmes, Miller maps out a game plan for each case, tracking clues and leads that have taken him from Florida to California, Hawaii, Germany, and Lebanon...."

6358. Collins, Mary Ellen. "Stuart M. Kaminsky." Writer 121, no. 1 (2008): 66.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article introduces Stuart M. Kaminsky, author of the books "Always Say Goodbye," "The Dead Don't Lie," and "People Who Walk in Darkness." Kaminsky offers advice to writers by discussing why he writes, his daily routine, and evaluates his writing process. Kaminsky also describes the environment in which he writes and mentions what stories and authors have influenced him. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Influences: Dostoevsky is number one. The obvious ones, Chandler more than Hammett. And you can go back to the TV series The Rockford Files and Harry O. I don't necessarily remember what the mysteries were; I remember the characters. The Brothers Karamazov is kind of a dopey story, but the characters are all wonderful. I think people obsess ridiculously over plot. I reread Sherlock Holmes for Holmes and Watson, not the plot. With so many popular writers, I just don't care about their characters."

6359. Colvin, Geoffrey. "Deflation? Get a Grip." Fortune 138, no. 8 (1998): 289.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the fear of deflation in the United States economy as of October 26, 1998 and the impact the prospect is having on investors. Includes a reference to Holmes. "Sherlock Holmes knew the evil that deflation can rouse. 'I have seen the will of the deceased wife. To determine its exact meaning I have been obliged to work out the present prices of the investments with which it is concerned,' he tells Watson in 'The Adventure of the Speckled Band.' Mrs. Stoner had left her second husband investments

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

that had once yielded some 1,100[pounds] a year, of which her twin daughters could claim a fixed amount if they married. But 'now, through the fall in agricultural prices,' Holmes finds, the income is 'not more than 750[pounds].' Thus, as a result of the late 19th century's steadily falling commodity prices, the sum left for Mrs. Stoner's husband, the deranged Dr. Grimesby Roylott of Stoke Moran, would be intolerably small if his stepdaughters were to marry. When they plan to do so, as I need scarcely remind you, he murders one and attempts to murder the other by means of a swamp adder, the deadliest snake in India. If this is what comes of deflation, then you can't blame those who are suddenly sounding almost panicky about its prospect...."

6360. ———. "Xerox's Inventor-In-Chief." Fortune 156, no. 1 (2007): 65-72.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents an interview with Sophie Vandebroek, chief technology officer at Xerox Corp. Color photograph in article includes a caption with reference to Holmes. "Show Me Fortune's Geoff Colvin makes a point as Vandebroek displays a Sherlock Holmes story printed using Xerox's digital microprinting technology."

6361. Conley, Carolyn A. "Reviews." Journal of Social History 27, no. 4 (1994): 880.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Apprehending the Criminal: The Production of Deviance in Nineteenth-Century Discourse,' by Marie-Christine Leps. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...After analyzing several French novels, the Sherlock Holmes stories and finally Stevenson's The Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde Leps concludes that literature challenged these presuppositions..."

6362. Cook, William, and Lisa Allardice. "Back to the future." New Statesman 132, no. 4650 (2003): 26-27.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the way that the sci-fi TV show "Dr. Who" reflected the social cultural history of Great Britain. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...But it was Tom Baker (1974-81) who hit the intergalactic jackpot, playing him as a dippy hippy with an unfeasibly long scarf, a fondness for jelly babies and just a dash of Sherlock Holmes...."

6363. Copeland, Rebecca. "Woman uncovered: pornography and power in the detective fiction of Kirino Natsuo." Japan Forum 16, no. 2 (2004): 249-269.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This article considers the way Kirino Natsuo's Tenshi ni misuterareta yoru (The night overlooked by angels, 1994) uses pornography to unsettle readers and, by so doing, to force a critical consideration of contemporary social structures as well as the gendering of the detective genre itself." Includes a passing reference to Holmes.

6364. Cornell, John E., and Christine Laine. "The Science and Art of Deduction: Complex Systematic Overviews." Annals of Internal Medicine 148, no. 10 (2008): 786-788.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The article focuses on the growing frequency of complex systematic overviews. Systematic overviews are used in describing systematic reviews that incorporate previous systematic reviews to develop an evidence base. This process also needs proper comprehension, transparency and objective to reduce the risk of deduction in assessing the quality of any review article." Sections of article open with quotations from Holmes. "Like all other arts, the science of deduction and analysis is one which can only be acquired by long and patient study . . . let the inquirer begin by mastering the more elementary problems." (Sherlock Holmes, A Study in Scarlet); "It is not really difficult to construct a series of simple inferences, each dependent upon its predecessor and each simple in itself. If, after doing so, one simply knocks out all the central inferences and presents one's audience with the starting-point and the conclusion, one may produce a startling, though possibly a meretricious, effect." (Sherlock Holmes, The Dancing Men); "It is of the highest importance in the art of deduction to be able to recognize, out of a number of facts, which are incidental and which are vital." (Sherlock Holmes, The Reigate Squires); "Circumstantial evidence is a very tricky thing . . . It may seem to point very straight to one thing, but if you shift your own point of view a little, you may find it pointing in an equally uncompromising manner to something entirely different." (Sherlock Holmes, The Boscombe Valley Mystery).

6365. Cornish, Edward. "How We Can Anticipate Future Events. (Cover story)." Futurist 35, no. 4 (2001): 26.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides information on the concept of anticipating and shaping the future. Holmes reference found in photo caption: "How can we know the future? Conjure it like Merlin, study it like an

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

astronomer, or divine it like a fortune teller? Perhaps we can only deduce it, like Sherlock Holmes."

6366. Cornog, Martha, and Timothy Perper. "Non-Western Sexuality Comes to the U.S.: A Crash Course in Manga and Anime for Sexologists." Contemporary Sexuality 39, no. 3 (2005): 1-6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article informs that Japanese comics called "Manga" seem similar to American comics but are rooted in Japanese art and history. Includes passing reference to Holmes. "...The closest U.S. equivalent is non-commercial 'slash' fiction written by female fans about homosexual romances between known characters, like Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson..."
6367. Costa, Newton C. A. Da, and Otavio Bueno. "Quasi-Truth, Supervvaluations and Free Logic." History & Philosophy of Logic 20, no. 3/4 (1999): 215-226.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes.
6368. Cotter, Thomas F. "Gutenberg's Legacy: Copyright, Censorship, and Religious Pluralism." California law review 91, no. 2 (2003): 323.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the copyright law for religious literary works. Includes a passing reference to Holmes.
6369. Cowan, David. "Beware superficial theorising." Brand Strategy, no. 195 (2005): 2005.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reveals why the approach of Sherlock Holmes is needed to link marketing to profit and market share.
6370. ———. "Holmes' place." Brand Strategy, no. 195 (2005): 2005.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reveals why the approach of Sherlock Holmes is needed to link marketing to profit and market share.
6371. ———. "Identifying the right problem." Brand Strategy, no. 195 (2005): 2005.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reveals why the approach of Sherlock Holmes is needed to link marketing to profit and market share.
6372. ———. "Innovative strategies are rare." Brand Strategy, no. 195 (2005): 2005.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reveals why the approach of Sherlock Holmes is needed to link marketing to profit and market share.
6373. ———. "Understanding sponsorship." Brand Strategy, no. 195 (2005): 2005.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reveals why the approach of Sherlock Holmes is needed to link marketing to profit and market share.
6374. Cowan, Mark. "Elementary to Beat a Burglar; Computer Program on Trail." Birmingham Evening Mail, April 11, 2002: 17.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "An advanced computer program which acts like a virtual Sherlock Holmes by sifting through clues has been developed to help police target burglars. The software can also identify burgled houses most likely to suffer a second visit from thieves...."
6375. Cowdrey, Albert E. "Danny's Inferno." Fantasy & Science Fiction 105, no. 6 (2003): 142-158.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the short story "Danny's Inferno," by Albert E. Cowdrey. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...We opened this issue with a mention of a new anthology that merges the great detective Sherlock Holmes with the nightmarish cosmos imagined by H. P. Lovecraft...."
6376. Cowie, Helen, and Petruska Clarkson. "Narratives of psychotherapy in modern English literature." Counselling Psychology Quarterly 16, no. 3 (2003): 249-263.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Explores how novelists portray counseling in contemporary fiction. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...Sherlock Holmes and Sigmund Freud meet through their connection with Emily V. Holmes suspects that she may have been involved in the death of her guardian..."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6377. Coyne, Pat. "Dielectrics." New Statesman & Society 8, no. 360 (1995): 30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the debate concerning creationism and evolution. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Of the second question, in the words of Sherlock Holmes, 'These are deep waters, Watson'. Complexity theory would indicate that reality, while it may be deterministic, is essentially chaotic...."
6378. Craig, Amanda, and Lisa Allardice. "This summer's No 1." New Statesman 132, no. 4650 (2003): 39-39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the book series the No 1 Ladies' Detective Agency written by Alexander McCall Smith. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The consolation offered by the detective novel in its original conception - with protagonists such as the rationalist Sherlock Holmes, the cynical Marlowe, the intuitive Miss Marple and the formidable Lord Peter Wimsey - has been abandoned in favour of psychological quirks, kinks and social realism...."
6379. Craig, Amanda, and Jason Cowley. "Why I hate Hannibal Lecter." New Statesman 130, no. 4525 (2001): 57.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses views on Hannibal Lecter, a fictitious character in the motion pictures 'Silence of the Lambs' and 'Hannibal.' Includes passing references to Holmes. "...Lecter is not the first highly intelligent murderer in fiction (consider Sherlock Holmes's adversary, Moriarty), although he is the most extravagantly so...If Sherlock Holmes once offered the consolations of showing how superstition and evil could be worsted by outstanding forensic intelligence on the side of good, Lecter plays to the fantasies of those who are powerless, and very angry, by switching sides...."
6380. Craig, Philip R. "Character and locale in crime fiction." Writer 111, no. 5 (1998): 13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Relates the author's experiences as a crime fiction writer. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...It's worth noting that when recalling favorite stories and books, most of us remember a lot more about the characters than about the plots. We have vivid mental pictures of James Bond, Sherlock Holmes, and Scarlett O'Hara, but we are hard pressed to retell their stories in any but the most general ways, even though we remember that we enjoyed them...."
6381. Crane, John. "Inside the criminal mind." New Statesman & Society 8, no. 340 (1995): 29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the work and views of forensic psychologist David Canter on offender profiling as a criminal investigation method. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Canter was widely hailed in the press as a latter-day Sherlock Holmes...."
6382. Crawford, David. "Something for the end of the year?" Mathematics in School 29, no. 4 (2000): 21-2, 40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Two activities that teachers can use during the last lesson of the year or term are suggested. The first activity is a mathematical bingo game and the second consists of a list of clues linking a number to a well-known phrase for which only the initial letter of each key word and a small linking word are provided. Samples of the second exercise, an everyday version and a mathematical version, are offered, along with solutions. Holmes and Baker Street are part of the answer to question 14 in the "Everyday Version."
6383. Crowley, Bill. "Association of the German Petroleum Industry." Hydrocarbon Processing 80, no. 2 (2001): 21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the Association of the German petroleum industry's Web site. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "This month's puzzle. Speaking of the deep Web, here's our Sherlock Holmes Internet challenge for this month. The two-part question: What country had the largest annual percentage increase in refining capacity in 1999? How much of an increase was it in thousands of barrels per day?"
6384. ———. "Mine's bigger than yours!" Hydrocarbon Processing 80, no. 1 (2001): 17.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents results of a study by the School of Information Management and Systems at the University of California at Berkeley that attempted to measure how much information is produced in the world each year. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "So, as my favorite detective, Sherlock Holmes, says: 'The game's afoot!' Here is a challenge to you...."
6385. Currie, Gregory. "Visible traces: Documentary and the contents of photographs." Journal of Aesthetics & Art Criticism 57, no. 3 (1999): 285.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Analyzes the documentary and nondocumentary elements within a documentary. Holmes mentioned in note 9: "Sherlock Holmes simulates the criminal in 'The Musgrave Ritual.'" 6386. Dabney, Lewis M. "Edmund Wilson, Jr." Sewanee Review 103, no. 2 (1995): 198.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles American writer Edmund Wilson Jr. Childhood, with a reference to Holmes. "...He would want to be a novelist, and would regularly publish short stories in the school and college magazines, but no boyhood fiction has survived, though Sandy and he 'wrote and illustrated a series called The Adventures of Colonel Mellow,' based on Sherlock Holmes. The critical temperament already stood in Wilson's way...."

6387. Dalglish, Cass. "Details, details." Women's Review of Books 15, no. 2 (1997): 22.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'A Crime in the Neighborhood,' by Suzanne Berne. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...It is a story told by a now-adult woman, gazing back at the details of her own life, focusing on the summer of 1972 when she was a ten-year-old who so admired Sherlock Holmes that she roamed around with a notebook labeled 'Evidence,' in which she wrote down exactly what she saw...."

6388. Dalrymple, Theodore. "Crudity beyond belief." New Criterion 19, no. 1 (2000): 77.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on New Art Gallery in the town of Walsall in Black Country, England. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...but since in my hospital we occasionally treat rattlesnake bites, it must be presumed that the unregulated sale and harboring of venomous snakes continues. No one in my city can know for certain, therefore, where the speckled band--the dreaded Indian swamp adder that put paid to the cunning and evil Dr. Grimesby Roylott--may not strike again. Sherlock Holmes scotch'd the snake, he did not kill it...."

6389. Daly, Caroline. "Trainee English teachers and the struggle for subject knowledge." Changing English: Studies in Reading & Culture 11, no. 2 (2004): 189-204.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Recalls the challenges that confronted teacher trainees in teaching the English language in London's secondary schools. Includes references to Holmes. "...She is disturbed that the essay title given to the class was chosen because it fulfils SATs criteria, and asks herself 'how can it be that we have managed to make Sherlock Holmes so boring?' She is concerned that the teaching of literary 'techniques' for assessment purposes is encouraging students to masquerade in knowledge they do not properly own. 'Is it possible that he could find these characteristics himself, if we encouraged an enthusiasm for these stories?...'(in)--creating drama, watching some of the lovely TV adaptations of Holmes, researching the Victorians, creating his own detective hero and dasstardly villain...."

6390. Daly, Dan. "Recalling Payne, rethinking Tiger." The Washington Times, October 31, 1999: A1.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "I don't know about you, but I can't wait to read more about Matt Turk's finger injury. If you look back over NFL history, you'll find that a lot of championships have been lost because of finger injuries to punters. In fact, in the standard player's contract, there's a clause strictly prohibiting thumb wrestling during the season. Seriously, it would make a good Sherlock Holmes episode, don't you think? You could call it 'Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror' (because of the way Dan Snyder reacted to the injury). No, wait, that's already been done. How about 'Sherlock Holmes in Washington?' No, that's been done, too. I've got it: 'Sherlock Holmes Hounds the Basketball-Playing Punter.'..."

6391. Danford, Natalie, Lucinda Dyer, Karen Holt, and Judith Rosen. "Toujours l'Amour." Publishers Weekly 250, no. 48 (2003): 26-36.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the expansion of the genre of romance fiction. Includes reference to Holmes. "...As a child, Jove's Christine Feehan read not her trademark paranormal books, but Sherlock Holmes. 'I think I had them memorized. I dreamed of growing up to write books with a heroine who was female Sherlock Holmes--she'd have a smart mouth, great sense of humor, a bad attitude and the ability to back it up with brains and a solid martial arts background.'..."

6392. Davenport, Gary. "American noir fiction of three decades." Sewanee Review 107, no. 1 (1999): 126.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the struggle for respectability of the genre of mystery, detective, and

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

crime fiction particularly the darker sort that is classified as noir. Includes reference to Holmes. "...The genre--if indeed that is the appropriate term--of mystery, detective, and crime fiction presents an even greater problem; for, like pornography, it frankly sets out to produce a particular emotion in the reader rather than to elevate or transform him: Rilke's archaic statue of Apollo might command us to change our lives, but The Case-Book of Sherlock Holmes does not....The ratiocinative powers of a Holmes or Poirot are irrelevant in such a world....The fact that the author is able to enlist the reader on the psychotic Ripley's behalf subverts even more profoundly the Holmesian ideal of justice restored by reason. (I hasten to point out that I am by no means the first reader to feel thus enlisted.)..."

6393. David, Brett. "Scientists Elbow For Shot at Hubble Peep Show." The Plain Dealer (Cleveland, OH) 1994: 7E.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Just like Sherlock Holmes, what we need is a big magnifying glass, and that is the Hubble telescope," said Duccio Macchetto, an astrophysicist who has been affiliated with the Hubble program since 1975...."
6394. Davis, Colin. "Psychoanalysis, Detection, and Fiction: Julia Kristeva's Detective Novels." Sites: Journal of the Twentieth-Century/Contemporary French Studies 6, no. 2 (2002): 294.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides a critical analysis on the detective novels written by Julia Kristeva with a passing reference to Holmes.
6395. Davis, J. Madison. "It's Over When the Soprano Eats Onion Rings." World Literature Today 82, no. 1 (2008): 9-11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The author focuses on the last episode of the television program "The Sopranos." Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Harry Potter was widely rumored for much of the year to be doomed in the final novel of the series in order to prevent anyone from reviving the character. (Evidently, rumormongers were unfamiliar with the resurrections of Sherlock Holmes, Bobby Ewing, and even Superman, who was killed and brought back in 1993.)..."
6396. Davis, Mary Hay. "A Treasure Hunt, the High-Tech Way." Christian Science Monitor, 7/16, 2007: 18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Sherlock Holmes would no doubt have excelled at geocaching. I can image him--GPS in hand--scouring the moors around the Baskerville estate in search of an elusive clue-in-a-cache...."
6397. de Lint, Charles. "Books to look for." Fantasy & Science Fiction 87, no. 1 (1994): 36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the books 'The Gift of Story,' by Clarissa Pinkola Estes, 'Unconquered Countries,' by Geoff Ryman and 'The Willows in Winter,' by William Horwood. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The book Horwood has written is diverting, but ultimately unsatisfying. As is usually the case, readers who wish to spend more time with favorite characters, be they animals from The Wind in the Willows, Sherlock Holmes, or Robert E. Howard's various creations, are always better off returning to the original work and rereading it...."
6398. De Pina Cabral, Maria João Cardoso. "John Von Neumann's Contribution to Economic Science." International Social Science Review 78, no. 3/4 (2003): 126-137.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article explores the contribution of economist Jon von Neumann to economic science. Includes a reference to Holmes in both note and text. The text reads: "...In the early stages of his career, Morgenstern was a typical fourth generation Austrian economist. His work focused on business cycles and methodological critique. He was particularly interested in such issues as the relationship of time and foresight to general equilibrium theory. Morgenstern's interest in logic led to a presentation of the Holmes/Moriarty problem at Karl Menger's Mathematical Colloquium...." The note (number 51) reads: "The Holmes-Moriarty game, which is included in TGEB, can be described as follows: Sherlock Holmes, the famous London detective, is being pursued by his nemesis, the evil genius, James Moriarty. Holmes leaves London's Victoria Station on a train to Dover. The train has one stopover at Canterbury. Holmes saw Moriarty at the train station intending to leave on the same train. From Moriarty's behavior, Holmes is convinced that Moriarty knows that he will be on the train to Dover. Once aboard the train, each of the protagonists has two alternatives: to get off at Canterbury or to continue to Dover. If they choose different stations, Holmes wins

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

since he gets away with his life, otherwise Moriarty wins. The problem is how should Holmes play the game? The solution to the Holmes-Moriarty game is an infinite regress of prediction, reaction, and revised prediction from which there is no escape (you know that I know that you know that I know....)."

6399. De Wyze, Virginia. "Classroom Critters." Teaching PreK-8 29, no. 7 (1999): 48.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses critter activities for the middle grades through junior high students. Includes references to Holmes. "...Critters I have met include Dracula, Sherlock Holmes, Batman and other super-heroes, cartoon characters from Bugs Bunny to the Roadrunner and the Peanuts gang, spacemen, power rangers, rock stars and numerous sports figures....Sherlock Holmes wrote to Watson telling him that his vacation landed him right in the middle of a missing person's case...."

6400. DeAngelo, Carol. "Adult books for young adults: Fiction." School Library Journal 43, no. 12 (1997): 152.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'A Crime in the Neighborhood,' by Suzanne Berne. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "In the summer of 1972, a suburban neighborhood of Washington, DC, is rocked by the molestation and murder of a 12-year-old boy. Marsha Eberhardt, then 10, begins to gather clues and information. Told by the adult Marsha, the story uncannily depicts the reasoning and thought processes of a vulnerable and confused girl. As the nation sifts through the Watergate disillusionment and Spring Hill tries to deal with the gruesome murder, Marsha is trying to accept the fact that her father has deserted the family for her mother's youngest sister. Struck by the observational powers of Sherlock Holmes, Marsha decides she will begin recording facts, observations, and clues about her family and neighborhood...."

6401. Decker, Charlotte. "Science Fiction and Fantasy Roundup." Book Report 20, no. 5 (2002): 21.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents several science fiction and fantasy books. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...While the aforementioned books are suitable for readers in grades three through six, others are more suited for older readers. A book that may be the first of a series is Artemis Fowl by Eoin Colfer. Twelve-year-old Artemis comes from a long line of criminals. When his father dies in an explosion and his mother takes to her bed with depression, it's up to Artemis to replenish the family's coffers. With the astuteness of Sherlock Holmes, the cunning of Moriarty, the sangfroid of James Bond, and the ruthlessness of Attila the Hun, Artemis kidnaps Captain Holly Short, a fairy in the LEPrecon Unit, and holds her for a ransom of fairy gold...."

6402. DeMont, John. "Murder, he wrote." Maclean's 107, no. 44 (1994): 56.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles Elliott Leyton, a Newfoundland anthropologist who is also an expert on serial killers. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Professionally, that is mostly what he does--sit and work. He is not a swashbuckling Indiana Jones or a street-smart Sherlock Holmes stalking evildoers in foggy London...."

6403. Derbyshire, John. "The Specter of Difference." National Review 57, no. 20 (2005): 40-42.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses the implications of recent scientific discoveries, particularly in relation to understanding the human genome and what the author calls "the dethronement of humanity." Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...At this point, however, the dethronement process was getting personal, and our resistance to it stiffened. It is, as Sherlock Holmes said, really nothing to us whether the earth goes around the sun or the sun around the earth; but to suggest that we, our precious selves, are no more than a very clever kind of monkey, is a dethronement too far for most of us..."

6404. Desmond, Edward W. "Playing catch up in the cyber race." Time 145, no. 9 (1995): 66.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the advantage of the United States in multimedia and reports that Japan is determined to make up for its lag on the information highway. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Shortly after the Kobe quake, Tomoji Ohta, a college student whose parents' home had collapsed, approached TIME reporters on the rubble-strewn streets with an urgent request: 'Please get on the Internet and notify the Baker Street Irregulars that all our members in Kobe are all right.' Sherlock Holmes fans around the world were reassured. Indeed, some enthusiasts compare the Internet with the kurofune, the 19th century 'black ships' of U.S. Commodore Oliver Perry that forced Japan to open up to the world...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6405. Deutsch, James. "Book notes: Popular culture." American Studies International 32, no. 1 (1994): 120.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Metatop: Self-referentiality in Contemporary American Popular Culture,' by Michael Dunne. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Accordingly, Dunne, devotes a chapter to the self-referential film parodies of Woody Allen and Mel Brooks, but readers who are familiar with film history may wonder if The Purple Rose of Cairo (1985) is any more central to American culture than Buster Keaton's Sherlock, Jr. (1924), which featured the same testing of cinematic space, or even Edison's Uncle Josh at the Moving Picture Show (1902), perhaps the earliest film to mock cinematic artifice...."
6406. Devereaux, Elizabeth. "'Tis the Season to Be Selling." Publishers Weekly 246, no. 39 (1999): 47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Lists several books about holidays, including one Halloween book with a Holmes reference: Aunt Eater's Mystery Halloween by Doug Cushman. HarperTrophy, $3.95 ISBN 0-06-444266-7. "Dressed like Sherlock Holmes for a costume party, Aunt Eater has her hands full; an I Can Read book. Ages 4-8."
6407. Dewberry, David R. "Unions, Vitamins, Exercise: Unionized Graduate Students." College Student Journal 39, no. 4 (2005): 627-636.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "After the turbulent labor history of America in the early to mid twentieth century, there has been a general decline of unions. Nevertheless, many graduate school teaching assistants are unionizing in attempts to gain better pay and benefits and remove themselves from an 'Ivory Sweatshop.' This article discusses a history of unions within graduate schools and the arguments of graduate assistants as student or employee." Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...In assistantships, graduate students teach introductory classes and assist professors in their research and large classes. The research assistants, in return for their effort, get a good workout from running down books and articles. A quest that would often leave Sherlock Holmes baffled...."
6408. Dicostanza, Frank. "Metacom Inc.'s marketing anything but conventional." Billboard 108, no. 1 (1996): 43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Looks at multimedia company Metacom Incorporated marketing strategy. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Yet it wasn't until the company began marketing vintage live radio programs, such as Abbott & Costello's 'Who's On First' in 1972, 'The Comedy Of Burns And Allen,' 'The Lone Ranger Adventures,' and 'The Sherlock Holmes Mysteries,' sold in six-pack slipcases, that business grew exponentially. 'Our sales in that area are in the seven figures,' says Levin. 'We're probably the biggest producer of golden-age radio in the country.'..."
6409. Digabriele, James A. "An Empirical Investigation of the Relevant Skills of Forensic Accountants." Journal of Education for Business 83, no. 6 (2008): 331-338.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The author investigated whether views of the relevant skills of forensic accountants differ among forensic accounting practitioners, accounting academics, and users of forensic accounting services. References include one with a mention of Holmes: Kahan, S. (2006). Sherlock Holmes enters accounting: Dramatic increase in fraud brings more CPA sleuths into the industry. Accounting Today, 20, 8.
6410. D'Ignazio, Fred. "Beyond multimedia: the student as Sherlock Holmes." Computing Teacher 21, no. (1994): 38-40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Unknown reference to Doyle or Holmes beyond title.
6411. Dingus, Anne. "Walker, Texas writer." Texas Monthly 23, no. 10 (1995): 74.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features author Mary Willis Walker. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Another problem that plagues the genre is the series character, the creation of which is inherently problematic. Few have the staying power of a Sherlock Holmes or an Hercule Poirot; as a result, after a few adventures, the hero or heroine's idiosyncrasies become tedious to all but die-hard fans...."
6412. Dirda, Michael. "James Bond as Archetype (and Incredibly Cool Dude)." Chronicle of Higher Education 54, no. 41 (2008): B20-B21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An essay is presented on the fictional character James Bond. The author examines

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

the character in books such as "Devil May Care" by Sebastian Faulks writing as the novelist Ian Fleming and in motion pictures such as "Casino Royale." The heroic attributed of Bond are explored and the psychology of men wishing to be heroes is discussed. The popularity of James Bond is also analyzed. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Still, James Bond lives on, for he has outgrown the books, and even the movies can scarcely contain him. A half-dozen actors have played him, and there will be more in the future: Bond has become as archetypal as Hamlet or Sherlock Holmes, a hero with a thousand faces -- and among them are yours and mine."

6413. Dixit, Avinash. "Restoring Fun to Game Theory." The Journal of Economic Education 36, no. 3 (2005): 205-219.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The author suggests methods for teaching game theory at an introductory level, using interactive games to be played in the classroom or in computer clusters, clips from movies to be screened and discussed, and excerpts from novels and historical books to be read and discussed." Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...In the early days of game theory, even the mathematicians who created its foundations showed a sense of fun. Von Neumann and Morgenstern (1953, 176-78) expounded mixed strategy equilibria using the story of Sherlock Holmes trying to evade the pursuing Professor Moriarty, Williams (1966) gave an exposition of two-person zero-sum minimax theory by using many amusing examples, although they verged on the trivial because of the restricted scope...."
6414. Dixon, Peter, and Marisa Bortolussi. "Text Is Not Communication: A Challenge to a Common Assumption." Discourse Processes 31, no. 1 (2001): 1-25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "In much of the theoretical analyses of text processing, it is assumed that text should be thought of as a form of communication between the author and the reader. This conception is analogous to the communicative model used for analyzing conversation. We argue that this text-as-communication model is inappropriate for many forms of written discourse and for fictional narrative in particular. Unlike oral communication, the author is not physically present, the author is usually not the implied speaker of the text, and recovering the author's intended message can be problematic. Consequently, we feel it is more productive simply to view the text simply as a stimulus. In trying to understand how readers process that textual stimulus, it is important to specify the features and characteristics that can be objectively found in the text, but it is not important to know what the author may or may not have intended." [From author] Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...For example, the Sherlock Holmes stories are narrated by Watson, but if anyone is a spokesman for the author's views, it must be Holmes--not Watson...."
6415. Dixon, Tex W. "Ghost story." Texas Monthly 23, no. 9 (1995): 60.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features teenage adventure heroes and heroines created by Edward Stratemeyer. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Although Frank, as the bible describes him, is 'a Sherlock Holmes in jeans' and Joe 'a devil-may-care swashbuckler with a short fuse,' the bros today are hip to fast cars, rock music, and the latest computer and video gadgets...."
6416. Dodd, Mike. "Praising the unsung hero." USA Today, April 3, 2006: 1e.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Little things. They are, as Sherlock Holmes pontificated, 'infinitely the most important,' whether solving a murder case or winning a World Series, as the Chicago White Sox demonstrated last year...."
6417. Doniger, Wendy. "The Mythology of Masquerading Animals, or, Bestiality." Social Research 71, no. 3 (2004): 711-732.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Analyzes the mythology of masquerading animals or bestiality. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Carlo Ginzburg has argued persuasively that the human experience underlying our most basic classificatory system is that of the hunter tracking an animal by its footprints...(As humankind began to stand upright, we moved from the footprints tracked by Neolithic hunters to the fingerprints tracked by Sherlock Holmes.)..."
6418. ———. "The Mythology of Masquerading Animals, or, Bestiality." Social Research 62, no. 3 (1995): 751-772.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article considers the myths of bestial masquerade and what they say about the ways in which humans have fantasized about their relationships with animals. According to the author, cultures

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

throughout the world represent our deceptive relationships with animals as masquerades, which operate in both directions: in our rituals, humans often masquerade as animals, but in our myths we imagine that animals masquerade as humans. The most intense version of this universal theme is the tale of the bestial deception, the masquerade of an animal as a human in the most intimate of all relationships. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Carlo Ginzburg has argued persuasively that the human experience underlying our most basic classificatory system is that of the hunter tracking an animal by its footprints...(As humankind began to stand upright, we moved from the footprints tracked by Neolithic hunters to the fingerprints tracked by Sherlock Holmes.)..."

6419. Doolan, Paul. "First Europeans in Australia." History Today 49, no. 6 (1999): 3.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Explores facts regarding the settlement of the Dutch nation in Australia even before the British. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...More recently, however, some hard evidence of early Dutch habitation in Australia has come to light. In 1963 the British medical doctor Geoffrey Dean published The Porphyrias, in which he describes his Sherlock Holmes-like attempt to unravel the mystery of a rare disease, porphyria variegata (PV), which he had encountered among Afrikaners in South Africa...."

6420. Douglas, J. Yellowlees, and Andrew Hargadon. "The pleasures of immersion and engagement: schemas, scripts and the fifth business." Digital Creativity 12, no. 3 (2001): 153.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Presently, designers of interactive narratives and video games have only a slender understanding of the aesthetic experiences their audiences and users seek. Using schema theory, this study articulates the two varieties of aesthetic pleasures that users of interactive works enjoy: immersion and engagement. It uses schema theory to define the characteristics of immersion and engagement in both conventional and new media." Includes a reference to Holmes. "...Sherlock Holmes, famously, had Watson to bounce ideas off and to help him unravel clues, often unwittingly, and even Inspector Morse had the much-put-upon Sergeant Lewis. Both Watson and Lewis performed, like every good agent, the function of sniffing down false leads and interviewing suspects while their respective bosses got down to the real detective work and eventually solved the case--significantly, never without some intervention from their sidekicks. Of course, both agents also function as narrative foils to their bosses. Watson and Lewis are famously dim where their superiors are quick-witted, badly read and poorly mannered where Holmes and Morse are educated, cultured men of the world..."

6421. Doyle, Kathleen F. "Dead reckoning." E Magazine: The Environmental Magazine 6, no. 2 (1995): 20.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features the Ashland, Oregon-based National Fish and Wildlife Forensic Laboratory, the first full-service wildlife crime laboratory in the world. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "How would Sherlock Holmes tackle the mysterious 'Case of the Leopard Skin Pill Box Hat'? Special U.S. Fish and Wildlife (USFW) Agent Rich McDonald says looking into a wildlife homicide is just like investigating a human murder. 'The only difference is you can't go out and interview who the leopard was drinking with the night before,' he says...."

6422. Dreifus, Claudia. "A Conversation with Robert D. Hall; The Fine Art of Watching a Bug's Life to Explain a Death." New York Times, Jan 2, 2007: 2.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // For a man with a truly curious profession, Robert D. Hall, 59, has a relaxed way of talking about his work. Dr. Hall, who studies insects and how they live off dead humans, is associate vice chancellor for research at the University of Missouri. He is also a lawyer, a retired Army colonel and a forensic entomologist, meaning that he evaluates insect evidence to help solve crimes. Think of him as Sherlock Holmes with a fly swatter and tweezers. [Abstract from publisher]

6423. Drisko, James W., Brij Mohan, and David Toesz. "Letters to the Editor." Journal of Social Work Education 37, no. 3 (2001): 585-592.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents several letters to the editor. One response begins with a quote from Holmes. "Bruce A. Thyer replies: 'It is a capital mistake to theorize before one has data.' Sherlock Holmes..."

6424. Drotos, J. Chip. "Head vs. heart?" Behavioral Health Management 16, no. 6 (1996): 32.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Compares the 1996 Employee Assistance Professional Association (EAPA) and

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- the 1996 Behavioral Healthcare Tomorrow (BHT) trade shows. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...These last two observations in particular sparked further investigation by yours truly who, in very non-Sherlock Holmes-fashion, began to compare observations of the attendees at each show...."
6425. Duff, Audrey. "The deadly DA." Texas Monthly 22, no. 2 (1994): 38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles John B. Holmes Jr., district attorney of Harris County, Texas, and includes a passing reference to his namesake. "...Fittingly, Holmes prefers not to explain the significance of the handlebar moustache he wears, the Sherlock Holmesian pipe he smokes, or the Old West trappings that fill his office...."
6426. Easterbrook, Frank H. "Text, history, and structure in statutory interpretation." Harvard Journal of Law & Public Policy 17, no. 1 (1994): 61.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines the role of legislative text, history and structure in statutory interpretation. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...This is the great attraction of legislative history. It provides clues when other avenues fail. It is also the source of the standard objection. Clues offer many avenues of investigation but do not themselves decide. These clues are slanted, drafted by the staff and perhaps by private interest groups.[1] A Sherlock Holmes could work through the clues, and those most reliable, and draw unerring inferences. Alas, none of us is a worthy successor to Holmes, even the Oliver Wendell variety. At our best, we err. And we are almost never at our best...."
6427. Edelstein, Robert. "Stranded on a Desert Island." Biography 4, no. 6 (2000): 34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Interviews television weathercaster Al Roker on what his life would be like if stranded on a desert island. Television show of choice to watch in the island; Books and magazines to read in the island; Preference on what sporting equipment he would bring to the island. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...What book? The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes. As a kid I always found them fascinating...."
6428. Edmunds, Mike. "Bernard Pagel 1930-2007." Astronomy & Geophysics 48, no. 6 (2007): 6.37-6.37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...He will be remembered with great affection by several generations of colleagues and students, particularly for the beady-eyed look over his pipe and the quick and brilliant intelligence that would put even one of his heroes, Sherlock Holmes, to shame."
6429. Edwards, Tony. "'All the Evidence Shows...': reasonable expectations of educational research." Oxford Review of Education 26, no. 3/4 (2000): 299-311.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "After years of being criticised in Britain as irrelevant to the task of raising educational standards, educational researchers have been invited to join in the improvement of policy and practice. Welcome though the invitation is, some views of how they should deserve influence reflect unrealistic or narrow definitions of really useful research. This paper argues against exaggerating the prospects for a science of teaching; against tying the national research agenda tightly to what are currently identified as 'central issues'; and for a broader approach to relevance than direct applicability to improving educational practice." Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Generalising beyond the settings investigated depends on identifying necessary or favourable conditions for something to work elsewhere. But although this requires some consistency in relevant findings, 'the facts' are unlikely to point only in one direction. Sherlock Holmes' warning that 'the temptation to form premature theories upon insufficient evidence is the bane of our profession' can apply to researchers eager to get their findings noticed, but the temptation appears more often to afflict policy-makers whose usual disregard of research is interrupted by drawing conveniently selective conclusions from what it has 'shown'...."
6430. Egan, Peter. "Side Glances." Road & Track 55, no. 8 (2004): 23-25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // In this article the author describes how he spent his time reading two books while in hospital getting treatment for hepatitis C. Both books were readable in short takes, clearly written and intriguing enough to transport one away from the less appealing present. They were "The Complete Sherlock Holmes" by Arthur Conan Doyle, and "Zen and the Art of Motorcycle Maintenance," by Robert M. Pirsig. The Pirsig reread has proved to be quite timely, because his theme of Quality is illustrated, throughout, with the theory and practice of repairing one's own machine, in his case, an old motorcycle.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6431. Eisman, Regina. "Great Britain." Incentive 168, no. 12: 74.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Describes sites and travel attractions in Great Britain. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...For evening functions, budget often dictates the venue. For instance, 'A pub crawl is a great and inexpensive evening function if you have a small budget,' Braganza says. 'You can theme the night--around a particular historic area or around a character like Sherlock Holmes, for example--and you can play bar games like darts and skittles [pin bowling].'" 6432. Eismann, Rosemary. "Letters." NEA Today 22, no. 6 (2004): 6-7.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents letters to the editor referencing articles and topics discussed in previous issues. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Moving a student from a romance novel to a classic like Emma is as smooth as silk because the fabric has already been woven. If a student likes Raymond Chandler, it's a natural transition to Sherlock Holmes...."

6433. Elan, Geoffrey. "Why did the beavers cross the road?" Yankee 62, no. 5 (1998): 38.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Reading the Forested Landscape: A Natural History of New England,' by Tom Wessels. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...it took quite a while to get through this slender but beguiling volume by Wessels, an ecologist and director of the Environmental Biology Program at Antioch-New England Graduate School. Using simple but elegant language - plus some striking etchings and illustrations by Brian Cohen - he demonstrates how to read forests as if they were Sherlock Holmes mysteries. The culprits are disturbances like fires, windstorms, blights, and human activities such as farming or logging, each one leaving a unique pattern of clues, like fingerprints...."

6434. Elias, Amy. "Oscar Hijuelos's The Mambo Kings Play Songs of Love, Ishmael Reed's Mumbo Jumbo, and." Critique 41, no. 2 (2000): 115.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Argues that other postmodernist novelists embed alternate, metaphorical paradigm for historical process in revisioning history in their fiction. Includes reference to Holmes. "... In an interview with Fred Beauford, Reed noted, 'the way a Black scientist approaches a problem is different from the way a white scientist--I don't know if it is racial or not--but it seemed to me that the Sherlock Holmes method of deduction, using the laws of so-called Western logic, does not apply to the world we are finding more and more' (12). Contemporary America resists logical analysis, hides its facts, obscures its texts. Thus when Black Herman recounts the 'crime' committed by Hinckle Von Vampton, he must go back to the beginning of civilization, and his account incorporates all of the legend, myth, and fable excluded by Atonist historiography as 'superstitious' or 'primitive.' However, Black Herman and PaPa LaBas turn Atonist contiguous, causal thinking into a tour de force, a kind of absurd Ultimate Metonymy. PaPa LaBas is not just a detective; he is an 'astro-detective.' Unlike a Sherlock Holmes (whom Alison Lee calls detective fiction's 'transcendental signifier'), PaPa LaBas redefines the detective as a man in touch with nature, eschewing reason for 'Knockings,' factual evidence for The Work (see also Paravisini, 118-19)...."

6435. Elkins, James. "On the Impossibility of Close Reading." Current anthropology 37, no. 2 (1996): 185-226.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Argues three things about close reading of visual artifacts in anthropology using Alexander Marshack's analyses of European artifacts as an example. Marshack's accounts of marks of Upper Paleolithic and Mesolithic bones; Baton in the Musee des Antiquites Nationales; Incoherence of close reading; Speculation on the pathology of close readings; Comments about the article. Reference early in article to "Carlo Ginzburg's speculative essay on Morelli, Freud, and Sherlock Holmes."

6436. Elkins, James R. "Albert Borowitz: an Interview." Legal Studies Forum 29, no. 2 (2005): 1047-1058.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Interviews author Al Borowitz about his book "Terrorism for Self-Glorification." Information on his career as a lawyer; Background of his law firm's biography "Jones, Day, Reavis & Pogue: The First Century"; Main problem he faced in writing the firm biography; Description of his non-fiction writing. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...For me the principal pleasure of reading Sherlock Holmes, my first literary love, or a classic true-crime case is one and the same, the irresistible attraction of a suspenseful narrative...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6437. Ellis, Bruce J., and Timothy Ketelaar. "Clarifying the Foundations of Evolutionary Psychology: A Reply to Lloyd and Feldman." Psychological Inquiry 13, no. 2 (2002): 157-164.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses several misunderstandings that underlie Elizabeth A. Lloyd and Marcus W. Feldman's criticisms of human evolutionary psychology. Role of inclusive fitness theory in evolutionary psychology; Two schools of thought in the evolutionary sciences. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Popper argued that although it is possible to gather corroborating data to support a particular explanation, no amount of empirical evidence would allow, for example, Sherlock Holmes to unequivocally verify (i.e., prove) a particular explanation for the discovery of a cadaver (e.g., 'the butler committed the murder with a pistol in the pantry')...."
6438. ———. "On the Natural Selection of Alternative Models: Evaluation of Explanations in Evolutionary." Psychological Inquiry 11, no. 1 (2000): 56.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Responds to articles regarding the validity of evolutionary psychology. Discussion on the philosophy of science; Account on the core assumptions of evolutionary psychology; Context and definition of epistemology; Relevance of the works of philosopher Imre Lakatos in formulating the philosophy of science. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Popper argued that although it is possible to gather corroborating data to support a particular explanation, no amount of empirical evidence would allow, for example, Sherlock Holmes to unequivocally verify (i.e., prove) a particular explanation for the discovery of a cadaver (e.g., 'the butler committed the murder with a pistol in the pantry')...."
6439. Elsberry, Richard. "The last castle in England." British Heritage 19, no. 1 (1997): 32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on Castle Drogo in England. What the castle is constructed of; Purpose of Castle Drogo; Information on Julius Drewe, a merchant prince who commissioned the castle; Castle Drogo's interior decor. Inset article, "When Visiting," has a passing reference to Holmes. "...Dartmoor National Park encompasses 368 square miles of wildly rugged land, which bears many traces of ancient Iron- and Bronze-Age occupation. Sherlock Holmes took refuge in one of these settlements, Grimspound, in the novel Hound of the Baskervilles. Several long-distance walking paths--including the Two Moors Way, which passes close by Castle Drogo--make it convenient to explore this region on foot...."
6440. Elsner, John. "Book reviews." Art Bulletin 76, no. 3 (1994): 535.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Masking the Blow: The Scene of Representaion in Late Prehistoric Egyptian Art,' by Whitney Davis. Note 1 includes a reference to Holmes: On the epistemological roots of the Morellian method, see C. Ginzburg, "Morelli, Freud and Sherlock Holmes: Clues and the Scientific Method," in U, Eco and T. Sebeok, eds., The Sign of Three, Bloomington, Ind., 1983, 81-118.
6441. Engber, Daniel. "Syllabus." Chronicle of Higher Education 51, no. 18 (2005): A22-A22.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides information on the incorporation of Sherlock Holmes mystery tales in the geology class of professor Lawrence D. Meinert at Smith College in the U.S. Significance of the methodology of Meinert in scientific reasoning; Features of Shercllock Holmes novels; Background on writing exercises assigned by Meinert to the students.
6442. Ennis, Lisa A. "It's all in Your Head." Library Journal 132, no. 16 (2007): 40-42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a bibliography that provides a general listing of recent titles, mostly nonmedical, that demonstrate neuroscience's breadth. "Since any of the new subfields (neurobiology, neuropsychology, etc.) that are developing on an almost daily basis are worthy of a collection development article of their own, this compilation aims to serve as a starting point from which librarians can build more specialized collections, depending on their patrons' interests and information needs." Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "NOVA: Secrets of the Mind. 60 min. WGBH-Boston. 2001. ISBN 978-1-59375-675-8. $19.95. From the popular PBS series, this DVD profiles V.S. Ramachandran, 'the Sherlock Holmes of neuroscience,' whose patients help him discover how the brain works. A companion web site (www.pbs.org/wgbh/nova/mind) features interactive games."
6443. Ephron, Hallie. "Inspector Rebus takes the crime novel to a new level." Writer 120, no. 12 (2007): 18-21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article profiles crime novelist Ian Rankin. According to the author, the

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- popularity of Rankin's book series, which chronicles the life of fictional character Inspector Rebus, has made him one of Great Britain's top-selling authors. The book series includes various titles such as "Knots and Crosses," "Black and Blue," and "The Naming of the Dead." The article discusses Rankin's writing process, the development of Inspector Rebus, and Rankin's distaste for plot-driven narratives. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...From the outset, Rankin was uninterested in creating a traditional British-style crime-fiction sleuth. 'The professional police officer in fiction in U.K. started well with Dickens and Wilkie Collins,' he says. 'Then along came Sherlock Holmes and [Inspector] LeStrade with the police officer as flunky. That persisted into Agatha Christie, where the gifted amateur sleuth would be upper middle class and professional cops would be bungling working-class people. There was a real snobbery about it. I was determined that wouldn't be the way my police characters operate. It's the reverse. Rebus has a mistrust of authority and hates anyone with pretensions.'" 6444. Epstein, Leonard H., Anthony R. Caggiula, Kenneth A. Perkins, and Sandra J. McKenzie. "Conditioned tolerance to the heart rate effects of smoking." Pharmacology, Biochemistry and Behavior. 39, no. 1 (1991): 15-19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examined whether behavioral tolerance to nicotine could be influenced by conditioning to cardiovascular tolerance. 18 young men (mean age 20.9 yrs) who were regular smokers smoked one-half a cigarette during each of 5 trials. In the 10-min intersmoking interval, smokers in the changing group attended to a different 5-min segment of a Sherlock Holmes radio mystery before each trial, while those in the repeated group listened to the same segment of the tape. As predicted, heart rate for Ss who smoked in the same context showed tolerance to smoking from Trials 1 to 5, while Ss who smoked in changing contexts did not develop tolerance. Results suggest tolerance to smoking can be influenced by learning. The habituation theory and classical conditioning models are discussed.
6445. Ergut, Ferdan. "Policing the Poor in the Late Ottoman Empire." Middle Eastern Studies 38, no. 2 (2002): 149.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Analyzes the relationship between the state and the lower classes in the late Ottoman Empire. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...One of the indications of the increasing anxiety about crime is that crime stories started to be published and read extensively at this period. The stories of Nat Pinkerton, Arsene Lupin, and Sherlock Holmes were translated and read by a wide audience during the Second Constitutional Period (1908-18). Soon, the Turkish counterparts of these characters appeared. In 1913, stories of the first Turkish Sherlock Holmes, Aman Vermez Avni, started to be published in series...." Notes 20 and 21 also reference Holmes.
6446. Eriksson, Kai. "Networks and the philosophy of noise." Culture & Organization 14, no. 3 (2008): 279-292.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Thus, for instance, Carlo Ginzburg has traced the history of the research tradition which, by focusing on the apparently meaningless details and belittled, marginal characteristics, was able to reveal something fundamental of its object. As he notes, for Freud these were symptoms; for Sherlock Holmes clues; and for Giovanni Morelli strokes of the brush (Morelli developed a new method for attributing authors to old paintings) (Ginzburg 1992)...."
6447. Eubank, Jay. "A Hat in the House." Greensboro New Record (Greensboro, NC), Nov 28, 1994: D1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "State Rep. [Alma Adams] has so many hats that her new house has a closet specially built to accommodate them. Adams hopes to spread the fashion sense that hats add that special oomph to a woman's attire. Rep. Alma Adams models some of the hats that are her trademark, clockwise from top left: a deerstalker cap that she calls her 'Sherlock Holmes hat,' suitable for weekend wear; a black and white church hat she can now wear to the General Assembly, since its wide brim can be tolerated from her new seat on the back row; a lace hat with a tasseled hat pin, perfect for formal wear; and Adams' showy 'parade hat,' resplendent with feathers."
6448. Evans, Christopher. "Engineering the past: Pitt Rivers, Nemo and The Needle." Antiquity 80, no. 310 (2006): 960-969.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Exploring parallels between the careers of Lt.-General Pitt Rivers and Verne's Captain Nemo, this essay is concerned with time and disciplinary flagships. It considers how their respective collection activities propelled their very personal projects of science and, in the case of the General, its interrelationship with the institutionalisation of archaeology in the later nineteenth century. In particular, the implications of his renowned excavation medallion will be discussed and compared to a celebrated time capsule of the period; it being argued that 'deep time' consciousness itself engendered notions or futuristic projection. [Abstract from author]. Contains a passing reference to Holmes (p. 964). "...Of Nemo, while in 20,000 Leagues...his personal history remains rather obscure, in Verne's Mysterious Island of 1874 his background is much more developed and is markedly anti-colonial. He is said to have originally been Prince Dakkar, the nephew of Tippo Sahib and son of an Indian rajah. Though educated in Europe, he hated the British and it was after the mutiny of 1857 that he turned to scientific research, constructed the Nautilus, changed his name and took to the seas. Certainty a complex and beguiling character in a manner akin to Sherlock Holmes or Allan Quatermain, Nemo has featured in subsequent fictions, including Farmer's The Other Log of Phileas Fogg (1973J and Moore's 2002 graphic novel, The League of Extraordinary Gentlemen...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6449. Evans, Ron. "Faulkner's Tomorrow." Explicator 56, no. 2 (1998): 95.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents William Faulkner's 'Tomorrow' which represent his attempts at writing detective stories. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The print version of 'Tomorrow' is one of six Gavin Stevens tales involving the fortyish Yoknapatawpha county attorney and garrulous philosopher, as well as his teenage initiate, nephew Chick Mallison, who also narrates the events of the story. In Faulkner's own words, 'Gavin Stevens was . . . a county attorney, an amateur Sherlock Holmes, (not) a detective . . . one of these tough guys that slapped women around, took a drink every time he couldn't think of what to say next' (Phillips 87)...."

6450. Fara, Patricia. "Face Values: How Portraits Win Friends and Influence People." Science 299, no. 5608 (2003): 831.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the importance of portraits in the promotion of science and scientists. Picture of Isaac Newton painted by Godfrey Kneller; Portrayal of Newton both as an elegant, social gentleman as well as an obsessive scientific genius. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...In our post-Freudian age, we delight in pictures that reveal individual idiosyncrasies rather than providing role models to be admired and emulated. Unlike Kneller and his contemporaries, we attribute a thin pale face, disheveled hair, and fine fingers not to melancholy but to mental brilliance. For modern viewers, the closest relatives of this detached Newtonian intellect with a minimalist body are Sherlock Holmes and Stephen Hawking...."

6451. Feller, Irwin. "Mapping the frontiers of evaluation of public-sector R&D programs." Science & Public Policy (SPP) 34, no. 10 (2007): 681.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...A more fundamental problem though is suggested by Leamer in his 1983 classic critique of the use of econometrics. Addressing what he terms the Sherlock Holmes inference problem of whether theorizing should proceed before all the evidence is in, Leamer first discusses the value of extending the horizon of possibilities (of model specification or sampling properties of the data) reasonably far...."

6452. Ficklen, Ellen. "Love of Language Carries a Professor Home." Chronicle of Higher Education 53, no. 11 (2006): 48-48.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article profiles Andras Sandor, a Hungarian student who studied in England and taught in America after the 1956 revolution, but returned following the fall of communism. Sandor had traveled to Vienna as part of a delegation to rally support for the revolution. When the Soviet Union took control of Hungary, he stayed in the west and continued his education at Brasenose College at the University of Oxford. Sandor took a number of teaching positions at universities around the U. S. and was joined by his family. His love of Hungary brought him back to the country in 2000. He wrote the novel "Murder in Alaska: Sherlock Holmes in the Land of the Tlingit," which won the 2006 Writers' Society prize in Hungary.

6453. Filiatreau, John. "As I see it." Louisville Magazine 45, no. 4: 19.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Relates the author's experiences at the Kentucky Derby in Louisville, Kentucky. Highlights of the horse races from the early 1900s to the 1980s; Information from the book 'The Kentucky Derby: The First Hundred Years,' by Peter Chew. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...I lost the last of my innocence when I read that scandalous report, which I considered barely fit to print. It's the first mention of cocaine I can remember reading, apart from some faddle about Sigmund Freud, Sherlock Holmes and Coca-Cola. How times have changed. These days they routinely test horses -and jockeys -- for coke...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6454. Finch, Alison M. "The imagery of a myth: Computer-assisted research on literature." Style 29, no. 4 (1995): 511.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reveals that experts in computer-assisted research on literature (CARL) are expressing doubts about the direction of their work and are particularly worried that their research is seen as marginal by most other literary critics. Includes multiples references to Holmes.

6455. Fitzpatrick, Eileen. "Borders Crosses The Atlantic, Whips Up Brit Fare For BBC Fans." Billboard 111, no. 37 (1999): 83.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Offers information on the union of Borders Books & Music with the British Broadcasting Corporation (BBC) for a promotion highlighting video and audio programming. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...In addition to video product, Borders will feature titles from the audio dramatizations of 'The Sherlock Holmes Series' and 'The Agatha Christie Mysteries.' Soundtracks from 'Great Expectations,' 'Life Of Birds,' and the classical music series 'BBC Legends' and 'BBC Britten' will also get the royal treatment...."

6456. FitzPatrick, P. J., and Paul Baumann. "Signs & disguises." Commonweal 122, no. 2 (1995): 18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the views of the authors on the Catholic rite of the Eucharist. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...BAUMANN: You said that transubstantiation was 'a misleading riddle'? In what way does it mislead? FITZPATRICK: It misleads because it confuses signs with disguises. A sign does not compete with what it signifies, a disguise does compete with what it conceals. There is the famous Sherlock Holmes story where Holmes, with seemingly supernatural powers of intuition, concludes upon meeting Dr. Watson for the first time that Watson has been in Afghanistan. Holmes does so on the grounds of certain things about Watson's appearance. He pays attention to things -- signs, if you will -- that less observant people overlook. Those signs do not contradict Holmes's conclusion, they are a means to it. The distinction between signs and disguises is further illuminated in a scene where Holmes pretends to be dying. Holmes is careful not to let Watson near his bed, for fear that his mere disguise will be penetrated. Signs are not mufflings, they are manifestations. Disguise has nothing to do with the Eucharist, skepticism about appearances has nothing to do with it, hidden machinery in the depth of the bread has nothing to do with it. Transubstantiation is a misleading riddle...."

6457. Fleischman, John. "Joining forces." Earth 6, no. 3 (1997): 34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Explores the inner region of the Ural Mountains based on the study led by the geophysicist James Knapp. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...For five months, an international crew of scientists would trek slowly westward, tracing a 310-mile-long underground profile. Every so often, they stopped, dug a pit, packed it with explosives and set them off. With each explosion, mega-gulps of seismic data bounced back from deep earth and told the scientists what kind of rock lay beneath the mountains. Whatever it was, this rock had bound two tectonic plates for millions of years. Sherlock Holmes might have dubbed this 'The Case of the Continents That Didn't Split Up.'..."

6458. Flench, Chris Ebert. "Young adult authors on the Internet." Book Report 17, no. 4 (1999): 44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on young adult authors on the Internet. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Some of enlist less common approaches. A number of writers have had some literary fun blending Newsies with other stories. In one, Sherlock Holmes meets Jack, who is the leader of the Newsies...."

6459. Flesch, William. "Playing Patience." Southwest Review 86, no. 2/3 (2001): 228.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a contextual analysis of the poetry book 'Reflections on Espionage,' by John Hollander. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The abidingly fresh interest of this kind of story says something important about poetic form. Readers of these stories love scenarios in which subtle and exquisitely delineated forms yield unexpected pattern, coherence, and meaning, and so it is to the spy story as a genre, or at least to one of its most popular sub-genres, the intellectual spy story, that we can go for a surprisingly total perspective on literature. Form and plot coalesce in such stories, and such coalescence is illuminating. (It may also be found in jokes and in comic verse: the range that such coalescence covers is telling for any theory of literature.) Any story in which hyperalert attention to seemingly unimportant detail yields surprising knowledge is gratifying (cf. Sherlock Holmes), whether such attention is explicit or implicit, conscious or subliminal. Cryptanalysts are the most careful readers of all. In spy stories about cryptography, ciphers make for an analogue of poetic form, encipherment a parallel to an aspect of composition, and cryptanalysis an avatar of extreme new critical close-reading...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6460. Fletcher, Connie. "Master Detective: The Life and Crimes of Ellis Parker, America's Real-Life Sherlock Holmes." Booklist 102, no. 19 (2006): 29.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Master Detective: The Life and Crimes of Ellis Parker, America's Real-Life Sherlock Holmes,' by John Reisinger.

6461. Fleury, Danvers. "Solving the Mystery." Business Week Online, no. (2008): 14-14.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A personal narrative is presented which explores the author's experience of deciding a post-MBA career of building a business that helps other people build businesses. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "I am not a fan of mysteries of any sort. I don't read Sherlock Holmes novels. and I slept through the film Murder on the Orient Express last month. Why then was my post-MBA career a mystery right up to my graduation date? Now that is a long story...."

6462. Flora, Carlin. "The Once-Over can You Trust First Impressions?" Psychology Today 37, no. 3 (2004): 60-66.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Explains the rationale behind snap judgments or first impressions. John Breen, a retired detective provides a passing reference to Holmes. "I'm not claiming to be Sherlock Holmes, but there are a number of behavioral interviewing techniques taught in the police academy that can help tell you when someone is lying," says Breen, a former police lieutenant in Arizona. 'A suspect might put her hand up to her mouth or she may cross her arms over her chest. Whereas someone who is more receptive, open and forthcoming won't cross her arms. But you can't take that as gospel. You have to [measure up] the individual and determine what her normal reactions might be.'"

6463. Floyd, Bianca P. "Information Technology Resources." Chronicle of Higher Education 45, no. 22 (1999): A31.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Lists information technology resources pertaining to higher education. Includes a reference to Holmes. "The creation of such characters as Jane Eyre, Sherlock Holmes, and Frankenstein--not to mention vampires--is explored in an on-line exhibit about the Gothic tale. The Web site, Sublime Anxiety: The Gothic Family and the Outsider, examines two centuries of writing in a genre that focuses on human fears and desires. The site offers information on the society of 19th-century Europe, on the settings of many popular Gothic novels, and on the relationship between life and art in the lives of such writers as Mary Shelley. It also discusses topics such as the status of women and, the dysfunction of families as interpreted in the genre." <http://www.lib.virginia.edu/exhibits/gothic/index.html>

6464. Flynn, Nick. "The Button Man." New Yorker 80, no. 19 (2004): 62-73.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Relates the story of the author who lost his father in Boston, Massachusetts. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...After he was released from the Palm Beach county jail, Jonathan made his way back to Boston. His jail time gave him a story to tell, and over the next few years he wrote 'The Button Man,' had a friend type it, and sent it to Little, Brown. While awaiting his advance, he supported himself by selling encyclopedias door-to-door. ('Broads'd answer the door in their nightgowns and say, 'No, my husband ain't here, come on in for a drink.') He wore a black, flowing cape, which suited his poetic vision of himself, and, later, a Sherlock Holmes hat. He sometimes slept on a friend's roof, on Beacon Hill, and, for six months, finagled a suite at the Ritz. 'Encyclopedia Americana's relocating to Boston,' he had told the desk clerk 'Room service, the works,' he said to me recently. Little, Brown rejected the manuscript...."

6465. Forbes, Steve. "Aiding an Ailing Pharma." Forbes 174, no. 10 (2004): 35-35.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The author comments on regulation of the pharmaceutical industry and the need for more medical research. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "The flu vaccine crisis and Merck's recall of its anti-inflammatory drug Vioxx underscore the need for major health care reforms. The causes of the flu vaccine shortage take no Sherlock Holmes to uncover: de facto price controls, overregulation and fear of lawsuits...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6466. ———. "Feckless Foreign Policy." Forbes 162, no. 13 (1998): 31-31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on several items of interest in late 1998 including the book 'A' Is for Alibi, by Sue Grafton. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The first of the Kinsey Millhone alphabet series of mysteries, which is now up to the letter N. When her saga is completed in a decade or so with the letter Z, Ms. Millhone may well join such classic snoops as Sherlock Holmes, Perry Mason, Nero Wolfe, Miss Marple and a handful of others in mystery immortality...."
6467. Foster, Andrea L. "Where Worlds Are Born." Chronicle of Higher Education 53, no. 44 (2007): A26-A26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses some of the virtual online worlds that professors at Indiana University at Bloomington are developing. Edward Castronova, an associate professor who directs graduate studies at the university's telecommunications department, is developing a three-dimensional digital space based on Shakespeare characters and settings. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...Lee Sheldon, an assistant professor in the telecommunications department, is in the early stages of designing Londontown, an interactive fantasy world with literary and real personalities from the Victorian era. Among the characters will be Oliver Twist, Sherlock Holmes, and Charles Dickens...."
6468. Foster, Ed. "Gripe line turns from a 'Dear Abby' into a Sherlock Holmes." InfoWorld 16, no. 5 (1994): 37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Opinion. Discusses 'Infoworld' periodical's gripe line. Beyond title, unknown reference to Holmes.
6469. Foster, Jordan. "An Introspective Inspector." Publishers Weekly 254, no. 46 (2007): 32-32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article presents an interview with novelist Peter Robinson. Asked about the differences he sees between British and American crime fiction, he explained that British crime fiction is more cerebral than the U.S. which is more urban hard-boiled-type. He said that he actually does not have particular reason for revisiting two characters in his previous novel. He discussed the idea behind the Inspector Banks series. Includes a passing reference to Holmes: "How did you come to set the Inspector Banks series in the fictional Yorkshire town of Eastvale, instead of a larger city? I wanted the best of both worlds. My Eastvale is large enough to have its fair share of crime, and it's also close to large towns and cities, such as Leeds and York, and also country villages, which we all know from Sherlock Holmes are often more dangerous than cities."
6470. Fotheringham, Allan. "The cloud over Bill Clinton's second term." Maclean's 110, no. 4 (1997): 64.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Opinion. Focuses on the January 1997 inauguration of United States President Bill Clinton. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...It's a crazy situation, as most everything is these days. The nation that demands that China must embrace democracy, that Israel and Palestine must kiss and cuddle, that those at fault in the former Yugoslavia must be brought before war crimes tribunals, is enthralled by a suspense story that has all the importance of an O.J. trial. Agatha Christie couldn't make it up. Ian Fleming in his epic James Bond novels wouldn't have tried it. Sherlock Holmes wouldn't even touch it. And America, master of all it surveys, hangs on this very edge."
6471. ———. "Taking stock of Day." Maclean's 114, no. 47 (2001): 128.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Interviews Canadian politician Stockwell Day. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...As you know, a former MP signed an affidavit in August saying after the first vote of the leadership race, a year ago, a meeting was held of all 30-some strategists of the opposing camp and a clear plan was articulated to cause the leader and/or the party to implode -- they said it might take up to a year. But they had to work towards that plan. So this was someone who was on the call. A former MP, feeling badly about it I guess, and wanting to expose that. And a week after that, a national councillor who was also on the call was reported in the media as saying that call indeed took place and, yes, that plan was put in motion. Those are things we know publicly, who was behind it all. But I'm too focused on things Canadians want us to focus on -- terrorism, etc. -- to do the Sherlock Holmes routine on that. If others want to do that, that's fine...."
6472. ———. "Why L.A. dreads the O.J. verdict." Maclean's 108, no. 6 (1995): 88.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the O.J. Simpson murder case. Includes a passing reference to Holmes.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

"...What are the major concerns in the murder case that Sherlock Holmes would love, since the only witness to the double-slicing was a dog? It is, of course, the seating among the scribblers in the O. J. courtroom. Judge Lance Ito, no dummy, with more than 100 news organizations beating upon his door, has given two permanent seats in the front rows to two chaps who are writing books on the trial...."

6473. Fottler, Marsha. "Great escapes: luggage, art and roasted garlic." Sarasota Magazine 16, no. 2: 30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features five products available at Sarasota, Florida shops. Includes a passing reference to Holmes in photo caption. "If Indiana Jones, Sherlock Holmes or Horace Rumpole could choose luggage, this is what they would want -- the original Ghurka Express, a leather and fabric tote complete with multi-compartments and even an umbrella. Roomy, durable and no-nonsense styling that says you like simple things of the highest quality. When wanderlust and adventure won't wait, you'll be ready."
6474. Fox, Suzanne. "The Domestic Holmeses." American Letters & Commentary 6, no. (1994): 15-32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
6475. Frank, Jerome D. "Comments on Silvano Arieti: Anti-psychoanalytic cultural forces in the development of Western Civilization." American Journal of Psychotherapy 50, no. 4 (1996): 473.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on the article 'Anti-Psychoanalytic Cultural Forces in the Development of Western Civilization,' by Silvano Arieti. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...And this brings us back to an intriguing speculation about the power of Freud in contemporary times. A psychiatrist, Michael Shepherd,(3) notes the meteoric rise to virtually legendary heights of popularity in the West of both a real person, Sigmund Freud, and a fictional one, Sherlock Holmes, after World War I. He suggests (an extension and perhaps a corrective to Arieti's hypothesis) that both represent reassuring ways of asserting the ultimate triumph of the rational intellect. Sherlock Holmes solves crimes--manifestations of external chaos--by his dispassionate intellectual analytic powers. Freud's well-known statement of the goal of a psychoanalysis as, 'where Id was there shall Ego be,' implies a similar mastery of internal chaos...." Note 3 cites Shepherd, M. (1985). Sherlock Holmes and the case of Dr. Freud. London: Tavistock Publications.
6476. Franklin, Allan. "William Wilson and the Absorption of Beta Rays." Physics in Perspective 4, no. 1 (2002): 40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "In the first decade of the 20 th century, physicists believed that the particles emitted in radioactive decay were monoenergetic and that such monoenergetic electrons would be absorbed exponentially in passing through matter. Conversely, they also believed that if electrons followed an exponential absorption law then they were monoenergetic. William Wilson showed conclusively that this view was wrong. After Wilson's work, physicists changed the experimental technique they used to investigate the phenomena...." Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Wilson's results were credible....He had eliminated plausible alternative explanations of his result, and was left with the conclusion that it was correct. This is an example of what we might call the Sherlock Holmes strategy. As Holmes remarked to Watson in The Sign of Four, 'How often have I said to you that when you have eliminated the impossible, whatever remains, however improbably, must be the truth....'" 6477. Frape, D. L. "Sherlock Holmes and chemical poisons." Equine veterinary journal 28, no. 2 (1996): 89-91.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Unknown reference to Holmes beyond title.
6478. Frazier, Jane Justus. "Sand studies." Science Teacher 63, no. 5 (1996): 14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Observes some of the contents of sand that was collected at an inservice workshop. Definition of sand; Classification of sand; Continental sand most commonly composed of silicate minerals; Other contents of sand; Characteristics of sands collected from different locations; Further detailed information relating to the workshop. INSET: Sherlock Holmes: The body on the beach.
6479. Freedberg Jr, Sydney J., and James Kitfield. "Sharp Corners, Soft Sieges." National Journal 35, no. 14 (2003): 1058.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Explains that U.S. war planners are trying to get an insight from the book Sharp Corners: Urban Operations at Century's End, by Roger Spiller on how to seize control of Baghdad, Iraq. Discussion on the challenges facing U.S. forces in Iraq; Efforts of the U.S. military commanders to avoid urban

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- combat; Discussion on the views expressed by the author in his book. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...The crucial lesson is that a city is not simply an obstacle or an enemy to overcome: It also contains resources and allies to be used. An officer with a good translator and a wad of cash can accomplish more in some situations than can a platoon of heavy tanks. 'It's not just a military question. It's, 'How can I co-opt the middle class of that city? How can I get to the street gangs?' said retired Lt. Col. Robert Leonhard, an influential theorist. Recall that the fictional detective Sherlock Holmes owed much of his success to his 'Baker Street Irregulars,' a few London urchins who would spy out clues for a few pennies...."
6480. Freedman, Morris. "Reading for fun." Education Week 16, no. 36 (1997): 31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents some tips that should help students and adults alike get into the habit of reading for fun. Includes reading lots of works by one writer; Starting with short works that hold the interest of readers; Avoiding introductions to books. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Paul, now a newspaper editor, reminds me that I never told him any particular book or type of reading was good or bad for him-- Tarzan, Huckleberry Finn, Gulliver's Travels, Tom Swift, Sherlock Holmes stories, assorted magazines. He thinks that if I had, I might have turned him off...."
6481. Freedman, Michael P. "A Tale of Plagiarism And a New Paradigm." Phi Delta Kappan 85, no. 7 (2004): 545-548.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...I have become a good detective, even a rival of Sherlock Holmes, as I use my Internet search engines, navigation skills, and many websites to investigate any and all suspicious plans. The suspicious plans are really rather easy to identify. They are characteristically glib in language, are complete in listing materials and procedures, and contain a level of jargon not in the realm of experience of the typical preservice teacher...."
6482. French, Sean. "Any Eng Lit academic who admits to not liking long, hard, foreign novels should be publicly humiliated." New Statesman 128, no. 4420 (1999): 31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Asserts that any English literature academic who admits to not liking long, hard, foreign novels should be publicly humiliated. Information on David Lodge's novel 'Changing Places'; Criticism on John Carey's choice of books. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Obviously part of the pleasure of lists is to argue with the choices. To take only the examples of writers I know well, I think that The Hound of the Baskervilles is so inferior to the early Sherlock Holmes stories as to be not worth choosing...."
6483. ———. "Laurel and Hardy in Spanish and French? Just try translating 'Laughing Gravy' to get a laugh." New Statesman 129, no. 4477 (2000): 29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Evaluates the digital video of the comedy team Laurel and Hardy in Spanish and French versions. Consequences of the digital revolution. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...One part of growing up is when you look back at relationships with new eyes: Sherlock Holmes and Dr Watson in their cosy rooms in Baker Street; Bruce Wayne (alias Batman) and his 'ward', Dick Grayson (alias Robin). Ward indeed. And I don't even want to get started on Biggles, Algy and Ginger's menage a trois."
6484. ———. "Sean French." New Statesman 129, no. 4494 (2000): 28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reflects on the people who complain about living in the countryside of England. Role of isolation in the country in the alcoholism of a woman called Jemima Barnes; Reasons behind the discontent of people living in the country; Outlook on victimhood. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...In my Sherlock Holmes-like way, I infer from the time it takes to get her children to school that they have chosen to send their offspring to a private school 15 or 20 miles away, rather than to the local village school, so she isn't going to bump into neighbours outside the school gates...."
6485. ———. "Time's up. Get your answers to the Sean French Christmas quiz and start to live again." New Statesman 128, no. 4417 (1999): 31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the answers to the author's Christmas Quiz in 1998. Largest postage stamps that he would not be able to manage exactly with a combination of five pence stamps and 17 pence stamps; Smallest number expressible as the sum of two cubes in two different ways. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Peter Nicholls believes that Hardy made it up and suggests that 'in typical Cambridge

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

don fashion [he] used the taxi invention to test whether Ramanujan was still in possession of his faculties'. Or maybe he pretended to think 1729 was a dull number to cheer Ramanujan up, to allow him to show off a bit. And then, in a donnish self-deprecating style, realised the anecdote would work better if he played the role of Dr Watson to Ramanujan's Sherlock Holmes...."

6486. Friberg, Thomas. "'Successful' ophthalmologist uses detective skills." Ophthalmology Times 33, no. 8 (2008): 3-3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Thomas Friberg, Professor of ophthalmology and bioengineering, University of Pittsburgh offered the following letter to the editor: "I seldom cut out articles from Ophthalmology Times, but I saved the recent editorial by Peter J. McDonnell, MD, on 'The unsuccessful ophthalmologist,' which was a superb and insightful reflection on where we have come in ophthalmology (Ophthalmology Times, Feb. 15, 2008, Page 4). Often, my residents and fellows cannot tell me much about a patient's history, and I am forever reminding them of the importance of their observational and history-taking skills. I frequently ask them to tell me a patient's occupation, and if they cannot, I send them back into the examination room. As an aside, in a chapter of Albert & Jakobiec's Principles and Practice of Ophthalmology on retinal examination, I underscore the importance of being a good observer and I often suggest to my struggling students that they should stop reading ophthalmology for a few days and read Sherlock Holmes instead."
6487. Friedman, Kinky. "Killing Me Softly." Texas Monthly 33, no. 3 (2005): 292-274.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the decision of author Kinky Friedman to end the life of his namesake fictional detective character. Probable connection between the hero and real-life author; Similarity of his plight to the elimination of legendary mystery character Sherlock Holmes; Plot of his last mystery novel.
6488. ———. "No Show." Texas Monthly 32, no. 4 (2004): 228-212.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an article on the performance of former singer Kinky Friedman in the 'Austin City Limits' (ACL) music show in Texas. Reaction of Friedman to the decision of the producers of ACL not to air his performance on television; Description of Friedman's outfit in the show. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...On the other hand, all of life is perception. George Bernard Shaw was such a genius that he could review a play without even seeing it. As Sherlock Holmes once said, 'What you do in this world is a matter of no consequence. The question is, What can you make people believe that you have done?'" 6489. Fulford, Robert. "The heritage of storytelling." Maclean's 111, no. 44 (1998): 80.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the tradition of storytelling which is a crucial element of humanity. How persistent patterns of storytelling connect feelings and thoughts to people of the past; Why many go back to the same story again and again; Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Stories are the launching pads for the great characters who populate our collective imagination and our language: Scrooge, Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, Frankenstein's monster, Sherlock Holmes, Big Brother, Romeo. The great stories seem never to die but instead refresh themselves with each generation...."
6490. G.F. "Librarians Share Image Issues with the Popular Culture Association." American Libraries 30, no. 5 (1999): 28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the 29th annual conference of the Popular Culture Association held in late March 1999 in San Diego, California. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...In her paper 'Sherlock the Librarian? The Zero Effect and Roles: Popularizing Information Roles,' Rhonda Harris Taylor (also from the University of Oklahoma's library school) examined how the popular media depict 'the commodity called information and those who make it their lives' work.' Taylor focused on two examples, the neurotic Sherlock Holmes (whose 'own symbol, the magnifying glass, has become an icon for the quest for information') and the film The Zero Effect, whose detective hero is a socially inept recluse. 'Is it possible that the images of the librarian and the detective tell us that too much devotion to the pursuit of information will isolate us and paralyze us?' Taylor asked...."
6491. Galgut, Elisa. "Wishful Thinking and the Unconscious: A Reply to Gouws." South African Journal of Philosophy 24, no. 1 (2005): 14-21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This paper argues against the view that the Freudian unconscious can be

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- understood as an extension of ordinary belief-desire psychology. The paper argues that Freud's picture of the mind challenges the paradigm of folk psychology, as it is understood by much contemporary philosophy of psychology and cognitive science. The dynamic unconscious postulated by psychoanalysis operates according to rules and principles that are distinct in kind from those rules that organise rational and conscious thought. Psychoanalysis offers us a radical reconception of our ordinary way of thinking about our own minds." Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...In another daydream, I fly through the stars to Twin Earth, and have tea with my Twin Earth self, Queen Elizabeth I and Sherlock Holmes...."
6492. Galina, Maria. "Outside the Law: Russian Detective Stories." Russian Social Science Review 42, no. 2 (2001): 93.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Talks about the ethics of Russian detective stories. Discussion on author Tat'iana Poliakova's novels; Characteristics of detective stories; Details on the war novels of author Vladimir Bogomolov. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...And yet, the yearning for law and justice is alive in the soul of the reader of the Russian crime novel. And the longing for truth is a common human concept. It was no coincidence that Sherlock Holmes managed to become our national hero."
6493. Garber, Marjorie, and Tim Bower. "Our Genius Problem." Atlantic Monthly 290, no. 5 (2002): 64.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the obsession with the word 'genius.' Includes a reference to Holmes. "...The eccentric genius is especially familiar to readers of detective fiction, in which such titans as Sherlock Holmes and Nero Wolfe best their plodding competitors by sheer force of mind and gift for idiosyncrasy. Holmes, with his pipe, his violin, his cocaine habit, his melancholy, his diverse and erudite publications (on topics from motets to shag tobacco, from the ancient Cornish language to bee culture), his avoidance of women, and his disdain for ordinary police work, is a classic embodiment of the genius, as is Wolfe, a portly polymath, didact, gourmand, beer drinker, and orchid fancier, who also avoids women and the ordinary investigative methods of the police...."
6494. Garfield, Bob. "Your Data with Destiny." Advertising Age 79, no. 34 (2008): 1-88.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The author offers opinions on how the online social network Facebook can make its enormous popularity financially profitable. The Web site is urged to essentially transform itself into a marketing research firm. The volume of personal information voluntarily posted by consumers on their Facebook pages is said to be an invaluable resources for corporate marketers and advertising agencies. Includes an opening quote from "The Crooked Man" and a passing reference to Holmes.
6495. Garlaschelli, L. "Chimica e Misteri Sherlock Holmes, chimico." Chimica e l'Industria 80, no. 3 (1998): 351.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
6496. Garrett, Lynn. "Tidings That Bloom in the Spring." Publishers Weekly 246, no. 7 (1999): 39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports that book titles on spirituality and prayer still seem to predominate among May 1999 offerings and publishers are still playing it cautiously with millennial books. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Books on spirituality, prayer and inspiration continue to dominate the category, and there are, as always, some unique treatments within those subcategories--such as the spiritual aspects of golf and Sherlock Holmes as a guru...."
6497. Garter, Gideon. "Dear-hunter hats." Sunday Times (London), June 12, 2005: 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Ladies who flit about in deerstalker hats, as I am reliably informed they have been doing in subversive nightclubs recently, no doubt believe that they are doing so in the spirit of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. However, it was not Conan Doyle who put Sherlock Holmes in a deerstalker at all, but an artist called Sidney Paget in a drawing to illustrate The Boscombe Valley Mystery in The Strand Magazine...."
6498. Gates, David. "The prodigal son becomes a whodunit." Newsweek 127, no. 12 (1996): 66.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the novel Atticus by Ron Hansen. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Hansen clearly wanted the oomph of an archetype, the zing of epistemological gamesmanship and the whoosh of turning pages. But genre-slumming litterateurs tend to think no one else has ever read a whodunit; the old corpse-with-face-blown-off play dates back at least to 1914, when it fleetingly flummoxed Sherlock

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Holmes in "The Valley of Fear."

6499. Gautam, Kanak. "Conceptual Blockbusters: Creative Idea Generation Techniques for Health Administrators." Hospital topics 79, no. 4 (2001): 19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents specific techniques to help health care administrators generate creative ideas. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Adopt a role. Another way to think creatively is to adopt several distinct roles and to address the problem from the perspective of each. These can include living personalities such as Michael Jordan or the pope, historical figures such as Albert Einstein or Hitler, fictitious characters such as Sherlock Holmes or Spiderman, or an occupational type such as a hit man or a computer programmer...."
6500. Gee, James Paul. "Reading as situated language: A sociocognitive perspective." Journal of Adolescent & Adult Literacy 44, no. 8 (2001): 714.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Situates reading within a broad perspective that integrates work on cognition, language, social interaction, society and culture. Includes reference to Holmes. "...We can think of Discourses as identity kits. It's almost as if you get a tool kit full of specific devices (i.e., ways with words, deeds, thoughts, values, actions, interactions, objects, tools, and technologies) in terms of which you can enact a specific identity and engage in specific activities associated with that identity. For example, think of what devices (e.g., in words, deeds, clothes, objects, attitudes) you would get in a Sherlock Holmes identity kit (e.g., you do not get a 'Say No to Drugs' bumper sticker in this kit; you do get both a pipe and lots of logic). The Doctor Watson identity kit is different. And we can think of the Sherlock Holmes identity kit (Discourse) and the Doctor Watson identity kit (Discourse) as themselves parts of a yet larger Discourse, the Holmes-Watson Discourse, because Watson is part of Holmes's identity kit and Holmes is part of Watson's. Discourse can be embedded one inside another...."
6501. Gehring, Wes D. "Cinema's Dark Side." USA Today Magazine 136, no. 2750 (2007): 19-19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses film noir. Includes passing references to Holmes. "...The film detective usually is not portrayed as a genius, but rather as a hard-working sleuth whose relentlessness and common sense often lead him to the sordid truth. This is in marked contrast to the traditional Sherlock Holmes-type investigator who can look at a footprint and immediately ascertain everything about the suspect--how much change he had in his pocket, the size of his glass eye, payroll deduction tendencies, etc. Along similar lines, every possible question is answered at the end of a Holmes-style story but, at the close of a film noir caper, numerous questions remain, reflecting on the dark ambiguity of real life...."
6502. Gelder, Lawrence van. "Where is Sherlock Holmes when you need him most?" New York Times, May 11, 1997: 3.12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on examples where people in offices lost various items. Beyond title, unknown reference to Holmes.
6503. Geltzer, Joshua Alexander. "The Looming Tower: Al-Qaeda and the Road to 9/11 Edited by Lawrence Wright." American Foreign Policy Interests 29, no. 1 (2007): 94-97.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The Looming Tower: Al-Qaeda and the Road to 9/11," edited by Lawrence Wright. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Next Wright brings us to Washington and the evolving relationship between the counterterrorist czar Richard Clarke and FBI counterterrorist chief John O'Neill. Wright at first subtly and then more explicitly portrays O'Neill as Sherlock Holmes to bin Laden's Professor Moriarty...."
6504. Geraci, Ron. "The Syphilized Man." Men's Health (Rodale Inc.) 18, no. 2 (2003): 80.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the short story "The Syphilized Man." Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "My second-favorite boxers were at my knees. 'Look at that,' I said to Dr. Brudersky. He turned my snake with a latexed finger, then retrieved a magnifying glass that looked like a Sherlock Holmes prop. 'Mmm...that,' he said, eyeing the dime-size, sandpapered red patch that my penis had sprouted 4 days before. 'That's nothing. A little trauma.'..."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6505. Gern, James E., and William W. Busse. "Modernization of the Medical Sherlock Holmes." Journal of Infectious Diseases 196, no. 5 (2007): 810-811.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article offers an overview of the paper published within the issue which reports on the use of Virochip, a DNA microarray sensor, to detect viruses in respiratory tract infection. Under the investigation, researchers validated the use of Virochip to detect respiratory viruses on adults with and without asthma. Results suggest that Virochip is capable of detecting virtually all known respiratory viruses, such as human rhinovirus (HRV), coronavirus and influenza virus. The detector also determines new respiratory viruses, allowing the researchers to determine unanticipated diversity among HRV isolates. Beyond the title, no other known references to Holmes.

6506. Gerstenberger, Katharina. "Play Zones: The Erotics of the New Berlin." German Quarterly 76, no. 3 (2003): 259-272.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Offers interpretations of Berlin novels by three women writers in their early thirties to early forties who draw sex and sexual desire as they create literary renditions of the New Berlin. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Parei's novel shares important elements with the detective story in the tradition of Sherlock Holmes. Like Sherlock Holmes, Hell reads the signs of the city, gathering clues from newspaper headlines and garbage alike...."

6507. Gertzog, Alice. "In Praise of Branches." American Libraries 28, no. 8 (1997): 50-54.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Describes the influence of neighborhood branch libraries in Brooklyn, New York, on the lives of subjects interviewed by the author. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Browsing was a favorite pastime for these heavy library users. Many remember walking the aisles, picking up anything and everything that looked interesting, discovering John R. Tunis, Albert Payson Terhune, Sherlock Holmes, or H. G. Wells. With no mentorship or book lists, they selected their own reading and came home with arm loads...."

6508. Geyer, Robert R. "Globalization, Europeanization, Complexity, and the Future of Scandinavian Exceptionalism." Governance 16, no. 4 (2003): 559.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Throughout much of the twentieth century, the Scandinavian countries have been a problem for leftist and rightist visions of global order because, with various adaptations, they have continued to successfully develop on their exceptional path of market openness and social inclusiveness. How can this be explained? From a traditional social-science perspective, it cannot. However, from a complexity perspective, where there are no rigid hegemonic fundamental human orders such as globalization and Europeanization, nation-states evolve through complex adaptation with their global surroundings. From this perspective, diversity and exceptionalism--not order--are the norm." Note 6 contains a reference to Holmes. "The linear social scientist has had a variety of expressions in popular culture, ranging from Sherlock Holmes to Star Trek. Like a good linear social scientist, Holmes' 'scientific' study of crime enables him to solve all cases and astound his observers..."

6509. Gialamas, Jim. "On the Road." Forbes 166, no. 8 (2000): 71-80.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Offers a look at various countries and focuses on their appeal as a place for tourism. Recommendation to visit the Scottish Highlands; Appeal of the Sonoma Valley; Reasons to travel to Belize, Australia, Utah and other destinations. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Chef Simon Haigh may not yet be a knight, but he does hold the Order of the Michelin One Star. The dining at Inverlochy is superb, the service quietly flawless, the decor unostentatiously grand. Sipping tea by the fire in the Grand Hall while reading Sherlock Holmes is at least my definition of heaven...."

6510. Gibeaut, John. "Junior G-MEN. (Cover story)." ABA Journal 89, no. 6 (2003): 46.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the challenges faced by lawyers in conducting an internal corporate investigation. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Washington, D.C., lawyer William R. McLucas has earned a reputation over the last couple of years as the Sherlock Holmes of internal corporate investigations. His clients include Enron, Tyco International Ltd. and WorldCom Inc. He's also a former SEC enforcement chief and has led a string of high-profile corporate probes from the government's side...."

6511. Gibson, Andrea. "High-tech sleuths." Career World 26, no. 5 (1998): 17.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the use of the Internet by private investigators. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "When you think of sleuths, Sherlock Holmes may come to mind. But could this 19th-century detective stand a chance in the modern world? Today's 'private eyes' use the Internet to hunt down credit card thieves or travel to exotic spots on the globe to track stolen trade secrets. Even your local police department uses computers and electronics to nab criminals. It's safe to say good old Holmes and Watson would be a bit technologically challenged in the 1990s!..."

6512. Gizzi, John. "Politics 2001." Human Events 57, no. 20 (2001): 18.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on issues concerning politicians in the United States as of May 28, 2001. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...In the world of South Carolina Republican politics, political consultants Warren Tompkins and Richard Quinn are the equivalent of Batman and the Joker, Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Moriarity. When one of the Palmetto State's two best-known guns-for-hire signs up with one candidate or faction in the GOP, the other inevitably is found on the opposing side...."

6513. Glantz, Shelley. "The Faceless Fiend: Being the Tale of a Criminal Mastermind, His Masked Minions, and a Princess with a Butter Knife, Involving Explosives and a Certain Amount of Pushing and Shoving." Library Media Connection 26, no. 4 (2008): 70-70.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The Faceless Fiend: Being the Tale of a Criminal Mastermind, His Masked Minions, and Princess with a Butter Knife, Involving Explosives and a Certain Amount of Pushing and Shoving," by Howard Whitehouse and illustrated by Bill Slavin. Includes a passing reference to Holmes: "...Sherlock Holmes and his crew of Irregulars play a part in the complicated story, and the reader gets a hint at the difficult life of the poor in London...."

6514. Glanzer, Perry L. "Did the moral education establishment kill character? An autopsy of the death of character." Journal of Moral Education 32, no. 3 (2003): 291.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This essay examines James Davison Hunter's claim that the moral education establishment is responsible for the death of character. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...But as Hunter begins to make his case, he never convincingly does one important thing. He never produces the body--or at least a body of evidence that would reveal that character is dead. Like Sherlock Holmes, he uses empirical research to discuss the death, but this research does not prove character's demise...."

6515. Glastonbury, Marion. "Dark lanterns: alarm and despondency in the life of letters." Changing English: Studies in Reading & Culture 11, no. 1 (2004): 5-17.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Explores the challenges facing the state of college literature in Great Britain. Includes a passing reference to Doyle and Holmes. "...The dilemma of choosing a GCSE syllabus for mixed classes, as gender polarises the fictional taste or tolerance of boys and girls in their mid-teens, draws in tales of crime and of the supernatural, which are held to be unisex. Thousands of youngsters pore annually over the creaking machinery of The Speckled Band (now in the juvenile Puffin format) from Conan Doyle's wearily vapid Adventures of Sherlock Holmes--'Pray be precise as to detail', said he--and over the gruesome nullity of The Withered Arm by Thomas Hardy (1979); a piece of folkloric hackwork in which the credence given to the repulsive superstition at the centre of the plot progressively drains the characters of human substance...."

6516. Glenn, Evelyn Nakana, and Suzanne Raitt. "Preface." Feminist Studies 28, no. 3 (2002): 483.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on some of the ways in which women fought and continue to fight to be recognized as workers, artists, socialists and consumers. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The other short story, 'F---,' by Roslyn Willett also tackles the challenge of identity, this time from the perspective of a woman dealing with aging and depression. This is a poignant, at times funny, but also achingly sad account of a woman's struggle with loneliness, the loss of friends, her sense of irrelevancy, and the debilitating fear of the unknown. The story builds on a crossword puzzle motif, and just as the narrator attempts to recollect answers to her puzzle, we see how the struggle to recollect her own life becomes a desperate act of survival. As she writes, 'I am like Sherlock Holmes. To learn a new thing, I must forget an old thing. I cannot forget old things. I must constantly refresh them, or I forget them even if I do not learn a new thing.' As the story progresses, the scope of the narrator's life narrows and she increasingly loses touch with the 'clues' that will make sense of her world...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6517. Gliatto, Tom. "The Mentalist." People 70, no. 13 (2008): 45-45.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article reviews the science fiction television program "The Mentalist," starring Simon Baker and Robin Tunney. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...I like the potential in this backstory, but the premiere episode of The Mentalist doesn't deliver on what should be the dazzlement factor of Jane's ability to interpret clues that the police don't even see. It's as if Sherlock Holmes were content to impress Dr. Watson with a few glib asides made in the course of an extended happy hour...."

6518. Glimcher, Paul W. "Indeterminacy in Brain and Behavior." Annual Review of Psychology 56, no. 1 (2005): 25-56.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The central goal of modern science that evolved during the Enlightenment was the empirical reduction of uncertainty by experimental inquiry. Although there have been challenges to this view in the physical sciences, where profoundly indeterminate events have been identified at the quantum level, the presumption that physical phenomena are fundamentally determinate seems to have defined modern behavioral science. Programs like those of the classical behaviorists, for example, were explicitly anchored to a fully deterministic worldview, and this anchoring clearly influenced the experiments that those scientists chose to perform. Recent advances in the psychological, social, and neural sciences, however, have caused a number of scholars to begin to question the assumption that all of behavior can be regarded as fundamentally deterministic in character. Although it is not yet clear whether the generative mechanisms for human and animal behavior will require a philosophically indeterminate approach, it is clear that behavioral scientists of all kinds are beginning to engage the issues of indeterminacy that plagued physics at the beginning of the twentieth century." Contains multiple references to Holmes.

6519. ———. "The Neurobiology of Visual-Saccadic Decision Making." Annual Review of Neuroscience 26, no. 1 (2003): 133-181.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Over the past two decades significant progress has been made toward understanding the neural basis of primate decision making, the biological process that combines sensory data with stored information to select and execute behavioral responses. The most striking progress in this area has been made in studies of visual-saccadic decision making, a system that is becoming a model for understanding decision making in general. In this system, theoretical models of efficient decision making developed in the social sciences are beginning to be used to describe the computations the brain must perform when it connects sensation and action. Guided in part by these economic models, neurophysiologists have been able to describe neuronal activity recorded from the brains of awake-behaving primates during actual decision making. These recent studies have examined the neural basis of decisions, ranging from those made in predictable sensorimotor tasks to those unpredictable decisions made when animals are engaged in strategic conflict. All of these experiments seem to describe a surprisingly well-integrated set of physiological mechanisms that can account for a broad range of behavioral phenomena. This review presents many of these recent studies within the emerging neuroeconomic framework for understanding primate decision making." Contains multiple references to Holmes.

6520. Godslan, Shelley. "History and Memory, Detection and Nostalgia: The Case of Dulce Chacón's Cielos de barro." Hispanic Research Journal 6, no. 3 (2005): 253-264.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Dulce Chacón's Cielos de barro, winner of the 2000 Premio Azorín, is an unusual detective novel that proposes the social inequality and generalized brutality of human relationships characteristic of post-Civil War latifundista Extremadura as the motives for the bloody crime that is investigated in the text. Within a narrative space shared between an omniscient narrator and the voice of an aged, illiterate potter, a member of the province's poorest and most marginalized social group, the old man's self-reflexive discourse is privileged as his memories hold the key to solving the crime. In contrast, the voice of officialdom in the guise of the investigating officer is never textualized, and Chacón thus not only inverts a norm of the detective genre but also foregrounds the significance of the memory of a social collective that had remained outside official history. This paper assesses the significance and relevance of the detective genre to the articulation of social history and private memory, and the function of these in the resolution of a crime. With particular reference to Pierre Nora's work on lieux de memoire, it attempts to establish parallels between concepts of history and memory and the essential elements of the detective text." Includes a passing reference

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

to Holmes in note 8. "Faith in the moral probity of the written laws on which a nation's legal system is based, and a belief in a possible return to 'law and order' at the end of the investigative process featured in detective narratives, are essential to early sub-genres such as the Sherlock Holmes stories, and later fictions in the British 'enigma' or 'cosy' style popularized by the likes of Agatha Christie...."

6521. Goldman, Andrew. "To pack and pack not." Texas Monthly 23, no. 5 (1995): 121.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Interviews famous Texans as to whether they would carry a concealed handgun or not. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...Kinky Friedman novelist, country singer: 'In the spirit of Sherlock Holmes and Miss Marple and Nero Wolfe and Hercule Poirot, I believe in not carrying a weapon. If somebody wants to shoot me, he'll have to bring his own gun.'" 6522. Goldman, Laurence R., and Michael Emmison. "Make-believe play among Huli children: Performance, myth, and imagination." Ethnology 34, no. 4 (1995): 225.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Studies the nature of pretend play among Huli children in Papua New Guinea. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Advertisers frequently promote products by simulating a dialogue about that item between the fictional characters Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson. They here rely on the audience's association of these characters with a question-answer format that is overlaid onto some fantasized content about the product. The underlying conversation is packaged into a conversational form that conveys information in an essentially humorous manner...."
6523. Goldstein, Amy. "A Cut Here, a Nick There." The Washington Post, August 24, 1994: D3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Borrowing a line from Sherlock Holmes, the gubernatorial candidate portraying herself as Maryland's chief penny pincher yesterday offered 'the Sauerbrey 24 percent solution' - a series of budget cuts to offset a 24 percent reduction she has proposed in personal income taxes over four years....Two weeks after proposing the tax cut, precisely which programs Sauerbrey proposes to curb remains nearly as much a mystery as the scenario presented in the Sherlock Holmes story 'The Seven Percent Solution.'..."
6524. Gole, Andy M. "Sherlock Holmes, Geometry Proofs, and Backward Reasoning." Mathematics Teacher 96, no. 8 (2003): 544-546.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Backward reasoning, as utilized by Sherlock Holmes, offers students an effective strategy for searching existing knowledge and completing challenging geometric proofs. Backward thinking skills can result in both general and practical rewards to the student and learning these thinking skills through geometric proofs can teach students important practical skills for managing everyday life. Details of how backward thinking was used to coach a 15-year-old geometry student through a congruent-triangles problem are provided.
6525. Golland, Louise, and Karl Sigmund. "Exact thought in a demented time: Karl Menger and his Viennese Mathematical Colloquium." Mathematical Intelligencer 22, no. 1 (2000): 34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features the Mathematical Colloquium, a Vienna, Austria-based organization which met between 1928 and 1936. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...In order to make his point, Morgenstern had used in many papers and lectures (including talks in the Vienna Circle and the Colloquium) the example of Sherlock Holmes and Professor Moriarty--that mathematician gone wrong--whose attempts to outguess each other apparently had to lead to an infinite regress..."
6526. Golubov, Boris, Kim Smirnov, and Nils H. Wessell. "A creeping Chernobyl." Russian Social Science Review 39, no. 2 (1998): 81.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the importance of human safety in Russia, in comparison to nuclear safety. Concerns with nuclear explosions in the country; Reference to a hazard with lithosphere; Arguments of a geologist, the academic secretary of the Research Council on Problems of the Biosphere attached to the Presidium of the Russian Academy of Sciences. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...When they began the series of nuclear explosions in Astrakhan Oblast, the American scientist A. Borg, from Livermore Nuclear Laboratory, was invited as a consultant. In 1984 he published the data on these explosions (albeit on only seven, whereas there were fifteen). Knowing the geological characteristics of the region and using his data, we forecast the results. I, of course, was bluffing somewhat in my report, as I forced my way through the jungle of secrecy. But it turned out that everything coincided quite well with the real situation. I then told our nuclear father-commanders: you see, there is no secret. We know what is happening anyway from the indirect data, so why must I dig around like Sherlock Holmes for the information I, in my own country, need for this topic when you give it to the Americans?..."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6527. González, Leticia, Tamás Rozgonyi, David Ambrosek, and Guillermo Pérez-Hernández. "Laser Control of Wavepacket Photodissociation and Photoisomerization Dynamics in Isolated Molecules." AIP Conference Proceedings 963, no. 1 (2007): 576-585.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Control of time-dependent wavepackets in the frame of unimolecular reactions is described. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Another encouraging Sherlock Holmes case that has been solved is the underlying mechanism of photoisomerization of 3,3'-diethyl-2,2'-thiacyanine iodide (NK88) in methanol [29]...."
6528. Goodman, Allegra. "Counting Pages." New Yorker 64, no. 17 (2008): 90-90.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A personal narrative is presented of the author's impressions of her own spiritual development as a Jewish girl in Hawaii. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Sometimes on Rosh Hashanah I'd come down with terrible allergy attacks. Apparently, I was allergic to mold spores in the Temple's air-conditioning system. More than once, my mother whisked me home, and I would spend the rest of the day convalescing on the couch with 'The Complete Sherlock Holmes,' instead of praying to be inscribed in the book of life...."
6529. Goodman, Jeffrey. "A Defense of Creationism in Fiction." Grazer Philosophische Studien 67, no. 1 (2004): 131-155.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Creationism is the conjunction of the following theses: (i) fictional individuals (e.g. Sherlock Holmes) actually exist; (ii) fictional names (e.g., 'Holmes') are at least sometimes genuinely referential; (iii) fictional individuals are the creations of the authors who first wrote (or spoke, etc.) about them. CA Creationism is the conjunction of (i) - (iii) and the following thesis: (iv) fictional individuals are contingently existing abstracta; they are non-concrete artifacts of our world and various other possible worlds. Takashi Yagisawa has recently provided a number of arguments designed to show that Creationism is unjustified. I here critically examine three of his challenges to CA Creationism. I argue that each fails to undermine this version of Creationism." [Abstract from author] 6530. Goodman, Jennifer R. "Nature as Destiny in Troilus and Criseyde." Style 31, no. 3 (1997): 413.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Analyses the interpretations of the poems 'Troilus' and 'Criseyde' by poet Geoffrey Chaucer. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...In the 1990s we tend to imagine pre-Newtonian natural philosophy to be altogether obsolete and irrelevant to our lives. We respond to it the way Sherlock Holmes responded to the Copernican system: 'What the deuce is it to me?... You say that we go round the sun. If we went round the moon it would not make a pennyworth of difference to me or to my work'..."
6531. Gopnik, Adam. "The Big One." New Yorker 80, no. 23 (2004): 78-85.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews books about world wars. The Guns of August, by Barbara Tuchman; Europe's Last Summer, by David Fromkin; Cataclysm: The First World War as Political Tragedy, by David Stevenson. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...It was common in the past century to see the war as a blunder into which the masses were herded like sheep while the poets and philosophers grieved in vain. The new histories suggest that the war was welcomed in 1914, and particularly by the literate classes, as a necessary act of hygiene, a chance to restore seriousness of purpose after the two trivial decades of the Edwardian Belle Epoque. The bourgeois atomization of society--with its pursuit of private pleasures at the expense of common cause, its celebration of goods at the expense of honor--would be repaired by a unifying new national purpose. Chesterton and Sherlock Holmes, in different ways, recapture the mood of dissatisfaction with the bourgeois, the decadent, the trifling, and the petty. (In 'His Last Bow,' Holmes's last adventure, which is set in the summer of 1914, Holmes says to Watson, 'It will be cold and bitter, Watson, and a good many of us may wither before its blast. But it's God's own wind none the less, and a cleaner, better, stronger land will lie in the sunshine when the storm has cleared.') These were not words forced on a pliant population; they were words rising from a dynamic ideology. Even Thomas Mann used the vocabulary sympathetically: war was a moral necessity, 'both

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

a purging and a liberation.' In England, particularly, any vestiges of the era of Wilde would be swept away at last, and the reign of Kipling secured...."

6532. Gordon, John Steele. "Commerce raider." American Heritage 46, no. 5 (1995): 20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the practice of private business of contributing to congressional election campaigns in the United States. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...It doesn't take Sherlock Holmes to figure out that vast economic self-interest must be at stake here. After all, as Charles Keating--formerly head of a major savings and loan bank and now in a federal prison--reportedly said when asked if his contributions to congressional PACs had bought him influence, 'I certainly hope so.'" 6533. Gottschalk, Petter. "Information Technology in the Value Shop:: an Empirical Study of Police Investigation Performance." International Journal of Information Technology & Decision Making 6, no. 4 (2007): 751-765.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The role of the investigator is probably the most glamorous one in the police department. This modern Sherlock Holmes is portrayed in movies, television, and novels as a meticulous and tireless gatherer of evidence that miraculously leads to the arrest and conviction of criminals...."
6534. Goulart, Ron. "The Incredible Steam Man." Fantasy & Science Fiction 104, no. 5 (2003): 47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the short story 'The Incredible Steam Man.' Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...I found out where Otterbridge was riding this morning, went there, rented a horse and watched.' 'A stratagem worthy of Sherlock Holmes,' observed Lorenzo, brushing scone crumbs from his ample sideburns and then his nubby muffler, 'or Martin Hewitt. You're certain it was indeed Helga Sonifero the villainous lad was galloping around with?'" 6535. Grace, Kevin Michael. "Eclectica." Alberta Report / Newsmagazine 25, no. 4 (1998): 34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents news briefs from around the world for the week of January 12, 1998. James Bond as joining the ranks of such heroes as Sherlock Holmes and Hercule Poirot; The admittance of pro-choice advocates of the existence of post-abortion syndrome; The outrage expressed by columnist Don Feder, an Orthodox Jew, against Adam Sandler for his 'Chanukah Song.'
6536. Graham, Polly. "24/7: Paul Weller." Sunday Mirror, June 1, 2003: 12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "I think this is a case for the master of detection Sherlock Holmes. What was the modfather Paul Weller doing falling (quite literally) out of the Sherlock Holmes Hotel in London at 5am? Could it have been that the drunken singer was chasing after a raven-haired beauty? He was last seen clambering into a cab with the reluctant lass. I'm sure it's nothing for long-term girlfriend Sami Stock to worry about."
6537. Graham-Rowe, Duncan. "Tough case? Get a second opinion." New Scientist 179, no. 2402 (2003): 14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Software engineers have programmed a computer to investigate suspicious deaths. It can help detectives distinguish between deaths caused by murder, suicide, accident or natural causes. The software has been designed to help detectives solve complex cases by prompting them to explore lines of enquiry other than those that appear obvious. The idea is to help investigators undertake the difficult task of mentally juggling different crime scenarios. At the heart of the software is a knowledgebase containing a huge taxonomy of the possible ways in which death can be caused and the different types of evidence and facts that relate to them such as eyewitness accounts, medical analyses and forensic evidence taken from the scene of crime. An investigator simply keys in pieces of evidence and the software tries to work out how the strands of evidence could be linked and formulates possible scenarios. It also calculates how likely each scenario is, using a scale of probabilities. What sets this system apart from previous systems is that it does not rely upon the knowledge of its software programmer to draw its conclusions." Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Move over, Sherlock Holmes. Software engineers have programmed a computer to investigate suspicious deaths...."
6538. Granhag, Pär Anders, Leif A. Strömwall, and Sara Landström. "Children recalling an event repeatedly: Effects on RM and CBCA scores." Legal & Criminological Psychology 11, no. 1 (2006): 81-98.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The fact that abused children often talk about their experiences before entering the legal system is a neglected factor in terms of the validation of different reliability assessment techniques. Hence, the present study investigated the extent to which the scores of the reality monitoring technique (RM) and the criteria-based content analysis technique (CBCA) were affected by the number of times children recalled an experienced or an imagined event." References at end of article include a citation that mentions Holmes: Hernandez-Fernaund, E., & Alonso-Quecuty, M. L. (1997). The cognitive interview and lie detection: A new magnifying glass for Sherlock Holmes? Applied Cognitive Psychology, 11, 55-68.
6539. Grant, Dorothy. "Medical examiners' seminar looked at mysteries surrounding sudden death." CMAJ: Canadian Medical Association Journal 157, no. 6 (1997): 771.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Covers the seminar held for medical examiners in Nova Scotia most of whom are family physicians with little training in the investigation of sudden death. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...With the support of the Department of Justice, Butt responded by organizing Nova Scotia's first training course for MEs, 'Basic medical investigation in sudden death.' It attracted many of the province's examiners, as well as some pathologists and officers from the RCM and regional police forces. All were eager to expand their knowledge about a field that often presents conundrums worthy of Sherlock Holmes...."
6540. Green, Maria. "World literature in review: Hungary." World Literature Today 68, no. 1 (1994): 175.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book Cobblestone: A Detective Novel, by Peter Lengyel. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The novel does not follow the 'whodunit' pattern to keep the reader breathless with excitement. We meet on the very first page the 'gentleman thief' safecrackers of a polyglot gang who perpetrate their crimes in pre-World War I Europe. The interest lies rather in the scrupulous analysis of the criminal mind, seen from the double perspective of both the rascals themselves and the special investigator. This inspector is a Sherlock Holmes type of workaholic, who cannot leave an unresolved crime alone...."
6541. Gregory, Sinda, Larry McCaffery, and Yumi Matsuo. "Bird outside the Cage: An Interview with Yumi Matsuo." Review of Contemporary Fiction 22, no. 2 (2002): 91.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Interviews Japanese fiction writer Yumi Matsuo. Includes passing references to Holmes. "...Some of them are parodies of famous detective fictions, like 'The Turtle-Bellied League' named after one of the Sherlock Holmes stories, 'The Red-Headed League,' or 'Why Didn't They Ask the Midwife?' after 'Why Didn't They Ask Evans?' by Agatha Christie....But I didn't like the 'you-should-do-this-but-not-that' tone of those books and magazines. So I decided to write about a pregnant woman who is inclined to rock-and-roll, sleuthing, and inevitable smoking--for all amateur detectives should puff, brood inside the smoke, from the days of Sherlock Holmes...."
6542. Greiner, Lynn. "If converged devices fail, you're completely cut off." Computing Canada 32, no. 3 (2006): 19-19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The article relates the perspective of the author on how to maximize the energy of his cellphone battery. He prefers to use palm just to save the battery of his cell phone for calls and text messages. He is not really convinced with the capability of converged technologies such as cell phones having several applications." Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The BlackBerry's for keeping e-mail flowing. My Palm organizer does everything else, since it has the best battery life of the lot. With it, I can manage my schedule, play games, and even read e-books, without jeopardizing my communications potential, and the battery lasts over a week. I have the entire Sherlock Holmes canon on it at the moment...."
6543. ———. "PDAs are perfect for e-books." Computing Canada 26, no. 8 (2000): 18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on personal digital assistant (PDA) and electronic books. Functionality of a PDA; Written works formatted for the Palm; Software that can convert many personal computer file types. Includes multiple passing references to Holmes.
6544. Greci, Lee. "Deck the creek with Bells of ice." Weatherwise 58, no. 3 (2005): 44-47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines the meteorological basis behind the formation on bell-shaped ice in Spruce Creek, Pennsylvania. Surface analysis; Low pressure system observations; Role of rain in the formation of the bell-shaped ice. Includes passing references to Holmes. "...What I did not realize initially was just how quickly these wonderful bells of ice had formed. Needless to say, I was intrigued, and like a meteorological double of Sherlock Holmes, set out to do some detective work....Water levels on Spruce Creek did not fall that much, of course, but given that the ice bells were only a couple of inches tall, a proportional drop of a few inches in the same time frame seemed like a reasonable deduction. Elementary, my dear Watson....As a scientist, one of my favorite quotations from Sherlock Holmes is '...when you have eliminated the impossible, whatever remains, however improbable, must be the truth.' I had my theory. Now all I needed to do was test it...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6545. ———. "Gumshoe meteorology." Weatherwise 51, no. 2 (1998): 69.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Investigates the case centered around suspicions of a meteorite making a forced entry on the remote area of Greenland in 1997. Evidences presented by witnesses of the meteorite; Investigators' analysis of the evidences. Includes multiple passing references to Holmes.

6546. Grierson, Bruce. "The Hound of the data Points." Popular Science 262, no. 4 (2003): 62.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the efforts of detective Kim Rossmo to apprehend a serial rapist in Lafayette, Louisiana. Includes multiple references to Holmes.

6547. Groskop, Viv. "Navy blue blazers and Fatboy Slim." New Statesman 133, no. 4693 (2004): 20-20.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on Brazil's image of England. Popularity of English fashions in Brazil; Celebration of Cool Britannia in fashion publication from Sao Paulo shopping emporium Daslu; How Brazilian women are following Daslu's recommendations based on its British theme; How the magazine explains the art of being a British lady. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...According to Revista Daslu, the best things about Britain include Big Ben, Bentley cars, afternoon tea, fog, kilts, lamb with mint and potatoes, Ballantyne sweaters, Sherlock Holmes, pubs, Peter Pan, Virginia Woolf, the Duke of Windsor, navy blue blazers and arrogance...."

6548. Gross, John. "Knocking about the ruins." New Criterion 15, no. 4 (1996): 4.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the impact of American popular culture in Europe. Insight on the elements of European culture; Evidences suggesting the popularity of American culture in Europe; Factors that contribute to the erosion of European traditions; Effect of the decline in European cultural standards; Role of media on the trend European cultural life. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...A better guide to the future is probably the history channel on British satellite television, in which 'history' all too often turns out to be what would once have been called current affairs, with a strong dash of show business. As I write, for example, half the current week's schedule consists of biographical programs; the subjects are George Bush, Saddam Hussein, Sherlock Holmes, Lord Mount-batten, Hillary Clinton, O.J. Simpson, Yitzak Rabin, Jules Verne, Audrey Hepburn, and Buffalo Bill. You wonder whether they will ever get round to the ruins that Cromwell knocked about a bit...."

6549. Grossberg, Michael. "Capote Combination Now Holiday Favorite." Columbus Dispatch; Columbus, Ohio, no. (1994): 15.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // [Graham Bowen], who has appeared in Columbus Junior Theatre and A Premiere Playhouse shows, plays the title role in the rollicking Broadway musical adaptation of Charles Dickens' novel. He also had been cast to play the role of the Phantom as a child in Players Theatre's ill-fated Phantom.; Before Oliver, [Jessica Grove] and the Bowens developed their talents at A Premiere Playhouse, formerly Family Theatre Playhouse.; In addition, Zach Reat, of Worthington, has been cast in CATCO's January production of Donald Margulies' The Loman Family Picnic. Reat appeared in Mr. Sherlock Holmes, The Nutcracker and Snow White. He played Tiny Tim in the Playhouse's recent Ebenezer.

6550. Grossman, Jonathan H. "Alibis." Raritan 24, no. 1 (2004): 133-150.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article focuses on alibis. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Change to the alibi's use began inevitably in the wake of detective stories (the first being Edgar Allan Poe's 'The Murders in the Rue Morgue'[1841]), and the roughly contemporary introduction of detectives, along with modern professional policing generally. From then on, the moment for producing legalistic alibis in fiction and in life began to shift to pretrial. This shift was brought home, culturally speaking, in the 1890s, when the detective

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

mystery--epitomized by Sherlock Holmes--came into its own...."

6551. Grzeszkiewicz, Anna, and A. Craig Hawbaker. "Investigating a full-text journal database: A case of detection." Database Magazine 19, no. 6 (1996): 59.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines the accuracy and content of full text journal databases. Missing articles, missing issues, inconsistent availability of format within titles and even within issues, incorrect citations and questionable editorial decisions as the most common mistakes; Issues concerning accuracy and content.

INSET: The document delivery alternative. Includes passing references to Holmes. "...In this limited study, one full-text database was examined. The database exhibited various errors, inconsistencies, and problems.

Although errors and omissions in the database can be called to the attention of the database producer, what library has the staff or the funding to perform an ongoing quality control analysis--Sherlock Holmes does not come cheap!...Recognizing the limitations and possibilities for error in full-text databases is a must. It is also a necessity to make users aware of these constraints. That, as Sherlock Holmes would say, is, 'Elementary, my dear Watson, elementary!'"

6552. Gunter, Glenda, Robert Kenny, and Erik Vick. "Taking educational games seriously: using the RETAIN model to design endogenous fantasy into standalone educational games." Educational Technology Research & Development 56, no. 5 (2008): 511-537.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Our review of standalone educational games has shown that they are not always based on sound educational principles and theories. We contend that, if academic learning is to take place, a new design paradigm must be developed." Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Malone and Lepper relate this to the concept as placing the content on the plotline, in reference to the better-written television programs in which the writers keep content central, rather than peripheral, to its narrative storyline. For example, a program like CSI Miami might use a bit of forensic science or Sherlock Holmes or Monk might utilize their knowledge of literature to supply the crucial clue that solves a mystery. The same plot design should be used in a game that is meant to be educational...."

6553. Gunther, Marc. "Crime Pays." Fortune 151, no. 6 (2005): 186-192.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the "Law & Order" television programs, and their influence on American television. Profile of Dick Wolff, producer of the series; Development of the "Law & Order" series on the NBC network; Influence of the "Law & Order" series on the success of NBC; Description of several variations on the program developed by Wolff, including "Law & Order: Criminal Intent," "Law & Order: Special Victims Unit," and "Law & Order: Trial By Jury"; Popularity of the series among fans; Comments on some of the television stars appearing in the series, including the late Jerry Orbach, and Mariska Hargitay. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Now in its 15th season, Law & Order will surpass Gunsmoke as the longest-running scripted program of all time if it can hang on for another five years. There is L&O: Special Victims Unit, about a sex-crimes squad, which is posting its best ratings ever in its sixth season. Then there's L&O: Criminal Intent, a more conventional whodunit inspired by, among other things, Sherlock Holmes, now in season four...."

6554. Guterman, Jeffrey T. "A social constructionist position for mental health." Journal of Mental Health Counseling 16, no. 2 (1994): 226.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Considers social constructionism as an epistemological lens from which to clarify the identity of mental health counseling. Background on social constructionism; Clinical implications of social constructionism; Significance of social constructionism; Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...It follows that all clinical theories, including those that correspond to realist epistemologies, are not objective representations of the domain of problem formation and change, but, rather, are metaphors, allegories--in effect, stories--that we create and thereby ascribe to these realms. Walter Truett Anderson (1990) has contrasted this view with the following: 'those Freudian detective stories in which the doctor ferrets out the 'facts' of the problem, decodes the dreams, and hands down the correct interpretation of the neurosis to his [or her] patient in a manner resembling that of Sherlock Holmes as he explains a case to the slow-witted Watson.'" (p. 136)

6555. Gutiérrez, Peter. "Don't Bother Me, I'm Reading." School Library Journal 54, no. 11 (2008): 34-38.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews a selection of graphic nonfiction books for children, including one with a passing reference to Holmes. Corpses and Skeletons: The Science of Forensic Anthropology. Shone, Rob. Rosen. 2008. $29.25. ISBN 978-1-4042-1440-8. "Many books have tried to take advantage of the 'CSI effect,' but few have succeeded as well as this one. Dramatically compelling without resorting to sensationalism, Shone's latest title covers three investigations spanning more than a century, including the 1889 Gouffe case, which reads like a Sherlock Holmes adventure. Although Nick Spender's art is reminiscent of the 1970s, it somehow fits the somber nature of the material."
6556. Gutner, Toddi. "Getting Your Fair Share in a Divorce." Business Week, no. 05/29 (2000): 250-250.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Offers advice from certified divorce planner, Laura Walsh on how to locate a spouse's hidden assets. Warning signs to look for; Protection that can be attained; Internet sites that can further assist in locating hidden assets; Financial planning software; Statistics on the impact of divorce on women's and men's financial status. Inset with additional references is titled "Be Your Own Sherlock Holmes."
6557. Haar, Steven Vonder. "Chris Kitze." Inter@ctive Week 6, no. 23 (1999): 38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles Chris Kitze, chairman and co-founder of Xoom.com. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Kitze's first company, called Creative Multimedia, never made much money in medical journals, but it did strike a lucrative niche developing consumer titles based on characters such as Sherlock Holmes and a packaged offering of Shakespeare's works...."
6558. Hall, Mark. "Inspecting the Net." Computerworld 36, no. 4 (2002): 48.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Emphasizes the importance of watching the performance and availability of a networked application with a monitoring software. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Sam Spade, Sherlock Holmes and Miss Marple had it easy. They only had to solve diabolical crimes. IT professionals, on the other hand, must unravel the mysteries of performance and availability for networked applications...."
6559. Halpern, Judith. "Super sleuths." Emergency Nurse 11, no. 3 (2003): 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Editorial. Highlights the ability of accident and emergency nurses to identify a cluster of patients with conditions induced by bioterrorism. Role of public health nurse Carla Chamberlain in identifying a terrorist event; Skills needed in a crisis. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...It would be nice to have Sherlock Holmes working in health care today. His keen intellect and sense of intuition would be comforting when dealing with the unknown. In The Adventure of the Dying Detective, Holmes diagnoses Tapanuli fever, a rare and obscure infectious disease, and outwits the perpetrator in an era devoid of forensic laboratories (Conan Doyle 1967). Bioterrorism is an ominous threat in 2003; it can be perpetrated easily and subtly. Poisoned patients who seek early care often complain of vague symptoms and the significance of the disease is unappreciated until their cases worsen. Unlike Holmes, most clinicians today would not think or know what to look for with Tapanuli, Q or viral hemorrhagic fever. An outbreak might not be recognised until a duster of patients is identified. Although Holmes' skills were fictional, real time A&E nurses are naturals at cluster identification. It is not uncommon to hear: 'We seem to be having a special tonight on (fill in the blank)' or 'Everything comes in threes, so be on the watch for more (fill in the blank).'" 6560. Hamilton, Barry. "Analyzing remote control output." Electronics Now 66, no. 8 (1995): 50.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Shows how one can use a personal computer (PC) with a parallel printer port to examine the pulse train produced by an infrared remote control. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Put on your electronic Sherlock Holmes hat and investigate the output of your infared remote controls...."
6561. Hamilton, Michael S., and Johanna G. Yngvason. "Patrons of the Evangelical Mind." Christianity Today 46, no. 8 (2002): 42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Addresses the increase in evangelical scholarship in the U.S. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Sixty years ago, it would have been difficult to find an evangelical Christian who was a full professor at a major university. Today there are dozens. Back in the 1940s, not even Sherlock Holmes could have found evangelical fingerprints on any field of academic endeavor. Today several academic fields--most notably, sociology of religion, history of Christianity, and several areas of philosophy--are well-developed because of top-drawer scholarship by evangelicals...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6562. Hamilton, William. "Suitably Attired." Atlantic Monthly 288, no. 2 (2001): 122.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the history of men wearing suits in New York. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Even so, the old horseback-bred suit and tie should have had it by 1950: by then the future had become a vivid popular fantasy. Men seemed certain to appear eventually in sleek synthetic jumpsuits with magic belts they would use to teleport around the universe, taking an occasional pill to satisfy all their dietary needs. Futuristic tales of 1950 did not picture men of 2000 wearing more or less what Sherlock Holmes did...."
6563. Hamilton-Miller, Tara. "Top ten Tory twits." New Statesman 137, no. 4868 (2007): 14-14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...During the 2001 general election, Oliver Letwin, as shadow chief secretary to the Treasury, suggested the Tories might curtail future public spending by GBP20bn a year. When this proposal came under attack, he went into 'hiding.' Journalists and camera crews competed to find him. Reporters dressed as Sherlock Holmes with basset hounds turned up at Conservative Central Office. When Oliver was eventually tracked down in his constituency by the BBC's Newsnight, he was taking part in a Roman debate and wearing a toga...."
6564. Hammer, Langdon. "Poetry and embodiment." Nation 265, no. 17 (1997): 32-34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents information on the book "Desire," by Frank Bidart. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...According to Bidart, Borges looks at consciousness and sees a struggle between a 'essential self' (the 'I') and a 'worldly second self' ('Borges') that falsifies the essential self whenever it speaks or acts. Provoked by Borges's 'cold panache,' Bidart insists: 'Sherlock Holmes was somebody or something before cracking its first case but not Sherlock Holmes....'" 6565. Hanke, Steve H. "Truth or Consequences." Forbes 167, no. 8 (2001): 92-92.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the trend of banks to hide information and lie. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...You need to be Sherlock Holmes to interpret the financials of a lot of these banks. Only 63% of the sites are in English, the language of the world's major financial markets...."
6566. Hansen, Mark. "The Great Detective. (Cover story)." ABA Journal 87, no. 4 (2001): 36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the impact of DNA evidence or fingerprinting, a police investigative tool introduced in 1996, on the criminal justice system. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...What would Sherlock Holmes have thought about DNA evidence? We can't really know. But, in spite of his demonstrated devotion to data, it seems likely that he would have been troubled. After all, what use would his extraordinary observational skills be when one single fact--determined by sending a handful of cells to a laboratory--could render any theory irrelevant?...With this new investigative tool came the ability to positively identify one person to the exclusion of everyone else in the world, except an identical twin. And all from a tiny speck of blood--or any cellular matter, including skin, hair, teeth, bones or bodily fluids. In the face of this, such signature Holmesian locutions as 'The game's afoot!' sound more quaint than ever...."
6567. Hardcastle, Valerie Gray. "Multiplex vs. multiple selves: Distinguishing dissociative disorders." Monist 82, no. 4 (1999): 645.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the continuum view that Multiple Personality Disorder is one extreme along a continuum of dissociative phenomena. Dissociative disorders; Advantage of using multiplex and multiplex selves to understand the continuum view; Focus of treatment of dissociative patients. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...In particular, until the self-narrative is told, or retold, there is no fact of the matter, just as there is no fact of the matter regarding whether Sherlock Holmes owned a red tricycle as a child. In both cases, the story is undetermined until the author decides how the plot should go...."
6568. Harrington, Phil. "How to observe artificial satellites." Astronomy 36, no. 6 (2008): 74-74.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article discusses viewing artificial satellites and how to identify the ones observed. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "A few summers ago, I attended the Astroblast astronomy convention in Franklin, Pennsylvania, sponsored each year by the Oil Region Astronomical Society. One of the speakers that afternoon, Eric Fischer from Allison Park, Pennsylvania, gave a fascinating presentation titled 'If

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Sherlock Holmes Observed Artificial Satellites.' Earth-orbiting satellites pass overhead every night, but few of us pay them much mind apart from some idle curiosity. Fischers presentation showed how you can deduce what kind of satellite you're seeing by the power of observation...."

6569. Harris, H. S. "Charles S. Peirce and the Philosophy of Science (Book)." Transactions of the Charles S. Peirce Society 30, no. 4 (1994): 1046.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the non-fiction book Charles S. Peirce and the Philosophy of Science, edited by Edward C. Moore. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The first division closes appropriately with Peter Robinson's 'Peirce on Problem Solving.' He use the familiar comparison of Peirce's method with that of Sherlock Holmes to bring out the fact that there are two types of abductive guessing..."

6570. Harris, Jaime C. "The Yankees: high expectations." New York Amsterdam News 95, no. 10 (2004): 44.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article focuses on baseball teams in the U.S. as of March 4, 2004. "...The infamous BALCO — the company indicted for allegedly illegally producing and selling steroids and human growth hormones to athletes — scandal has trapped the Yankees in its web. Reportedly, outfielder Gary Sheffield and first baseman Jason Giambi were provided steroids by BALCO personnel. Both have denied using performance-enhancing drugs. But the Sherlock Holmes set, namely the media, are hell bent on uncovering skullduggery...."

6571. Haskin, David. "Sherlock streamlines Window's workflow." PC Magazine 13, no. 21 (1994): 44.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Introduces 2010 Software Corp.'s Sherlock 4.0 document management program. Features; Price; Functions.

6572. Hausladen, Gary J., and Paul F. Starrs. "L.A. Noir." Journal of Cultural Geography 23, no. 1 (2005): 43-69.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Between Utopian visions of a profoundly suburban American idyll that appeared in gallery spreads in magazines and pompous architectural journal epistles in the 1920s and '30s and the epically ignorant and sophomoric self-satisfaction of Ozzie and Harriet in the 1960s lay just a few decades that produced an historically rare episode in the United States -- a pause for introspection and uncertainty. While some of this is owed to The Bomb, HUAC, and an upheaval of collective national sacrifice through the 1940s and early 1950s, the literature and film produced at the time was routinely of high caliber and often singularly inventive. None outstrips film noir, the celluloid expression of a collective national unease, and no place offers a better geography for noir than Los Angeles. Examining three of what can be considered classic L.A. noir films, we then jump ahead to look at the genre's reemergence in Chinatown, Blade Runner, L.A. Confidential, and Pulp Fiction, each offering a novel reconditioning of noir themes." References cited include one related to Holmes: Tuan, Yi-Fu. 1985. The Landscapes of Sherlock Holmes, Journal of Geography 84(2): 56-60.

6573. Havas, Adrian. "Company unlocks secrets of high medical bills." Las Vegas Business Press; Las Vegas 11; 49, no. 1 (1994): 3.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "You could call this company the Philip Marlow of the Las Vegas medical world. Or the Sherlock Holmes of health care. It puzzles out doctor bills and other expensive paper to find out whether the price is just too high. In an era of cost-cutting, businesses are seeking a second opinion on their often-complex medical bills. A Las Vegas company, Independent Medical Evaluations, is providing that opinion. This is how IME comes in: The insurer or HMO sends it the bill. IME auditors then go through it with a fine tooth-comb to see if there are overcharges or duplications (also known as 'unbundling')." (excerpt) 6574. Hays, Carl. "The Spiral Labyrinth." Booklist 104, no. 1 (2007): 67.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "The Spiral Labyrinth" by Matthew Hughes. "Resembling a futuristic hybrid of the arch escapades of Bertie Wooster and the thought-provoking cases of Sherlock Holmes, Hughes' Hengis Hapthorn novels delight intellect and imagination. As Old Earth's foremost discriminator (i.e., private detective), Hapthorn combines a logician's savvy and an aptitude for handling unforeseen perils with aplomb. In his latest adventure, his empirical skills face a serious challenge when he is unexpectedly transported centuries forward to a future in which magic has replaced physics as the universal modus operandi. Worse, Hapthorn's intuitive alter ego, Osk Rievor, has unaccountably abandoned him in a bewildering culture whose rival wizards appear bent on using Hapthorn as a hapless pawn in a magical power struggle. Only his wits and the erudition of his fruit-devouring mammalian personal assistant will save him from a fate involving either servitude or death. Hughes' masterfully eloquent style and clever plot twisting provide Hapthorn with an investigative panache rivaling those of the leading sleuths of mainstream detective fiction."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6575. Healy, Bernadine. "Clueless About Risks of Oral Sex." U.S. News & World Report 144, no. 7 (2008): 60-60.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reports the health risks of oral sex, especially among young people with multiple sex partners, noting that many are not aware that sexually transmitted diseases can be transmitted orally. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...It doesn't take Sherlock Holmes to figure out that this rise in oropharyngeal cancer is linked to changing sexual practices and, in particular, ones that involve bathing the throat with HPV-infected fluid...."
6576. ———. "Memories of Estrogen." U.S. News & World Report 135, no. 23 (2003): 68-70.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a profile of Roberta Díaz Brinton, a neuroscientist at the University of Southern California who is researching the effects of estrogen on the brains of older women. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Meanwhile, Brinton's main research interest is still the natural molecules that influence memory, notably estrogens. Long ago she decided to learn about remembering and forgetting by 'following estrogen around the brain like Sherlock Holmes.'" 6577. Hedrick, Donald. "The Bard of Enron: From Shakespace to Noir Humanism." College Literature 31, no. 4 (2004): 19-43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The recent surge of popular appropriations of Shakespeare's works for managerial workshops and book-length manuals for the business world foreshadows complex changes in the Bourdieuan 'literary field.' Analysis of several manuals reveals a trajectory of sophistication in using Shakespeare, paralleling Nietzsche's categories for uses of history.... A newly implied, paradoxical role for the literary humanist in late capitalism is the complicit investigator, a film noir detective, perhaps fascinated by and even benefiting from and the commercial/criminal sphere under investigation, as Shakespeare becomes Los Angeles." Includes a reference to Holmes. "...Our traditional image of the scholar is, it seems, that of the independent, and therefore objective, investigator, the traditional and typical model for which is Sherlock Holmes. As explorer, the Holmesian detective is an excavator of truth; his literary scholar counterpart uncovers latent meaning, ironies, structures, social and historical contexts, all within the 'objective' text. The Holmesian detective, then, is essentially an overviewer of the crime. The noir detective, by way of contrast, becomes enmeshed in the crime itself, like the example of Raymond Chandler's Philip Marlowe...."
6578. Hefferman, Michael. "Professor Penck's Bluff: Geography, Espionage and Hysteria in World War I." Scottish Geographical Journal 116, no. 4 (2000): 267.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on controversies about the pre-war activities of German and British geographers. Representation of facts from the Royal Geographical Society; Role of media in shaping the image of geography; Transmission of desirable knowledge and resources for teaching and research. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The belief in a secret game of espionage and counter-espionage ranging around the globe was evident from the formulaic structure of most spy novels. These invariably ended with defeat for enemy agents at the hands of stout hearted Britons drawn reluctantly into the shadowy world of espionage. Many stories also included at least a cameo appearance by an all-seeing, Sherlock Holmes-like British intelligence officer, the archetype being Colonel Creighton, the omnipotent scholar-spy and secret map-maker of the Northwest frontier in Rudyard Kipling's Kim (1901)...."
6579. Heil Jr, Alan L. "Nato and the Media in Kosovo: Partners Or Partisans?" Washington Report on Middle East Affairs 19, no. 5 (2000): 96.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the conference hosted by the Washington D.C.-based United States Institute of Peace focusing on the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's relations with the media during the 1998 Kosovo conflict. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Shea said that under deadline pressure, each day he had to assemble and verify 'a thousand pieces of information,' sometimes from a variety of allied capitals as well as from pilots returning from missions. Under these circumstances, he said, 'the spokesman becomes a Sherlock Holmes, like a journalist, putting all the pieces of the puzzle together before the briefing.'"

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6580. Hellie, Benj. "Higher-Order Intentionality and Higher-Order Acquaintance." Philosophical Studies 134, no. 3 (2007): 289-324.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...A paradigm is thinking about: a real entity can think about an unreal entity, as when John thinks about Sherlock Holmes; a foil is kicking: a real entity can't kick an unreal entity...." The footnote for this passage reads: "Although one unreal entity can kick another, as if Holmes kicks the hound of the Baskervilles."
6581. Helt, Julianna M. "Top 8: Round Up the Usual Profiles." School Library Journal 54, no. 12 (2008): 122-122.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Top 8: Round Up the Usual Profiles," by Katie Finn. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The plot quickens as she channels Agatha Christie and Sherlock Holmes to solve the crime. The author peppers clues throughout and keeps readers guessing all the way to the surprising conclusion. Smartly written and totally accessible, this is a wonderfully fun first novel...."
6582. Heltzer, Marilyn. "It's about a lot more than the deer." Minneapolis Star Tribune, Nov 3, 2006: 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Observations on the opening of the firearms deer hunting season in Minnesota. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...But I can tell you this about deer hunting: For many hunters, it has little to do with killing deer....But the subject of deer hunting fascinates me, and I've had quite a few of these conversation. In others, I've asked, 'But doesn't it get boring up in that deer stand, waiting for hours for a doe to wander by?' I've heard about the joys of watching bunies burrowing in the leaves. And about one hunting partner who recently Found God and downloads religious teachings and sermons and listens to them on his iPod while he's sitting in the stand. Then there's the deer stand specially outfitted with a slanted shelf for an avid reader who made a good dent on 'The Complete Sherlock Holmes' last hunting season...."
6583. Hempfer, Klaus W. "Some Problems Concerning a Theory of Fiction(ality)." Style 38, no. 3 (2004): 302-324.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article examines the problems concerning the concept of fiction. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Whereas literary studies and linguistics discuss fiction(ality) primarily in terms of textual typology, in the philosophy of language the debate on the nature of fictionality focuses almost exclusively on the issue of the referential quality of such terms as 'Pegasus,' 'Sherlock Holmes,' or 'Hamlet' and the ensuing problem of how the truth of propositions containing such terms can be determined...."
6584. Hendley, Vicky. "The importance of failure." ASEE Prism 8, no. 2 (1998): 18-23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Engineering curricula often focus on successful designs and neglect unsuccessful ones, but this reliance upon past successes can lead to future failures. Learning about engineering failures can offer students new career options and can introduce them to ethics and professional responsibility. Another important reason for studying failure is to learn that there is no guarantee of success in designing new things on the basis of past successes alone. Hence, artificial intelligence, expert systems, and other computer-based design aids whose logic follows examples of success have only limited application. Examples of engineering failures that have led to engineering successes are provided." Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Shusto loves her job and the intellectual challenges it brings. 'Failure analysis is the Sherlock Holmes work of engineering--figuring out what went wrong is exciting and fascinating,' she says...."
6585. Henry, Andrea. "Did they really Say That?" The Mirror, September 28, 2001: 53.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Quiz host: On which street did Sherlock Holmes live? Contestant: Er.. Quiz host: He makes bread.. Contestant: Er.. Quiz host: He makes cakes.. Contestant: Kipling Street?; Quizmaster Chris Tarrant famously said that the questions are only easy if you know the answers but can the pressure on contestants really be so intense? A new book, The Little Book Of Dumb Britain, shows that, perhaps, we're just not as smart as we think we are. Here, Andrea Henry compiles some of TV's most gobsmacking moments...."
6586. Hernadi, Paul. "On Cognition, Interpretation, and the Survival of Literature: A Response to Hans Adler and Sabine Gross." Poetics Today 24, no. 2 (2003): 185.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a response to a commentary made by Hans Adler and Sabine Gross on the article 'Literature and the Cognitive Revolution,' which appeared in the spring 2002 issue of 'Poetics Today.' Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Fictive storytelling likewise diverts the referential direction both of third-person pronouns and of the names they stand for from the actual to a virtual world--few readers or

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- moviegoers will look for Sherlock Holmes or James Bond in the London telephone directory...."
6587. Hernandez-Fernaund, Estefania, and Marisa Alonso-Quecuty. "The cognitive interview and lie detection: A new magnifying glass for Sherlock Holmes?" Applied Cognitive Psychology. 11, no. 1 (1997): 55-68.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Research in the field of witness memory has shown that even when the situational conditions are optimal and the delay provides no risk whatsoever to the accuracy of the information of both the witnesses and the victim, a completely exact statement of an occurrence is not always obtained when police use a traditional interview (TI) technique." Beyond the title, unknown reference to Holmes or Doyle.
6588. Hewitt, Bill, and Joseph Harmes. "Post Mortem." People 45, no. 3 (1996): 38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports that O.J. Simpson's witness Dr. Henry Lee went to Bosnia for grisly purpose of giving names to the dead. Identification of 950 bodies; Reception of DNA testing apparatus. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...In fact, the key to his [Lee's] success is not just hard work, but a genius for sifting and evaluating clues. From the start, he amazed many law enforcement colleagues with deductions that seemed worthy of Sherlock Holmes...."
6589. Hibberd, James. "'Biography' Fighting For Life on A&E (Cover story)." Television Week 24, no. 33 (2005): 1-49.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the efforts of the television network A&E to keep its "Biography" brand. Decline in the viewership of the brand; Types of programming included in the brand; Remarks of A&E executive vice president Robert DiBitetto regarding the efforts. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...As A&E has changed its audience it has used Biography Channel as a showcase for its older-skewing programming. In addition to 'Biography,' the channel airs cozy detective shows such as 'Murder, She Wrote,' 'Columbo' and 'Sherlock Holmes Mysteries.'" 6590. Hicks, Adam A. "Sherlock takes the mystery out of naming files." PC Magazine 13, no. 16 (1994): 62.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on 2010 Software Corp.'s Sherlock 4.0 document management software. Capabilities; Specifications; Enhancements; Support and compatibility; Pricing; Availability; Contact information.
6591. Higginson, Pim. "Tortured Bodies, Loved Bodies: Gendering African Popular Fiction." Research in African Literatures 39, no. 4 (2008): 133-146.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This essay examines the gendering of the crime novel in an African context." Includes a passing reference to Holmes in the first footnote.
6592. Hillerman, Tony. "Building without blueprints." Writer 120, no. 5 (2007): 25-26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reports on ways to improve one's writing techniques. The author proposes that not all books can be written in a linear fashion. It is also suggested that using outlines to map the direction of a story may actually constrict the plotline. The author's book "Listening Woman" is discussed in detail. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...It would give the reader a look at Tso, who will be the murder victim, and introduce the shaman, who would be a fairly important character. Finally, the dialogue would provide background information and--in its discussion of Navajo taboos violated by Tso--provide clues meaningless to the FBI but significant to my Navajo Sherlock Holmes...."
6593. Hinkle, A. Barton. "Whodunit Fans Will Find Several Recent Titles to Meet Their Fancy." Richmond Times - Dispatch; Richmond, Va., Dec 11, 1994: F.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The Encyclopedia conveniently breaks down Holmesian material into (a) information about the canonical works of Arthur Conan Doyle and (b) information about the legions of spin-offs. One not only can look up the color of Mycroft Holmes' eyes (grey) and find out in which story Holmes said, 'Come Watson! The game is afoot!' ('The Abbey Grange') but also learn that Laurence Olivier once played Professor Moriarty (in 'The Seven-Per-Cent Solution') and that in 'Star Trek VI,' Spock claims Holmes as an ancestor.; [Matthew E. Bunson] says the stereotypical Holmes smoked 'a meerschaum pipe.' In fact, the stereotypical Holmes pipe (indeed, the kind pictured on the Encyclopedia's cover), does have a meerschaum bowl -- but is properly called a calabash. Oh, well: Nit-picking aside, the Encyclopedia usefully organizes facts relating to the 'world's first consulting detective,'..."(except)

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6594. Hintikka, Jaakko. "On the Educational Missions of Philosophy." Diogenes 48, no. 4 (2000): 63.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the educational role of philosophy. Teaching of skills in argumentation and reasoning; History of human thought; Introduction of informal logic for students. Includes multiple references to Holmes.
6595. ———. "What: is Abduction? The Fundamental Problem of Contemporary Epistemology." Transactions of the Charles S. Peirce Society 34, no. 3 (1998): 503.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes passing references to Holmes. "...But what is that reasoning really like? When we speak of the reasonings of the likes of Sherlock Holmes or Nero Wolfe as 'deductions' accomplished by means of 'logic,' we do not mean philosophers' deductive logic which is not ampliative. But what are they, then?...The reasoning of the likes of Sherlock Holmes or Nero Wolfe is not deductive, nor does it conform to any known forms of 'inductive inference.' The 'deductions' of great detectives are in fact best thought of as question-answer sequences interspersed with deductive inferences (I have argued)...."
6596. Hirsch, Eric. "Alfred Gell." Anthropology Today 13, no. 2 (1997): 21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles Alfred Gell who passed away January 28, 1997, one of the most creative and intellectually gifted anthropologist of his generation. Gell's contributions to anthropology; Similarities between Sherlock Holmes and Alfred Gell; Intellectual masters he admired.
6597. Hobson, Marian. "Measuring Statues, or, Special Neutrality." Paragraph 27, no. 1 (2004): 33-49.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the relation of practice of measuring statues to anthropometry. Date of the earliest record of measuring statue; Description of the world's most discussed statues; Denunciation of the idea of proportion as the foundation of beauty. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The two examples show Diderot fascinated by the way Camper, like a Sherlock Holmes, can use his drawing and his observation forensically: he can diagnose the nationality from the face...."
6598. Holland, Bill. "Upgrading labels' vaults no easy archival task. (Cover story)." Billboard 109, no. 29 (1997): 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Part two. Discusses the efforts of United States record companies to preserve their archives. The undertaking of EMI when it took over Capitol Records in the mid 1980s; The dubious facilities in which the archives are stored; The items that constitute the archives; Concern about the future of archiving recorded sound; The effects of technological developments; The format in which the archives are stored.
INSETS: Translating the archivists' lexicon; Vaults suffer from past pilferages; Erasing Elvis, pitching out Presley--all for storage. Inset includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Often reissue producers and library archivists develop Sherlock Holmes-like deductive powers and follow the trail of clues and rumors about a missing track back to a suspect who has actually stolen tracks. Says one veteran, 'We know there are some collections [of stolen material] belonging to older people that were sold or even given to places like the Library of Congress for a tax credit.'"
6599. Holland Jr, William J. "Fitting submarines into the Fleet." U.S. Naval Institute Proceedings 134, no. 6 (2008): 32-36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article focuses on submarines as part of the fleet of the U.S. Navy. Fleet is considered to be the number of warships under a definite area of operation and under one command. It analyzes the reasons for the difficulty faced in operating submarines as an arm of the fleet. It states that technical and process knowledge is needed to control submarines. Includes a passing reference to Holmes and his brother. "...As predicted in 1892 by Mycroft Holmes, the fictional elder brother of Sherlock, 'You may take it from me that naval warfare becomes impossible within the radius of a Bruce-Partington [submarine] operation.'..."
6600. Holland, Norman. "Spider-Man? Sure! The neuroscience of suspending disbelief." Interdisciplinary Science Reviews 33, no. 4 (2008): 312-320.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes passing references to Holmes. "Rapt -- 'transported' is the term psychologists use -- in a literary work, we do not doubt that Spider-Man can web himself over tall buildings, that the Three Bears can talk, or that Sherlock Holmes can tell all about people from the mud on their

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

boots....Psychologist Richard Gerrig rewrites Coleridge's 'willing suspension of disbelief'. He notes that we take away only some information from a fiction. That is, if I am reading Sherlock Holmes stories, I will take away information about London neighborhoods and hansom cabs and gazogenes as part of my permanent knowledge. But I will not believe that there was a Sherlock Holmes or a Dr Watson or even a Mrs Hudson as I was doing when transported by the story. One can explain this phenomenon by saying we believe it all and then we disbelieve some...."

6601. Hollander, John. "Early birds." Raritan 18, no. 2 (1998): 19.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the poem 'Early Birds.' A reference to Holmes in one part of the poem: This was nineteen forty-seven/And you could still find extremely/Ancillary vaudeville acts at/Some of the big downtown movie/Theaters in the largest cities/--And in fact I had just seen one/In Chicago, on the way out/To the west coast earlier that/Summer: Basil Rathbone! ? Sherlock/Holmes in flicks and on the radio!?

6602. Holly, Michael Ann. "Mourning and Method." Art Bulletin 84, no. 4 (2002): 660.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Considers the paradigm of Renaissance art historical scholarship in terms of the theme of melancholy. Practice of connoisseurship in Renaissance studies; Source of energy of the performance of art history; Correlation between the rhetoric of mourning and studies in the humanities; Details on an investigation of Jan van Eyck's identical painting. Notes 10 and 19 contain references to Holmes. (n10.) See the classic essay on the subject by Carlo Ginzburg, "Morelli, Freud, and Sherlock Holmes: Clues and Scientific Method," History Workshop 9 (1980): 5-36. (n19.) Max Dvorák, for example, considered both to be copies of a lost original; Panofsky (openly modeling his methods at detecting "disguised symbolism" on those of Sherlock Holmes) dismissed both as "heresy" to the van Eyck canon and regarded them as conglomerations of Eyckian motifs, probably painted by Petrus Christus; Millard Meiss agreed with Panofsky that they certainly could not have been executed by van Eyck; Julius Held found the Turin painting superior and therefore perhaps the original masterpiece; and Charles Cuttler considered both to be replicas of a lost work by the master. Ibid.; see the annotated bibliography by Katherine Crawford Lubner.

6603. Holmes, Eamonn. "Garish Golfers Taken for Ryd; Man of the People." The People (London), September 24, 2006: 19.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Tom Lehman made his American Ryder Cup team look as if they'd been dressed by the 90-year-old secretary of the Sherlock Holmes Appreciation Society. Ian Woosnam did no better, forcing his European players into those suede safari jackets Roger Moore used to wear as 007. What were they playing at? Nick Faldo will be Europe's skipper in 2008. Let's hope for a bit of style and a decent tailor."

6604. Holub, Robert. "Luhmann's progeny: Systems theory and literary studies in the post-wall era." New German Critique, no. (1994): 17p.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on writer Niklas Luhmann's views on systems theory and literary studies during the post-wall era in Germany. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Schwanitz's fictitious conversations are oases in an otherwise arid theoretical terrain. Enlisted in the service of the higher Lumannian cause at one point or another are the five modern dramatists cited above; Sherlock Holmes and Doctor Watson; Rosencrantz and Guildenstern, Horatio, Hamlet, and Shakespeare; Ulrich, Stumm, and Diotima from The Man Without Qualities..."

6605. Holzberg, Carol S. "Cyber Science." Technology & Learning 26, no. 6 (2006): 32-33.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A review of free Web resources that offer a way to supplement rigorous classroom instruction, support No Child Left Behind initiatives, and offer professional development for teachers in math and elementary science is provided. Includes one resource with a reference to Holmes. Whodunnit: A Unit on Mysteries and Forensic Science for Elementary Gifted Students (www.geocities.com/sseagraves/whodunnit.htm): "If Sherlock Holmes were alive today, what forensic tools would he use for crime solving? Inquiring students (ranging from mainstream to gifted) in grades 4-6 can learn more about forensic science with suggestions for movies, writing, and art, plus several hands-on activities such as fingerprinting, cheiloscopy (the study of lip prints), handwriting analysis, and chromatography."

6606. Honey, Emily. "Taking the Wolf by the Ears: Ann Rinaldi and the Cultural Work of Sally Hemings." Journal of

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- Popular Culture* 41, no. 1 (2008): 71-90.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article uses the young adult book entitled "Wolf by the Ears," by Ann Rinaldi, to explore the cultural significance of Sally Hemings, who was a Black woman that secretly had children with former U.S. President Thomas Jefferson. Passing reference to Holmes in the biographical note on the author.
6607. Horak, Terri. "Mrs. Hudson's branches out with rare vids." Billboard 106, no. 48 (1994): 105.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on Manhattan, New York-based Mrs. Hudson's Video Library's expansion with satellite locations to increase accessibility of its collection. Specialization of the store in hard-to-find titles, B movies and foreign films; Registration fee for its 'Take-Away' service; Promotional strategy.
6608. Horne, William W. "Machine maker unhinged by sales emphasis." Inc. 21, no. 3 (1999): 25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Offers information on industrial machine maker Clay Cooper and on his founded company American Dixie Group Inc. Details on the company; His professional background; Company's bankruptcy filing in September 1998. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "'A case study in success' is how Stephen Derby, an automation-engineering professor at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, in Troy, N.Y., and a former consultant to American Dixie Group, sums up the company's early years. In 1995 a local newspaper, touting Cooper's problem-solving wizardry, even compared him to famed detective Sherlock Holmes...."
6609. Horowitz, Alan S. "Biting Back." Computerworld 37, no. 2 (2003): 39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the impact of software viruses on businesses in the U.S. Development of strategies by smart chief information officers to test for and fix viruses in both off-the-shelf software and applications created in-house; Cost to analyze and fix the problem; Creation of Bugtracks software from Foster Wheeler Inc. for internal use. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...A debugging strategy must also include the programmers, notes David J. Agans, author of Debugging: The 9 Indispensable Rules for Finding Even the Most Elusive Software and Hardware Problems (Amacom Books, 2002). 'The assumption is that because they have a degree in engineering, they know how to debug.' Not true, Agans says. Developers often approach debugging as puzzle-solving, but it's actually more investigative, a la Sherlock Holmes, he says. So train your developers in debugging...."
6610. Horvath, Frank, J. P. Blair, and Joseph P. Buckley. "The behavioural analysis interview: clarifying the practice, theory and understanding of its use and effectiveness." International Journal of Police Science & Management 10, no. 1 (2008): 101-118.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The Behavioural Analysis Interview (BAI) is the only questioning method that has been developed specifically to help investigators sort those who are likely to be guilty from those who are not. In its typical application the BAI is a pre-interrogation interview that is used to focus interrogational effort; however, it also can be used independently in order to circumscribe investigative efforts in those cases in which there is a fixed and relatively large number of suspects. In this paper an overview of the BAI process is provided and the findings and limitations of the extant bodies of field and laboratory research on the BAI are discussed. The paper concludes with suggestions to guide future research on the BAI. [Abstract from author]. Includes multiple references to the "Sherlock Holmes Effect."
6611. Hotch, Ripley. "Add-ons to help you find your files fast." Nation's business 82, no. 7 (1994): 56.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features 2010 Software Corp.'s Sherlock and Above Software's Golden Retriever computer softwares. File management capabilities.
6612. Houtkooper, Joop M. "Retrocausation Or Extant Indefinite Reality?" AIP Conference Proceedings 863, no. 1 (2006): 147-168.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Moreover, as the fundamental physical interactions leave no room for an explanation of psi as we know it, we are forced, as Sherlock Holmes would say, to consider the improbable after the impossible has been eliminated. Though, is it really unlikely that the information supplied by the observer to quantum mechanically random systems would be related to the state or disposition of this observer?..."
6613. Howard, Jennifer. "Hot Type." Chronicle of Higher Education 52, no. 18 (2006): A29-A29.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article focuses on Palo Alto, California-based Stanford University's "Discovering Sherlock Holmes" project. In this project, the 21st-century readers will have a chance to meet detective Sherlock Holmes as their 19th-century counterparts did in serial adventures printed on cheap newsprint, with the original illustrations by Sidney Paget. This isn't Stanford's first venture into serial publication. Its "Discovering Charles Dickens" series reissued great expectations serially in 2003. Holmes appears to be even more of a draw. They anticipated that about 500 people would sign up. More than 7,000 did, a number matched by the subsequent Dickens reissues.
6614. Howell, Philip. "Crime and the City Solution: Crime Fiction, Urban Knowledge, and Radical Geography." Antipode 30, no. 4 (1998): 357.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Criticizes the crime fiction and radical geography. Role of geographical description in the epistemological claims of detective novels; Connections between radical political economy and urban fiction; Creation of the character, Detective Inspector Charlie Resnick in the novels of John Harvey. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...And in the sense that the urban references construct a sense of place, it is a construction of a truly shared place. This kind of mapping is not the equivalent of the semiotic skill of a Sherlock Holmes and his unique ability to read the city, but is rather an epistemological device that gestures at the nature of the city itself, its intersubjectivity, its narratability, and its negotiability...."
6615. Huang, Ching-Yuan, and Lichun Chiang. "Learning Ethics From Museum Exhibitions: Possible or Impossible?" Ethics & Behavior 17, no. 4 (2007): 367-386.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This research was undertaken to explore audience members learning ethics from two national museum exhibitions: The Return of Sherlock Holmes (RSH) and Human Body Exploration (HBE) in Taiwan. Based on literature review of ethics for museums, there are four dimensions related to exhibition ethics: environment, marketing, education, and services. Therefore, the purpose of this research was to examine the relationships within the dimensions of environment, marketing, education, and services of exhibition ethics and to understand the differences in exhibition ethics between RSH and HBE. The total number of valid questionnaires was 191 for RSH and 152 for HBE. The research method analysis of variance was applied to examine whether there were significant differences between individual's basic data and four different dimensions of exhibition ethics in museums. [Abstract from author]
6616. Hudgins, Andrew. "Love in a Box." American Scholar 73, no. 4 (2004): 35-39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an article on the relationship of men with women and their fantasies regarding ideal women. Views of men on successful career women; Fantasies of men on women broadcasters. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...I'm not thinking about stalkers, creeps who make the women uncomfortable or, God help us, attack them, but about a person with a normal unhealthy and insane platonic crush on someone unattainable. Attempts to break through that barrier and to make these fictional people real are almost as misguided as the people who, I've heard, continue to write letters to Number 10 Baker Street beginning 'Dear Sherlock Holmes, I realize you are a fictional character but I really need your help.'" 6617. Hunt, George W. "Of many things." America 177, no. 4 (1997): 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Recounts the publication of several books considered Victorian novels. 'What Jane Austen Ate and Charles Dickens Knew' and the 'Dickens' Fur Coat and Charlotte's Unanswered Letters: The Rows and Romances of England's Great Victorian Novelists' published by Daniel Pool; 'Dombey and Son' by Charles Dickens; 'Jane Eyre' by Charlotte Bronte. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The thirst for scandal and sensation eventually replaced enjoyment of the more delicate, discreet and comforting worlds created by the Victorian novelists. By the 1890's the popularity of the short story (e.g., Sherlock Holmes), the success of the more robust Russian and French novels (Tolstoy, Zola) and the rise of the drama (Straw and Wilde) finished off a delightful era. A more self-conscious, skeptical and ironic generation emerged and, with it, the 20th-century novel."
6618. Hunter, Nigel. "Ivor Wins Confirm David's Status." Billboard 113, no. 24 (2001): 43.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the 2001 Ivor Novello Awards for the music industry in Great Britain. Reputation of the awards ceremony; Mention of how rhythm and blues artist Craig David won three Ivors; Mention of awards received by Stevie Wonder, the Clash, Pete Townshend and others. Includes a reference to

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- Sherlock Holmes Music. "...This year, R&B artist Craig David's disappointment at being passed over at the Brit Awards in February was assuaged when he won three Ivors: best contemporary song for 'Seven Days,' which David wrote with Mark and Darren Hill (published by Windswept Music, Warner/ Chappell Music); songwriter(s) of the year, shared with Hill; and dance, for 'Woman Trouble,' written with Hill and Artful Dodger (Windswept Music, Warner/Chappell Music, and Sherlock Holmes Music)...."
6619. Huntley, Dana. "South Downs, Sunshine and Showers." British Heritage 29, no. 4 (2008): 14-17.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A personal narrative is presented which explores the author's experience of traveling in various historic sites in England. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Sandra Lawrence joined me for dinner that evening and we batted around future story ideas and swapped gossip on politics, theater and sundry current events. With only the next day in town, I managed a revisit to the Tower of London and a chat with the Chief Yeoman Warder, then spent a couple of warm afternoon hours quaffing Old Speckled Hen with writer James Graham outside the Sherlock Holmes on Northumberland Place...."
6620. Hurd, Douglas. "Britain's strengths and influence in the world." Vital speeches of the day 61, no. 11 (1995): 337.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a speech by Great Britain's Foreign Secretary, given before the Bankers Club, dealing with the strengths and influence of Great Britain in the world. Image of Great Britain in foreign countries; Advantages of the English language; Training of the British armed forces; Quality of the British government. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...It is true sometimes the image of Britain in some foreign parts is a little outdated, a little weird. Though our chimneys have long ceased to pour out stifling smoke, there is still a vision of London as wrapped in swirling fog and gloom in which Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, Jack the Ripper and Sherlock Holmes are still going about their respective bits of business. But the real gloom is often to be found in the way we do ourselves down in the press...."
6621. Hutcheson, Philo. "The Past as Awkward Prologue: Teacher Education and the Junior College." Community College Journal of Research & Practice 26, no. 7/8 (2002): 645-658.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Until as recently as the mid-1970s, historians of education paid little attention to teachers and teacher education. This article examines the role of junior and community colleges in the preparation of teachers, with emphasis on the 1920s, and into the 1930s, 1940s, 1950s, and 1960s. The article concludes by connecting today's interest in alternative teacher certification at community colleges with the challenges of the past." Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Yet reading through the histories of teacher education produces almost no references at all to junior colleges....This was baffling, yet the historian in me was not disturbed by this finding, in that it brought out the private detective in me. And it may well take a version of Sherlock Holmes, waiting for a figure in history to lift a woman's shoe to ascertain if there is dirt on the sole, to deduce whether or not she ever took a teacher-education course at Joliet Junior College...."
6622. Hutto, Daniel D. "The Narrative Practice Hypothesis: clarifications and implications." Philosophical Explorations 11, no. 3 (2008): 175-192.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...I have never doubted that simulation routines and the deployment of general knowledge about people (and specific knowledge about individual persons) are often called upon to play such roles, providing the requisite auxiliary support (see Hutto 2004). The annals of Sherlock Holmes provide a wealth of examples of how such methods work when one is trying to understand others in their absence (see Hutto 2008a, chap. 1). With this in mind, I call these supplemental uses of simulation or theory Holmesian heuristics. Importantly, they should not be confused with the exercise of FP-competence itself...."
6623. Ian, Marcia. "Who Ate My Baby?" Studies in Gender & Sexuality 2, no. 1 (2001): 83.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Taking as a horrifying example a 1993 triple child homicide in West Memphis, Arkansas, in which bitemark evidence figures prominently, this article explores some ramifications of 'the Oral Father'--a figure of paternity associated with the most primitive appetite and aggressivity." Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Why did the police not investigate the parents, particularly Byers, to begin with? In a review essay, Joyce Carol Oates (1999) described '[t]he notorious...murder of six-year-old child beauty pageant winner JonBenet Ramsey...as a case that Sherlock Holmes would have 'solved' in a few seconds ratiocination."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6624. Iglesias Kuntz, Lucia. "Manuel Vazquez Montalban: 'Writing is an act of free choice'." UNESCO Courier 51, no. 10 (1998): 46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Interviews Catalan author Manuel Vazquez Montalban. Why does cooking occupy an important place in his books; Reason he writes detective novels; Significance of Pope John Paul II's visit to Cuba according to Montalban. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Everybody who reads Georges Simenon's Maigret novels knows he's waiting for the first seasonal dishes, the first spring peas in the brasserie, no matter how they're prepared, and draught beer the way they only serve it in a particular bar. Readers wait for that to happen; they wait for Sherlock Holmes to play the violin or start sniffing. I gave Carvalho one or two of those traits and I've had to respect them from one novel to the next...."
6625. Imich, Alexander. "PSI Research and New Paradigms in Science." Journal of Religion & Psychical Research 22, no. 4 (1999): 184.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A look at the history of science is given and the ever changing concepts observed. A text box insert at the end of the article (which contains no reference to Holmes or Doyle) includes the now well-known joke of Holmes and Watson camping.
6626. Imrie, Rob. "Book Reviews." Urban Studies 35, no. 2 (1998): 341-356.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'City Codes: Reading the Modern Urban Novel,' by Hana Wirth-Nesher. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Witness too the popularisation of city tours based on fictional characters and plots, like Sherlock Holmes murder mystery tours or walking trails of Charles Dickens, London. Indeed, more often than not cities are known for their literary and/or artistic inscriptions and may even be places that people only ever visit through imaginative worlds conjured up by the author or artist...."
6627. Ivanova, Natal'ia. "Intersecting Parallel Lines." Russian Studies in Literature 39, no. 1 (2002): 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines the difference between the poets Boris Pasternak and Anna Akhmatova in Soviet Union. Pasternak's attitude toward the Russian Revolution; Nature of poetry; Algorithm governing the behavior of compromise. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Where is he living, whom is he seeing? Probably no one but Livanov. [The most likely reference is to the actor, Vasilii Livanov, famous for his portrayal of Sherlock Holmes.--Trans.]
6628. Jackson, Kevin. "The Triumph of the Stage Direction." American Scholar 68, no. 4 (1999): 59.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an adaptation from the book 'Invisible Forms.' Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Bloom walks on a net, covers his left eye with his left ear, passes through several walls, climbs Nelson's Pillar, hangs from the top ledge by his eyelids, eats twelve dozen oysters (shells included), heals several sufferers from king's evil, contracts his face so as to resemble many historical personages, Lord Beaconsfield, Lord Byron, Wat Tyler, Moses of Egypt, Moses Maimonides, Moses Mendelssohn, Henry Irving, Rip van Winkle, Kossuth, Jean Jacques Rousseau, Baron Leopold Rothschild, Robinson Crusoe, Sherlock Holmes, Pasteur, turns each foot simultaneously in different directions, bids the tide turn back, eclipses the sun by extending his little finger...."
6629. Jackson, Louise A. "The Unusual Case of 'Mrs Sherlock'. Memoir, Identity and the 'Real' Woman Private Detective in Twentieth-Century Britain." Gender & History 15, no. 1 (2003): 108-134.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Despite a huge popular and literary interest in detective fiction and an extensive academic literature on the history of policing, there have been very few studies of the history of private detectives/investigators. The work of women investigators has proved to be even more marginal. Histories of women and work have tended, for obvious reasons, to concentrate on mainstream industries, occupations and professions rather than the unusual or the unique. Focusing on the memoirs of Annette Kerner, published in the early 1950s, this article examines the range of opportunities that investigation created in the first half of the twentieth century, analysing the interaction of professional, gender and class identities. It highlights, firstly, women's 'professional' commitment to an exciting and challenging area of work, exploring their relationships with other occupational groups including women police. Second, it considers how disguise and masquerade presented opportunities for urban exploration and the crossing of traditional boundaries of gender and class. Investigative work developed, historically, at the same time as detective fiction and it has been deeply affected by fictional portrayals. The cultural mantle of 'the female Sherlock Holmes' was a hard inheritance to shake off and it suffused women's public presentations of themselves."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6630. Jacobs, Kurt, and Howard M. Wiseman. "An entangled web of crime: Bell's theorem as a short story." American Journal of Physics 73, no. 10 (2005): 932-937.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Nonlocality of the type first elucidated by Bell in 1964 is a difficult concept to explain to nonspecialists and undergraduates. We attempt to do so by showing how nonlocality can be used to solve a problem in which someone might find themselves as the result of a series of normal, even if somewhat unlikely, events. Our story is told in the style of a Sherlock Holmes mystery, and is based on Mermin's formulation of the 'paradoxical' illustration of quantum nonlocality discovered by Greenberger, Home, and Zeilinger."
6631. Jakeman, Jane. "Books: Iain Pears Biography; in His New Novel, Iain Pears Spends 2,000 Years in Provence - and Reveals the Low Cruelty of High Culture. Jane Jakeman Talks to Him about Courage and Compromise." The Independent (London), May 18, 2002: 23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Ian Pears was born in 1955. He was educated at Wadham College, Oxford, has worked as a journalist and television consultant, and has lived in France and Italy. A student of Francis Haskell, he wrote a doctoral thesis on interest in the arts in 18th-century England. Pears is also the author of seven detective stories set in Italy featuring Jonathan Argyll, an art historian, and the Rome Art Theft Squad. He edited The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes and The Mysteries of Sherlock Holmes for Penguin Classics...."
6632. James, Victoria. "Take cover: the English are coming!" New Statesman 131, no. 4577 (2002): 23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Deals with the hooliganism concerns surrounding the World Cup soccer hosting of Japan for 2002. Difference between Japanese and English sports audiences; Safety initiatives undertaken by Japanese officials for the event. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "'Tell us about soccer hooligans, Craig-san,' persisted our mumsy young Japanese-language teacher, pushing her glasses up over eyes dilated with a thrill of fear. 'Aren't they frightening?' My classmate looked sideways at me, and I shrugged helplessly back. Two minutes earlier, I had been discoursing lamely on Peter Rabbit, whose cult status in Japan approaches that of Hello Kitty. Before that, Anna-san, to my right, had been explaining that London was no longer filled with the pea-souper fog described in the Sherlock Holmes mysteries so loved by the Japanese...."
6633. Janssen, Michel. "COI Stories: Explanation and Evidence in the History of Science." Perspectives on Science 10, no. 4 (2002): 457.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Explores two striking incongruities between scientific practice and trends in modern history and philosophy of science. Argument on the importance of looking at non-local aspects of scientific methodology; Different motivation for keeping evidence and explanation separate; Important role of common-origin inference (COI); Features of COI; Difference between the Hypothetico-Deductive (H-D) account and the meta-COI account of confirmation. Includes a passing reference to Holmes (p. 460). "...Inductive reasoning is not infallible. Maybe it is a holiday and you are not the only one who did not realize the bus is following a different schedule. Infinitely many other scenarios are possible. Yet, you confidently infer from seeing many people at the stop that the bus is late. Scientists make such inferences all the time. So do lawyers. So does Sherlock Holmes...."
6634. Jaroslovsky, Alan. "Imagining Reality." Mercury 33, no. 6 (2004): 20-27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the literature of space exploration in the 20th century. Experience of rocket scientist Robert Goddard and science fiction writer David Lasser concerning their space-travel writing; Accuracy of the book "Dawn of the Space Age," by Harry Harper; Lesson to be learned from early space-travel writing concerning the search for extraterrestrial intelligence. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Perhaps the most important lesson to be learned from early space-travel writings is that 'common sense' is not a limiting factor on human ingenuity. As Sherlock Holmes might say, when all valid theoretical objections have been explained away whatever remains, no matter how far-fetched it seems, is possible...."
6635. Jenkins, C. S. "Lewis and Blackburn on quasi-realism and fictionalism." Analysis 66, no. 4 (2006): 315-319.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents a study on the arguments of D. Lewis against S. Blackburn's concept of quasi-realism. Lewis argues that Blackburn's concept of quasi-realism is a kind of fictionalism, by

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- saying that the quasi-realist seems to repeat everything what is said by the realist. It presents a distinction of disowning prefaces from disowning prefixes. Includes a reference to Holmes (p. 316). "...To begin with, Lewis distinguishes disowning prefaces from disowning prefixes (2005: 315). Examples given of disowning prefixes include: 'According to the pack of lies my opponent has just told you...' and 'According to the Sherlock Holmes stories...'. One example of a disowning preface is: 'I shall say much that I do not believe, starting now'. The distinction is that: [w]hen the assertoric force of what follows is cancelled by a prefix, straightaway some other assertion takes its place: an assertion, as it might be, about what my opponent's lies or the Sherlock Holmes stories say or imply. Not so for prefaces. (2005: 315)..."
6636. Jenkinson, Michael. "How to beat the 'benign dictatorship.'" Alberta Report / Newsmagazine 24, no. 8 (1997): 6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines the state of Canadian conservatism in early 1997. 'Our Benign Dictatorship,' by Tom Flanagan and Stephen Harper, an essay suggesting the Tories and the Reform Party could form a loose alliance to gain influence in Parliament; The Christian Democratic Union and Christian Social Union in Germany as a model; Predictions for future electoral politics in Canada. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Neither does Mr. Frum particularly support the notion of an alliance between the two parties. He thinks that one big conservative party in Canada, rather than a mere coalition, is not only possible, but inevitable. 'Sherlock Holmes said, when you eliminate the impossible, whatever remains, however improbable, is the truth,' says Mr. Frum. 'And that's how to look at this....'"
6637. Jensen, Peter S., and Henry Watanabe. "Sherlock Holmes and child psychopathology assessment approaches: The case of the false-positive." Journal of the American Academy of Child & Adolescent Psychiatry. 38, no. 2 (1999): 138-146.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Unknown reference to Holmes beyond title.
6638. Jobling, Mark A., and Peter Gill. "Encoded Evidence: Dna in Forensic Analysis." Nature Reviews Genetics 5, no. 10 (2004): 739-751.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Sherlock Holmes said "it has long been an axiom of mine that the little things are infinitely the most important", but never imagined that such a little thing, the DNA molecule, could become perhaps the most powerful single tool in the multifaceted fight against crime. Twenty years after the development of DNA fingerprinting, forensic DNA analysis is key to the conviction or exoneration of suspects and the identification of victims of crimes, accidents and disasters, driving the development of innovative methods in molecular genetics, statistics and the use of massive intelligence databases. [Abstract from author] 6639. Johnson, Arthur. "Revolution for the hell of it." Canadian Business 68, no. 8 (1995): 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses baby boomers' rise to societal prominence. Corporate ascendancy of baby boomers; Leading Canadian magazines based on circulation; Increase in the readership of 'Canadian Business' magazine. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Let's sink back into the mists of time. It's 1968, and members of the National Mobilization Committee, aided by Yuppies Abbie Hoffman and Jerry Rubin, are gathered to make a statement about the Vietnam War. Specifically, they're going to med-irate en masse, with the announced intention of causing the Pentagon to levitate. As Sherlock Holmes might have said, the interesting aspect of this case is that the Pentagon did not levitate...."
6640. Johnson, Brian D. "Bombed-Out Atom." Maclean's 118, no. 42 (2005): 50-52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the motion picture "Where the Truth Lies," directed by Atom Egoyan and starring Kevin Bacon, Colin Firth and Alison Lohman. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...At his office, Egoyan runs upstairs to show me a big old Steinbeck editing console, mounted with reels of celluloid. The film is Krapp's Last Tape, a European TV movie he made in 2000. It's cued to an image of a reel-to-reel tape recorder, like the one used by Lohman's journalist in Where the Truth Lies. 'It's an installation, the ultimate statement of analog' says Egoyan, who loves to mix art and artifact. He then points to a camcorder wired to a small computer in the corner. 'This is where I'm editing Citadel.' Picking an envelope off the desk, he adds, 'Here's the latest Hollywood script, which I read this morning. It's a Sherlock Holmes story, and it's actually tempting.'" 6641. Johnson, Douglas. "Bookish Delights." History Today 51, no. 4 (2001): 78.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an article on how an enthusiasm in library helped a French to become a historian. Importance of books on the enlightenment of a person on his past and present living; Impact of war on the study of history; Overview of the history of France in the 1930's. Includes references to Holmes.

"...What did I read? I was enthusiastic for certain novels that had a historical interest. I liked G.A. Henty, Stevenson, Buchan. I didn't read much Scott but I found The Fortunes of Nigel particularly attractive and less difficult than others. By the age of twelve, my favourite books were Pickwick Papers, the Sherlock Holmes stories and the Wodehouse books about Jeeves. I think that, apart from the immediate enjoyment they offered, they also provided illustrations in the past of a problem that I was becoming conscious of in the present. This was the question of social classes. Where did Mr Pickwick's money come from, why wasn't Sherlock Holmes rich, why was Jeeves so subservient? In my form at school were the sons of a doctor and a bank manager...."

6642. Johnson, Doug. "Weed." Library Media Connection 22, no. 1 (2003): 124-122.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Poorly weeded collections are not the sign of poor budgets but of poor librarianship. Period. Only two things can happen if library material replacement budgets are inadequate. The collection ages if the librarian does not weed. The collection gets smaller if the librarian does weed. That's it. Small, but high quality collections are infinitely better. And this is why, continuous, thoughtful weeding is necessary for a library. Shelves filled books of no value are the equivalent of pantries full of empty cereal boxes. Visitors don't look very hard at book collections. They only see whether shelves are empty or full. Includes a reference to Holmes. "And you've been complaining about the Internet being a source of bad information! Any books about the 48 states? Any that predict that one day man will land on the moon? Any in which the Soviet Union is still a major political power? My favorite weeds were these: Boy Electrician, Boy's Book of Rifles, Boy's Book of Verse, Boy's Book of Great Detective Stories, Boy's Book of Turtles and Lizards, Boy's Book of Outboard Boating, Boy's Book of Sherlock Holmes, Boy's First Book of Radio and Television There was no 'Girl's' book of anything, but if there had been, I'm sure it would have been of cooking, sewing, or dating...."

6643. Johnson, David E., and Simone J. Schroder. "Annotated Bibliography on the Teaching of Psychology: 2001." Teaching of Psychology 29, no. 4 (2002): 337-344.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This bibliography is a continuation of those previously published in Teaching of Psychology (e.g., Berry & Daniel, 1984; Fulkerson & Wise, 1987; Johnson & Schroder, 1997; Wise & Fulkerson, 1996). We maintained similar search methods and criteria for inclusion that were used in previous bibliographies. We also continued the cumulative numbering of the items. To help the reader locate relevant articles we arranged items into a small number of subject categories. Generally, if fewer than three items fell into a specific subject category they were relegated to a category labeled miscellaneous." Includes an entry with reference to Holmes: 5151. Junn, E.N., Grier, L.K., and Behrens, D.P. (2001). Playing "Sherlock Holmes": Enhancing students' understanding of prejudice and stereotyping. Teaching of Psychology, 28, 121-124. Described a simple, innovative classroom exercise designed to heighten students' understanding of stereotyping and prejudice.

6644. Johnson, Paul. "Prayer in the White House." Forbes 176, no. 11 (2005): 37-37.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article looks at the place of God and religion in the White House. President George W. Bush has stated that his acceptance of Christ has changed his life and that he prays before making important decisions. President Abraham Lincoln, although not a regular Christian, believed he was guided in his decisions by the Almighty. President William McKinley prayed to God to help him make the right decision about acquiring the Philippines. The author states that he would rather have a leader who always prays than one who never prays, one who has strong faith rather than no faith or weak faith. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...As Sherlock Holmes would say, 'These are deep waters, Watson.' Most American Presidents have believed in God and prayed accordingly in moments of crisis...."

6645. Johnson, Sarah Anne. "Women of substance." Writer 115, no. 11 (2002): 26.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Interviews author Sena Jeter Naslund. Background on how she became a writer; Persons who influenced her career; Writing techniques; Information on her book 'Ahab's Wife'; Views on the publishing industry; Advice to other writers. Includes multiple references to Holmes.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6646. Johnston, Paul Dennithorn. "The Joy of Words: Confessions of a Verbaholic." ETC: A Review of General Semantics 53, no. 2 (1996): 131-137.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the effects of words on the author. Comparison with other forms of intoxication; Charles Lutwidge Dodgson; Experiences as a journalist in England; Excerpts of famous works. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Coldly logical Sherlock Holmes would not approve of our frivolities...'Watson, the game's effete!'" 6647. Johnston, Sheila. "Film; [3 Edition]." The Independent (London) 1994: No Page Citation.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Anthony has just turned eight. 'At school my best friend is Matthew and we play Iceman, British Bulldog, and Sharks. In Iceman you have to freeze in a position.' At home he's a Lego fan....Anthony enjoys films which he mostly sees on video or television. 'Jerry Lewis makes me laugh. Sometimes I like westerns. I know they're not really getting killed.' He speaks with concentration, and the occasional smile, telling the story of his favourite video, Basil the Mouse Detective. 'I know it's based on Sherlock Holmes. I like the book, too, the real Sherlock Holmes. But my book only has three stories. I like books and films. But in The Secret Garden, I liked the book better. There was more magic....'" 6648. Jones, Kathryn. "Cybersleuths." Texas Monthly 28, no. 8 (2000): 102.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the proliferation of Internet crime in Texas. Emergence of Internet crime fighters in Dallas and Houston, Texas; Description of the job of computer crime fighters; Crimes created by computer technology; Intention of computer criminals. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...As anyone who works in an office knows, it is now almost impossible to embezzle money, steal trade secrets, run calling card scams, and commit Medicare or securities fraud or a host of other white-collar crimes without using a computer. That, in turn, has spawned a new breed of crime fighter: former FBI agents, ex-cops, and ex-prosecutors who, like Rittenberry, have found new careers in the private sector as "computer forensics" investigators. Instead of collecting physical evidence such as fingerprints, hair, and fibers, they look for digital electronic information in data files. Then they recover, analyze, and protect the pertinent data. 'We're kind of like a Sherlock Holmes on a hard drive,' says David Wilson, a forensics and electronic-discovery specialist who works in Deloitte and Touche's new computer lab in a windowless office in downtown Dallas...."
6649. Jones, Krista. "Sherlock Holmes in Outer Space! Engineering Space Probes." Technology & Children 10, no. 4 (2006): 7-9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents a project for students to construct a research-based design model of a robotic space probe that will explore the solar system. Teachers are requested to preview web sites before asking the students to use them. The quality and completion of research by the students is observed. A rubric scale is used to rate the quality of the constructed probes and oral presentations. No other reference to Holmes beyond title.
6650. Jones, Malcolm, Jr. "Sense and sensibility." Newsweek 124, no. 1 (1994): 67.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the novel 'The Yellow Room Conspiracy,' by Peter Dickinson. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Describing the proper requirements in a mate, she declares that 'it doesn't much matter not having the same kind of good taste . . . But you've really got to have the same kind of bad taste. If one of you likes damask lampshades with gold tassles, then you've both got to.' Not even Sherlock Holmes ever gave advice that good."
6651. Jones, Trevelyn E., and Luann Toth. "Grades 5 & up: Nonfiction." School Library Journal 43, no. 3 (1997): 195.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews a number of books including one in which the review contains a reference to Holmes. Chiflet, Jean-Loup & Alain Beaullet. Victoria and Her Times. tr. from French by George Wen. 93p. (W5 Series). illus. map. photos. reprods. index. CIP. Holt. 1996. Tr $19.95. ISBN 0-8050-5084-1. LC 96-28394. "This series entry has all the strengths and weaknesses of the earlier titles. The graphics are innovative and eye-catching. Various aspects of Victoria's life and era are portrayed on each double-page spread. Albert's resume, an analysis of Victoria's handwriting, and a piece on Sherlock Holmes are some highlights. The spread on the origin of the quote 'We are not amused' features a portrait of Victoria with a clown nose. An oversized volume with fascinating browsing material, this will spark interest, but the text is difficult and requires some

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

familiarity with world history...."

6652. Joyce, Simon. "Sexual Politics and the Aesthetics of Crime: Oscar Wilde in the Nineties." ELH 69, no. 2 (2002): 501-523.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes references to Doyle and Holmes. "...Late Victorian readers could of course look to popular fiction--to Gothic novels, sensation fiction, and the Sherlock Holmes detective stories--for a more elevated style of criminality, or to newspaper accounts of Jack the Ripper: indeed, it became a commonplace of contemporary commentary to highlight how strikingly literary these murders appeared, with noticeable parallels to Poe, Sade, and especially to Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde (1886)....Such speculations about the Ripper's identity--and his presumed resemblance to other literary figures--suggest a renewed interest in crime as not only imaginative and aesthetic, but as the province of the privileged classes: by the turn of the century, for example, we get the first appearance of Raffles, E. W. Hornung's aristocratic cat burglar, to place alongside Dr. Jekyll, Dorian Gray, and all those hard-up minor aristocrats who usually turn out to be the culprits in Conan Doyle...." Note 7 includes a Holmes reference: In his Atlas of the European Novel, 1880-1900 (London: Verso, 1998), Franco Moretti points out the astonishing fact that Holmes only once ventures into the East End, and even this is presumably in the doppelganger story, "The Man with the Twisted Lip," in which the culprit turns out to be a bourgeois journalist disguised as a beggar (Moretti, 34).

6653. Junn, Ellen N., Leslie K. Grier, and Debra P. Behrens. "Playing 'Sherlock Holmes': Enhancing students' understanding of prejudice and stereotyping." Teaching of Psychology. Electronic; 28, no. 2 (2001): 121-124.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Unknown reference to Holmes beyond title. "We describe a simple, innovative classroom exercise designed to heighten college students' understanding of stereotyping and prejudice. Students enjoyed the exercise and indicated it helped increase their awareness and understanding of their own and others' stereotypes and prejudice and the negative effects of prejudice. Students of color reported more benefits from the exercise. We provide suggestions and recommendations for carrying out the exercise."

6654. Kaiser, Jocelyn. "Hunt proposed to find lead sources." Science 279, no. 5355 (1998): 1293.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Note to all Sherlock Holmes types in the scientific community: A private source is putting up $2.5 million for chemical sleuths to try to figure out how to link pigment in a chip of lead paint to its manufacturer. If anyone succeeds, the results could send a shock wave through the business world by allowing thousands of lead-poisoned people to be compensated for their injuries...."

6655. Kaku, Michio. "The power of staring." New Scientist 186, no. 2495 (2005): 48-51.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents the author's opinions about the string theory related to the universe. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...My other character, the detective -- the Sherlock Holmes -- must recreate a crime scene and make sense of seemingly random clues. Imagine a museum housing a priceless crystal of extraordinary beauty and clarity. Unfortunately, vandals have ransacked the exhibits, and dropped the crystal. Piecing it together is the task facing our detective-theoretician. I like to think that the 'crime' is the big bang itself, that in that instant, the universe was shattered into fragments. The original 'super force' fragmented into four pieces: gravity, the electromagnetic, and the weak and strong nuclear forces. Our job is to restore the crystal to its original beauty. Our universe is so broken today because it is so old: a staggering 13.7 billion years have passed since the crystal was cracked...."

6656. Kaler, Anne K. "Who is that Monk in the Hood?: Friar Tuck, Francis of Assisi, and Robin Hood." Journal of Popular Culture 30, no. 4 (1997): 51-74.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This article argues that the convivial companion of the British legendary character Robin Hood could not have been a Franciscan friar. Friar Tuck could have been a friar from one of the order, namely Benedictine, Augustinian or Carmelite, but according to history, he could not have been a Franciscan. ..." Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...As Maid Marian (and Catholicism) waned in popularity and Robin Hood (and Protestantism) strengthened, the symbol of religious nature of man -- Friar Tuck -- was named and transformed into the familiar figure of a cleric -- a harmless, jolly Franciscan friar. Once that happened, popular culture adapted and adopted its earlier archetype of the Lord of Misrule into Friar Tuck by inverting the lean image into the fat image. The lean ascetic man and the fat sensualist have always been symbols of the two parts of man's nature. If the essence of drama is conflict, how well the psychomachia of body and soul is represented in the battle between the stout friar and the lean athletic Robin Hood. Literature reflects this split in the ancient heroes of lean Achilles and stocky Odysseus, in the ascetic Don Quixote and the obese Sancho Panza, in Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6657. Kane, Madeleine Begun. "John Mortimer." British Heritage 18, no. 4 (1997): 41.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles the author John Mortimer, creator of the celebrated Rumpole of the Bailey stories. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...In his 1992 collection, The Best of Rumpole, Mortimer describes how he created his most popular character: 'About 17 years ago I thought I needed a character, like Maigret or Sherlock Holmes, to keep me alive in my old age. I wanted a sort of detective, who could be the hero of a number of stories but whose personality and approach to life were more important than the crimes with which he was concerned. He would have to be a comic character, as well as being courageous and more than usually astute, because I believe life to be best portrayed as comedy....'

6658. Kanfer, Stefan. "Comediennes and Classics." New Leader 83, no. 3 (2000): 45.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Offers a look at theater producers and playwrights, one with a reference to Holmes. "This Spring, when two of Broadway's most prolific impresarios, Alexander H. Cohen and David Merrick, died within days of each other, the curtain descended on an epoch. Cohen produced more than 100 shows, ranging from Baker Street, a lack luster musical about Sherlock Holmes, to the current Noel Coward revival, Waiting in the Wings. Not long ago he starred in a wry one-man production about his experiences ('the H stands for horseshit'); at the age of 84 he was still active, developing yet another production to bring to the Great White Way...."

6659. ———. "Victorian Vanities." New Leader 82, no. 10 (1999): 22.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews two plays. 'The Countess,' by Gregory Murphy; 'Dear Liar,' by Jerome Kilty. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...For the record, there was a final chapter to the Ruskin-Millais story. Despite the advice of well-wishers, Ruskin did not contest the annulment. After a brief interval, Effie and Millais wed. Their marriage was long and fruitful; she bore him eight children. As for Ruskin, he outlasted the chatter, writing and teaching, going from strength to strength, instructing (and often scolding) the British public on art, politics and economics. He never remarried, and never caused a breath of subsequent scandal. As it turned out he was neither homosexual nor heterosexual. He was simply, like his fictive contemporary Sherlock Holmes, a brain without emotions. So matters worked out well for all concerned. The intellectual, the artist and the lady enjoyed that rarest of Victorian desiderata, a happy ending...."

6660. Kaplan, Lawrence F. "American Idle. (Cover story)." New Republic 233, no. 11 (2005): 19-27.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the decrease in American nationalism and patriotism and the change in America's reputation worldwide. Review of various writings that have been done on the issue from Christopher Lasch, Robert Putnam, Daniel Yankelovich, William Bennet and David Brooks; Discussion of how Americans are craving a rebirth of the sense of national self-confidence they used to have; Effect of the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001 on nationalism in the United States; Suggestion that the administration of U.S. President George W. Bush has slowed the rebirth of nationalism in the United States. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...Aside from the 1.4 million men and women in the Armed Forces, their families, and members of law enforcement, virtually no one participates in today's effort. Some national greatness critics actually tout this as progress. The portrayal of war as a means to civic renewal, after all, boasts a lousy pedigree--mostly the result of pronouncements made by intellectuals who, bored by the emptiness and trivialities of the Belle Epoque, welcomed war as something to wipe out the malaise of civilian life. (In His Last Bow, set on the eve of World War I, Sherlock Holmes tells his sidekick, 'It will be cold and bitter, Watson, and a good many of us may wither before its blast. But it's God's own wind none the less, and a cleaner, better, stronger land will lie in the sunshine when the storm has cleared.') In the era of mass armies, the flaw in this sort of reasoning was that, whatever war's civic effects may have been, they paled next to its carnage and certainly didn't amount to a justifiable casus belli. In terms of war's impact at home, the problem today is nearly the reverse: The ordinary American has been assigned the role of spectator, and, if surveys tell us anything, that suits him just fine...."

6661. Karlgaard, Rich. "CEOs for the next century." Forbes 163, no. 12 (1999): 43-43.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Names successful technology chief executive officers in the United States and their management strategies. John Chambers of Cisco; Eric Schmidt of Novell; Henry Nicholas of Broadcom; Paul Curlander of Lexmark; Larry Weinbach of Unisys; Jim Goodnight of SAS Institute. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Paul Curlander, Lexmark. Sherlock Holmes had an older brother, Mycroft, reputed to be smarter. Trouble was, Mycroft was lazy as sin. He liked nothing better than to lollygag all day at his gentlemen's club and read newspapers in his leather chair. Mycroft regarded his younger brother's liking to paw at grass blades for clues as low-class, and vaguely amusing. Lexmark's little-appreciated CEO, Paul Curlander, could pass for Bill Gates' older brother. He favors dorky glasses and has a loping, nerdy walk, just like Bill. But Curlander is no lazy, armchair CEO. Down in Lexington, Ky., he's directing merciless raids into the heart of Hewlett-Packard's printing business-and often winning. As HP searches for a new CEO, it would do well to consider Curlander...."

6662. ———. "Gotta be Wireless." Forbes 167, no. 11 (2001): 51-51.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the United States economy as of May, 2001 and how it can be reinvigorated. How blame for the economic slowdown is passed around among investment banks, venture capitalists, the public and the press; Argument that Federal Reserve chairman Alan Greenspan's tight monetary policy and President George W. Bush's decision not to try to cut capital gains taxes are not helping the economy; Suggestion that wireless technology will be the next thing to spur the economy. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The lack of last mile bandwidth is holding up the next generation of Internet software, which requires streaming audio and TV-quality video. Lack of LMB is smothering e-commerce. It is destroying sales for PCs, servers and routers. It's America's big roadblock, behind which rotting computer inventory, busted business models and shattered investor dreams are piling up. What's the answer? Sherlock Holmes used to say: 'When you have eliminated the impossible, whatever remains, however improbable, must be the truth.' I think DSL and cable are impossible and must be eliminated...."

6663. ———. "A Merry Economy." Forbes 176, no. 12 (2005): 43-43.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article recommends several products and mentions the United States economy. Includes a passing reference to Holmes in a list of recommended holiday gifts. "...Michael Connelly mystery novels. The brilliant and prolific Connelly knocks all other living mystery writers to the minor leagues. Los Angeles police detective Harry Bosch ranks with Sherlock Holmes as a complex, memorable character. If you haven't experienced Connelly yet, I envy you the fun you're in for...."

6664. Karmiloff-Smith, Annette. "Elementary, my dear Watson, the clue is in the genes... Or is it?" Psychologist Electronic; 15, no. 12 (2002): 608-611.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This paper is a summary of a lecture given in celebration of the centenary of the British Psychological Society. Argues that the interpretation of data from adult neuropsychology and genetic disorders the temptation to seek one-to-one relationships between complex behaviors and specific genes or locations in the brain is flawed (e.g., S. Pinker, 1994). It is based on a static model of the human brain, ignoring the complexities of gene expression and the dynamics of postnatal development. The author illustrates this through studies of infants, children and adults with the genetic disorder Williams syndrome. Understanding the complex pathways from gene to brain to cognitive processes to behavior is like a Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson detective story, in which seemingly unimportant clues early in development play a vital role in the final outcome."

6665. Kasher, Asa, and Ronen Sadka. "Constitutive Rule Systems and Cultural Epidemiology." Monist 84, no. 3 (2001): 437.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Proposes an approach to cultural evolution that is based on transition from regulative rule systems to constitutive systems. Relevance of the conservative nature of genetic evolution; Dan Sperber's idea of cultural epidemiology; Distinction between regulative and constitutive rule systems; Application of regulative and constitutive rule systems on family institution, and other art forms. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...If Gopnik is right, then regulative systems signal success with the ability to account for that success in terms of an explanation or in some other natural form. Such success markers might linger on in constitutive systems, allowing them to be sustained in our mental repertoire, even though their original regulative use is now absent. This is why we find explanation to be so appealing in cultural settings,

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

even though constitutive rule systems do not require it. Thus, we might find much pleasure in reading how Sherlock Holmes puts the pieces of an intriguing case together, though it possesses no value for us apart from [sic] the joy of reading...."

6666. Kauffmann, Stanley. "Dishing It Out." New Republic 211, no. 10 (1994): 34-36.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews various films, including a reference to Holmes. "...Eat Drink Man Woman (Samuel Goldwyn) is a Taiwanese film written by Ang Lee, Hui Ling Wang and James Schamus and is directed by Lee. Lee's previous film, The Wedding Banquet, about a gay Taiwanese man living with a gay American in New York, was fairly excruciating. The banquet of the title was what the film moved toward; his new picture is (like Babette's Feast) more completely centered on food. Eat Drink Man Woman is smaller than it promises to be, but it's quite enjoyable. The title expresses the idea that food and drink and sex are the essentials of life. No argument so far. The main character is a master chef in Taipei, played by Sihung Lung, who was the gay's father in The Wedding Banquet (and who suggests an Asian Ronald Colman). Here he has three grown daughters. He is the emperor of a huge hotel kitchen, and every Sunday he prepares an immense dinner at home for his children, a feast that makes us want to leap into the screen like Buster Keaton in Sherlock Junior...."

6667. ———. "Women's Ways." New Republic 212, no. 10 (1995): 30-31.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several motion pictures and includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Herbert Ross, who directed, started life as a ballet dancer and choreographer. His first film work, in 1954, was choreography; he directed the first of his twenty-five films in 1963. His career has been more notable for good craftsmanship than for the extraordinary, with a few exceptions such as The Seven Per Cent Solution (1976), an effervescent joint adventure of Sigmund Freud and Sherlock Holmes. But the preeminent aspect of Ross's directing is its unreliability: there's no style or prevailing taste to depend on. Boys on the Side, of which he is also a producer, is the work of a competent hand on the assembly line...."

6668. Kaufman, D. A. "Reality in Common Sense: Reflections on Realism and Anti-Realism from a 'Common Sense Naturalist' Perspective." Philosophical Investigations 25, no. 4 (2002): 331-361.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Analyzes the philosophy of realism and anti-realism from a common sense naturalist perspective. Skeptical anti-realism and the question of common sense; Discussion on contemporary anti-realism; Meaning of frameworks, quietism and anti-realism; Insights on quietism and neo-Kantianism. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...As Quine has demonstrated, the question 'what things exist?' cannot be answered by simply looking at the expressions in our language, for in the case of what are grammatically referring expressions, it is as often the case that there is no corresponding object as it is the case that there is one. 'Sherlock Holmes', for instance, is a grammatically referring expression--it is a proper name--yet there is so such man.[sic]" 6669. Kaufmann, Stefan. "Conditioning against the Grain." Journal of Philosophical Logic 33, no. 6 (2004): 583-606.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This paper discusses counterexamples to the thesis that the probabilities of conditionals are conditional probabilities. It is argued that the discrepancy is systematic and predictable, and that conditional probabilities are crucially involved in the apparently deviant interpretations. Furthermore, the examples suggest that such conditionals have a less prominent reading on which their probability is in fact the conditional probability, and that the two readings are related by a simple step of abductive inference. Central to the proposal is a distinction between causal and purely stochastic dependence between variables." Includes multiple references to Holmes as a character in a certain scenario.

6670. Keen, Jack M. "Follow Sherlock's lead to a better ROI." Datamation 44, no. 1 (1997): 44.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Presents advice for creating an information technology business-case and for gaining project funding. How to get better returns on investment; Importance of good observation; Reference to logic which was used by the fictitious character [sic] Sherlock Holmes."

6671. Keith, Michael. "Shouts of the street: Identity and the spaces of authenticity." Social Identities 1, no. 2 (1995): 297.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Looks at some of the tensions in the notions of streets and spatiality that are both

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

masked and naturalized in the common use of the terms. Focus on the 1993 racialized and racist mobilizations in the East End of London, England. Includes passing reference to Holmes. "...After the meeting I went with friends into one of the pubs just off Brick Lane, which had itself had its windows bricked as part of the revenge actions on more than 15 public houses that had followed the Quddus Ali attack. And into the pub walked a man in deer stalker and overcoat, his pipe making up the full Sherlock Holmes set, the simulacrum of an English eccentric, a walking guide with 20 American tourists in tow giving one of the many Ripper tours of Whitechapel, revealing the inscribed knowledges of the Victorian East End through the street walk, a performative flaneurie that re-enacted the serial murders and assaults....In the pastiche detective figure of Sherlock Holmes, the walkers who desire the otherness of difference, eroticising street life, are seduced by the aesthetically captivating nature of experience. This allows them to read themselves into the illegibility of the great city and then rationalises this triumph of being over becoming by writing the street, by translating the gaze into the script, the privileged view into the written word, through a claim to knowledge -- 'to have been there'...."

6672. Kemper, Vicki, and Florence Graves. "The reporter who knew too much." Common Cause Magazine 21, no. 4 (1995): 15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an interview of Florence George Graves on her report of the Bob Packwood's sexual misconduct. How she started to work on the story; Challenge Graves face in reporting the story; Impact of the story. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Then I learned of another woman whose problem had occurred in 1990, and it doesn't take a Sherlock Holmes to figure out that there might be a pattern of improper conduct--that his conduct had not stopped in 1969 or 1970, but might have continued into the recent past. So gradually I began to focus more pointedly on him...."
6673. Kennedy, Elizabeth. "Reflections of Success. (Cover story)." Women in Business 56, no. 6 (2004): 8-13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles the 2005 Top Ten Business Women of ABWA. Includes a passing reference to Holmes in the profile of Dr. M.A. (Toni) Verso. "...Toni thrives upon the many challenging aspects of her specialty, saying, 'Endocrinology is probably the closest to being Sherlock Holmes that I'm ever going to get!'..."
6674. Kennedy, Louise Kennedy. "As we move From print to screen, Sven Birkerts writes, we are changing not just our books, but our souls Reading on the brink." Boston Globe, Dec. 4, 1994: B27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Book Review, The Gutenberg Elegies: The Fate of Reading in an Electronic Age. By Sven Birkerts. Faber and Faber. 231 pp. $22.95. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "I have been reading Sven Birkerts. Before I say anything else about his wise and humane book, I want to thank him for reminding me just how richly nuanced and profound that simple phrase can be. I have been reading . . . , not just a book, but its author; not just black marks on white paper, but the hand that put them there, and the mind that chose the words those marks convey, and the spirit that inspired the thoughts for words to carry. What Birkerts does in "The Gutenberg Elegies" -- and in doing reminds us that it is just what we look to literature to provide -- is to put his soul into words. There it lies waiting, until we call it up with our reading eyes and respond to it with a soulful engagement of our own. This sounds like an extremely personal way to begin talking about a book, and I'm doing it on purpose. For what Birkerts starts off by writing about, and writing about more evocatively than anyone I can remember reading on the subject, is the deeply personal, utterly inward experience that we call reading -- specifically, reading serious literary fiction, in the attentive and responsive way it demands. It is impossible to read his meditations on the almost trancelike state that such reading creates and not fall into a reverie of one's own, summoning up memories of books read, of sentences savored, of fictional worlds entered into, explored and incorporated back into one's own life. So in some ways I'm not getting personal enough. If I were really to give you a sense of my experience of this book, I would have to bring in Sherlock Holmes' adventures in Dayton, Ohio, or Dickens in a trailer park, or Jane Austen seeing me through the first lonely months of boarding school...."
6675. Kennedy, Peggy. "Victoria Celebrating Valentine's Day." Victoria 16, no. 2 (2002): 53.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Relates the experience of the author in celebrating Valentine's Day in the United States. Significance of Valentine's Day; Description of the Valentine's scenario; Citations on the tokens of love. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Each year brought inventive new scenarios: the boys dressed

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

as chefs holding a tray of heart-shaped cookies touted as the 'way to a man's heart'; the boys as pirates, doctors, Sherlock Holmes-style detectives and rock stars--all with clever messages...."

6676. Kerr, Philip, and Frances Stonor Saunders. "Licensed to print money." New Statesman 131, no. 4575 (2002): 38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the location where Ian Fleming wrote his series of novels that gave birth to the popular James Bond films. Information on 'Casino Royale,' the first novel about James Bond written by Fleming; Description of the house of Fleming in Jamaica where he wrote his books; Success of the James Bond films; Number of James Bond novels written by Fleming before he died; James Bond movies that were made after Fleming died. Contains a passing reference to Holmes. "...Ever since Sean Connery put away his quartermaster-issue hairpiece, the Bond films have been grotesque parodies of the novels and the character who, as Anthony Burgess argued in his introduction to the Coronet paperback editions of the Bond novels in 1985, is very nearly the equal of Sherlock Holmes. 'I know there are some who would deny that Fleming practised the literary art,' Burgess wrote. 'They are the aesthetic snobs who will not grant that the Sherlock Holmes stories are literature either... Both, as Shakespeare did, believed that fiction (drama or narrative) should be about well-defined characters in interesting situations.'...The Bond brand is owned by MGM/UA. So it is hardly surprising that other studios such as Paramount have tried, and failed, to create in Ethan Hunt (Mission: Impossible) and Jack Ryan (from the novels by Tom Clancy) own-brand characters to rival Bond. You might as well ask Inspector Lestrade to try to rival Sherlock Holmes...."
6677. Ketland, Jeffrey. "Structuralism and the identity of indiscernibles." Analysis 66, no. 4 (2006): 303-315.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents a study on mathematical structuralism and the objection raised by John Burgess and Jukka Keränen on mathematical structuralism. Mathematical structuralism states that mathematics is the science of pattern and structure. The objection raised by the two individual focuses on the conception of identity for abstract structures. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...There is an immediate objection. The question of weak discernibility for structures like C is entirely trivial. For 'x is the additive inverse of y' is expressed by the formula  $y + x = 0$ , and one needn't be Sherlock Holmes to observe that this contains the identity predicate...."
6678. Khrushchev, Sergei. "Russia after Yeltsin: A Duel of Oligarchs." Mediterranean Quarterly 11, no. 3 (2000): 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Analyzes political conditions in Russia after the rule of President Boris Yeltsin in 2000. Reason for the victory of Vladimir Putin on the March 26 Presidential elections; Dominance of organized crime in the Russian society; Information on oligarchs and their influence on Russian politics. Includes a passing reference to Holmes (p. 11): "Primakov and Luzhkov, television mogul Vladimir Gusinsky...and numerous governors had lost. But they hadn't understood that yet. They thought they would get their revenge...such naive people! How could they compete with Berizovsky! The great detective Sherlock Holmes himself could not outplay this Moriarty...."
6679. ———. "Russia's Gambling Capitalism: Players and Fools." Mediterranean Quarterly 10, no. 1 (1999): 15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines historical events in Russia which led to its economic destabilization in 1998. Framework of the country's centralized economy; Role of the government in the proliferation of predatory capitalism in the country; Discussion on the transition of Russia to a market economy. Includes a passing reference to Holmes (p. 39). "...Berezovsky possesses exceptional analytical intelligence, subtlety, and resourcefulness. He is a man who may determine Russia's fate on the threshold of the third millennium. He can con Russia, but he can also help look for a way out of the impasse. I am not exaggerating his role and influence. I would call him the Professor Moriarty of Russian reform. Recall one of the characters in Conan Doyle's stories about Sherlock Holmes--the genius of the criminal world at the junction of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries; in the struggle with Moriarty even the Great Detective himself suffered defeat...."
6680. Khrushcheva, Nina. "The case of Khrushchev's shoe." New Statesman 129, no. 4506 (2000): 33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the reasons for the anger of former Soviet Prime Minister Nikita Khrushchev towards the United Nations. Political background; Details on his visit to the United States; Information on his concerns over western imperialism. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...It has been 40 years now, and the books on international and Soviet politics can afford inconsistency, giving a variety of reasons for Khrushchev's anger and even different times for the incident: Harold Macmillan's address on 23

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- September 1960; arguments about Red China's admission to the United Nations on 29 September; Russia's invasion of Hungary in 1956 on 4 October; the location of the United Nations... All this made me suspicious: Why are the versions so different? And there are no pictures! What if it had never happened? A supposed 40 years anniversary since the scandalous UN shoe banging could be a great chance to commemorate an event that never happened. In my zeal to uncover the truth, I felt very much like Sherlock Holmes...."
6681. Killgore, Andrew I. "The Great Caspian Sea Oil Pipeline Game--Part II." Washington Report on Middle East Affairs 21, no. 2 (2002): 16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the underwater oil pipeline of the Caspian Pipeline Consortium in the Caspian sea. Preference of Kazakhstan President Nursultan Nazarbayev on the oil pipeline; Discussion of Russia Federation President Vladimir Putin With the United States on the Caspian-oil-pipelines issue; Impact of Baku-Supsa pipeline in the political power of Israel. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "As Sir Arthur Conan-Doyle's fictional detective Sherlock Holmes might have said to his amiable if rather literal-minded close friend, 'It's elementary, my dear Watson, the oil pipeline is the clue to everything. But there are several; you must take care to pick out the right one.'
6682. Killheffer, Robert K. J. "Books." Fantasy & Science Fiction 87, no. 6 (1994): 17.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the books 'Smilla's Sense of Snow,' by Peter Hoeg, 'The Best Defense,' by Kate Wilhelm and 'The Orchid Eater,' by Marc Laidlaw. Includes a reference to Holmes. "Danish author Peter Hoeg's best-selling mystery thriller, Smilla's Sense of Snow, is a case in point. In essence it's a typical detective story, albeit an exceptionally well-crafted one: the mysterious death of a little boy leads Smilla Jaspersen, a neighbor who had befriended him, to investigate, and as she tums up intimations of broader schemes she's drawn deeper into her search, and into danger. Smilla is half native Greenlander and half Danish, trained by her mother in her people's traditional snowcraft and by Danish universities in the scientific ice-lore of Europe, and there's something undeniably science-fictional about her deep knowledge of ice and snow. Smilla can recognize dozens of types of ice on sight, knows how fast they form under various conditions, and can read more from a series of footprints in snow than Sherlock Holmes...."
6683. Kilpatrick, Barry. "Guide to Records: Smit." American Record Guide 64, no. 6 (2001): 187.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the orchestral music recording 'Complete Works,' composed by Leo Smit. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...In Deux Hommages for solo piano (1928-30), Smit commemorates Sherlock Holmes (very popular at the time) and Charles Remington (whose portable typewriter was all the rage then). 'Hommage a Sherlock Holmes' is witty and urbane, gently influenced by jazz, and expertly crafted. 'Hommage a Remington' is something like 'Flight of the Bumblebee' but quirkier...."
6684. Kimball, Jeffrey. "Missing Links Found, Others Remain Missing." Diplomatic History 31, no. 2 (2007): 347-352.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Foreign Relations of the United States, January 1969-July 1970," Volume VI, edited by Edward C. Keefer and Carolyn Yee. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Reading these documents in their entirety between hard covers also gives one a sense that neither Nixon nor Kissinger truly understood the motives, goals, or determination of their adversaries. As Sherlock Holmes would have put it, they saw but they did not observe. Time and again they voiced awareness between themselves of what Hanoi and the Viet Cong wanted, yet they could not translate that awareness into appropriate policy until perhaps July 1970, when they began to adopt the decent-interval solution--a solution, however, that contributed to the further prolongation of the war...."
6685. King, Gary, and Langche Zeng. "Detecting Model Dependence in Statistical Inference: A Response." International Studies Quarterly 51, no. 1 (2007): 231-241.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents information on the need of researchers to be able to more readily identify model dependence to improve their own work and reanalyze data from existing articles and reevaluate statistical results and conclusions. Standard uncertainty measures such as standard errors and confidence intervals can often be massively underestimated when counterfactuals are posed too far from available data and lead to high degrees of model dependence. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Our point is merely that researchers should not be hoodwinked into thinking that their conclusions are based on historical evidence when in fact they are based only on (sometimes unstated, undefended, or unjustifiable) theory. We add to Morrow's collection of fictional law enforcement officers Sherlock Holmes, who said 'It is a capital mistake to theorize before you have all the evidence. It biases the judgment' (Doyle 1888:30). The methods we offer help ensure that your judgments are based on evidence...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6686. King, Martha. "Researchers frame some key MS questions." Inside MS 22, no. 2 (2004): 42-47.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the Americas Committee for Treatment and Research in Multiple Sclerosis annual meeting in San Francisco, California in Fall 2003. Topics discussed in the meeting; Factors that could be used to predict faster progression for people with primary-progressive multiple sclerosis (MS); Role of Th1 T cells in MS damage. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...When something unexpected happens, Sherlock Holmes cries out, 'The game's afoot!' and takes another look at his evidence. Similarly, this outcome spurred Dr. Wolinsky and his colleagues to reanalyze everything they knew about all 943 volunteers up to the time of the DSMC analysis...."

6687. Kingsley, Barbara. "A clean sweep NFL." Orange County Register, December 17, 1994: D01.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A former FBI agent works to uphold the sanctity of the league as one of 28 security officials. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Without a gun or a badge, McNeal might not always get the respect of an agent, but he seems to be one. The wall of his Laguna Niguel office is lined with FBI plaques. On a bookcase, a Sherlock Holmes-style cap shares space with NHL hockey pucks. His reading collection includes the books 'How to Locate Anyone Anywhere,' 'Criminalistics,' and 'The FBI's Most Famous Cases.'..."

6688. Kirk, Jay. "Watching the Detectives." Harper's Magazine 307, no. 1839 (2003): 61.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an article on detectives and ratiocination. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...When Court TV is done with the Texans, we follow Frank out to the lobby, where we are met by a long-faced man in owlish glasses, elegantly slumped in a Louis XV chair, one black shoe crossed at the knee and a lanky arm and cigarette poised haughtily aloft. Looking all the world like a Sherlock Holmes impersonator, or perhaps a droll public television host who's been waiting to explain the fine but difficult movie we have just experienced and partly misunderstood, this is Richard Walter, among the four or five most famous criminal profilers in the world...."

6689. Kitchens, Christopher. "Young Men in Shorts." Atlantic 293, no. 5 (2004): 121-125.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The article discusses the book 'Scouting for Boys: The Original 1908 Edition,' by Robert Baden-Powell. The 1908 Boy Scout manual was one of the very few books of the 20th century that actually led to the formation of a worldwide movement. Perhaps there is needs for a 'youth movement.' In common with its comparable rivals, Victorian Great Britain managed quite well without one. There were some church-inspired groups for the children of the deserving poor, and conscription and emigration took care of many of the rest. The South African, or Boer, War, however, altered the picture in two ways. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The more enthralling parts of the Scout manual were those that trained small boys to look for clues, read signs and spoor, and be on the watch for evildoers. Leaning heavily on Sherlock Holmes, and with a fund of tales from his own adventures in jungle and desert, B-P raised generations of amateur detectives...."

6690. Klawans, Stuart. "Films." Nation 270, no. 3 (2000): 35-36.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses a number of films including the documentary Mr. Death: The Rise and Fall of Fred A. Leuchter, Jr., Errol Morris's "documentary portrait of a self-taught American engineer who designed equipment for executions: a more efficient electric chair, an improved gallows, the machinery for lethal injections." Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Building upon this experience, Leuchter went to Auschwitz in 1988 on behalf of a Holocaust denier and conducted a 'forensic investigation,' which claimed that the camp had contained no gas chambers. His 'Leuchter Report' has since circulated among pinheads of all nations....Morris has been terrific at exposing Leuchter's attitudes....Morris has also done excellent work in bringing in a historian, Robert Jan van Pelt, to demolish Leuchter's conclusions. ('A victim of the myth of Sherlock Holmes' is van Pelt's exasperated description of 'this fool.')..."

6691. Kleiman, Ephraim. "From Bastiat's Circumference to Knight's Wheel: A Newly Discovered Letter of Mr

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- Sherlock Holmes to Dr Watson." European Journal of the History of Economic Thought 6, no. 3 (1999): 365-377.
- NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This paper continues the investigation of the antecedents of the Wheel of Wealth, initiated by Don Patinkin as a by-product of his 1973 memoir of Frank Knight. A series of partly chance leads pointed to Bastiat as the earliest author to have employed circle or wheel diagrams in an associated context, and one with whose writings later users of it were acquainted. Although Patinkin mistakenly concluded that late-nineteenth century Continental European literature completely eschewed diagrams, he was right in hypothesizing the wheel diagram to have originated outside the mainstream of economic thought." Beyond the title, unknown reference to Holmes.
6692. Klein, Jeremy. "Abstractions." ETC: A Review of General Semantics 60, no. 4 (2003): 372-373.
- NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents quotations from several people. Sherlock Holmes; Carl Jung; David Ogilvie; T.S. Eliot; Ian Hay.
6693. Klein, Judy L. "Review of: Statistics on the table: The history of statistical concepts and methods." Journal of Economic Literature 40, no. 3 (2002): 922-923.
- NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to Holmes. "Stigler's enjoyable and erudite collection of essays is about evidence--the evidence that natural and moral philosophers presented in their offerings of and debates over new statistical protocols and the evidence that the author musters in his investigation of those protocols. Stigler obviously relishes the role of detective and he applies his technical acumen to questions as various as: Did Issac Newton, as Master of the Mint, use his mathematical prowess to gain personally from the crown's faulty sampling inspection? Does new evidence support Carl Friedrich Gauss's claim that he had been using the method of least squares a decade before Adrien Marie Legendre published it? Did William Stanley Jevons use least squares in approximating a law of demand from the King-Davenant seventeenth-century data on the price of corn? Who was the 'ingenious friend' that discovered Bayes' theorem before Bayes? And, is every theorem named after someone who was not the first to discover it? The 22 essays, several of which are based on earlier publications, are grouped loosely into five broader subjects. The essays differ in their weighting of historical context, biographical detail, and modern analytical translation. As with the adventures of Sherlock Holmes, the reader can enjoy one thought-provoking tale at a time, out of order if so desired, and return to the book days later with no loss of thread...."
6694. Klein, Leo Robert. "Once Past the Front Door." School Library Journal 48, no. 11 (2002): 28.
- NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents some suggestions on how to prevent problems on the second-tier level of library homepages. Example of second-tier homepage problems; Limitations on the use of guides and directions in the Web site; Factors to consider in the use of visual display of information in homepage; Need to get feedback from Web site users. Caption to one illustration includes a reference to Holmes. "Even Sherlock Holmes with his magnifying glass couldn't find the link to the library. Prominence of words should reflect the traffic received, but here 'libraries' is no more prominent than 'dining'."
6695. Klein, Rachael. "To Vietnam, and Graduation." Business Week Online, no. (2008): 5-5.
- NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A personal narrative is presented which explores the author's experience as a master of business administration (MBA) student attending the Global Integrative trip in Ho Chi Minh City, Vietnam. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...My Financial Statement Analysis II professor is the Sherlock Holmes of financial statements and walked us through how to find out if a company that seemed financially healthy was actually healthy...."
6696. Klosterman, Chuck. "Crazy Things Seem Normal." Esquire 144, no. 1 (2005): 120-125.
- NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Interviews actor Val Kilmer about his personal life and career. Background on his family; Views on the possible portrayal of his life by actor Jude Law; Beliefs of Kilmer as a Christian scientist. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Kilmer thinks an institution cannot be classified as a religion unless God is involved. When I argue that this is not necessarily the case, Val walks into the house and brings out the Oxford English Dictionary. The print in the OED is minuscule, so he begins scouring the pages like Sherlock Holmes. He pores over the tiny words with a magnifying glass that has an African boar's tusk as a handle. He finds the definition of religion, but the OED's answer is unsatisfactory...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6697. Knight, Deborah, and George McKnight. "Whose Genre Is It, Anyway? Thomas Wartenberg on the Unlikely Couple Film." Journal of Social Philosophy 33, no. 2 (2002): 330-338.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses Thomas E. Wartenberg's book Unlikely Couples: Movie Romance as Social Criticism. It features ten main chapters, each dedicated to the close reading of a particular film: Pygmalion, It Happened One Night, Pretty Woman, White Palace, Guess Who's Coming to Dinner, Jungle Fever, Mississippi Masala, Ali: Fear Eats the Soul, Desert Hearts, and The Crying Game. Includes a passing reference to Holmes (p. 336). "...But the committed bachelor is a stock figure in British cinema and literature. From Sherlock Holmes to Bertie Wooster to the butler in The Remains of the Day, their number may not be legion, but it is certainly considerable, and an ethics of British fictional depictions of bachelorhood would have to take a much deeper look at the complex social, economic, gender, and class aspects of any decision not to marry...."
6698. Koerner, Brendan I. "Openers: The Goods; Mist, Moors and a Better Rain Cape." New York Times, November 5, 2006: 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Befitting a musical form so closely identified with the oft-dreary clime of Scotland, bagpiping is an all-weather pursuit. Bands routinely perform in the rain, protecting their pipes and kilts by donning Inverness capes. These waterproof, sleeveless garments, beloved by fictional detective Sherlock Holmes, allow a piper to play 'Braes of Lochiel' without getting soaked to the bone. Yet for hardcore bagpipers, the classic Inverness cape is not without its flaws. In his 24 years running Mister Antony, a cape maker based in Glasgow, Antony Mistofsky heard various quibbles from his clients. So in 2003, he began developing a cape that would assuage the nitpickers -- the Bandspec Raincape, an article of clothing that Mister Antony advertises as 'The First Choice for Champions.' [Abstract from publisher]."
6699. Komie, Lowell B. "A Commuter's Notes--III." Legal Studies Forum 31, no. 2 (2007): 999-1006.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The short story "A Commuter's Notes--III," by Lowell B. Komie is presented. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Men as they grow older begin wearing hats that reveal their secret yearnings--cowboy hats, sea captains' hats, Greek fishermen caps, berets, Sherlock Holmes hats, Borsalinos, floppy canvas camper hats, college cap...."
6700. Korcz, Keith Allen. "Reply to Marquis's 'Korcz's Objections to the Future-of-Value Argument'." Journal of Social Philosophy 35, no. 1 (2004): 61-65.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The article presents an objection to Donald Marquis' Future Like Ours (FLO) argument against abortion in which he presented in reply to Keith Allen Korcz's article on cloning. Marquis provides two replies to the cloning argument presented by Korcz." Includes passing references to Holmes. "...Marquis responds that 'Korcz claims that this restriction is needed to rule out the attribution of interests to fictional characters such as Sherlock Holmes'...However, I never claim that this restriction is needed to rule out attribution of interests to fictional characters. I merely claimed that it does so....Next, Marquis objects that 'if we are unwilling, following Korcz, 'to build...into our account some explicit restrictions regarding fictional beings and such', then we have no reason for supposing that a being does not have desires merely because he is fictional. Therefore we can suppose...that Sherlock Holmes did have desires.'...Finally, I wish to assure concerned psychiatrists everywhere that, contrary to what Marquist says, I never claimed that the nonexistence of Sherlock Holmes is controversial. Rather, I objected to and rejected such a view in my original paper."
6701. Korcz, K. A. "Two Moral Strategies Regarding Abortion." Journal of Social Philosophy 33, no. 4 (2002): 581-605.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This article aims to develop an account of the morality of abortion which is correct and is useful for developing a policy regarding abortion that is motivated primarily by moral considerations." Includes a passing reference to Holmes (p. 595). "...For instance, if B were Sherlock Holmes, it might be the case that it would be rational, if he existed, for Holmes not to want to be killed. But this leads to an undesirable proliferation of rights...."
6702. Kortenaar, Neil Ten. "Fictive States and the State of Fiction in Africa." Comparative Literature 52, no. 3 (2000):

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

228.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Characterizes literature in the third-world countries, particularly in Africa, by focusing on the depiction of nation-states. Several African novels; Comparison between Western and African literature; Identification of nonfictive and fictive settings in literature. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...We can also distinguish between fictive, nonfictive, and imaginary settings by considering how each is mapped. In nonfictive settings readers are justified in assuming that, except for whatever is explicitly mentioned in the novel, the world in which the story is true resembles the 'true' world in which the story is a fiction. To use David Lewis's example, when Sherlock Holmes travels to Paddington Station, readers will assume that Paddington Station is as far from Victoria Station in the world of the novel as it is in the world of the reader (270).(n4)" 6703. Kottke, Theodore G. "An Adirondack Mountain Christmas." Plays 59, no. 3 (1999): 29.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the drama 'An Adirondack Mountain Christmas.' Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...ETHEL: Benjamin, would you stop inspecting the ground as if you're Sherlock Holmes? We should have met the chorus fifteen minutes ago. Look, they're all over there waving to us. I'm so embarrassed. (She waves to chorus members and yells.) We're coming! Just a minute! (ETHEL turns to BENJAMIN.) Come on, let's hurry...."

6704. Krajick, Kevin. "Fire in the Hole." Smithsonian 36, no. 2 (2005): 52-61.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the environmental effects of a coal mine fire in Pennsylvania that has been for 43 years. How vegetation has been obliterated along a quarter mile strip; Reasons why efforts to control the fire were abandoned in the 1980s; Other coal mine fires including one in China; Efforts of scientists to learn how to control and extinguish coal mine fires. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...At the base of the trench wall--where three of Philbin's colleagues refused to accompany us--lay hundreds of tons of fresh rockfall. 'Well, to outwit a fire, someone's gotta stick his nose in,' he said, clambering over debris. In the trench walls were intact coal seams and old tunnel timbers that had not burned. 'I like this,' Philbin said. 'There's adventure here. Some Sherlock Holmes. We think it's contained. But of course a lot of people have been fooled by these things. Personally, I'd like to dig the whole thing out.'"

6705. Kreyche, Gerald F. "The Walking Stick." USA Today Magazine 133, no. 2718 (2005): 82-82.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the representation of walking sticks. Use of the sticks in Victorian society; Terms used by mountain Europeans and Irishmen to describe the stick; Recommended materials when purchasing the staffs, such as wood. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...Among other attributes, it serves as a mark of distinguished gentility. This especially was true in the haute couture of Victorian society. Neither a dowager nor a gentleman would be without one. One would as soon dispense with the cherished and chained pocket watch whose fob hung gracefully from a vest pocket. The walking stick attests to this and much more about its owner. One has but to recall how much Sherlock Holmes deduced from the walking stick in The Hound of the Baskervilles. The initials, CCH, and the condition of the stick told much of the story of its owner. Moreover, if one consults another Holmesian episode, The Norwood Builder, the walking stick leads to a key clue in the mystery...."

6706. Krischner, Steve. "How 5' to 3' Prevents 20 to Life." Drug Discovery & Development 5, no. 11 (2002): 9.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Editorial. Comments on the value of using deoxyribonucleic acid (DNA) as crime fighting tool in the United States. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...That same deoxyribonucleic acid that researchers spend their lives sequencing, expressing, translocating, and denaturing has become the most renowned crime-fighter since Sherlock Holmes. (Ironically, both of these super sleuths are associated with a Mr. [sic] Watson.)..."

6707. Kuenster, John. "Here are some picks for major league award winners of '94." Baseball Digest 53, no. 11: 17.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Opines whom will be named as the best baseball players in 1994. Most Valuable Player of the American League and of the National League; Cy Young Award; Rookie of the Year; Foot-in-the-mouth Award; Oops, So Sorry Award; Most Exciting Player Award; Most Under-Rated Player Award; Durability Award; Steady Eddie Award; Honest Abe Award; Comeback of the Year Award; Comeback of the Year Award; Sherlock Holmes Award; Others.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6708. Kumar, David, and Valerie J. Bristol. "Integrating Science and Language Arts through Technology-based Macrocontexts." Educational Review 51, no. 1 (1999): 41-53.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This paper describes technology as a tool for creating meaningful experiences for integrating science and language arts using technology-based macrocontexts. Videos, virtual reality, and the Internet and the World Wide Web (WWW) can create macrocontexts for integrating science and language arts." Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Using videos for integrated instruction is also found in the CTGV's (1993a) report of the Young Sherlock project where the story of Sherlock Holmes was used to create a macrocontext for integrating language arts, scientific reasoning and history skills...."
6709. Kushner, David. "Watching Those Who Watch Us." IEEE Spectrum 39, no. 6 (2002): 67-8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A profile of Richard M. Smith, who spends most of his time tracking down violations of digital privacy, is presented. A kind of Sherlock Holmes of software engineers, he has detected the author of the Melissa virus, the questionable data-gathering practices of RealNetworks and Microsoft, and is now investigating face recognition. His ultimate aim is to get computers to work as people expect them to, without techie baggage.
6710. Kushner, Jill. "'A Bridge of Understanding': New offerings from Papier-Mache Press." Literary Review 38, no. 3 (1995): 462-468.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the book releases of Papier-Mache Press, which was founded by Sandra Haldeman Martz. New publications' reflection of issues of aging and life changes; Description of anthologies of poetry and prose; Preview of poems and stories in books to be released. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...My friend, Wynn Winchester . . . says I'm still angry with George. Not because he left me, wrapped his car around a telephone pole, and had a secretary that made a fool of herself at the funeral. No, it has to do with the painting. . . . My work got progressively smaller in size while living with George; scenes that once filled the side of a barn began to fit nicely on a postcard. My subject matter became increasingly nonhuman . . . And why, she asks with the superiority of Sherlock Holmes, didn't I ever paint the things George gave me? Like the microwave and pasta-making machine, for instance...."
6711. Kwong, Luke S. K. "Self and Society in Modern China: Liu E (1857-1909) and Laocan Youji." T'oung Pao 87, no. 4/5 (2001): 360-392.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines the life and career of Liu E and through him offer a glimpse of the inner world of thought, feelings and aspirations of China's educated elite during the last decades of the Qing dynasty. Background of the family of Liu; Details on the scholarship of Liu; Description of Liu's novel 'Loacan.' Includes a reference to Holmes. "...Early instalments of Laocan first appeared in the fiction magazine Xiuxiang xiao shuo (Illustrated fiction), in Shanghai, and then again in the Tianjin daily Tianjin riri xinwen bao (The Tianjin daily news), along wit new segments. The chapters dealing with the mass poison-murder case read like a detective story, a genre that was fast becoming popular in the fiction press. At one point in the novel, an acquaintance compares Laocan to Fu'er Mosi (Sherlock Holmes), the master sleuth, who aroused as much interest in late-Qing China as his Chinese counterpart, Charlie Chan, would in Hollywood several decades later...."
6712. Kyburg Jr, Henry E. "Probability as a Guide in Life." Monist 84, no. 2 (2001): 135.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Contemplates on philosopher Joseph Butler's (1736) statement on the use of probability as a guide in life. Minimal guidance afforded by subjective probability; Defense of Butler's thesis. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...If Bayesianism is Bankrupt, and Frequencies are Fantasies, where can we turn? Logic is all that is left. (What did Sherlock Holmes tell us?)" 6713. Labi, Nadya. "Murder, they wrote." Time 151, no. 16 (1998): 74.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews two murder mystery novels. 'A Darker Shade of Crimson,' by Pamela Thomas-Graham; 'The Silent Cradle,' by Margaret Cuthbert. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Sherlock Holmes drew out a fine case, puffing leisurely at his calabash while pondering each clue until he deduced the culprit. Detecting, in the quintessential sleuth's day, required more than an agile mind; it took time. Of course, times change. Two of fiction's newest detectives have the necessary brainpower: they're young (in their 30s)

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

African-American professionals (a professor and a doctor). These women, however, are so upwardly mobile that they can barely pencil murder into their crammed calendars...."

6714. Lackey, Jennifer. "Norms of Assertion." Nous 41, no. 4 (2007): 594-626.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents a philosophical argument over the knowledge based norm of assertion theory, which posits that only direct knowledge should precede assertions. Includes passing references to Holmes in a quotation from Matthew Weiner. "...Consider also the following case of retrodiction: Sherlock Holmes and Doctor Watson are brought to a crime scene. Holmes scans the scene and says (truthfully, as it turns out), (4) This is the work of Professor Moriarty! It has the mark of his fiendish genius. Holmes, at this point, has not found any evidence (in the criminal rather than epistemological sense) incriminating Professor Moriarty, but he is sticking his neck out based on his sense of what Moriarty's crimes are like . . . These cases pose a problem for the knowledge account. They seem to be proper assertions in the absence of knowledge; the speakers' grounds for belief fall short of those necessary for knowledge, yet the assertions do not seem wrong or odd...."

6715. LaGuardia, Cheryl. "Daily Life Is Nearly Perfect." Library Journal 129, no. 13 (2004): 28-29.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Greenwood Daily Life Online, from Greenwood Electronic Media, is an online resource on daily life around the world and throughout history. The resource features an interwoven collection of primary documents, reference works, monographs, images, maps, illustrations, and time lines that depict essential activities of daily life. This monumental product will stimulate learning in everyone and is highly recommended for all libraries." Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Librarians will quickly lose themselves in the Browse section. It's rather like exploring with H.G. Wells, Sherlock Holmes, Will and Ariel Durant, Charles Darwin, Edith Hamilton, and Sir James Frazer in your party...."

6716. ———. "Greenwood Daily Life Online." Library Journal 129, no. 13 (2004): 28-29.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews Greenwood Daily Life Online, an interwoven collection of primary documents, reference works, monographs, images, maps, illustrations, and time lines depicting essential activities of daily life across the globe and throughout history. Pros and cons of the Greenwood Electronic Media product; Cost. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Librarians will quickly lose themselves in the Browse section. It's rather like exploring with H.G. Wells, Sherlock Holmes, Will and Ariel Durant, Charles Darwin, Edith Hamilton, and Sir James Frazer in your party. You can begin Browsing by Time Period (Ancient World, Medieval World, 15th and 16th Centuries, 17th and 18th Centuries, 19th Century, and Modern World)...."

6717. Lahr, John. "Coogan's Bluff." New Yorker 83, no. 34 (2007): 42-49.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article profiles British comedian Steve Coogan. The author discusses Coogan's appearance as a psychiatrist on the television program "Curb Your Enthusiasm." Coogan improvised scenes with actor Larry David during the filming. Coogan creates characters to explore comedic aspects of embarrassment. Coogan comments on public perceptions of him. The author describes the production of Coogan's television program "Saxondale" and his characters such as Paul Calf and Alan Partridge. Includes a delightful little section related to Holmes. "...Both easily humiliated and quick to take revenge, Partridge locked horns with a character identified as 'Britain's greatest living novelist,' Lawrence Camley, who was promoting his enormous novel 'The Soul of Time.' 'First reaction to your book - don't drop it on me foot,' Partridge said, before turning to his enthusiasm for Sherlock Holmes: ALAN: What I thought was great about Sherlock Holmes was that not only was he a super sleuth, he was also a hard worker. 'Cause not only did he go out and solve the crimes, he came home and wrote it all down. Fantastic. That's why I admire him.

LAWRENCE: (Pause) Y-e-s. I . . . I've always thought it was a shame that Conan Doyle had to kill him off. ALAN: I think you'll find it was Moriarty that killed him. LAWRENCE: Yes, I know, but ultimately, of course, it was Conan Doyle. ALAN: No, it was Moriarty. Definitely. LAWRENCE: Yes, I know, in the books it was Moriarty. But, of course, the ultimate responsibility was Conan Doyle's. ALAN: Hang on. As far as I know Moriarty acted alone. Or did he?! This is interesting - you think that there was some sort of conspiracy involving this shadowy Doyle figure . . . LAWRENCE: No, no. I'm sorry, Alan. I'd like to let this go, but I really can't. Sherlock Holmes did not exist. ALAN: He did. LAWRENCE: Look, if he had existed, how would he have been able to describe in intimate detail the circumstances of his own death? (Pause.) ALAN: Um . . .

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

The Nobel Prize for Literature. You never won it. What went wrong?..."

6718. Laker, Anne. "How to give a good deposition and how to testify well in court." Wilson Library Bulletin 69, no. (1995): 100.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "A good video is an electronic instructor. This month, 'Video Shopper' surveys an array of nondocumentary videos that arm viewers with practical knowledge....Senior citizens will appreciate Your Medicare Benefits, a well-organized, comprehensive video guide for those over sixty-five interested in dissecting the government's health care program. Slowly spoken explanations of the different aspects of the Medicare program are intercut with kooky clips from old Sherlock Holmes episodes--a weak pun on the mystery of Medicare...."
6719. Lambert, Nicholas A. "Strategic Command and Control for Maneuver Warfare: Creation of the Royal Navy's 'War Room' System, 1905-1915." Journal of Military History 69, no. 2 (2005): 361-410.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Between 1905 and 1914, the British Board of Admiralty developed and implemented a revolutionary system of naval command and control intended to facilitate the adoption of maneuver warfare strategy and built upon the concept of what is known today as 'information dominance.' Under Admiral Sir John Fisher, the Admiralty transformed itself into the Royal Navy's operational command and control center and in the process fundamentally redefined the relationship between the supreme command and the fleet (and theatre) commanders. Adoption of the 'War Room' system entailed coordination of British investment in global communications infrastructure as well as the centralization of gathering and processing of intelligence from around the world. [Abstract from author]. Includes passing references to Holmes. "...To test the practicality of the War Room system, Fisher instructed the NID to 'track' the movements of the two Russian squadrons dispatched from the Baltic to Port Arthur during the Russo-Japanese War. On 25 April 1905, Fisher reported to Lansdowne that 'we worked out all possibilities here (a la Sherlock Holmes!) and proved conclusively that Admiral Niebogatoft is coming by the shortest route, via Singapore (instead of via Batavia), as he must coal nolens volens [sic] somewhere in the vicinity of French Cochinchina.' Three days later Fisher advised: 'That 'Sherlock Holmes' chart I sent you is working out nicely, for [Admiral] Togo [commanding the Japanese fleet] is where we put him, though it was distinctly telegraphed he was elsewhere.'..." (p. 382-83).
6720. Landesman, Peter, and Peter Sylvada. "The Curse of the Sevso Silver." Atlantic Monthly 288, no. 4 (2001): 63.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Relates the curse of the Sevso silver, a treasure trove of Roman-era unraveled by Anton Tkalec, a Hungarian laborer in Europe. Tkalec's sense of value in his discovery; Plots and counterplots in the laborer's effort to sell the piece; Attention of the police officials in several European capitals. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...I said Cultrera was allegedly linked to the Santapaolo Mafia. Tkalec said, 'The oldish guy who came to me? He was Mickey Mouse.' As for Scotland Yard, he said, 'They're like Dr. Watson and the other guy ... Sherlock Holmes, that's it, that's it. They have this complex and they want to prove it to the world....'"
6721. Lane, Anthony. "First Bite." New Yorker 82, no. 42 (2006): 92-94.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article reviews the book "Hannibal Rising," by Thomas Harris. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The failure of 'Hannibal Rising,' which seems to me absolute, is easily explained. It stems from the author's newfound conviction that Hannibal, too, can be easily explained. Until now, Dr. Lecter seemed destined to be one of the immortals, lounging in the pantheon with a copy of Dante and a case of Château Petrus, and conversing lightly with his peers -- Professor Moriarty, perhaps, who was also 'a man of good birth and excellent education.' So said Sherlock Holmes, observing that the criminal tendencies of his enemy were 'rendered infinitely more dangerous by his extraordinary mental powers.' Yet Lecter's place in the literature of nightmare is not altogether secure...."
6722. Lang, Robert, and Greg Martino. "Professional Notes." Cinema Journal 39, no. 1 (1999): 121.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides information on the activities of the Society for Cinema Studies. Includes a passing reference to Holmes in relationship to a conference announcement by the Media Studies Working Group on "Brainwatching: Intellect and Ideology in Media Culture." The conference organizers (scheduled for May 6-7, 2000 at Ryerson Polytechnic University, Toronto) hoped to see papers on various topics, including Sherlock Holmes. It is unknown whether or not such a paper was presented.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6723. Lansey, K. E., W. El-Shorbagy, Iftekhar Ahmed, J. Araujo, and C. T. Haan. "Calibration Assessment and Data Collection for Water Distribution Networks." Journal of Hydraulic Engineering 127, no. 4 (2001): 270.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Develops a sensitivity-based heuristic method to study the uncertainty caused by measurement and estimation errors in water distribution network calibration. Estimation of the unknown parameters; Flowchart for calibration assessment and data collection; Application of the procedure to a pipe network. One reference to Holmes in "Appendix 1 References": Walski, T.M. (1992) "Sherlock Holmes Meets Hardy Cross." J. Am. Water Works Assn., 82(3), 34-38.
6724. Larkin, Marilyn. "An e-book under the tree?" Lancet 356, no. 9248 (2000): 2205.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the electronic book industry. Mention of the Seybold Research Website and a poll of publishing professional about their attitudes toward e-books; Suggestion that products such as drug databases and medical dictionaries might make good e-books; Resources for e-books. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...That said, I must admit that the free-of-charge versions of the Adobe e-reader (formerly Glassbook) and the Microsoft reader are quite neat. They are easy to set up and navigate and the displays are fine on my 17-inch PC monitor. I downloaded Sherlock Holmes, Dracula, and some other free 'classics' on the Adobe site; free Microsoft Reader books are available on www.amazon.com...."
6725. Larson, Jeanette. "The Case of the Missing Books: Getting Kids to Read." Library Media Connection 23, no. 2 (2004): 18-21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Cites books that spur the interest of kids to read, encourage curiosity and learning, and promote reading for pleasure. Recommended mystery and adventure books that include puzzles and fast-moving plots for children and youth; Topics of most mystery and adventure books for children; Suggested titles under the genre; Factors that contribute to the growing magnitude of readers who are interested in reading detective and mystery stories. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Mystery as a literary genre has been recognized for less than 150 years. Edgar Allan Poe's classic tale, 'The Murders in the Rue Morgue,' was published in 1841 and is generally considered the first crime story. Popularity increased with the tales of Sherlock Holmes, but the true heyday for mysteries came in the 1920s with Agatha Christie, Ellery Queen, and Dorothy L. Sayers...."
6726. LaRue, James. "Innocence lost." Wilson Library Bulletin 69, no. (1995): 61-62.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A library director discusses an experience in which he took on a high-school volunteer to explore the Internet. The teenager discovered interactive and unmoderated 'chat' channels, which led him to commit a misdemeanor bordering on a felony." Includes a reference to Holmes. "In A Study in Scarlet, Dr. Watson was astonished to discover that Sherlock Holmes did not know that the earth revolved around the sun. Watson was even more astonished when Holmes asserted, 'Now that I do know it I shall do my best to forget it.' Holmes continued, 'I consider that a man's brain originally is like a little empty attic, and you have to stock it with such furniture as you choose.... It is a mistake to think that little room has elastic walls and can distend to any extent. Depend upon it there comes a time when for every addition of knowledge you forget something that you knew before. It is of the highest importance, therefore, not to have useless facts elbowing out the useful ones.' All my life I have used this passage to justify my carefully, even aggressively, preserved ignorance about sports. But alas, ignorance is fragile.... He found IRC--interactive and unmoderated 'chat' channels. Some of them involve live and apparently wanton talk about sex. Some of them involve 'hacking': how to slip past various electronic security systems. IRCs are as big a surprise to me as the Copernican system was to Sherlock Holmes. Some day, perhaps, I shall be able to forget it...."
6727. Laskowski, David. "Inventing Carson: An Interview." Chicago Review 45, no. 3/4 (1999): 92.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Interviews Ciaran Carson, an author of several books of poetry and prose and an accomplished musician. Questions on his book 'The Star Factory'; Why he did not write in Gaelic; Reason for his use of historical and mythical contexts and fables. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...My mother and father learned Irish as a second language as an aspiration, an ideal. He spoke Irish at home, so he would retell all these English stories in Gaelic, Poe, Sherlock Holmes, things like that. It was an odd thing to hear these stories re-invented...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6728. Launpach, Patsy. "Reviews: Fiction." Book Report 12, no. 4 (1994): 42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'The Vengeance of the Witch-Finder,' by John Bellairs and Brad Strickland. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Everyone seems dazed, hypnotized or enchanted except Bertie who is blind. Lewis finds an old diary that leads to a solution a la his hero, Sherlock Holmes. This would be a good book to read aloud or to entice reluctant readers...."
6729. Lautens, Trevor. "A death at the newsstand." The Vancouver Sun, December 6, 1994: A15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Thanks to the reporter's practised gift for bulging the eyes outward and to their periphery while appearing to look straight ahead, I caught the first two letters on the cover of the kid's magazine. They were HA. I sauntered closer. I looked down (same guile, same bulge). The kid had his magazine open at a page of pictures of automatic pistols. You didn't need to be Sherlock Holmes to deduce that the magazine was Handguns Something...."
6730. Lauterbach, Ann, and Diana Michener. "The night sky VII." American Poetry Review 28, no. 1 (1999): 41.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Deals with fear and how it is described by different people. How Ed Hirsch talks about the murder of Frederico Garcia Lorca on National Public Radio; Art and values; Love. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The comedy begins with our simplest gestures. They all entail an inevitable awkwardness. Reaching out my hand to pull a chair toward me, I have folded the arm of my jacket, scratched the floor, and dropped my cigarette ash. In doing what I willed to do, I did a thousand and one things I hadn't willed to do. The act was not pure; I left traces. Wiping away these traces, I left others. Sherlock Holmes will apply his science to this irreducible coarseness of each of my initiatives, and thus the comedy might take a tragic turn...."
6731. Law, Jerry. "Freud's Critique of Religion and the Viability of Faith." Telos, no. (2000): 13p.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses Sigmund Freud's psychoanalysis of religion. Purpose of religion; Impact of religion on the value of life; How to make a theory acceptable; Reason for the popularity of psychoanalysis. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Freud's works appear to have relied primarily on a single compelling narrative strategy: the uncovering of the hidden unity among a set of apparently unrelated phenomena -- the detective-story strategy. Unrelated events are discovered to be linked, causes to be effects, the commonplace to be bizarre. Crews writes of how Freud saw himself 'as a master sleuth, very much in the mold of his favorite literary character, Sherlock Holmes.'" 6732. Lazarus, Arnold A. "Milton's Mystique." PsycCRITIQUES. Electronic, no. (2004).
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Originally published in Contemporary Psychology: APA Review of Books, 1995, Vol 40(5), 465-465. The reviewer notes that the book under review (see record 1993-99032-000) may be classified as a "nonbook." Its nine chapters are comprised of Haley's previously published writings from 1967 to 1993, and it is yet another hagiographic account of the late Milton H. Erickson published by Brunner/Mazel. In a different context, Haley (1992) made it abundantly clear that he does not view psychotherapy as a scientific enterprise, and that he is quite content to deal solely with anecdotes and subjective inferences. Thus, undeterred by the fact that Erickson's approach has "no adequate theoretical framework available for describing it" (p. 11), he concludes that "therapy is the art of manipulation" (p. 12) and offers a somewhat repetitive series of clinical vignettes as testimonials to Erickson's assumed genius. The reviewer notes that when he observed Erikson doing therapy in 1963 and when he attended seminars and read books by various Eriksonians, he was concerned about the extremely manipulative tactics used. Erickson's refusal or inability to be open and direct seems to have been a characterological tendency. If one can get beyond the undue reverence, the book contains some interesting anecdotes, intriguing ideas, astute clinical observations, and empowering techniques. In the reviewer's opinion, however, this is marred by Haley's portrayal of Erickson as a person with powers of observation that exceeded the legendary Sherlock Holmes.
6733. Le Page, Michael. "Gene machine." New Scientist 199, no. 2683 (2008): 44-47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Then, in 2006, David Begun of the University of California, Davis, and colleagues identified several new genes in fruit flies with sequences unlike any of the older genes. They suggested that these genes, which code for relatively small proteins, have evolved from junk DNA in the past few million years. Begun quotes Sherlock Holmes: 'When you have eliminated the impossible, whatever remains, however improbable, must be the truth.'..."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6734. Lederman, Jim. "Economics of the Arab-Israeli peace process." Orbis 39, no. 4 (1995): 549.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Analyzes the factors which led to the Arab-Israeli peace negotiations after the Persian Gulf War. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Thirdly, the most likely causes of an event are often not the obvious ones. To modify the dictum of Sherlock Holmes: if you eliminate the likelihoods, whatever remains, however improbable, must be true...."
6735. Leeds, Dorothy. "Show-stopping training." Training & Development 49, no. 3 (1995): 34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Proposes the utilization of a theatrical approach to training programs. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...For instance, in my marketing seminars, I say that you almost have to be a detective to get the information you need from prospective clients. To help emphasize that point, I put on a Sherlock-Holmes-type hat with a crepe-paper curl down the front and introduce myself as Curlock Jones. I put on another guise--psychoanalyst Dr. Friend--when I want to ask trainees questions...."
6736. Lefton, Terry. "The fuzz." Brandweek 38, no. 23 (1997): 39.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles Jeffrey Laytin, partner of Lewin and Laytin in New York. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Laytin's contributions to licensing include the founding in 1992 of the Coalition to Advance the Protection of Sports Logos, an umbrella organization of leagues, colleges and manufacturers that works to battle rip-off artists. He's established case law and procedural precedent in the field, such as a permanent court order at New York's Madison Square Garden that allows MSG to seize bogus goods at any event. Or freezing the bad guys' bank accounts prior to judgment. But it's Laytin's combination of legal knowledge, street savvy and licensing acumen that makes him the Sherlock Holmes of licensing...."
6737. Legator, Marvin S., and Debra L. Morris. "What Did Sir Bradford Hill Really Say?" Archives of Environmental Health 58, no. 11 (2003): 718-720.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reports on the manuscript of Sir Austin Bradford Hill, Management, Policy and Community Health Division, University of Texas, School of Public Health. In 1965, Sir Austin Bradford Hill made a major contribution to the newly founded Section of Occupational Medicine of the Society of Epidemiology with his classic paper "The Environment and Disease: Association or Causation?" In the introduction to his manuscript, Hill explicitly states that it may not always be necessary, or desirable, to carry out extensive research before taking an action. Hill's definition of consistency includes repetition of the study by different persons, in different places, circumstances, and times. He goes on to discuss the handling of varying results, and indicates the need to use judgment in drawing a conclusion. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "At the conclusion of his discussion, Hill again emphasizes the need for caution if we are unaware of the mechanism of action of an agent: In short, the association we observe may be one new to science or medicine and we must not dismiss it too light-heartedly as just too odd. As Sherlock Holmes advised Dr. Watson 'when you have eliminated the impossible, whatever remains, however improbably, must be the truth.'" 6738. Leggo, Carl. "Research as poetic rumination: twenty-six ways of listening to light." Journal of Educational Thought 33, no. 2 (1999): 113-133.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "I search for a poetics of research in long walks on the dike where I listen to light, smell the line of a heron startled into slow motion by my presence, taste the screeches of eagles and hawks, poke with the roots of alders and aspens into the black earth, see the scent of the seasons. In my walking and researching, I hear ducks laughing in the slough along the dike, and my research question laughs with the ducks: What are the ducks laughing about? I do not ask the question in order to answer the question; I ask the question, again and again, in order to know the question. My research is really about opening my ears and eyes and tongue and skin and nose and lungs and heart and spirit, to learn to laugh with the ducks." Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Research is akin to Sherlock Holmes' concocting a story out of a few traces, but instead of Holmes' deductive logic, I want to read the traces with the heart. I want to evoke or conjure a wholeness from the traces...."
6739. Leier, Mark. "From Rebel to Reactionary: Class and the Politics of Travis McGee." Journal of American Culture 21, no. 3 (1998): 89.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Probes on the politics of the fictitious character Travis McGee, who is depicted as a rebel in John D. MacDonald's novels. Views of McGee on modern life; Concept of progress according to McGee; Middle class ideology of the character. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...It is a commonplace to note that the popular culture figure of the lone rebel has long been crucial to American mythology. From the cowboy to the private detective, from the gangster to the robber baron, from the Lone Ranger to V. I. Warshawski, from John Wayne as Ringo to Sylvester Stallone as Rambo, the American hero has tended to be alienated from society, driven by a personal, moral code rather than a societal one. Unlike Sherlock Holmes and James Bond, who openly work to maintain the systems of nation and empire, the American hero operates without the protection of society, owes it little allegiance, and stands outside it as critic, by example if not articulated politics...."

6740. Lejeune, Anthony. "Murder Ink." National Review 49, no. 24 (1997): 68-69.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The book reviews several books including "A Certain Justice," by P. D. James, "Road Rage," by Ruth Rendell, "10-Lb. Penalty," by Dick Francis, "Murder Book," by Richard Rayner, "The Case Has Altered," by Martha Grimes, "A/K/A Jane," by Maureen Tan, "A Holly, Jolly Murder," by Joan Hess and "The Edith Wharton Murders," by Lev Raphael. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Their delving into dark regions of the mind and their often seedy settings have appealed to highbrows, but, unlike most modern authors whom highbrows admire, Lady Rendell is a brilliant plotter keeping always one more twist in hand. Road Rage, unfortunately, does not show her talents at their best. She has reverted to Wexford, which she feels obliged to do from time to time, if only to satisfy readers who were weaned on television versions of her earlier novels; and Wexford -- unlike Sherlock Holmes or Hercule Poirot, whose creators also tired of them -- seems too colorless to carry a less than satisfactory narrative...."

6741. Lemonick, Michael D. "The End (Cover story)." Time Europe 157, no. 25 (2001): 46.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents various theories on how the universe will end. Discovery of dark energy; Origin of the universe; Expansion of the universe; Discussion of how the universe curves; Thought that the universe will be cold and black in the end. Inset: How long will we be around?, by Frederic Golden. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...In the end, both teams adopted Sherlock Holmes' attitude: once you have eliminated the impossible, whatever is left, no matter how improbable, has got to be true...."

6742. Leneman, Leah. "Legitimacy and Bastardy in Scotland, 1694-1830." Scottish Historical Review 80, 1, no. 209 (2001): 45.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the law on legitimacy and bastardy in Scotland in 1694 to 1830. Rule of bastardy on the grounds of alleged incapacity; Evaluation of the Scottish marriage law; Consequences associated with the view that the character of illegitimacy was indelible. Note 27 (p. 58) includes a passing reference to Holmes. "His reasoning at this point could come right out of a Sherlock Holmes story..."

6743. Leo, Ronald A. "A Stitch in Time: Predicting Long-term Survival After Acute Gastrointestinal Hemorrhage." Southern medical journal 97, no. 10 (2004): 922-923.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article focuses on long-term survival after acute gastrointestinal hemorrhage (AGIH). Holmes quotation appears at the bottom of page 923: "Once you eliminate the impossible, whatever remains, no matter how improbable, must be the truth."

6744. Leonard, Garry. "The City, Modernism, and Aesthetic Theory in A Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man." Novel: A Forum on Fiction 29, no. 1 (1995): 79-99.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Analyzes the aesthetic theory of Stephen Dedalus, the main character in James Joyce's novel 'A Portrait of the Artist As a Young Man,' in the context of modernity and in relation to the modern city. Aesthetic theory and self-surveillance; Modernity and the ideology of the encounter; Catholic in the modern city; Aesthetic theory and marketing strategies. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...If Natty Bumppo could take for granted the truly helpless status of the woman clinging to him, and thereupon devote all his attention to whatever was posing a threat to her, modern detectives such as Sherlock Holmes, Philip Marlowe, and Sam Spade the urban equivalent of the pioneer--find they must investigate the damsel at the same time they try and alleviate her distress...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6745. Leventhal, Laura M., Barbee M. Teasley, Keith Instone, and Diane S. Rohlman. "Sleuthing in HyperHolmes-super(TM): An evaluation of using hypertext vs. a book to answer questions." Behaviour & Information Technology 12, no. 3 (1993): 149-164.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Examined the performance and navigation strategies of 29 college students engaged in a question-answering task using either a hypertext encyclopedia of Sherlock Holmes facts or its traditional paper form. Results showed that the hypertext users were marginally more accurate in answering questions and excelled at questions where the key information was embedded in a text entry. Book users were marginally faster, overall, but excelled only in answering questions based on graphics. Hypertext users showed a preference for those tools which most closely mimicked use of a conventional book. They used a hierarchical structure to guide their navigation strategy in early trials, but soon learned to navigate in a nonhierarchical way."
6746. Levine, Samantha. "Careers to count on. (Cover story)." U.S. News & World Report 132, no. 5 (2002): 46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an analysis of career tracks that are expected to be secure. Information on forensic accountants, speech pathologists, traffic engineers, and truck drivers; Description of average salaries and training involved; Positive aspects of each career. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "'Forensic Account Sherlock Holmes, Meet Enron.' Not since gangster Al Capone was nabbed for tax evasion have forensic accountants been so squarely in the public eye. The bloodhounds of bookkeeping sniff out fraud and criminal transactions in corporate financial records. And they're now blessed with expanded opportunities...."
6747. Lichtenberg, James. "Of steeds and stalking horses: Academics meet publishers of copyright." Educom Review 30, no. 3 (1995): 40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the issues involved in copyright and information technology. Background information; Absence of security in the Internet; Effect of incursions through academic network firewalls; Demands of students; Implications; World Wide Web; Expectations. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...As I write this, a notorious cyber-crook has been apprehended by a crafty cyber-cop. In a screenwriter's dream, a virtual Sherlock Holmes outwitted the machinations of a cracker Dr. Moriarity. Once again, the hubris of the malefactor set the stage for his downfall, although the vast majority of the public really doesn't know what happened...."
6748. Linde, Andrei. "Inflationary cosmology and creation of matter in the universe." AIP Conference Proceedings 555, no. 1 (2001): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Article ends with an appropriate reference to Holmes. "...Therefore, for the time being, we are taking the position advocated by Sherlock Holmes: 'When you have eliminated the impossible, whatever remains, however improbable, must be the truth.'" 6749. Linder, Bruce. "Intertwined Heritage." Naval History 21, no. 5 (2007): 14-21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reports on San Diego, California, which is tightly intertwined with the U.S. naval history. The Navy first came to the city during the Mexican War in 1846. The Navy is more alive and involved here than in any other city in the nation. The Maritime Museum of San Diego, the USS Midway Aircraft Carrier Museum, and the San Diego Air and Space Museum, all hold key pieces of the city's Navy puzzle, as do the Marine Corps museums at Miramar and the Marine Corps Recruit Depot. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Despite the service's immense impact on the area, tracing the city's naval and maritime roots could be a challenge even to Sherlock Holmes...."
6750. Link, Nathan. "Handel's Operas 1726-1741." Notes 64, no. 3 (2008): 498-500.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Handel's Operas 1726-1741," by Winton Dean. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...He [Dean] often mentions Handel's musical 'borrowings,' relying largely on the research of John H. Roberts (whom he names 'the Sherlock Holmes of Handel Scholarship'!..."
6751. Lippi, Giuseppe, and Gian Cesare Guidi. "Risk management in the preanalytical phase of laboratory testing." Clinical Chemistry & Laboratory Medicine 45, no. 6 (2007): 720-727.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...In the past, medical diagnosis thrived on a faith based on methods of interpretation of clues or understanding of signs and symptoms. On the

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Sherlock Holmes assumption that three qualities are necessary for the ideal detective (observation, deduction and knowledge), clear analogies could be drawn between investigative and clinical reasoning...."

6752. Lipske, Michael. "Detective Rasmussen gets her owl." International Wildlife 29, no. 6 (1999): 30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reveals the crime and fraud committed by Colonel Richard Meinertzhagen, a collector of bird specimens. Investigations conducted by ornithologist Pamela Rasmussen; Discovery of the truth about Meinertzhagen's bird collections that have been relabeled with false data; Background on Meinertzhagen; Fraudulent labeling of the forest owl. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...An ornithologist at the Smithsonian Institution's National Museum of Natural History in Washington, D.C., Rasmussen has emerged in recent years as something of a scientific Sherlock Holmes. Her speciality: solving crimes committed in hushed museum corridors that warehouse vast numbers of biological specimens. That alarm she heard would help unmask one of the stranger scientific frauds of the twentieth century, raise unsettling questions about the sanctity of museum collections and ultimately take Rasmussen to India in a search for a living forest owl...."
6753. Littlejohn, Carol. "Rebels with (and without) a cause: booktalks for grades 7-12." Book Report 17, no. 1 (1998): 27-29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The writer discusses booktalks about rebels in young adult literature that encompass a wide variety of genres and reading levels. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Dear Tracey, Now that I've been writing you for months, I can't help but notice that what you say about yourself doesn't fit. I had a friend go to your high school and he says you're not enrolled at Prescott High. I'm no Sherlock Holmes, but something smells..."
6754. Lockwood, John. "And just so you know, Sherlock Holmes did indeed find the naval treaty." The Washington Times, March 19, 1996: A16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Letter to the editor. "Well, I had to spend some 20 minutes searching through all my Sherlock Holmes editions, but yes, that is an original Holmes illustration by Sidney Paget from 'The Naval Treaty' that appeared with the March 12 Op-Ed article by David B. Rifkin Jr. and Lee A. Casey, 'Come together over Bob Dole.' The picture shows Holmes, accompanied by Watson, shaking hands with Percy Phelps, who has lost a treaty on which the peace of Europe depends. Did any other local Sherlockians notice this? Also, what does Sherlock Holmes have to do with Bob Dole? And can we have some more such illustrations? John Lockwood, Washington 6755. Loewenstein, Era A. "The Freudian case history: A detective story or a dialectical progression? Reflections on psychoanalytic narratives from a Lacanian perspective." Psychoanalytic Psychology. 9, no. 1 (1992): 49-59.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Contains multiple references to Holmes. "In response to the recent tendency to discard Freud's contributions as anachronistic and reductionistic, this article critically examines D. P. Spence's (1982, 1987) contention that the Freudian style of case reporting is ensnared in an outdated positivistic tradition. Spence mistakenly reduces Freud's method of historical construction to a form of naive commitment to the Sherlock Holmes detective story genre. By employing J. Lacan's (1952 [1982]) rereading of Dora's case history, the article conversely demonstrates that in the psychoanalytic situation the analysand's past unfolds in a series of dialectical reversals yielding not a linear, detective-like story with a single solution, but an ever-unfolding and subversive narrative, a life story that stubbornly resists premature closure."
6756. Lolla, Maria Grazia. "Monuments and Texts: Antiquarianism and the Beauty of Antiquity." Art History 25, no. 4 (2002): 431.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Note 28 includes a Holmes reference: Carlo Ginzburg, 'Morelli, Freud and Sherlock Holmes: Clues and Scientific Method', History Workshop Journal, pp. 3±36, 16.
6757. Lomas, David. "'modestrecording Instruments': Science, Surrealism and Visuality." Art History 27, no. 4 (2004): 627-650.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Note 39 includes a reference to Holmes: Carlo Ginzburg, 'Morelli, Freud and Sherlock Holmes: Clues and Scientific Method', History Workshop, 1980, 5-36.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6758. Lopate, Leonard. "The writing life and times of John Updike. (Cover story)." Writer 114, no. 7 (2001): 31.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Interviews author John Updike. Reasons for writing in the present tense; How he creates characters in short stories; Number of books he has written; His style in writing. Includes a reference to Holmes: "... Updike: Almost invariably, no. I first wrote about Richard and Joan Maples when I was living in New York--my two brief years of Manhattan residence. The story is called "Snowing in Greenwich Village." It presents a young couple living down on West 13th Street and the awkwardness of youthful marriage. Those '50s marriages were generally youthful. It wasn't until I'd moved to New England and the suburbs, perhaps as much as seven or eight years later, that I picked them up again. And once I'd picked them up again, they became like Sherlock Holmes, in that it's easy to revisit characters once you've named them, once you've established their tics and their environment. So to a lazy writer--and I think I am one of the lazier writers--it's very appealing to go where you've already been before and done a lot of groundwork...."
6759. Lothane, Zvi. "The snares of seduction in life and in therapy, or what do young Jewish girls (Spielrein) seek in their Aryan heroes (Jung), and vice versa? - Part 2." International Forum of Psychoanalysis 16, no. 2 (2007): 81-94.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The author presents biographical facts of Sabina Spielrein's life after 1911, following her graduation as a medical doctor from the medical school of Zurich University, the completion of her doctoral dissertation, and the publication of her landmark paper on destruction as a forerunner of becoming. Spielrein joined the Vienna Psychoanalytic Society and continued to publish important papers." Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...I first became aware of the Spielrein and Jung story (Lothane, 1987) after Bruno Bettelheim published in 1993 a review of the 1982 English version of Carotenuto's 1980 original Diario di una Segreta Simmetria--Sabina Spielrein tra Jung e Freud [Diary of a secret symmetry--Sabina Spielrein between Jung and Freud]. A somewhat modified version of this review was included in the 1984 English version of Carotenuto. Bettelheim accused Jung of dishonesty, of having betrayed Spielrein (citing Jung's self-description of 'Schufferei;--knavery), and Freud of a complicitous cover-up, which Freud admitted: 'I made it appear . . . Sherlock Holmes-like to guess the situation (which of course was none too difficult after your communications) and suggested a more appropriate procedure, something endopsychic, as it were'...."
6760. Lundin, Martha. "Markets." Writer 121, no. 10 (2008): 48-55.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Each month, The Writer provides selected listings for literary markets and other writing-related resources." Includes a listing for the new Strand Magazine published in Birmingham, Michigan.
6761. Lustig, Harry, William E. Evenson, and Richard J. Jacob. "Book Reviews." Physics in Perspective 6, no. 1 (2004): 114-122.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Franklin's proposed strategies for assessing experimental results are (1) 'experimental checks of calibration, in which the experimental apparatus reproduces known phenomena;' (2) 'reproducing artifacts that are known in advance to be present;' (3) 'elimination of plausible sources of error and alternative explanations of the result (the Sherlock Holmes strategy);'..."
6762. Lyall, Sarah. "Partners in Christian crime writing." Good Housekeeping 224, no. 5 (1997): 32.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features Jake and Luke Thoene, writers of four best-selling Christian-themed detective novels for boys ages 9-17. How their novels make them one of the most youngest and most successful writing teams; Their inspiration in writing; Movie script written by Jake and Luke; Overview of their family background. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...The brothers penned two video scripts, which were also published as novels. Combined, the Last Chance videos and books sold nearly a half million copies--a noteworthy success in the Christian juvenile market. Their next series featured street-smart London orphans called in to help Sherlock Holmes...."
6763. Lynch, Meghan. "From the Editor." Horticulture 105, no. 5 (2008): 8-8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...'You see, but you do not observe,' Sherlock Holmes said to Watson. It's a quote I often remember. I'm learning to observe the landscapes I see. In slowing down to really look at a garden, I find out how each plant and its placement contributes to the big

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

picture. I'm using my observations to solve the puzzles of my own garden, and I'm trusting that everything that should fit, will."

6764. M.A.H. "Books in summary." History & Theory 37, no. 1 (1998): 141.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Past Looking: Historical Imagination and the Rhetoric of the Image,' by Michael Ann Holly. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Each of the other chapters is devoted to leading thinkers in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries who all wrote about visual images from the early modern past. In each case Holly demonstrates how the rhetorical strategies of the art historian's narrative--whether it be Burckhardt and Quattrocento paintings executed through the rules of Albertian perspective, or Panofsky who played the role of Sherlock Holmes in detecting the meanings behind the 'disguised symbolism' of northern Renaissance art, or Freud and Schapiro who argued over how best to read Leonardo's imagery 'backwards,' or Wolfflin whose 'art history without names' mirrored the rhetorical strategies of Baroque art--was in some fundamental way dependent upon the ways in which the objects themselves prefigured their own ideal historians...."

6765. MacDonald, E. E. "Genre and Masculinity in Ed McBain's 87th Precinct Novels." Journal of American & Comparative Cultures 25, no. 1/2 (2002): 47-50.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses 87th Precinct police procedural series of writer Ed McBain. Importance given to interconnectedness of genre and gender in the novels; Focus on the realities of police routine and police sub-culture; Significance of chronotope in literature; Reasons for the series' success in the pop culture market; Importance given to minute details in the novels; Discussion of cyclical nature of prejudice, poverty and crime. Includes passing references to Holmes. "...The emphasis on the police detective as a worker is helped along by McBain's refusal to continue the usual Golden Age mystery or hard-boiled tradition of focusing on one individual hero. His detectives are not just foils to a Holmesian character or fodder for comic relief....The fact that the series focuses on a team of men rather than on one particular male hero enables this reader-novel relationship, since the male reader can identify with the characters by saying, 'We are all men working.' This identification is in sharp contrast to the experience of reading, for example, a Sherlock Holmes or an Agatha Christie story, about which most readers could only say, 'What a brilliant sleuth -- I wish I could be like that, myself.'"

6766. MacDonald, Heidi. "Comics Go to the Movies." Publishers Weekly 250, no. 24 (2003): 30.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights films based on comic books in the U.S. Titles of Marvel comic books made into films; Remarks from Marvel marketing manager Michael Moran regarding films based on comic books; Basis of the film produced by DC Comics. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...In contrast to this tangled web, over at DC Comics, their movie offering this year has a single product. The League, starring Sean Connery, is based on The League of Extraordinary Gentlemen by Alan Moore and Kevin O'Neill, a fiendishly clever story that teams various Victorian fictional characters in a plot that ties in everything from H.G. Wells to Sherlock Holmes to Jules Verne to James Bond...."

6767. Machamer, Peter. "Activities and Causation: The Metaphysics and Epistemology of Mechanisms." International Studies in the Philosophy of Science 18, no. 1 (2004): 27-39.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article deals with mechanisms conceived as composed of entities and activities. In response to many perplexities about the nature of activities, a number of arguments are developed concerning their epistemic and ontological status. Some questions concerning the relations between cause and causal explanation and mechanisms are also addressed. [Abstract from author] Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...If we have ruled out everything that is possible, the only thing that is left must be necessary. (I here paraphrase Sherlock Holmes and Leibniz.)..."

6768. Mackay, Jordan. "Bond plays on." Texas Monthly 26, no. 6 (1998): 84.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles Raymond Benson, a Texas writer who wrote a James Bond novel. Books written by Benson about James Bond; Production outfit that developed the films of James Bond; Brief biography of Benson. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...After all, Fleming's Bond, who served in World War II, would be in his seventies today, and chances are he wouldn't resemble Pierce Brosnan. 'Sherlock Holmes stayed a Victorian-age character,' says Benson, 'and I think there's a lot to be said for that with Bond.'"

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6769. MacKenzie, Jim. "Forms of Knowledge and Forms of Discussion." Educational Philosophy & Theory 30, no. 1 (1998): 27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the forms of knowledge and forms of discussion. Contributions of knowledge to philosophy of education; Variety of specialisms; Acquisition of knowledge. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The source may describe a fictional object, which is logically incomplete. Every real person either did, or did not, chop down a cherry tree as a child, whether or not anybody now knows which it was; but neither alternative holds of Sherlock Holmes. The text does not decide the question and, unlike real people, Sherlock Holmes is a creature of a text...."
6770. Mackenzie, Jim. "Is Religious Education Possible? A Philosophical Investigation - By Michael Hand." Educational Philosophy & Theory 39, no. 7 (2007): 787-794.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Is Religious Education Possible? A Philosophical Investigation," by Michael Hand. Includes passing references to Holmes. "...According to Hand, 'a proposition comprises a subject-expression and a predicate-expression, a referring part and a describing part. When the referring part refers correctly and the describing part describes accurately, the proposition is successful and therefore true' (p. 42). Sherlock Holmes is accurately described as having visited Dartmoor, for he camped there during his investigation of the problem brought to him by Sir Henry Baskerville. Dartmoor is accurately described as never having been visited by Sherlock Holmes, for no part of it has ever been trodden on by such a person. Sherlock Holmes visited Dartmoor, but Dartmoor was never visited by Sherlock Holmes. The otherwise valid entailment from a singular statement to its passive transform fails for statements connecting the fictional and the real...."
6771. MacLeod, Alexander. "High-tech Sherlocks for Britain. (Cover story)." Christian Science Monitor, April 20, 1998: 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on a National Crime Squad (NCS) headquartered in London, England. Its mandate to combat organized crime in England and Wales; Its choice of the Federal Bureau of Investigation in the United States as its model; NCS Director-General Roy Penrose. Includes passing references to Holmes. "...If he were solving cases today, Sherlock Holmes wouldn't worry about a plodding Inspector Lastrade looking over his shoulder. Today the legendary sleuth would have to contend with a squad of eager young detectives determined if necessary to pursue Professor Moriarty and his ilk all the way from England to Eastern Europe. They could pelt Holmes with facts they had gleaned from an electronic intelligence network. And they would use secure mobile phones to keep in touch with their colleagues in Britain and beyond...."
6772. MacLeod, Dawn. "A cruise to the outer islands of Scotland." Contemporary Review 264, no. 1540 (1994): 267.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the travel experiences of the author aboard the ship M.V. Meteor cruising the islands of Scotland. Travel description of the islands; Description of the people met by the author; Travel itineraries. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...One of these transatlantic travellers, a pension-aged man from New York, kept me busy on a Sherlock Holmes assignment, Not Who. Done-It but Why. Has-He-Done-It became a regular brain-teaser. First day at sea, he sat in a basket chair on the deck of the mother-ship with his eyes shut and his mouth so firmly closed you'd have thought he feared his lips might get stolen...."
6773. Major, Patrick. "Britain and Germany: A Love-Hate Relationship?" German History 26, no. 4 (2008): 457-468.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article focuses on the international relationship of Great Britain and Germany. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...It is also the case that before 1914 many Anglocentric figures of popular culture, such as Sherlock Holmes, were syndicated into the German pulp fiction market, suggesting that besides Americanization there was an 'Anglicization' of Germany's popular culture...."
6774. Maker, Richard. "Reader Centred Classification of Adult Fiction in Public Libraries." APLIS 21, no. 4 (2008): 168-171.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...If you do introduce genre classification please don't go for those horrid stickers on the spines. A Sherlock Holmes deerstalker or a badly drawn gun will do nothing for your issues...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6775. Makin, Stephen. "About Time for Aristotle." Philosophical Quarterly 57, no. 227 (2007): 280-293.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article offers a critical review of the book "Time for Aristotle: Physics IV 10-14," by Ursula Coope. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Finally, part V looks at two broad consequences of Aristotle's treatment of time. First (IV 12, 220b 32-222a 9 and IV 13, 222b, 16-27), there are some things which are in time, while there are others which are not (the latter including not only things like Sherlock Holmes, which do not exist at all, but also anything which does exist and lasts forever, IV 12, 221b, 3-4)...."

6776. Malcolm, Teresa. "Reactions to 'X-Files' a tale of two audiences." National Catholic Reporter 34, no. 33 (1998): 21.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the motion picture 'X-Files.' Includes a reference to Holmes. "...Most important, no single movie could capture the complicated interplay between the two leads, Agents Fox Mulder (David Duchovny) and Dana Scully (Gillian Anderson). Their relationship brings to mind another famous investigative pair whose unforgettable rapport was developed over time -just as in life, rarely in big moments, but in day-to-day contact. When Sherlock Holmes told Dr. Watson, 'I am lost without my Boswell,' there was nothing particular happening at that moment that proved the remark true. But in the context of 60-odd stories it was a touching and undeniable admission. When Mulder tells Scully nearly the same thing in 'The X-Files' movie, it can seem a bit jarring and corny to anyone new to the characters...."

6777. Mallick, Keshaw N., Iftekhar Ahmed, Kevin S. Tickle, and Kevin E. Lansey. "Determining Pipe Groupings for Water Distribution Network." Journal of Water Resources Planning & Management 128, no. 2 (2002): 130.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a methodology that quantifies impacts introduced by water distribution system simplification and identifies the best number of pipe groupings for a network. Major components of water distribution systems; Definition and description of model prediction error; Approach for determining acceptable pipe groupings. References at end of article include a reference to Holmes: Walski, T. M. (1990). "Sherlock Holmes meets Hardy Cross, or model calibration in Austin, Texas." J. Am. Water Works Assoc., 82(3), 34-38.

6778. Malone, Michael, and Jeff Zaleski. "Stones Bass Player Displays New Chops." Publishers Weekly 249, no. 36 (2002): 53.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Interviews Bill Wyman, member of the Rolling Stones band. Overview of his book 'Rolling With the Stones'; Similarity of being an author to being a rock star; Future plans. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...I've known Richard Havers for years. He did a wonderful job on the blues book [Bill Wyman's Blues Odyssey], so I thought, why not use him again? I excel at research--ferreting out information, a bit like Sherlock Holmes. Richard's good with the written word...."

6779. Malone, Terry W. "Servicing--then and now." Mortgage Banking 54, no. 5: 22.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the patterns of net servicing income in mortgage banking. Comparison of past and present levels of net servicing income; Effect of computer technology; Investor relationships; Predominance of government loans; Contributing factors to low profitability; Effect of securitization to servicing efficiency. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Locating these ledger cards at times became a task worthy of Sherlock Holmes in his prime...."

6780. Manczuk, Suzanne. "Mysteries for Readers from Kindergarten through Middle School." Library Media Connection 23, no. 2 (2004): 29-30.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the growing popularity of mysteries as the most preferred genre for readers and suggests a variety of books under this classification for children. Graphic design and unusual word choices in the picture books "Agent A to Agent Z" and "The Hidden Alphabet"; Usability of easy-to-read, familiar series for young elementary readers, particularly that of David Alder and Elizabeth Levy; Titles that are more challenging for middle grade schoolers. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Emerson and Van Draanen have launched new series--Emerson with a canine cast of 1887 San Francisco whose detective, Samuel Blackthorne, is a Yorkshire terrier with decided resemblance to Sherlock Holmes;..."

6781. Mandel, Charles. "He sees the invisible." Alberta Report / Newsmagazine 25, no. 52 (1998): 21.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on Glenn Woods, the top criminal profiler in Canada. Cases he has been involved in; How he views his work; His success rate as profiler; The growing acceptance he sees for profilers in police work; Training he went through; His dedication to solving crimes. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Calgary Police Call In A Real-Life Profiler, But He's More Like Sherlock Holmes Than Jake Foster..."
6782. Manguel, Alberto. "The Library of Robinson Crusoe." American Scholar 70, no. 1 (2001): 61.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Traces the evolution of library materials from the collections of Robinson Crusoe to the use of the World Wide Web. List of tools and other resources on Crusoe's collections; Advent of different books and textbooks; Changes in the approach to reading; Advantages and disadvantages of the Web application. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...One evening in 1939, in Buenos Aires, the writers Jorge Luis Borges, Adolfo Bioy Casares, and Silvina Ocampo decided to immortalize this punctilious reader. They composed, in his honor, the following list (according to Bioy Casares, very much tongue-in-cheek) of the 'Things Literature Must Avoid':...Twin protagonists too obviously dissimilar: Don Quixote and Sancho, Sherlock Holmes and Watson...."
6783. Mann, Richard O. "How to choose a CD-ROM drive." Compute! 16, no. 1 (1994): 86.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Informs on how to choose a CD-ROM drive. Speed; Data formats; Photo CD; MPC standards; The SCSI bus; External and internal drives; Features of five manufacturers' drives; Multimedia upgrade kits. INSETS: How to play audio CDs on your CD-ROM drive; How to cache your CD-ROM drive. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Creative Labs went all out in bundling software for this kit. The package includes Aldus PhotoStyler SE, The Software Toolworks Multimedia Encyclopedia, Sherlock Holmes Consulting Detective, Lemmings, Secret Weapons of the Luftwaffe, Loom, The Secret of Monkey Island, and Indianapolis 500, the Simulation...."
6784. Mann, Thomasina. "Get Quirky!" Teaching PreK-8 30, no. 4 (2000): 12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Offers suggestion on teaching mathematics. Dressing guidelines; Use of quotes and cartoons; Communication with students. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...I own many hats, which I use when I want the students to pay close attention. Some are quirky hats, like the Sherlock Holmes hat with the ear flaps, which I reserve for special science concepts...."
6785. Manning, Bill. "The Unspeakable Crime." Fire Engineering 154, no. 6 (2001): 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the arson problem in the United States. Odds of being victimized by arson; Percentage of fires committed by arsonists; State of arson investigation in the country; Challenges in combating arson. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Even for the majority of the fire service, the fire investigator is like some on-the-fringes geek, some version of Sherlock Holmes, with a trench coat and a magnifying glass and sometimes a gun, who shows up after all the really fun, hard, manly work is done...."
6786. Manning, Maryann, and Gary Manning. "12 Guidelines for Teaching Writing in Middle School." Teaching PreK-8 25, no. 3 (1994): 59.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Offers practical ideas which will help teachers to become memorable writing instructors. The experiences of Mark Barber, a teacher at a middle school in Homewood, Alabama. Curriculum; The importance of parent involvement; The importance of core books that are read by students each year; Other aspects. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...There are times when I have chunks of time for reading in one genre. During the reading of a Sherlock Holmes mystery, for example, I can't break up the flow of reading the novel with other activities...."
6787. Manning, Maryann, and Gary L. Manning. "12 guidelines for teaching writing in middle school." Teaching PreK-8 25, no. (1994): 59-61.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The writers discuss 12 guidelines for teaching writing in middle school. With reference to one language arts teacher, they discuss his language rich curriculum, how he balances reading and writing, the teaching of grammar, the importance of parent involvement, the need to let students know that the teacher is a reader and a writer, the importance of having some core books that are read by the students each year, the way that students learn from one another, why he does not force students to read their work aloud, his method of trying to confer with at least one-fifth of his class every day, his indexed notebook that has a separate page for each student, how his students include their best pieces of writing and their rough drafts in their portfolios, and his method for grading papers." Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...When we asked Mark how he balances reading and writing, he said, 'I bounce back and forth. Things flow out of literature. Some of our best writing flows out of a novel study. I can't pinpoint exactly how much time is spent in any one area of language arts. There are times when I have chunks of time for reading in one genre. During the reading of a Sherlock Holmes mystery, for example, I can't break up the flow of reading the novel with other activities. Sometimes, if we're into reading, we may go without much writing for a while. On the other hand, there may be times when we write a lot with little reading....'"

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6788. Manon, Hugh S. "Some Like It Cold: Fetishism in Billy Wilder's Double Indemnity." Cinema Journal 44, no. 4 (2005): 18-43.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This essay employs psychoanalytic theory to identify a fetishistic imperative in the perfect crime that Walter Neff endeavors to commit in Billy Wilder's Double Indemnity. By favoring ongoing manipulation over goal attainment and satisfaction, Walter Neff engages in a virtuoso cover-up that represents a paradigmatic noir deception, inviting viewers to fantasize that there may always be 'more than meets the eye.'" Includes multiple references to Holmes.

6789. Manzo, Joseph T. "Grading book review assignments." Journal of Geography 101, no. 3 (2002): 121-125.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Geographers have a tradition of using novels in the classroom. Given our busy schedules, however, and the need for students to write, instructors may find that it takes too much time to grade writing assignments. This paper provides an efficient method of grading book review assignments. It requires students to use headings and subheadings, which may be internalized as a future organizational scheme for writing assignments. Experience has shown this method to be 'grader-friendly' for instructors, making it easier to comment and score." Holmes mentioned in one of the references. Tuan, Y. F. 1985. The landscapes of Sherlock Holmes, Journal of Geography 84:56-60.

6790. Marciano, Alain. "Economists on Darwin's theory of social evolution and human behaviour." European Journal of the History of Economic Thought 14, no. 4 (2007): 681-700.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article analyses Darwin's image among economists with a specific focus on his theory of social evolution as presented in the Descent of Man (1871). Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Obviously, Darwin appears to be famous for his theory of biological evolution and Spencer worth being quoted for the application of these concepts to human society. As a consequence, Rapoport (1960: 212; emphasis added) mentions Darwin twice in the book; in one of these two references, he puts him on the same footing as a novel character: 'The distinction between Darwin and Sherlock Holmes is more in their specific preoccupations than in the workings of their minds'. Therefore, part of social memory, Darwin does not need to be quoted with much precision...."

6791. Marill, Alvin H. "Hail to the chiefs." Films in Review 47, no. 9/10 (1996): 42.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the portrayal of United States presidents in television movies or miniseries. Portrayal of George Washington by Barry Bostwick in two historical miniseries; Portrayal of John Adams and Quincy Adams in 'The Adams Chronicles' by George Grizzard; Abraham Lincoln played by F. Murray Abraham in 'Dream West.' Includes references to Holmes. "...Teddy Roosevelt was enacted in Eleanor and Franklin (1976) by William Phipps and in the sequel Eleanor and Franklin: The White House Years (1977) by David Healy. Lee Jones de Broux portrayed him in Captains and the Kings, and Claude Akins twice played Teddy fictionally: playing poker with Kenny Rogers in The Gambler: Luck of the Draw (1991) and being one of Christopher Lee as Sherlock Holmes' murder suspects(!) while on a big game hunt in Africa in Incident at Victoria Falls (also 1991)....In any event, virtually all the Chief Executives over two centuries from George, John, and Tom to Dick, Jimmy, and Ron have, for better or worse, been enacted on the tube--some being presidential, some even being three-dimensional, some being merely plot devices (as in the slew of Marilyn Monroe TV movies or as a foil for Sherlock Holmes or as a Kenny Rogers poker pal)...."

6792. Marino, Patricia. "Expressivism, Logic, Consistency, and Moral Dilemmas." Ethical Theory & Moral Practice 9, no. 5 (2006): 517-533.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "On an expressivist view, ethical claims are understood as expressions of our attitudes, desires, and feelings. A famous puzzle for this view concerns the use of logic in ethical reasoning, and two standard treatments try to solve the puzzle by explaining logical inconsistency in terms of conflicting attitudes. I argue, however, that this general strategy fails: because we can reason effectively even in the presence of conflicting moral attitudes -- in cases of moral dilemmas -- avoiding these conflicts cannot be a ground for correct moral reasoning. The result is a dilemma for expressivists: if they take all kinds of attitudes to be under consideration, then conflict cannot play the required role, since attitudes can fail to be compatible in cases of moral conflict. If they restrict attention to 'all-in attitudes' or to intentions or plans, then there is an important notion of obligation, used in standard arguments--one for which conflicts are allowed--that they fail to capture. I explain why expressivists should be especially tolerant of conflicting attitudes, and I conclude that they should pursue a different strategy for grounding logical normativity." [Abstract from author]. Includes references to Holmes. "...Consider Sherlock Holmes, pursued by Moriarty, and planning his escape by train. Holmes reasons to himself, 'Either packing now is the thing to do, or it's too late to catch the train; it's not too late to catch the train; therefore packing now is the thing to do.' This argument is valid, Gibbard explains, because 'to accept the premises and reject the conclusion would be to rule out every way that Holmes could become opinionated factually and fully decided in his hyperplan.' That is, for Holmes to conclude that packing is not the thing to do would involve planning that rules out fact-plan worlds in which Holmes packs (he's decided that packing is not the thing to do) and fact-plan worlds in which Holmes doesn't pack (the disjunction together with the fact that it's not too late to catch the train rules out fact-plan worlds in which he doesn't pack). In this case, Holmes' fact-plan world could not involve a hyperplan, because there can be no plan for what to do about packing...."

6793. Mark, Rebecca. "Wild Strawberries, Cataracts, and Climbing Roses: Clitoral and Seminal Imagery in The Optimist's Daughter." Mississippi Quarterly 56, no. 2 (2003): 331-350.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Analyzes the seminal imagery in the literary work "The Optimist's Daughter," by Eudora Welty. Symbolism of female sexuality and masculine energy; Discussion of eroticism from explications of women's texts; Development of femininity. Includes a passing reference to Holmes (p. 339). "...As Laurel looks at Miss Adele 'out the window' and turns away from the words written in the books in the library--Dickens, Gibbons, Sherlock Holmes, legal briefs, all books by men or, like Jane Eyre, about a blind man..."

6794. Marquand, Robert. "Conversations with outstanding Americans." Christian Science Monitor, May 27, 1997: 10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on Christian Palestinian, writer and professor, Edward Said. Said's interest and views on various topics; What makes Said outstanding; Comments from Said; Background information on Said. Inset: Edward Said chronology. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "When Edward Said recently visited his family home in West Jerusalem after 50 years, he could remember every tree, every wall, every window. He could point to the rooms where as a boy he read 'Sherlock Holmes' and 'Tarzan,' and where he and his mother read Shakespeare to each other...."

6795. Marquis, Don. "Korcz's Objections to the Future-of-Value Argument." Journal of Social Philosophy 35, no. 1 (2004): 56-60.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // In the Winter 2002 issue of Journal of Social Philosophy, Keith Allen Korcz argues that the future-of-value argument for the immorality of abortion should be rejected because it has implausible implications. He argues that it also should be rejected because fetuses with a gestational age of less than twenty weeks lack a necessary condition for having a right to life. The purpose of this note is to show that both of Korcz's objections to the future-of-value argument are flawed. [Abstract from author]. Includes multiple references to Holmes.

6796. Marshall, Tyler. "Invasion Of 'Tintin' Europe's Beloved Comic Figure Coming to U.S. TV; [Late Sports Final Edition]." Chicago Sun-Times, Dec 26, 1994: 19.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Instead, think Tintin. One of Europe's oldest comic strips, "Tintin" chronicles the adventures of a fresh-scrubbed teenage newspaper reporter (and his faithful canine, Snowy) who confronts an array of villains ranging from hard-line Stalinists to Chicago mobsters.; An animated television series of Tintin's adventures, which began on Home Box Office in 1991, boosted American sales of Tintin books. And his premiere this fall at 1:30 p.m. weekdays on the Nickelodeon cable channel has nearly quadrupled the potential audience from 16 million to 60 million households, said Louise Desjardins, the American agent for Tintin's Belgian publisher, Casterman.; There is also a deceptive, understated quality to the Tintin stories. While Tintin may look like he belongs on a level with Archie, his adventures contain elements more evocative of Sherlock Holmes, Mark Twain, Jules Verne, Alfred Hitchcock and Don Quixote.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6797. Martella, Gianna M. "Adapting the Classics in Spanish America: The Early Years." Journal of American & Comparative Cultures 24, no. 3/4 (2001): 123-126.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Criticizes the detective stories "El Embrollo del Reloj," by María Elvira Bermúdez and "La Pesquisa de Don Frutos" by Velmiro Ayala Gauna. Description of the main characters of the stories; Classical elements presented in "La Pesquisa de Don Frutos"; Ways to effectively communicate detective stories to Spanish America. Contains multiple references to Holmes.

6798. Martin, Andrew. "Living alone in a flat in the north has long led to twitching lace curtains." New Statesman 132, no. 4623 (2003): 58.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Offers observations on living in an apartment in England. Social stigma of living in an apartment in Northern England towns such as Leeds or Manchester; Popularity of apartments in these areas; Advantages of apartment living. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Take Sherlock Holmes. Growing up in Yorkshire and reading the Holmes stories, I used to imagine his arch-enemy Moriarty taking comfort from the thought: 'Well, if he really is the greatest consulting detective in the world, how come he can only afford to live in a flat?' Admittedly, it was always referred to as 'rooms', which sounds better...."

6799. Martzke, Rudy. "NBC ratings get lift with AFC bonanza." USA Today, Dec 16, 1994: 03C.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes reference to Holmes. TNT's NBA ratings, minus top stars, are down 20% to 1.6. TBS Thursday games are at 1.7. Says TBS' Dick Versace: "You don't have to be Sherlock Holmes to figure Phoenix in the NBA Finals, possibly against Orlando."

6800. Masip, Jaume, Siegfried L. Sporer, Eugenio Garrido, and Carmen Herrero. "The detection of deception with the reality monitoring approach: a review of the empirical evidence." Psychology, Crime & Law 11, no. 1 (2005): 99-122.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // One of the verbal approaches to the detection of deceit is based on research on human memory that tries to identify the characteristics that differentiate between internal and external memories (reality monitoring). This approach has attempted to extrapolate the contributions of reality monitoring (RM) research to the deception area. In this paper, we have attempted to review all available studies conducted in several countries in order to yield some general conclusions concerning the discriminative power of this approach. Regarding individual criteria, the empirical results are not very encouraging: few criteria discriminate significantly across studies, and there are several variables that moderate their effect. Some of the contradictory findings may have emerged because of differences in the operationalizations and procedures used across individual studies. However, more promising results have been reported in recent studies, and the approach as a whole appears to discriminate above chance level, reaching accuracy rates that are similar to those of criteria-based content analysis (CBCA). Some suggestions for future research are made. [Abstract from author] References at end of article include one mentioning Holmes: Hernandez-Fernaund, E. and Alonso-Quecuty, M. L. (1997b). The cognitive interview and lie detection: a new magnifying glass for Sherlock Holmes? Applied Cognitive Psychology, 11, 55-68.

6801. Mather, Mort. "Walking the rows." Mother Earth News, no. (1997): 7p.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the author's experiences in taking care her vegetable garden. Insects and animals that destroys the author's garden; Different kinds of technique used by the author to prevent this insects and animals that are destroying her garden; How to identify animal footprints in the garden; Nutritional problems encountered by the author in her garden; Symptoms of plants which have some nutritional problems; More information. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...However, with a lot of thinking and some reading and some more thinking I think I have a solution. My guiding premise is always 'healthy plants in a healthy soil don't attract insects or diseases.' Whatever it is that is cutting back my harvest so severely, its cause must be a soil imbalance. But why is there only one crop that has a problem, Sherlock Holmes? You see my

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

dear Watson, I rely on natural fertilizers in my soil which are largely insoluble....But, Holmes, you never have any problems with peas and they grow even earlier in the spring. Don't they need nitrogen? Ah yes, but peas are legumes and have the ability to fix nitrogen from the air...."

6802. Mathews, Jack. "A Powerful Story Becomes Cheap Mystery in 'Beloved'." The Salt Lake Tribune (Salt Lake City, UT), December 30, 1994: Z2.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // After his death in 1827, at the age of 56, three letters were found among the effects of composer Ludwig van Beethoven, addressed but never mailed to a woman identified only as "Immortal Beloved." For 167 years, the woman's identity has remained a mystery to historians and biographers, but it couldn't elude the deductive powers of writer-director Bernard Rose. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...But in choosing to tell the story in the style of a cheap whodunit, teasing us with clues and red herrings, and setting up the revelation as if it were the last act of a Sherlock Holmes tale, Rose defused the real power of his story...."

6803. Matthews, David. "It all comes out in the wash." Roads & Bridges 42, no. 11 (2004): 8-8.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents updates on traffic-related events as of November 2004. Includes a reference to Holmes. "A former soccer player from Britain has set out to raise money for a leukemia charity by riding his bike across Australia this month. But this isn't just any bike. Lloyd Scott is riding a Victorian-era 'penny-farthing' bike, the kind with a giant front wheel and a tiny rear wheel. And just to complete the image, Scott is making the journey dressed as Sherlock Holmes, complete with a fake mustache, deerstalker hat and a tweed coat...."

6804. Matty, Jane M. "Soil." Rocks & Minerals 72, no. 2 (1997): 92.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses aspects of soil as a fundamental part of the global ecosystem. Formation; Fertility; Characteristics. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The uniqueness of individual soils can be put to practical use. For example, forensic scientists can analyze soil samples to determine where a crime was committed; from the fictional character Sherlock Holmes to the modern FBI, people have often used soil as a clue to help solve crimes...."

6805. Mawdsley, Ralph D., and J. J. Cumming. "Plagiarism litigation trends in the USA and Australia." Education & the Law 20, no. 3 (2008): 209-234.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- M3: Article // In this article we explore the increasing complexity of plagiarism litigation in the USA and Australia. Includes a passing reference to Holmes in footnote 100. The note reads: "The distinction between original and non-original author contributions is recognised in the Copyright Act and in court decisions. See 17 U.S.C. section 103(b) and Musto v Meyer, 434 F.Supp. 32, aff'd mem., 598 F.2d 609 (2d Cir. 1979), holding that copying of an 'idea' as opposed to 'the expression of an idea' as to Sherlock Holmes' cocaine addiction was not protected."

6806. Maxwell, Estelle. "Sherlock and Alice on the trail of a moral." Times Educational Supplement, no. (1994): 6.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on Leicestershire schools' consideration of school Christmas programs as just end-of-term productions. Staging of nativity and modern plays; Schools' holding of pantomimes or variations of fairy tales; Celebration of non-Christian festivals. Unknown reference besides title.

6807. Maxwell, Jill Hecht. "Of Resumes and Rap Sheets." Inc. 22, no. 9 (2000): 27.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Offers advice on hiring a technology expert who falsified information about their previous employment. Warning on hiring an outsider to do background checks. Passing reference to Holmes. "...Laborchex, which took its service online a year ago, now plays Sherlock Holmes for 1,000 clients. For an average cost of $70 a candidate, Laborchex staffers poll the applicant's past employers and gather driving and criminal records, credit reports, and other publicly available information...."

6808. May, Charles E. "Impact Parameter: and Other Quantum Realities." Magill Book Reviews, no. (2002).

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Sixteen stories by a working scientist and an award-winning science fiction writer. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Yes, there are scientific puzzles here, such as 'Into the Blue Abyss,' based on the premise that the planet Uranus lacks a solid core and is made up solely of water. And there is the predictable exploration of the paradox of the black hole in 'Approaching Perimelasma.' Moreover, 'The Singular Habits of Wasps' is still another needless homage to Sherlock Holmes, and 'What We Really Do Here at NASA' is an easy inside comic view of the space agency...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6809. May, Radmila. "Murder most Oxford." Contemporary Review 277, no. 1617 (2000): 232.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines why Oxford, England becomes the setting for several fictitious detective and mystery stories. Characteristics of various categories of Oxford writing; Depiction of Oxford in the novel 'Gaudy Night,' by Dorothy Sayers; Reasons behind the mystique of Oxford; Faults of the Oxford tradition in 'Skeleton at the Feast,' by Patricia Hall. Includes references to Holmes. "...Sayer's Gaudy Night was not the first crime novel to be set in Oxford; there were several predecessors as well as two Sherlock Holmes short stories....These early titles also have a tendency to a rather contrived literariness: Fen, when on the track of a murderer, takes on the mannerisms of Sherlock Holmes..."

6810. Mayfield, Geoff. "Between the bullets." Billboard 110, no. 16 (1998): 84.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses news items of interest to the music industry as of April 18, 1998. Soundtrack of the motion picture 'Titanic,'; Albums of the Backstreet Boys and Tha Dogg Pound; Popularity of the film 'Grease,' soundtrack. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Although year-to-date album sales are up handsomely over those of '97, you might have noticed that last issue's Market Watch showed that week was down compared with the same week of the prior year. That's because the comparable '97 week included the traffic of that ever-roving Easter weekend. You won't need Sherlock Holmes to figure out that with Easter falling on April 12, which will close next issue's tracking week, the ticker should race ahead handsomely...."

6811. Mayor, Tracy. "The Asperger's Guessing Game." Computerworld 42, no. 19 (2008): 24-24.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reports that there is a good chance an individual may be working with someone who have Asperger's Syndrome (AS) because it is allegedly found everywhere in the information technology industry. Includes a passing reference to Holmes (as one who had AS).

6812. McCall, Suzanne. "The 'specialness' of counselling." CPI: Counselling & Psychotherapy Journal 16, no. 3 (2005): 25-26.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...I am reminded of a story I heard on the radio recently: Sherlock Holmes and Watson are lying on their backs on the grass in the middle of a field late at night looking up at the night sky. Holmes turns to Watson and says 'Watson, please tell me what it is that you deduce from the scene before us'. Watson thinks for a while and then reports to Holmes that he deduces that there is a strong wind blowing from the west and it would be prudent to expect rain within the next seven hours and 10 minutes. Holmes draws on his pipe and listens to his colleague and he too stares up at the night sky. Watson turns to Sherlock and asks 'My dear Holmes, what is it that you deduce?' Holmes replies, 'I deduce, dear Watson, that someone has nicked our tent.'..."

6813. McCann, Andrew. "Marcus Clarke and the society of the spectacle: Reflections on writing and commodity capitalism." Australian Literary Studies 17, no. 3 (1996): 222.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the author's reflections about the writing of Marcus Clarke about commodity capitalism in Melbourne, Victoria in the 19th century, in 'His Natural Life.' Criticism on public taste; Elucidation on the relationship between sensationalism and the public fate of criminals; Literary production in the 19th century according to Clarke. "Works cited" includes a reference to Holmes: Langbauer, Laurie. 'The City, The Everyday, and Boredom: The Case of Sherlock Holmes.' Differences 5.3 (Fall 1993): 80-120.

6814. McCauley, Martin. "Comrades: A World History of Communism/Young Stalin: Simon Sebag Montefiore." History Today 57, no. 8 (2007): 63-64.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the books "Comrades: A World History of Communism," by Robert Service and "Young Stalin," by Simon Sebag Montefiore. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Marx and Engels were an odd couple. Marx avoided continuous paid employment like the plague and Engels was a successful mill-owner. As a capitalist, he exploited his own workers. Engels trotted after Marx and played Dr Watson to his Sherlock Holmes...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6815. McConnell, Frank. "It's time to take sides." Commonweal 122, no. 16 (1995): 23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents Frank McConnell's defense of his views on the conflict between art and morality and responds to John Hagen's accusations. Views on non-existent conflict between art and religion; McConnell's expression of disgust over the moralistic message of 'Natural Born Killers'; Message of McConnell to Hagen. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...In his story 'The Secret of Father Brown,' Chesterton tells us his little priest can solve crimes just because, in his own imagination, he too can envision the most monstrous evil. The politically correct Sherlock Holmes--and Hagen--want to ignore all the devils and thereby cleanse the world. Brown wants to understand them and thereby--it's not too strong a word--redeem the world...."
6816. McCormick, Erin. "Finding bomber tedious Psychiatrists develop profile." Cincinnati Post (Ohio), Dec 15, 1994: 8A.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Investigators who specialize in profiling criminals blend psychology, intuition and a Sherlock Holmes-like knack for deduction to paint a picture of exactly who their suspect might be...."
6817. ———. "Mad Bomber' case set precedent now used to hunt other criminals; [FINAL Edition]." Austin American Statesman (Austin, TX), December 25, 1994: D11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Investigators who specialize in profiling criminals blend psychology, intuition and a Sherlock Holmes-like knack for deduction to paint a picture of exactly who their suspect might be...."
6818. ———. "Profiling of Unabomber stems from explosive case of '40s, '50s." The San Diego Union - Tribune 1994.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Investigators who specialize in profiling criminals blend psychology, intuition and a Sherlock Holmes-like knack for deduction to paint a picture of exactly who their suspect might be...."
6819. McCormick, Patrick. "The really scary thing about thrillers." U.S. Catholic 59, no. 8 (1994): 46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses how seriously the viewers take the simplistic plots of good versus evil in motion pictures. Examples of thriller movies; Thriller's allusion to roller coaster rides; Profile of villains; Effect of thrillers to the community; Violent solutions for simplistic problems; Clarity of a deadly enemy. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Like Sherlock Holmes' Professor Moriarity, thriller villains are the masterminds behind every nefarious deed, their tentacles at the root of all human evil. And how wonderful it is for a few hours to strip evil and suffering of all its mystery and complexity and reduce it to one perfectly malevolent fiend suitable for removal...."
6820. McCrory, P. "Elementary, my dear Watson." British Journal of Sports Medicine 40, no. 4 (2006): 283-284.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article examines the similarities between a clinician and a detective. Sherlock Holmes indicated that the qualities of observation, deduction and knowledge make the ideal detective. These three qualities are also essential for a physician in making a diagnosis. The fourth required quality for a clinician is a combination of knowledge, initiative, lateral thinking and a kind of stubbornness.
6821. McDermott, Philip. "Reflections On James Joyce: Stuart Gilbert's Paris Journal." Magill Book Reviews, no. (1994).
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This sketchy journal by one of Joyce's most famous literary associates contains unflattering portraits of both men. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Stuart Gilbert is often associated with Joyce the way Dr. Watson is with Sherlock Holmes, a loyal friend always ready to assist the master, but fatuous and decidedly slow on the uptake...."
6822. McDevitt, Krista. "Treating the Whole Being." Dance Spirit 9, no. 1 (2005): 90-139.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article presents information on homeopathy. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Your first visit to a homeopath is more like a visit to a psychologist than a doctor. 'There is a lot of talking in the first session,' says Bohle. 'Homeopaths have a 'Sherlock Holmes' tendency [as] they try to get to

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

the root of your physical problem through your emotional side as well...."

6823. McDonald, Sheri, and Sally Rasch. "Young Whodunits." Book Links 13, no. 5 (2004): 39-40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the mysteries of picture book. Characterization of picture books; Advantage of picture books for students; Characters included in picture books. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Perry Mason, Sherlock Holmes, the Loch Ness monster, the Bermuda Triangle--these detectives and unsolved mysteries have captured the imagination of readers of all ages...."
6824. McDougall, Bruce. "Postal Puzzles." Canadian Geographic 120, no. 7 (2000): 30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the letters received by Canada Post every day. Examples of geographical puzzles of addresses received by the postal service. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "The mail must go through, and in most cases, it does, even when letter carriers have to apply the sleuthing skills of Sherlock Holmes to figure out where to take it...."
6825. McDowell, Jeanne, Elizabeth Coady, Sarah Sturmon Dale, and Deirdre van Dyk. "Book Smarts." Time 160, no. 20 (2002): 80.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the popularity of bookmaking as a craft. Use of paper-making and bookbinding techniques; Success of bookmaking as art therapy; Trends in altered books, volumes that have been redesigned as art pieces. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...While bookmaking has been around for centuries, the dazzling variety of books that are now being produced don't look anything like the latest Stephen King sitting on your bookshelf. They are unconventional works that straddle the line between books and art. They come in all shapes and sizes. Some are traditionally bound, while others are scrolls wrapped with string or leather twine. One-of-a-kind works totally redefine the concept of what a book is. Chicago bookmaker Miriam Centeno's whimsical creation is in the shape of 'a little old lady's' pocketbook that, when completed, will store 10 miniature volumes. A paper key holder contains a story on Sherlock Holmes..."
6826. McFadden, Phil. "Broadband Biodetection: Holmes on a Chip." Science 297, no. 5589 (2002): 2075.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the use of biological elements in biosensors and cytosensors to detect molecular clues. Emergence of proteins and nucleic acid sequences from the characterization of organismal genomes and proteomes; Functions of cell-based detection system; Challenges of providing the living cells for cytosensors. Article opens with a quotation featuring Holmes from A Study in Scarlet. "Sherlock Holmes never knew where the next clue might lie, so he kept his sensory channels wide open: 'As he spoke, [Holmes] whipped a tape measure and a large round magnifying glass from his pocket. With these two implements he trotted noiselessly about the room...As I watched him I was irresistibly reminded of a pure-blooded, well-trained foxhound as it dashes backwards and forwards...until it comes across the lost scent.'..."
6827. McGarvey, Joe. "Can Cisco overcome its own success?" Inter@ctive Week 5, no. 7 (1998): 26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Looks at the views of the author as they relate to the financial performance of Cisco Systems Incorporated. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Uncovering a chink in the armor of Cisco Systems Inc. could require the collective observational forces of Sam Spade, Sherlock Holmes and Kenneth Starr -- just in case the secret vulnerability turns out to be of a nontechnical variety...."
6828. McGee, Vann. "To tell the truth about conditionals." Analysis 60, no. 1 (2000): 107.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines the reliability of conditionals in logic. Use of the Bayesian theory of belief in the probabilistic analysis of conditionals; Factors considered in asserting an indicative conditional; Characterization of truth and falsity in the television game show 'To Tell the Truth'; Variables affecting the reliability of conditionals. Multiple references to Holmes that begins with this: "Let me tell you about a particular episode of To Tell the Truth in which the celebrity guest was none other than the illustrious detective Sherlock Holmes...."
6829. McGinn, Colin. "Precis of Logical Properties: Identity, Existence, Prediction, Necessity, Truth." Philosophical Studies 118, no. 3 (2004): 407-411.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents a brief description of the book "Logical Properties," by Clon McGinn. Logical Properties is a short intense book about large abstract questions. It deals with highly general

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

concepts--identity, existence, predication, necessity, and truth--from a linguistic, logical and ontological point of view. The style of the book is intentionally blunt and bold, and tries to mirror the intoxicating aridities of its subject-matter. Existence, likewise, has the look of a highly general property of objects--certainly of all existing objects. It is a unitary property that holds of objects of many different categories--physical, mental, abstract; it does not vary its nature according to the metaphysical type of the object that has it. Includes passing references to Holmes (p. 409). "...For a property or predicate to be instantiated in such a way that the appropriate object can be said to exist we have to assume that the instantiation relation can only relate existent objects; we cannot allow, for example, that Sherlock Holmes instantiates the property of being an opium-smoking detective....What mainly moves me is the thought that there cannot be any definite individuated thing that fails to exist unless thought has conferred identity on that thing -- for what else could confer identity on a non-existent thing? Sherlock Holmes had no identity before he was invented by Conan Doyle, so it makes no sense to suppose that there was a definite fact of his non-existence before he was created. Nonexistence requires individuation, and individuation must come from the mind if it cannot come from the world. But these matters are, I concede, very obscure...."

6830. McGinn, Daniel. "A Shattered Family." Newsweek 147, no. 8 (2006): 44-44.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article focuses on Neil Entwistle, the Hopkinton, Massachusetts resident who is the main suspect in the investigation into the murder of his wife Rachel and their baby daughter, Lillian. Police discovered a gun owned by Rachel's stepfather with Rachel's DNA on the muzzle and Neil's on the handle. Neil Entwistle will be extradited back to the United States from his native London to face charges. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...It's a lesson taught at every police academy (and by common sense): if someone flees a crime scene, there's reason to be suspicious. And if the person hops a flight to London, leaving behind his murdered wife and daughter, and skipping their funeral, the case shouldn't require Sherlock Holmes...."

6831. McGrath, Charles. "And They All Died Happily Ever After." New York Times, July 2, 2006: 12.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article focuses on famous characters in literature which were killed by their creators including Sherlock Holmes and Harry Potter.

6832. McGrath, Peter. "You Are a Data Subject." Newsweek 134, no. 24 (1999): 80.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Describes the dispute between the United States and the European Union (EU) over the privacy of personal dossiers in computerized and network databases. Effects of the disagreement on data transfers and international commerce; Control by EU citizens of their medical records, credit rating and purchase histories, and the EU's refusal to send this information to the US without similar privacy protection; 'Safe-harbor' principles counter-proposed by the US. Accompanying photograph caption includes a reference to Holmes. "Photo (Black & White): Cause for Alarm: Would Sherlock Holmes be allowed to look at dossiers today?"

6833. McGraw, Dan X. "68-year-old man found beaten inside Plano home." The Dallas Morning News, January 29, 2009.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Detectives are investigating the death of a 68-year-old man who was found beaten inside his Plano home this morning, Plano police said Sherlock Holmes was found by a friend about 12:45 a.m. inside his home in the 1100 block of Avenue I, said Plano police spokesman Rick McDonald. Police were interviewing neighbors and friends to determine a motive, McDonald said. Holmes, a longtime resident of Plano, was a member of the city's Douglass Community Center."

6834. McKay, Alastair. "Pure Textual Intercourse." The Scotsman, February 19, 2005: 18.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Passing reference to Holmes. "In his most famous work, the Great Bear, Simon Patterson turns the stations of the London Tube map into stops in the memory of popular culture....There is something quite refreshing about this juxtaposition of order and randomness, and it happens frequently when Patterson talks about his work. A discussion of the Tube map can lead to a digression about the drug habits of Sherlock Holmes, false memory, and the merits of Star Trek. The connection between these things is the writer Nicholas Meyer, who bought The Great Bear, and wrote the screenplay for the 1976 film, The Seven Per Cent Solution, in which Sherlock Holmes travelled to Vienna to consult Freud about his cocaine habit...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6835. McKee, Sally. "Hard-to-find items are available for hard-to-please gift recipients." Journal Star (Peoria, IL), Dec 1, 1994: E3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Other theme-related gift topics include nautical, English, tea, Alice in Wonderland, Peter Rabbit, needlepoint, fishing, Noah's Ark, licorice, cocoa, Monet, Sherlock Holmes, gardening, bridge, books, mystery lovers, Hanukkah, Winnie the Pooh, Peoria, angels and feet. Yes, feet...."
6836. McKenna, M. A. J. "Nation's computer hacks bow to Hub god." Boston Herald, Nov. 30, 1994: 001.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // [Kibo] - [James Parry]'s nickname, dreamed up over Chinese food one night in college - is the object and the chief promoter of Kibology, the first net-based religion. Kibology - the tongue-in-cheek worship of anything to do with Kibo, including his hat size and his favorite science fiction - is the most-discussed single religion on the net. (It passed Christianity and Islam last summer and is gaining rapidly on new age.); Kibology could only exist on the Internet; it's a cross between guerrilla theater and a college prank, perpetrated and supported by hundreds of people at once. Among its phenomena, discussed endlessly in the Usenet newsgroup alt.religion.kibology: the behavior of Spot, Kibo's faithful but mythical cyberdog; the relationship of Deep Space Nine scripts to the rules of international Test-match cricket; and the possible intestinal noises made by space aliens.; "Kibo is the first net celebrity," said Phil Paxton, development editor for Sams Publishing Inc. "There are a large number of people who were well-known in the tech community before the Internet became popular - but Kibo is the first one to become famous purely as a presence on the Net." Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Sometimes I feel a bit like Sherlock Holmes in finding little clues around about his nature," said a Kibo acolyte known online as 'Paz.' 'I suppose I could ask, but that would take the fun out of sleuthing, and the questions would probably be impertinent anyway.'..."
6837. McLemee, Scott. "Holy war in the shadowlands." The Chronicle of Higher Education 47, no. 45 (2001): A12-16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Scholar Kathryn Ann Lindscoog has written a new book that revives old allegations and the battle for the intellectual legacy of writer C. S. Lewis (1898-1963). In Sleuthing C. S. Lewis: More Light in the Shadowlands, Lindscoog has argued that several literary and theological works attributed to Lewis are the product of systematic forgery. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Sherlock Holmes determined that the source of most wrongdoing in the world was the sinister Professor Moriarty. And Ms. Lindscoog has found her nemesis in Walter Hooper, who bears the formal title of literary adviser to the estate of C.S. Lewis...."
6838. Medintz, Scott. "The big fix." Money 31, no. 13 (2002): 34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Looks at examples of men who stood at the nexus of law enforcement and accounting. The recommendation for former Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) director William Webster to head up an accounting oversight board; The accountant responsible for the arrest of Al Capone; The contracting of the accounting firm Arthur Andersen to review the record-keeping of the FBI. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Many wondered why, if not to hobble reform, a guy with little accounting experience would be tapped for the job. A look back in time, however, reveals that Webster is but the latest in a line of men to stand at the nexus of law enforcement and accounting. 1890s: While investigating 'The Greek Interpreter,' super-sleuth Sherlock Holmes reveals that his seldom-mentioned elder brother Mycroft, who is said to possess even greater deductive skills than Sherlock himself, 'audits the books in some of the government departments.'..." Also includes a color photograph of Basil Rathbone as Holmes.
6839. Melymuka, Kathleen. "Follow The Money." Computerworld 37, no. 9 (2003): 35.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Deals with the factors to consider in assessing the financial performance of information technology vendors. Investigation of corporate culture and transactions; Performance of executive teams; Assessment of market position; Ability to assume financial risk. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...It Doesn't Take Sherlock Holmes. Much of the intelligence you need about a prospective vendor partner may be just a click away. To see how much information we could get on a prospective vendor just from its own Web site, we picked Symantec Corp. in Cupertino, Calif., at random. This is what we found..."
6840. Menashe, Doron. "Is judicial proof of facts a form of scientific explanation? A preliminary investigation of

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- clinical legal method." International Journal of Evidence & Proof 12, no. 1 (2008): 32-52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article examines the relationship between judicial proof of facts and positivistic explanation in the natural and social sciences. Although these two forms of factual inquiry share evident similarities, it is argued that, on closer analysis, legal fact-finding is not even a proximate model of scientific explanation. Judicial proof more closely resembles clinical deliberations, such as those encountered in a medical context, than classical scientific method. Comparison with clinical practices should therefore promote understanding and serve as a basis for further research, critical appraisal and practical improvement of the processes of judicial proof. [Abstract from author] Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...To paraphrase Oliver Wendell Holmes' famous dictum, the life of judicial proof of facts is a matter of both logic and experience. And as another Holmes (Sherlock) astutely remarked, 'Most people, if you describe a train of events to them, will tell you what the result would be. They can put those events together in their minds, and argue from them that something will come to pass. There are few people, however, who, if you told them a result, would be able to evolve from their own inner consciousness what the steps were which led up to that result.'..."
6841. Menendez, D., A. Inga, J. J. Jordan, and M. A. Resnick. "Changing the p53 master regulatory network: ELEMENTary, my dear Mr Watson." Oncogene 26, no. 15 (2007): 2191-2201.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The p53 master regulatory network provides for the stress-responsive direct control of a vast number of genes in humans that can be grouped into several biological categories including cell-cycle control, apoptosis and DNA repair. Similar to other sequence-specific master regulators, there is a matrix of key components, which provide for variation within the p53 master regulatory network that include p53 itself, target response element sequences (REs) that provide for p53 regulation of target genes, chromatin, accessory proteins and transcription machinery. Changes in any of these can impact the expression of individual genes, groups of genes and the eventual biological responses. The many REs represent the core of the master regulatory network. Since defects or altered expression of p53 are associated with over 50% of all cancers and greater than 90% of p53 mutations are in the sequence-specific DNA-binding domain, it is important to understand the relationship between wild-type or mutant p53 proteins and the target response elements. In the words of the legendary detective Sherlock Holmes, it is 'Elementary, my dear Mr. Watson. Beyond title and quote in abstract, no other known references to Holmes.
6842. Meyer, Karl E. "An Edwardian Warning." World Policy Journal 17, no. 4 (2000): 47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Explores the decline of the British Empire. Death of Queen Victoria; Foreboding of writer Rudyard Kipling on the decline of the British Empire; Engineering achievements of the empire; Navy of the empire; How the empire influenced the world; Role of the Jameson Raid in 1896 in the empire's decline. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Too, having immortalized Sherlock Holmes and Baker Street, having invented the spy thriller, and the horror story (Frankenstein and Dracula), British writers dominated whole genres of popular books devoured by ordinary readers abroad...."
6843. Meyer, Noel. "Maintaining your septic tank; First thing to do is find out where tank and drainage field are located." The Gazette (Montreal), December 1, 1994: E8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...It might be necessary to contact the previous owner to find out the location of the septic tank and field. If this proves to be impossible, you will have to turn into a Sherlock Holmes of the local plumbing industry, until you find someone who has worked on the system and knows where it is located...."
6844. Meyerowitz, Steve. "Simple strategies to soothe your stomach." Better Nutrition 62, no. 7 (2000): 60.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Offers suggestions on how to treat inflammatory bowel disease. Symptoms; Characteristics of leaky gut syndrome; Herbal remedies to increase friendly lactic acid bacteria; Increase of fiber in the diet; Risk factors. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...You have to be Sherlock Holmes to find the sugar in foods these days, so read your ingredients carefully; even rice crackers can contain brown rice syrup...."
6845. Mifflin, Lawrie. "Beyond Sesame Street." Good Housekeeping 228, no. 1 (1999): 57.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features television shows for children. Includes 'Wishbone' from PBS and a

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- reference to Holmes. "...Awards keep piling up for this show, in which an adorable Jack Russell terrier is dressed in costumes and performs scenes from classic plays and books, ranging from Shakespeare to Sherlock Holmes...."
6846. Mignucci, Mario. "Aristotle on the Existential Import of Propositions." Phronesis 52, no. 2 (2007): 121-138.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Suppose then that, in Aristotle's view, the distinction between universal and singular terms can be drawn only with reference to τὰ ὄντα, things which exist. It is immediately clear that terms such as 'τραγέλαφος' or 'centaur' cannot properly be qualified as universal and taken as different from 'Chiron' or 'Sherlock Holmes', since there is no way to consider the latter as names for individuals...."
6847. Miles, Andrew. "Science: a limited source of knowledge and authority in the care of patients." Journal of evaluation in clinical practice 13, no. 4 (2007): 545-563.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents views and insights of the author concerning a limited source of knowledge and authority in the care of patients. The author considers Medicine's character as a practice, which she sees as neglected by the preferential and disproportionate study of the science-art duality. Many medical educators insist that a belief that Medicine is a science is essential to proper medical education. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...It is at this point that we move on to Chapter Nine of Montgomery's text. Opening this particular chapter in her volume, Montgomery asks: 'If a kind of visual defect obscures not only Medicine's knowledge of the nature of its knowing, but also an awareness of that lack, how is clinical judgement evaluated?' Her own answer to this question is rather simple. 'If medicine were only a science, physicians could establish their clinical competence by answering test questions correctly. But because it is a practice, its evaluation is a much more complicated exercise.' She recounts how she stumbled upon this realization by chance when she invited second year medical students in her 'Sherlock Holmes and Clinical Judgement' seminar, to attend a hospital case conference in internal medicine, so that they could observe residents and attending doctors solving clinical problems..."
6848. Milius, Susan. "The Wood Detective. (Cover story)." Science news 162, no. 11 (2002): 184.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Characterizes Alex Wiedenhoeft, a wood anatomist. Wood and its scientific past; Wood identification in a Texas crime lab; Commercial outrage over wood types. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Optics may have changed somewhat since Sherlock Holmes' day, but Wiedenhoeft still takes his first look at a problem with a handheld magnifying glass...."
6849. Millar, Peter. "The wall starts to crumble;Ireland." The Times (London), December 11, 1994.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Robinson's is a tangible metaphor for the changed identity of Belfast: a Janus-like symbol of the city's two sides, republican and loyalist, back to back. The front bar is solidly Anglo-Irish, all mock-Victoriana complete with life-size figures of Sherlock Holmes and Watson. The back bar, also accessible through a separate door, is known as Fibber McGee's, equally pastiche but from a different kit: a Donegal grocer's kitchen pub, with hanging hams, wellies and fiddle music...."
6850. Miller, Helen Louise. "Football Hero." Plays 61, no. 2 (2001): 16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the drama 'Football Hero.' One of the characters has a line that makes reference to Holmes. "...Marcie (Laughing): No, I guess not. She's a regular Sherlock Holmes when it comes to detecting stolen papers...."
6851. Miller, Leslie. "The recipient, the search, the result." USA Today, December 5, 2001: E02.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Passing reference to Holmes. "...How tough is it to shop for the tough-to- shop-for on the Net? We asked several USA TODAY staffers to take their most difficult cases to the Web, report on the searches -- and, as a reality check, run the ideas by the people for whom they were intended. Here are their stories: The recipient. My dad, a 74-year-old widower who lives in suburban Chicago. He's a retired housewares salesman who enjoys low- key fishing, eating (but not cooking), Sherlock Holmes, being involved in veterans issues, and worrying about everything -- especially his two daughters...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6852. Miller, Peter. "Eliminating the obvious." Electronic Musician 14, no. 10 (1998): 148.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the steps involved in a successful acoustic troubleshooting. Mark of a true detective; Transition from reaction to response; Verification of a hypothesis; Most common question asked by technician trainees. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Imagine you are Sherlock Holmes, and you have just arrived at the scene of a fiendish crime. The crime scene presents a nightmarish jumble of clues. Forming a hypothesis by correlating available facts is the mark of a true detective. Like a detective, the service technician has access to what seems like an unmanageable mountain of information...."
6853. Miller, Peter, and Paul Howard. "Learn the Miller method." Electronic Musician 14, no. 4 (1998): 148.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Introduces Miller Method, a method for repairing synthesizers and other devices commonly used by musicians. Understanding the need of the customer; Degree to put into the level of device capacity; Use of sense and sensibility in repairing. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Next, before taking anything apart, you must do a bench test. The idea here is to get familiar with each repair job. Carefully examine the gear and record all the symptoms that you can. This is sort of like playing Sherlock Holmes: we are seeking clues to solve a mystery...."
6854. Miller, Ron. "DC cops solve data access caper." eWeek 22, no. 31 (2005): P1-P4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article reports that officers at the Metropolitan Police Department (MPD) in Washington D.C. now have full access to critical crime statistics and incident report information. Includes passing references to Holmes. "You don't have to be Sherlock Holmes to deduce that the most important tool in fighting crime is information....In true Sherlock Holmes fashion, it was a simple act of observation that put the department on the right track to solving this dilemma...."
6855. Miller, Robert T. "Darwin in Dover, PA." First Things: A Monthly Journal of Religion & Public Life, no. (2006): 3p.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article focuses on the court decision of the Kitzmiller v. Dover Area School District case in Dover, Pennsylvania. The case arose from the Dover school board's requirement for biology teachers to read to their students a disclaimer on Charles Darwin's evolution theory. Parents filed a case alleging that the board's policy violated their constitutional rights under the establishment clause. Includes references to Holmes. "...We often give explanations for observed phenomena that, while fully justified by the evidence and undoubtedly true, are not couched in lawlike generalizations. In The Hound of the Baskervilles, for example, Sherlock Holmes examines a walking stick and concludes that the owner is a medical doctor, once employed in London but now practicing in the country, under thirty years of age, amiable, unambitious, absent-minded, and the possessor of a favorite dog, larger than a terrier and smaller than a mastiff. Holmes is positing the existence of a certain kind of person to explain observed phenomena (not, as he habitually says, making deductions), but we would not normally call his conclusions science, even when true and convincing. And the reason is that his explanations are not couched in lawlike generalizations....To the extent that philosophers have thought of these arguments as proofs or deductions, they are as mistaken as Sherlock Holmes was about his treatment of the walking stick in The Hound of the Baskervilles...."
6856. Milner, Richard. "Keeping up Down House." Natural History 105, no. 8 (1996): 54.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Describes naturalist Charles Darwin's country estate Down House outside London, England, where he stayed after his voyage aboard the HMS Beagle. Writing the scientific classic 'The Origin of Species'; Description of the estate; Purchase and restoration of the estate. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Soon after settling at Downe, Darwin constructed a sand-covered path, known as the sandwalk, that still winds through the shady woods and then returns toward the house along a sunny, hedge-lined field. He strolled it daily, referring to it as 'my thinking path.' Often he would stack a few stones at the path's entrance, and knock one away with his walking stick on completing each circuit. He could anticipate a 'three-flint problem,' just as Sherlock Holmes had 'three-pipe problems,' and then head for home when all the stones were gone...."
6857. ———. "Mystery of the Red Rose." Natural History 108, no. 4 (1999): 36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines why flowers are beautiful. Statement of fictitious [sic] detective Sherlock Holmes on rose; Investigation on why flowers exist; Great advantage of cross-fertilization.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6858. Mintz, Suzanne. "Caring for the caregiver." The Exceptional Parent 30, no. 8 (2000): 56-57.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Part of a special section on health care for exceptional children. An adaptation of two articles that originally appeared in Paraplegic News is presented. The writer discusses the issue of caring for caregivers and parents of children with disabilities. She outlines the benefits for family caregivers of identifying themselves as caregivers and contends that caregivers need to claim their individual identities and nurture their inner selves. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Who am I? I am the sum of all of my labels--and then some. I am a wife, mother, daughter, Jew, Sherlock Holmes fan, fair-weather jogger. I am a type 'A' personality. I am a writer. And yes! I am a family caregiver, too...."
6859. Mirsky, Steve. "Good Fellows." Scientific American 288, no. 1 (2003): 94.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Truth is stranger than fiction. In October 2002 England's Royal Society of Chemistry granted an honorary fellowship to a fictional character, Sherlock Holmes, for his love of chemistry which he used for the public good. If any fabricated person deserves membership in a real science organization, Sherlock's surely a (gum)shoo-in. But don't other pretend people and assorted chimerical characters also merit fellowships in various real science societies? In the Holmesian spirit, here are a few nominations. American Ornithologists' Union: The Road Runner, for research on the predator-prey relationship, specifically within the context of avian flightlessness. American Institute of Physics: Wile E. Coyote, for his literally groundbreaking studies, performed in collaboration with the Road Runner, on falling objects and rapid deceleration. American Society of Transplant Surgeons: Dr. Victor Frankenstein, for his innovative research on the art and science of multiple organ, limb, bone--well, pretty much everything--transplantation. Academy of Criminal Justice Sciences: Jean Valjean, for his long-term study of recidivism and techniques involved in successful rehabilitation of convicted felons. American Society for Adolescent Psychiatry: Holden Caulfield, for his studies of the American postwar adolescent experience. Society for Endocrinology: Paul Bunyan, for actualizing his personal experience, despite an obvious and potentially debilitating endocrine disorder. (Note: The Sierra Club may protest this citation.) American Association of Amateur Astronomers: Popeye, for the countless new stars and other celestial objects he discovered--thanks to his spinach-enhanced punches--orbiting Bluto's head. American Podiatric Medical Association: Achilles, for his elucidation of the vital importance of foot health care.
6860. ———. "Six-Legged Cinema." Scientific American 291, no. 4 (2004): 114-114.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the article "Insects in Movies," found in the "Encyclopedia of Insects," written by May R. Berenbaum and Richard J. Leskosky. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...No less a polymath than Sherlock Holmes seemingly can't count. He incorrectly refers to a spider as an insect in 1944's Sherlock Holmes and the Spider Woman, which is about as elementary an entomological error as you can make...."
6861. ———. "Turning weather wonks into TV stars." Technology Review (1899) 99, no. 8 (1996): 41.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on a course at University Park, Pennsylvania-based Penn State University aimed at training senior meteorology majors how to be television performers. Need to express complex ideas without the jargon available when speaking within the tribe; Task of speaking at a level viewers comprehend. INSET: Getting them into the tent. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The other students get their chance. Many try to liven up their on-air moment by opening with a comment about the day's dense fog. 'It's like pea soup,' one student offers in a misguided attempt to be daring. 'Looks like a bowl of New England clam chowder,' tries another. 'Leave a trail of Cheerios to find your way home,' quips a third. 'Looks like something out of a Sherlock Holmes novel out there,' another student tries repeatedly, but keeps saying 'Sherlocks.'..."
6862. Mitchell, Charles Dee. "Not so Retiring." Publishers Weekly 255, no. 36 (2008): 10-11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An interview with Richard Fisher, an independent sales representative for remainder books and Joe Fortin, sales director of Book Sales, is presented. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Book Sales' core business of promotional publishing has been much more stable. 'When I entered the business, we were doing The Complete Sherlock Holmes, The Complete Tales and Poems of Edgar Allan Poe and a lot of art instruction books. Those books remain in print.' When necessary, they change with the times...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6863. ———. "Promotional Publishing." Publishers Weekly 254, no. 36 (2007): S10-S12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article talks about promotional publishing in the bargain book business. Just how available the range of bargain titles remains to smaller retailers is an underlying issue in the promotional market. The Texas Bookman has a list dominated by remainders, but for more than 10 years has mixed in a range of promotional books done as coproductions with publishers in the U.S., Great Britain and India. Daedalus Books in Columbia, Maryland, has entered into promotional reprinting in a joint venture with George Braziller. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Book Sales, which has been in operation since 1964, offers a wide range of remainder titles mixed with packages and reprints. Certain titles, like The Treasured Writings of Kahlil Gibran and the Strand edition of Sherlock Holmes, have been with them almost since the beginning...."
6864. Moller, Hans Henrik. "Peter Hoeg or the sense of writing." Scandinavian Studies 69, no. 1 (1997): 29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on how pastiche binds Peter Hoeg writing to the literary past. Definition of pastiche; Authors who Hoeg's stories and books are replete of; Hoeg's ability to create fictional reality; What the oeuvre consists of; Availability of Hoeg's books in various languages; What Hoeg's compilations of facts and details qualify him for. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Although Smilla knows all the Inuit terms for snow, just as Sherlock Holmes knew ninety-seven scents of perfume, and her capability to act makes her an androgynous mixture of Hamlet and Modesty Blaise (Jansson 139), she never quite succeeds in finding the murderer, in combining all the threads into a single pattern and thereby providing a sense of closure...."
6865. Monaghan, Peter. "The Case of the Mysterious Coronetist." Chronicle of Higher Education 49, no. 41 (2003): A40.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the research done as of June 2003, by percussionist and music professor Gary Westbrook and colleague jazz trombonist and music professor Tom Smith, to identify uncredited or miscredited jazz performers in U.S. jazz history. Utilization of modern sound-analysis software; Procedure for a technical diagnosis; Objections against the work done by Westbrook and Smith. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Once a technical diagnosis is complete, Mr. Smith sets to work to try to substantiate the findings with biographical research. 'All the mystery recordings have a story that's so fascinating,' says the music historian, by telephone. Among early-jazz fans, he says, fact is often a matter of 'the agreed-upon lie.' His investigations are attempts to set the records straight. He is gathering them into a book he plans to call The Jazz Detectives, a sobriquet that colleagues have come to attach to him and Mr. Westbrook. The book will be full of 'Sherlock Holmes-type scenarios,' says Mr. Smith. 'Musician X spits blood in balls, another guy has to fill in -- that sort of thing....'" 6866. Moore, D. "Guide to records." American Record Guide 60, no. 2 (1997): 122.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the music recordings 'Eeyore Has a Birthday,' 'Adventure of Sherlock Holmes' and 'Lady Chatterly's Dream,' by Jon Deak, performed by Mowry Pearson, Betty Hauck, Paul Cohen, Richard Hartshone and Eric Stumacher.
6867. ———. "Guide to records." American Record Guide 58, no. 3 (1995): 194.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on the music recording 'Violin Pieces,' by Tadhe Geisler Wyganowski, recorded by Jonathan Morton, Mikhail Bezverkhny and Olga Bezverkhny. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The first number, Fantasia Polonaise, is an unaccompanied piece that sounds like variations on the tune from the BBC's Sherlock Holmes series with Jeremy Brett...."
6868. Moore, David W. "Guide to records." American Record Guide 60, no. 4 (1997): 97.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Born in 1917 and for many years a professor at Princeton, Edward Cone is best known as a searching and eloquent writer on musical theory and aesthetics. His range is both broad and deep--he's written brilliantly, for example, on such suggestive topics as Stravinsky's subversion of formal conventions, the musical persona a performer adopts to convey a work effectively, and how the harmonic uncertainty of a Brahms intermezzo is paralleled by suspense and revelation in a Sherlock Holmes tale...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6869. Moorer, Talise D. "Catering & dining." New York Amsterdam News, Oct 9, 1997: 26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on the various performers of the music and motion picture industries in the United States, while focusing on the album 'Pieces,' by Pieces of a Dream, and motion picture 'Kiss the Girls' starring Morgan Freeman. Background information on the band and Freeman; Listing of songs and motion pictures from the band and Freeman, respectively. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Bill Cosby first caught our attention when he used his microscope to scope the crimes of television's villains on 'I Spy,' a weekly show. His appeal was to an adult audience who thought him to be Sherlock Holmes of modern day...."
6870. Mordavsky, Amanda. "Reviews." Gothic Studies 6, no. 2 (2004): 252-262.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Stephen Norrington (dir.), The League of Extraordinary Gentlemen. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...In a theatrical twist, Quartermain and the audience learn that the Phantom/M is Dr. Moriarty of Sherlock Holmes fame, reborn under this new identity...."
6871. Moring, Inka. "Detecting the Fictional Problem Solvers in Time and Space: Metaphors Guiding Qualitative Analysis and Interpretation." Qualitative Inquiry 7, no. 3 (2001): 346.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article explores metaphors in qualitative analysis. Scientific paradigms are often embedded in metaphors that guide our research and its results. The purpose is to clarify the mix of positions that are taken by researchers as detectives. Three characters from different genres of detective stories are presented. A conclusion from the study is that a traditional researcher-as-detective metaphor (Sherlock Holmes) tends to bring a postpositivist approach also to qualitative research, although the paradigm is less satisfactory when solving research problems addressed in interpretative social research. An alternative detective metaphor, researcher as profiler, is found to be closer to the ontology, epistemology, and methodology of constructivist research approaches. Finally, the question is raised whether Paul Auster's deconstructed character, Mr. Quinn, might prove to be a fruitful metaphor for postmodern research, placing emphasis on individual action and rejecting theories that place emphasis on the freedom and the ability of individual agents to shape the social world. [Abstract from author] 6872. Morris, Tim. "Returning to the Hardy Boys." Raritan 16, no. 3 (1997): 123.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the exploits of fictional characters Hardy Boys. Evolution of personalities in the third generation; Success in solving mysteries; Eroticism of the Hardy Boys. Includes references to Holmes. "...The Hardy Boys stories draw their fair share from Sherlock Holmes--the disguises, the laboratories, the mysterious settings, the bemused policemen. Yet where the Holmes stories at least represent detection, by having Holmes assert rhetorically that he has followed a train of deductive reasoning in catching a criminal, the Hardy Boys do nothing of the kind...."
6873. Morrow, Lance. "Hard Times at J. Peterman." Time 153, no. 5 (1999): 82.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Editorial. Comments on clothing company J. Peterman, and its bankruptcy filing. The trick of the catalog, as art form and selling tool; The 'Seinfeld' television show's parody of J. Peterman; Peterman's contribution being more to the culture of fantasy than to clothing; The author's search for Peterman moments in real life. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Peterman sells interesting and fairly good-quality stuff (though he lately got caught in a crunch of high inventory, debt and cash-flow problems). The danger, of course, is that you may get the thing in the mail and try it on (a Sherlock Holmes hat or cape, say, or one of those flouncy, too-much-by-half fin-de-siecle velvet gowns..."
6874. Mortimer, Molly. "Literary supplement: Edwardian capers." Contemporary Review 265, no. 1546 (1994): 279.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the books 'The Reminiscences of the Hon. Galahad Threepwood,' edited by N.T.P. Murphy and 'A Man of Means,' by P.G. Wodehouse and C.H. Bovill. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Perhaps only Sherlock Holmes aficionados appreciate the work needed to create this book but everyone can enjoy its deceptively innocent jokes...."
6875. Moss, Julianne. "Inclusive schooling: representation and textual practice." International Journal of Inclusive Education 6, no. 3 (2002): 231-249.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This paper reports on a larger study carried out in the island state of Tasmania, Australia, between 1996 and 1998. The research reviewed the impact of the Inclusion of Students with Disabilities Policy (ISDP) within the government school system. The qualitative study describes the interpretations of five key informants: a parent; two teachers--a support teacher and a class teacher--a policy-maker and a university academic, during the early period of the implementation of the ISDP. [Abstract from Author] Note 6 contains a reference to Holmes. "Gough states: 'Indeed, I would argue that educational research has not even kept pace with developments in the methods of fictional detection that have accompanied the cultural changes of the late modern era. Scientific rationalism is still privileged even though its personifications in fiction--such as Sherlock Holmes and other heroes of the classic logic and deduction story--have long been displaced as models of how we can or should obtain reliable knowledge of the world' (Gough 1998: 112)."
6876. Moss, Robert A., and Richard A. Posner. "Correspondence." New Republic 231, no. 25 (2004): 4-5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents letters to the editor of "The New Republic." Response to the article "Supreme Mistake," by Jeffrey Rosen, regarding the possibility that President George W. Bush will nominate anti-abortion Supreme Court justices; Discussion of the article "30 Years' War," found in the November 15, 2004, issue of the journal regarding voting trends in the United States; Criticism of the article "CSI: Baker Street," in which Richard A. Posner evaluates the methods of fictitious character [sic] Detective Sherlock Holmes; Reply from Posner.
6877. Moynihan, Mark F. "The Scientific Community and Intelligence Collection. (Cover story)." Physics Today 53, no. 12 (2000): 51.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the need for technical developments to enhance the intelligence-gathering capability of the United States. Significance of photoreconnaissance satellites; Declassification of the Galactic Radiation and Background satellite system, the first satellite system for signals surveillance; Examples of collaboration between the science and intelligence communities. INSET: The Conception of Space-Based Reconnaissance. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...After some thought--and rejection of outlandish ideas, such as death rays--Lovell proposed a completely silent and flashless gun. His concept was selected by Bush, and he was told to report to an office at 25th and E streets in northwest Washington. There, he met the director of OSS, Colonel William Donovan, who introduced himself and said, 'You know your Sherlock Holmes, of course. Professor Moriarty is the man I want for my staff here at OSS. I think you're it.' Although he objected to the characterization of himself as Holmes's evil archenemy, Lovell accepted the position knowing the importance of the war effort...."
6878. Mrazek, Rudolf. "Bypasses and flyovers: approaching the metropolitan history of Indonesia." Social History 29, no. 4 (2004): 425-443.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article focuses on the development of highway bypasses and flyovers in Indonesia with reference to historic happenings. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Red Henna Flower is an Indonesian and revolutionary version of the French and counterrevolutionary Scarlet Pimpernel. It is Tan Malaka's life--materialistic, dialectic, logical (MADILOG), a thriller, and a tale of magic--reading suited to a (victorious Indonesian) revolution. Mrs Sosro: Red Henna Flower, yes. Myself: You've read it? Mrs Sosro: Oh, yes. But Sherlock Holmes was better. In prison I read Sherlock Holmes, Sherlock Holmes, and Sherlock Holmes again...."
6879. Mueller, Tom. "Biomimetics design by nature." National Geographic 213, no. 4 (2008): 68-91.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reports on advances in biomimetics, a field that attempts to apply mechanical designs from nature to problems in engineering and other fields. Examples in the article include attempts to replicate the water wicking properties of the skin of thorny devil lizards, the flapping of fly wings, and the "stickiness" of gecko feet. Possible technological applications are discussed. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...'Ah-ha!' Parker exclaimed, like Sherlock Holmes alighting upon a clue...."
6880. Muller-Sievers, Helmut. "Reading Evidence: Textual; Criticism as Science in the Nineteenth Century." Germanic Review 76, no. 2 (2001): 162.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the methods devised in the 19th century which led to the establishment of textual criticism as science. Invention of the chemical treatment method by manuscript hunter Angelo Mai

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- for the encryption of manuscripts; Requirements in using conjectural philology methodology for textual criticism; Details on the semantic criticism methodology developed by Carl Lachmann. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Bruno Cerquilini has shown how close Lachmann's view of medieval scribes comes to the techniques that criminal psychologists developed later in the century; one might add to these successors the brilliant Sherlock Holmes and the cryptanalysts (many of them classicists) in Bletchley Park during World War II...."
6881. Murphy, Cullen. "The Culture Did It." Atlantic Monthly 286, no. 6 (2000): 16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Deals with indefinite articles and definite article, 'the.' Lack of articles in Slavic languages; Potential of the definite article to lend a pretentious note; Definition of the term 'the culture'; Rhetoric of resignation. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...A similar acknowledgment of singularity was bestowed by Sherlock Holmes on Irene Adler, the only person ever to outwit him; according to Dr. Watson, Holmes referred to her afterward as 'the woman.'..."
6882. ———. "Out of the Ordinary." Atlantic Monthly 288, no. 3 (2001): 30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the mundane studies approach in understanding the world. Overview of the 'Potato in the Materialist Imagination' essay; Concept of tooth by Colin Jones; Analysis of 'One Good Turn,' a history of screw-driver and the screw by architect Witold Rybczynski. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Sherlock Holmes boasted that he could infer Niagara Falls from a drop of water...."
6883. Murphy, Tim. "Book Reviews." European Legacy 13, no. 1 (2008): 101-138.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The review by Murphy (pp. 122-23) includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Thackeray is credited as the father of experiments with the style of 'antique prose' in the analysis of Cloud Atlas--but at other times there is more depth to the references, for instance the use of framing devices by Walter Scott, Henry James and Joseph Conrad that prefaces the discussion of such a device in Philip Roth's The Human Stain, or when Ian Fleming's villain in From Russia with Love, Kronsteen, is placed in 'a line of descent from his twisted prodigy' (96), Sherlock Holmes' Moriarty...."
6884. Murphy-Larronde, Suzanne. "Bedeviled in La Vega." Americas 60, no. 1 (2008): 56-59.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article offers information on a festival in La Vega, Dominican Republic that is held on the four consecutive Sunday afternoons each February. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Among the event's most enduringly popular entries are two transvestites known as La Vieja Chula (Cute Old Hussy), armed with a hula hoop, and La Roba la Gallina (Chicken Thief), who carries a tattered parasol and an uproarious amount of padding both fore and aft. Seen at carnivals throughout the Dominican Republic, these characters provide many of the celebration's best laughs, mincing their way along to the hoots and hollers of approving onlookers. Prominent historical figures such as Sherlock Holmes, the Pope, and Fidel Castro also put in appearances every year..."
6885. Murray, Victoria Christopher. "From Health to Wealth." Black Issues Book Review 4, no. 1 (2002): 60-60.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Relates the experiences of African-American nonfiction writers who self-published health books. 'Medical Handbook for the Layman,' by J. Tyrone Alfred; 'Breast Cancer/Black Women,' by Edwin T. Johnson; 'Health, Wellness and Restoration: The Complete Guide for Restoring Your Health the Natural Way,' by Denise Davis. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Breast Cancer/Black Women is designed to provide specific medical information, but in a thoughtful, clear way. Written in language that is entertaining and informative, the book includes chapters entitled 'A Case for Sherlock Holmes,' which covers how to detect breast cancer, and the 'Fickle Finger of Fate' about who is more likely to get breast cancer...."
6886. Nadler, Spencer. "Dying Matters." Massachusetts Review 41, no. 3 (2000): 339.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the short story 'Dying Matters.' Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...I am Dr. Watson to his Sherlock Holmes...."
6887. Naeye, Robert. "Was Einstein wrong?" Astronomy 23, no. 11 (1995): 54.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the mystery of the DI Herculis, a 8th-magnitude binary star 2,000 light-years from the Earth, which refuses to conform to general relativity. Albert's Einstein's concept of relativity;

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- Testing of general relativity with the DI Herculis; Relativity and binary pulsar; Possible explanations for DI Herculis' behavior; Implications of DI Herculis' behavior for general physics. Includes passing references to Holmes. "...Like a modern-day Sherlock Holmes, Villanova University astronomer Edward Guinan is trying to solve a mystery. The fictional supersleuth employed ingenious deduction to unravel the most perplexing of mysteries from the most subtle of clues. In the end, he always got his man. If only Guinan could be so lucky. His case remains unsolved after 18 frustrating years of investigation....Despite his inability to find a solution, Guinan can't quite bring himself to accept the old Holmesian adage, 'When you have eliminated the impossible, whatever remains, however improbable, must be the truth.'..."
6888. Narayan, Shyamala A. "India." Journal of Commonwealth Literature 35, no. 3 (2000): 45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a bibliography of Indian English literature in 1999. Overview of developments in the literary culture of India; Continued dominance of fiction over poetry and drama in terms of literary merit; Bibhu Padhi's fourth collection of poems entitled 'Painting the House'; Padhi; Rukmini Bhaya Nair's book of poems, 'The Ayodhya Cantos'; Jamya Norbu's debut novel 'The Mandala of Sherlock Holmes.'
6889. Nartonis, David K. "Divining currents in the origin of Christianity." Christian Science Monitor, Aug 20, 1998: B8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'The Birth of Christianity: Discovering What Happened in the Years Immediately After the Execution of Jesus,' by John Dominic Crossan. Includes passing references to Holmes. "What can we know about the earliest Christians, the men and women who followed Jesus in the 30s and 40s, between his crucifixion and Paul's letters? John Dominic Crossan tackles this question like a modern Sherlock Holmes, sifting the evidence and expounding his deductions. His method does not include, however, taking the Bible account at face value....In a typical Sherlock Holmes mystery, the story ends with conclusive proof that Holmes has been right in his deductions. But Crossan has nothing but circumstantial evidence to go on, and the reader must decide whether to accept his conclusions...."
6890. ———. "Religion bestsellers." Christian Science Monitor 90, no. 172 (1998): B8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the bestselling books on religion. One item includes a reference to Holmes. The Birth of Christianity, by John Crossan, Harper, $12.95 "What can we know about the earliest Christians, the men and women who followed Jesus in the 30s and 40s, between his crucifixion and Paul's letters? Crossan tackles this question like a modern Sherlock Holmes. He sifts the evidence, meticulously expounds his deductions, and tells a fascinating story of peasant prophets wandering the Galilean countryside, promoting a kind of religious land reform, while Jesus' closest associates huddled together in Jerusalem, awaiting his triumphal return. Readers will decide how much weight to give to Crossan's conclusions."
6891. Naso, Ronald C. "Narrative limits in psychoanalytic case histories: A commentary on Loewenstein's article." Psychoanalytic Psychology. 9, no. 4 (1992): 551-561.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // E. A. Loewenstein (see record 1992-28313-001) employs J. Lacan's (1952 [1982]) rereading of the Dora case to argue that psychoanalytic life histories are multivocal, dialectical, and nonpositivistic. However, she neither acknowledges the problematic, but persistent, ties of psychoanalysis to positivism nor makes explicit important philosophical differences between Freud's and her own hermeneutical view. These deficiencies weaken her argument which thus does not provide sufficient grounds for rejecting D. P. Spence's (1982, 1987) view that Freud's case-reporting style is consistent with the Sherlock Holmes detective story genre.
6892. Nellis, M. "News Media, Popular Culture and the Electronic Monitoring of Offenders in England and Wales." Howard Journal of Criminal Justice 42, no. 1 (2003): 01.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // On 10 January 2002, I was asked to provide a little expert comment on electronic monitoring (EM) on BBC Radio Birmingham's 'Late Show', the pretext being a newspaper report earlier that day indicating that Scotland was soon to roll out a national EM programme. It was clear when I met her that the show's host had no idea that electronic monitoring had already been underway in England and Wales for several years. Her immediate reaction to the idea of it was hostile: being sentenced to serve time in one's own living room hardly seemed like punishment. Several callers to the show were invited to comment on it in these terms, and most were adamant that it was obviously no substitute for imprisonment. The experience was, for

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- me, indicative (in microcosm) of the generally poor quality of media debate about EM in England and Wales, and suggested that EM has simply not registered with the public as the tough punishment that its supporters hoped and its opponents feared it would be. This article is a preliminary attempt to map the nature and level of awareness that has been shown about EM in various manifestations of popular culture - the press, TV, cinema and literature - and to tentatively suggest why it has taken the forms that it has. The article understands popular culture primarily as a resource for interpreting and bestowing meaning upon EM but also, more cursorily, considers it as an aspect of the milieu in which creative technological developments are conceived. [Abstract from Author] Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Patricia Cornwell's 'quasi-police procedurals' about a forensic pathologist--not the first fictions of this kind, and distantly connected to the deductive scientific approach taken by Sherlock Holmes--have steadily generated derivative books and TV series--Kathy Reich's books, the BBC's 'Silent Witness' in Britain and CBS's 'CSI--Crime Scene investigators' from the USA.
6893. Nelson, Derek. "Believe it or not! One man: 93 Class A mishaps." Approach: The Naval Safety Center's Aviation Magazine 39, no. 2: 2.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features John Combs, an aircraft mishap investigator with the Naval Safety Center, who has 93 Class A Mishaps. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...As the pieces fall into place, an effective investigator must fight the urge to guess at what caused a mishap. A pertinent quotation from Sherlock Holmes stands above the entrance to the MI's offices: 'It is unwise, my dear Watson, to speculate in advance of the facts,' Holmes admonished. 'Invariably, it biases the judgment.'" 6894. Nelson, Sioban, Suzanne Gordon, and Michael McGillian. "Saving the practice -- top 10 unfinished issues to inform the nursing debate in the new millennium." Nursing inquiry 9, no. 2 (2002): 63-64.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Editorial. Discusses issues concerning the nursing discipline. Nurses' leadership; Relationship between the academy and practice; Professionalization of nursing. Includes the joke where Holmes and Watson are camping.
6895. Neuhaus, Paul, Connie Van Fleet, and Danny P. Wallace. "Privacy and Confidentiality in Digital Reference." Reference & User Services Quarterly 43, no. 1 (2003): 26-36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Attempts to show the relationships between privacy and digital reference records, how privacy can be compromised in the digital reference environment, and what actions librarians can take to maintain the privacy of these records. Privacy issues for types of digital reference records; Intellectual systems that underlie examination of privacy and digital reference records; Privacy features of chat software products. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...One public knowledge base that the author examined provides enough information that lesser sleuths than Sherlock Holmes could track down the individual...."
6896. Neuhaus, Richard John. "The Public Square: Re-Evangelizing a 'Post-Christian' World." First Things: A Monthly Journal of Religion & Public Life, no. (2003): 3p.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the definition of the term post-Christian in theology according to Robert W. Jenson, a Lutheran theologian. Impact of the biblical truth on people; Response of people to the particularity of Bible story; Influence of Christian message on religious communication; Explanation given by Jenson on religious teachings. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Christianity, on the other hand, is persistently particular: 'Sherlock Holmes famously said that when you eliminate possibilities until finally only one is left, that is the solution no matter how improbably....'" 6897. Nevadomsky, Joseph. "Art and Science in Benin Bronzes." African Arts 37, no. 1 (2004): 1-96.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on Benin art. Discussion on the dating technique, thermoluminescence; Problem caused by counterfeit Benin art; Accuracy of science distinction on Benin art. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...R.E. Bradbury's historical analysis of the Ezomo's ikegobo (altar to the hand) illustrates how satisfying an iconographic analysis can be. One could add Barbara Blackmun's iconography of Benin ivory tusks (1997) and Paula (Girshick) Ben-Amos's Sherlock Holmes-like sleuthing in 'Who Is the Man in the Bowler Hat?...'" 6898. Nicholls, Paul. "Great expectations: A tale of two or three directories." Searcher 6, no. 8 (1998): 66.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the basic standard directories when looking for information about online

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- databases. 'Gale Directory of Databases'; World Databases; The computer software Multimedia and CD-ROM Directory; Seven percent solution. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The volatility and continuing rapid growth in the volume of electronic materials challenges infrequently updated directory sources, leaving users still needing to check supplementary sources. Why the 'seven percent solution' reference above to Sherlock Holmes' recipe for recreational drug use? It seems that even (fairly onerous) reasonable due diligence will leave perhaps seven percent of available sources undisclosed...."
6899. ———. "New wine in old bottles." Computers in Libraries 16, no. 10 (1996): 57.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Editorial. Asserts that what library students learned in library schools has direct application to cataloging as well as to electronic materials in the 1990s. Traditional bibliographical distinctions that are applicable to today's CD-ROMS. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Most of you readers are professional librarians, and so many of you probably have two distinctly unpleasant memories from your library school days--the required course in statistics and that other one in analytical bibliography. The statistics nightmare I can relate to, but I have always found physical bibliography to be quite fascinating. It gives you an opportunity to closely examine a physical object and uncover amazing facts, very much like a coroner, or Sherlock Holmes, or whoever did O.J. Simpson's DNA evidence...."
6900. Nippert-Eng, Christena. "It's About Time." Qualitative Sociology 18, no. 4 (1995): 479.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several books on topics related to sociology of time. "Timewatch: The Social Analysis of Time," by Barbara Adam; "Working Time in Transition: The Political Economy of Working Hours in Industrial Nations," edited by Karl Hinrichs, William Roche and Carmen Sirianni; "Gender, Time and Reduced Work," by Cynthia Negrey. Includes a passing reference to Holmes (page 479). "...Different objects and processes require different probes. You have to pick the probe that will let you best see what's happening at the place and time in which the phenomenon you're interested in occurs...Ah. Like using the Hubble Telescope to see stars being born, smaller telescopes for the rings around Saturn and the craters of the moon, binoculars for birds in the backyard, reading glasses for printed matter, a magnifying glass for Sherlock Holmes' detective work..."
6901. Nixon, Cornelia, and Gary Soto. "Charm." Ploughshares 21, no. 1 (1995): 109.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the short story 'Charm,' by Cornelia Nixon, about a young girl's problems with her mother and her first sexual encounter. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Her father had been kind to her all week, not mentioning her neck, or Mrs. Snyder, or four a.m., and tonight he had dressed up in a Windsor jacket worthy of Sherlock Holmes, belted in orangish-brown plaid that clashed with his hair, matching pants, and freshly polished brown wingtips...."
6902. Noel, Dirk. "Revisiting the passive of infinitival perception verb complements." Studia Neophilologica 76, no. 1 (2004): 12-29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on the evidence put forward for a strict correspondence between the meaning and the form of perception verb complements. Absence of compelling evidence that warrants the link between bare infinitives and direct perception and between to-infinitives and indirect perception; Examples supporting the statement that perception verbs supplemented by an accusative and infinitive can report on direct perceptions; Availability of a lexo-grammatical choice that helps to make statements about the occurrence of events more convincing. Includes a passing reference to Holmes (pages 14-15). "Looking around the bedroom, she saw that it was almost exactly as it had been in the photograph, although now there was a book open and face downwards on the patchwork quilt. She wondered who had been reading so recently on the carefully made bed, or if this fat book, which she now saw to be a collection of Sherlock Holmes stories, were a relic of the past summer, and the maid, or whoever cleared the house, was devotedly keeping her employer's place."
6903. Nolan, Tom. "Bookshelf: For whom the jingle bells toll." Wall Street Journal - Eastern Edition, December 20, 1994: A12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews a number of mystery novels, including "The Christmas Bow Murder," by Brian Battison, and "Festival of Deaths," by Jane Haddam. Begins with a passing reference to Holmes. "Ever since Sherlock Holmes found a stolen jewel in a Christmas goose, mystery writers have used the holiday season as a setting for detection...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6904. Norquist, Grover. "Books for Christmas." American Spectator 38, no. 10 (2005): 38-44.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on several books, with a passing reference to Holmes under the entry for Grover Norquist. "Steven Saylor's Roma sub Rosa series has seven novels and two books of short stories starring the Sherlock Holmes of his day, Gordianus the Finder."

6905. Norris, Christopher. "Will the real Saul Kripke please stand up? Fiction, philosophy and possible worlds."

Textual Practice 17, no. 2 (2003): 225.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "In this essay I propose some useful points of contact between literary theory (especially narrative poetics) and developments in modal or 'possible worlds' logic. This is the branch of logic having to do with matters of necessity and possibility, or truths (such as those of mathematics and logic itself) which hold good in every possible world and contingent truths (such as those concerning historical events) which hold good across only that range of worlds which resemble our own in the relevant respects...." Includes passing references to Holmes. "...Still this leaves a problem about fictive referents such as 'Sherlock Holmes' since clearly it is true--in some sense of 'true'--to say of Holmes that he lived in Baker Street rather than Tottenham Court Road, or that he solved the mystery of the Hound of the Baskervilles rather than the puzzle of Who Killed Roger Ackroyd. The theory of descriptions works well enough with identity statements such as 'Scott is the author of Waverley', which may come as news to some since although the two terms--'Scott' and 'the author of Waverley'--make reference to the same individual they do so under different descriptions and can hence be informative for anyone who happens not to have known that fact. However, it does little to resolve the problem about Sherlock Holmes or the issue concerning that peculiar realm of fictive persons, objects and events where statements about them would seem to have a definite truth-value even though they refer to historically non-existent entities....So we may say that the name 'Odysseus' has sense but not reference, or that the cluster of attributes attached to it--those that we have acquired through a reading of Homer or other relevant sources--fails to pick out any such historical personage. In which case it is possible (as with the Holmes example) to be right or wrong in making statements about him but only insofar as those statements are construed as involving a fictive suspension of disbelief or a willingness to grant 'poetic licence' when assessing their truth-value...."

6906. Norris, Floyd. "Will Apple Benefit from Intel's Pentium Woes?" Journal Record (Oklahoma City, OK), no. (1994).

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Call it the case of the market that didn't react. As in a famous Sherlock Holmes mystery, the most important clue about Intel's status as a Wall Street darling was the fact the stock barely budged in the days after it was disclosed--by a customer and not by Intel--that its fanciest computer chip had problems with long division...."

6907. Nottingham, Ellen B. "Happy anniversary, Sherlock Holmes." Teaching PreK-8 18, no. (1988): 47-48.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

6908. Nowell, Paul. "Tackling tricky computer criminals." Community College Week 10, no. 21 (1998): 15.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the effort of computer scientist Jie Wang to prevent computer criminals or cyber-thief from doing their scheme. Information provided by a shopper on the Internet; How a cyber-thief can obtain consumer information; How the cryptosystem made by Wang can prevent computer crimes. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Computer scientist Jie Wang doesn't pretend to be Sherlock Holmes. Nevertheless, he's trying to foil one of today's trickiest criminal types--the cyber-thief...."

6909. Null, Christopher. "How to Survive the Worst PC Disasters." PC World 25, no. 7 (2007): 78-86.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents tips on dealing with computer-related problems. If a computer would not boot, one should first check all cables to make sure everything is hooked up tightly. To confirm the power supply, consider testing the voltage output with a power-supply tester such as PC Power and Cooling's ATX. If the power supply is okay but nothing appears on screen, plug in a different monitor to ensure it is not the display that is blown. Windows is probably at fault if no personal computers show on the network, but the source could be hardware. If the problem is not hardware, start by going through the various Windows settings

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

to see which has gone bad. Another option is to look for duplicate Internet Protocol address assignments. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "... You'll have to play Sherlock Holmes to figure out what's dead. Take it step-by-step...."

6910. Nunn, Sam. "A New Way Of Thinking." Vital speeches of the day 67, no. 14 (2001): 424.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a speech by former United States Senator Sam Nunn, delivered to the National Press Club in Washington, D.C. on March 29, 2001. His work with the Nuclear Threat Initiative, a foundation dedicated to reducing the global threat from nuclear, biological and chemical weapons; Efforts to increase public awareness about the dangers of nuclear weapons; Relationship between the United States and Russia since the end of the Cold War; The perceived need to promote new thinking on the subject of arms control. Includes a passing reference to Holmes in the form of the camping joke. "...A story by my humorous friend former Senator Alan Simpson helps make the point: Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson are on a camping trip. After a good meal and a bottle of wine, they crawled into their tent and went to sleep. Some hours later, Holmes awoke and nudged his friend: Watson, look up and tell me what you see. Watson replied: I see millions and millions of stars. What does that tell you Watson, asked Holmes. Watson pondered a minute and replied--astronomically, it tells me that there are millions of galaxies and potentially billions of planets. Astrologically, I observe that Saturn is in Leo. Horologically, I deduce that the time is approximately a quarter past three. What does it tell you, Holmes? Holmes was silent for a moment, then spoke. Watson, you idiot, someone has stolen our tent!"

6911. O'Brien, Kevin. "Thursdays With Rahner. (Cover story)." America 190, no. 15 (2004): 8-11.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles theologian priest Father Karl Rahner on the occasion of his 100th birth anniversary in March 2004. Description of Rahner's theology; Contributions to the Catholic Church; Personal background. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...To each person God freely reveals God's very self. Yet God still remains a mystery to us, though not a mystery like a Sherlock Holmes novel, one to be figured out and pieced together...."

6912. Odone, Cristina. "Welcome to the me-economy where ego is supreme." New Statesman 129, no. 4479 (2000): 24.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Looks at an economy where the service caters to the single personal needs of consumers which is known as the me-economy. Purchase power as a proof of self-esteem; Support for the ego and self; Consequences of the self-indulgence of the economy. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...You don't need to be Sherlock Holmes to detect a pattern here. These are businesses that cater for the well-to-do who wish to self-indulge, the hard-working professionals who'll pay anyone to pamper them...."

6913. Oldenburg, Ann. "Delightful No. 1 Ladies detect a 'Good Husband'." USA Today, April 19, 2007: D7.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews The Good Husband of Zebra Drive by Alexander McCall Smith. Pantheon Books, 213 pp., $21.95. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...In each case, the simple crimes are compelling and fun in a Sherlock Holmes-lite way...."

6914. Olson, Catherine Applefeld. "Direct to DVD." Billboard 112, no. 10 (2000): 87.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the growing number of directed-to-DVD releases of concert videos or music videos in the United States. Palm Pictures Home Entertainment's plan to make DVD its primary focus in 2000; Palm's pioneering of the DVD single concept; DVD-only video titles released by DVD International; Factors driving the sales of DVD videos. Includes a Holmes reference. "...There's also the interactive 'I'm Your Man,' 'Tender Loving Care' and 'Sherlock Holmes: Consulting Detective,' through which viewers can direct the action by seeking out various crime-solving solutions...."

6915. ———. "Home video: Made for TV." Billboard 108, no. 45 (1996): 69.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the video tape 'Cracker,' from A&E Home Video. A three-tape boxed set of episodes of the mystery series by the same name. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The series, a cult favorite in the U.K. that quickly won over a devoted stateside audience when it began airing on the Arts & Entertainment network, follows the sleuthing of an unlikely hero: an alcoholic, ill-tempered forensic psychologist played by veteran actor Robbie Coltrane. Columbo he ain't, but fans of the gritty, psychological side of mystery will find that this modern-day Sherlock Holmes fits the bill."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6916. O'Neill, Michael Edmund. "Undoing Miranda." Brigham Young University Law Review 2000, no. 1 (2000): 185.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the jurisprudential roots of Ernesto Miranda versus Arizona trial decision as a mandatory rule of police procedure for criminal suspects in the United States. Role of the Miranda decision in protecting the rights of criminal suspects; Process of interrogation; Confessions and crime solving; Voluntariness as a proxy for credibility; Details on the Miranda versus Arizona trial. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...One does not have to be Sherlock Holmes to understand that the interrogation of suspects generally has been considered the best way--indeed, sometimes the only way--to obtain information about criminal activity...."
6917. Orakwue, Stella. "The lost barrister." New African, no. (2005): 2p.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents the author's views on British Prime Minister Tony Blair. According to a recent survey, 55% of British people said that he was bad for the country. Blair did join the Labour Party before he met his wife. The author asks what happened to the way he was. 55% of the people think he is bad for the country. They no longer trust him. History tells us somebody always comes along. People did not know who Tony was when he was with us. People said he was not with them when they needed him. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Are you a fan of the 'Early Years' genre? You know what I mean: 'James Bond's Schooldays'. 'Sherlock Holmes--Adventures As A Boy' (with jumbo-sized magnifying glass, perhaps), 'Harry Potter. My Years In A Crib'. Me and my shadowing youth. You walk with yours...."
6918. O'Rourke, Meghan. "Nancy Drew's Father." New Yorker 80, no. 34 (2004): 120-129.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles Edward Stratemeyer, the man who created the literary syndicate responsible for the Nancy Drew and Hardy Boys books in the U.S. Background information on Stratemeyer; Literary credits; Implications on books and literature. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Wirt gave the early volumes a 'New Woman' flavor, but the core of Nancy's appeal is similar to the Hardys'. The mode is adventure with a flourish of mystery. The plot is furthered by coincidence. Nancy discovers 'dues' everywhere: A tire tread? 'A clue!' A ransom note with a fire-dragon crest? 'It may be a clue,' Nancy cries. Needless to say, these 'clues' don't function as a puzzle that the enterprising reader can piece together for herself, as they do in Sherlock Holmes or Encyclopedia Brown mysteries. Instead, they are reassurances that order reigns behind the scenes...."
6919. Osborn, J. F., J. S. Bulman, and A. Petrie. "Further statistics in dentistry Part 10: Sherlock Holmes, evidence and evidence-based dentistry." British dental journal 194, no. 4 (2003): 189.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "If one were to go by the explosion of interest in evidence-based clinical practice in the past decade of the second millennium, one could be forgiven for thinking that the idea was new...."
Beyond title, unknown reference to Holmes.
6920. O'Sullivan, Kevin. "Elementary, My Dear Jade - Your Education, that Is; the Anti-Big Brother Paper." The Mirror, June 21, 2002: 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "After four mind-numbing weeks of Halfwit House, the animals masquerading as humans have established that Big Brother is a kind of moronic inferno that ought to be required viewing for only one person - Education Minister Estelle Morris. If this pathetic confederacy of know-nothing dunces are in any way representative of the average product of the school system, then we're in big trouble....All the contestants are dense. However, all but one of the cretins have one thing going for them - they are not Jade. This sickening numbskull makes the rest of them look like intellectual giants....My personal favourite Jade moment came when she revealed that she's something of an expert on Sherlock Holmes. 'Sherlock Holmes?' she squealed, 'I thought he was the bloke who invented the toilet....'" 6921. O'Toole, Fintan. "The Organizer." New Republic 234, no. 9 (2006): 34-37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Mick: The Real Michael Collins," by Peter Hart. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Collins, Hart notes in his introduction, has virtually disappeared into 'the realm of the incredible, of Monte Cristo, the Scarlet Pimpernel and Sherlock Holmes' through 'innumerable tales of his miraculous feats, subterfuges and evasions of near-certain capture and death.'..."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6922. Ottens, Allen J., and Gary D. Shank. "The role of abductive logic in understanding and using advanced empathy." Counselor Education & Supervision 34, no. 3 (1995): 199.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Argues that advanced empathy is based on the implicit understanding and application of the logic of abduction. Discussion on the basic principles of abduction; Distinction between linear and nonlinear reasoning techniques; Implications for training counselors. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...One of the clearest cases of abduction in the popular consciousness, as Sebeok and Umiker-Sebeok (1983) noted, is the so-called method of deduction used by fictional detectives such as Sherlock Holmes and Eco's (1983) William of Baskerville. As part of their repertoires, these detectives deduce rather startling 'facts' about people and circumstances. On closer examination, we see that these facts are really shrewd guesses or hypotheses based on their keen powers of observation and their ability to coalesce disparate facts under the rubric of a single tentative rule. Or, as Shank (1987) pointed out, the 'principles of sound abduction are the principles of good guessing' (p. 283)...."
6923. Owen, Laurinel. "Reading between the lines." Strad 109, no. 1301 (1998): 934.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses how to find musical talent in a student's handwriting with the help of master graphoanalyst Nelta O. Owen. Indications of a student's handwriting; Three zones of writing; Aspects of handwriting; How different shapes of letters provide a key to a person's creative and learning abilities; Other indications of a personality which leans towards music and the arts. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Handwriting can give clues to a person's character, and the examples that have been given here can help identify musical talent in the studio. Those who want to learn more might want to take a course (though do not expect graphology to reveal sex or right- or left-handedness as it does for Sherlock Holmes!)...."
6924. Oxford, Edward. "Mr. Television: Milton Berle." American History 30, no. 6 (1996): 32.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Offers a look at Milton Berle and his starring in the television program 'The Texaco Star Theater.' What 'The Texaco Star Theater' was part of. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Berle's weekly offering had to be thought up, sketched, scored, rehearsed, and presented to the audiences every seventh day for 39 weeks out of the year. It was a seemingly impossible schedule, but Berle, smoking a dozen cigars a day, did it. 'I ran like a maniac all around the studio,' he remembers, 'directing, getting into dance routines, shifting scenery, setting up shots for the cameramen, telling actors how to read their lines--I got into everything.' He would turn up in four or five costumes a show he became an acrobat, Sherlock Holmes, a prize-fighter, Carmen Miranda, an explorer, or whatever--and could switch from tuxedo to tutu in ninety seconds...."
6925. Padian, Kevin. "The rehabilitation of Sir Richard Owen." Bioscience 47, no. 7 (1997): 446.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles biologist Sir Richard Owen (1804-1892) on the occasion of the 150th anniversary of some of his greatest accomplishments. Biographical information; Career history; His role as the scientific founder of the Natural History Museum; His opposition to materialistic transmutation and natural selection; His status as the most influential British biologist; Reasons why he has been demonized and forgotten; His contribution to the development of modern biological philosophy. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Owen's goal was to search for the secondary laws that explained ideal form and the mechanisms by which transmutation might occur. Although he was not a rabid creationist, antievolutionist, or anti-transmutationist, Owen, the miscast and misunderstood defender of the anti-Darwinian status quo in Victorian England, has been most vividly portrayed and remembered as the Professor Moriarty to Darwin's Sherlock Holmes...."
6926. Pallarito, Karen. "From access to X-rays." Modern healthcare 28, no. 44 (1998): 36.
 NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the dream of Edward Mendoza, a clinical professor at Atlanta's Morehouse School of Medicine, to develop a database of world's healthcare finance. Comments from Mendoza; How his interest in developing a global database has started; Factors that drive the dreams of Mendoza. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "... Mendoza, the Bronx-born son of hard-toiling factory workers, says his career in medicine took shape during his freshman year at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point. Destiny called during an eight-man tackle intramural football game. Sustaining a hand injury that disqualified him from armed combat, a young Mendoza was impressed by the doctors he met while in the hospital. 'I just enjoyed the Sherlock Holmes aspect of medicine,' he remembers...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6927. Panayiotopoulos, Chrysostomos P. "The Birth and Evolution of the Concept of Panayiotopoulos Syndrome." Epilepsia (Series 4) 48, no. 6 (2007): 1041-1043.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses various reports published within the issue, including one about the common childhood seizure susceptibility syndrome that primarily involves the autonomic nervous system and another about occipital epilepsy. The article opens with a quotation from the Blue Carbuncle. "I can see nothing," said I, handing it back to my friend. "On the contrary, Watson, you can see everything. You fail, however, to reason from what you see. You are too timid in drawing your inferences."
6928. Panero, James. "Erotic prudery?" New Criterion 21, no. 3 (2002): 49.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a Frick art exhibition in New York on Greuze ('Greuze the Draftsman' and 'Greuze the Painter: Los Angeles Works in Context'). Theme of the exhibition. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...Interest in Greuze picked up later in the nineteenth century, to the point that Sherlock Holmes in The Valley of Fear was able to spot the criminal Professor Moriarty through an expensive Greuze (how could he afford it?): 'in the year 1865 a picture by Greuze entitled La jeune Fille a l'Agneau fetched one million two hundred thousand francs--more than forty thousand pounds--at the Portalis sale.'..."
6929. Paoletta, Michael, and Dominic Pride. "Underworld Rises Again With 'Fish'." Billboard 111, no. 12 (1999): 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the scheduled United States release of the third album, 'Beaucoup Fish,' by the dance music group 'Underworld' of Great Britain. Comments of executives on the recording; Appreciation of dance music in the US compared with Great Britain; Sales of the album in Great Britain. "Underworld is signed directly to U.K. dance imprint Junior Boy's Own, and its songs are published by Underworld/Sherlock Holmes Music Limited (ASCAP), administered through Warner-Tamerlane Publishing Corp. (BMI)."
6930. Park, Constance M. "Diversity, the Individual, and Proof of Efficacy: Complimentary and Alternative Medicine in Medical Education." American Journal of Public Health 92, no. 10 (2002): 1568.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Patients will always have access to a variety of possibly effective, but unproved, therapies directed at maintaining health or treating illness. And there will always be complex, potentially therapeutic regimens that cannot be adequately tested for financial, ethical, or methodological reasons. Furthermore, even after adequate study of a given regimen, there will always be the fundamental uncertainty of medical practice: the fact that epidemiological research produces probabilistic results that cannot predict with certainty the best treatment for the single unique patient before us. The exploration of complementary and alternative medicine topics in the medical school curriculum helps to elucidate the complex and uncertain nature of medical practice, sharpens skills for clinical decision-making, increases cultural sensitivity, and provides ideas for future research. [ABSTRACT FROM AUTHOR] Opens with a quotation from Holmes. "While the individual man is an insoluble puzzle, in the aggregate he becomes a mathematical certainty. You can, for example, never foretell what any one man will do, but you can say with precision what an average number will be up to...."
6931. Parker, Mike. "Monty Python's Iconicity." International Journal of Heritage Studies 13, no. 6 (2007): 514-520.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reports on Monty Python comedy team, as an English cultural icon and presents the factors that deny them the iconic status. It states that the Monty Python comedy team failed to be considered as a national icon because it lacked distinct imagery as well as the universal humor appeal. According to the author, the categorization of cultural icons relies heavily on the theory that associated symbolic imagery is strengthened by its proximity to the natural perceptions of the receiver. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Rather than excluding eminent people from a study of what we consider iconic we should focus our attention directly on these important individuals. How is it possible to assign credibility to a discussion of icons that specifically excludes human icons yet places high on the list (as the online nominations do) examples such as Robin Hood, Sherlock Holmes, Henry VIII, Peter Pan, John Peel and, for our concerns, Monty Python? This is a difficulty which can be addressed possibly in future discussions..."
6932. Parker, Wendy S. "Franklin, Holmes, and the Epistemology of Computer Simulation." International Studies in the Philosophy of Science 22, no. 2 (2008): 165-183.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Allan Franklin has identified a number of strategies that scientists use to build confidence in experimental results. This paper shows that Franklin's strategies have direct analogues in the context of computer simulation and then suggests that one of his strategies--the so-called 'Sherlock Holmes' strategy--deserves a privileged place within the epistemologies of experiment and simulation. In particular, it is argued that while the successful application of even several of Franklin's other strategies (or their analogues in simulation) may not be sufficient for justified belief in results, the successful application of a slightly elaborated version of the Sherlock Holmes strategy is sufficient. [Abstract from author]

6933. Paul, Richard, and Linda Elder. "Critical thinking: Teaching students to seek the logic of things." Journal of Developmental Education 23, no. 1 (1999): 34.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses ways for teaching critical thinking to students. Understanding of logic of subjects, issues and questions; Learning of abstract ideas; Tracing of interrelationships among things; Clarification of information needed; Reflection on the implications on one's thoughts; Adoption of the most reasonable point of view; Checking of assumptions. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...One can draw conclusions about poems, microbes, numbers, historical events, languages, social settings, psychological fears, everyday situations, character traits or, indeed, about anything whatsoever. And this drawing of conclusions is part of a broader process of reasoning through the logic of something. In this broad sense of logic, one focuses on the logic of the poem, the logic of a microbe, the logic of numbers, the logic of a historical event, or the logic of a language and so forth. Hence, Sherlock Holmes, in trying to figure out the logic of the murder, makes a number of specific inferences from the available evidence. But, most important for our purposes, he is guided throughout by his conception of 'the logic of criminal thinking.' He must be able to think like a criminal -- to enter the criminal mind, and to understand its internal logic -- in order to figure out the crime...."

6934. Paulsen, Derek. "Improving Geographic Profiling through Commuter/Marauder Prediction." Police Practice & Research 8, no. 4 (2007): 347-357.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "One of the most talked about new technologies in the field of crime analysis is geographic profiling, an investigative methodology that uses the locations of a connected series of crimes to determine the most probable offender anchor point." Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Traditionally, policing has been a profession that has looked to other disciplines for guidance and assistance in areas ranging from investigations to management and efficiency. One of the disciplines most often looked to is science and technology. From the earliest stories of Sherlock Holmes and his use of footprint identification and handwriting analysis to modern day DNA and tool mark analysis, policing has often turned to science and technology when faced with difficult investigations...."

6935. Pearl, Nancy, and Leah Sparks. "As Seen on TV: British Mystery Series." Library Journal 126, no. 5 (2001): 136.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Offers reviews of several British mystery novels which have been adapted into television programs. 'The Remorseful Day,' by Colin Dexter; 'A Clubbable Woman,' by Reginald Hill; 'The Killings at Badger's Drift,' by Caroline Graham; 'An Unsuitable Job for a Woman,' by P.D. James; 'Rumpole of the Bailey,' by John Mortimer; Others. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...From Sherlock Holmes to Lord Peter Wimsey and Miss Marple, British private detectives have also been popular staples of print and television...."

6936. Pearl, Nancy, and David Wright. "Gaslight Thrillers: The Original Victorians." Library Journal 126, no. 3 (2001): 228.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents reviews of several Victorian mystery books. 'The Woman in White,' and 'The Moonstone,' by Wilkie Collins; 'Lady Audley's Secret,' by Mary Elizabeth Braddon; 'She,' by H. Rider Haggard; 'Uncle Silas,' by J. Sheridan LeFanu; Others. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...'Holy, suffering Moses! What an ass a man can make himself when he thinks he's being preternaturally clever!' opines urbane artist and amateur sleuth Philip Trent in E.C. Bentley's 1913 Trent's Last Case (Dover Mystery Classics. 1997. ISBN 0-486-296873. pap. $2). This delightfully wry society mystery parodies the infallible logic of Sherlock Holmes and his ilk, introducing a detective of unprecedented depth and complexity and pointing the way to such Golden Age authors as Dorothy Sayers and Agatha Christie."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6937. Pease, Robert A. "What's all this searching stuff, anyhow?" Electronic Design 47, no. 7 (1999): 5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides ideas on the concept of searching. Impression on the song 'Searchin' by the Coasters; Things searched by the author; Preference of experiencing thrills when searching. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Back in 1957, the Coasters came out with a wild record, 'Searchin'.' It was on a yellow-and-white record, Atco 6087, on the flip side of 'Young Blood.' It ran like this: 'Gonna find her...Searchin'...Welllll--I been searchin' e-e-ev'ry whi-i-i-ch way-ay-ay/Just like that Northwest Mounted/You know I'll bring her in someday...' The song continued: 'Well, if I have to climb a mountain, you know I will/And if I have to swim a river, you know I will/And if she's hidin' up on a Blueberry Hill, am I gonna find her, chile', you know-ow-ow I will...' Later on: 'Sherlock Holmes an' Sam Spade got nothin', chile', on me/Sergeant Friday, Charlie Chan, an' Boston Blackie/No matter where you're hidin', you're gonna hear me comin'/I'm gonna walk right down your street, just like Bulldog Drummond.' I haven't played this song for 10 years...."
6938. Pemberton, Heather. "Language Arts." Multimedia Schools 1, no. 1 (1994): 51.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on the computer software 'Library of the Future, Third Edition' and 'WordSmart.' Features of the product; Cost of the software. "Library of the Future, Third Edition adds nearly 1,500 new titles, including works by Jane Austen, Willa Cather, Joseph Conrad, Fyodor Dostoevsky, Rudyard Kipling, and Alfred Lord Tennyson. The entire text of three John Steinbeck novels (Grapes of Wrath, Of Mice and Men and The Pearl) are also included. In addition, this new collection integrates video clips, including scenes from Sherlock Holmes, Gulliver's Travels and Aladdin. World Library Inc., 2809 Main Street, Irvine, CA 92714; 714/7569500; Fax 714/756-9511."
6939. Perl, Jed. "Ecstasy." New Republic 220, no. 8 (1999): 32-37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the Italian artist Gianlorenzo Bernini and his 400th anniversary. Reasons behind considering him as the artist of desire and surprise; Commendation of his painting 'Four Rivers Fountain' in the Piazza Navona in Rome, Italy; Biographical information about the artist; Discussion of his preparatory drawings; Information on the locations at which most of his art is displayed; Eclipse of Bernini's exuberant sensibility in the century after his death as Neoclassical ideas came to dominate European art. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The Fogg conservators' scheme to establish a complete set of Bernini's fingerprints has yielded only one or two prints that experts regard as legible, yet there is something about this Sherlock Holmes attempt, however quixotic, that jibes with our desire to get in tune with the scintillating physicality of Bernini's work...."
6940. Perrier, Arnaud. "Review: a low clinical probability plus a normal D-dimer test result excludes a diagnosis of deep venous thrombosis." Evidence-Based Medicine 10, no. 3 (2005): 89-89.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents information on a study published in the 2004 issue of the British Medical Journal, which analyzed if a combination of rapid D-dimer testing with estimation of clinical probability accurate for excluding a diagnosis of deep venous thrombosis (DVT) in patients with suspected DVT. The study provides strong evidence that plasma D-dimer measurement combined with clinical probability assessment may rule out DVT in selected outpatients and thus spare them unnecessary venous compression ultrasonography. Diagnosis & Detection: The Medical Iconography of Sherlock Holmes (Book).
6941. Person, Roland. "Mystery." Library Journal 131, no. 1 (2006): 80-84.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An annotated bibliography of mystery titles is provided. Includes passing reference to Holmes.
6942. Peters, Timothy B. "Success Is No Mystery." Publishers Weekly 250, no. 17 (2003): 27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights the sales growth of books at M Is for Mystery bookstore in San Mateo, California due to author focused events. Profile of loyal clientele of the store; Overview of the extensive stocks of the store; Remarks from bookstore owner and founder Ed Kaufman regarding the events. Includes references to Holmes and Laurie R. King. "...The loyal clientele of his store--both Bay Area buyers who show up in person and 'virtual' customers from around the world--have made it a premiere venue for writers. Laurie King, the author of the Kate Martinelli mysteries, the Mary Russell/Sherlock Holmes series and three other suspense novels, has done several events at M Is for Mystery and was at the store in late March to promote her

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

new book, Keeping Watch. 'Ed's events are remarkably well-organized and remarkably well-attended,' she reported. 'Ed gets a good mixture of real fans who know my work and new readers because he publicizes the events so well.'..."

6943. ———. "T. Jefferson Parker: The Dark Side of the California Dream." Publishers Weekly 253, no. 6 (2006): 20-21.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents an interview with crime novelist T. Jefferson Parker. He refers to the Orange County suburb of Tustin, California as his literary home. According to Parker, the desire to elicit a response from the reader is the factor that prompted him to write. The author says his interest in brain-related injuries can be attributed to the death of his first wife of a brain tumor. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...But what really distinguishes Parker's books from many other crime novels is the depth of feeling he has for his characters, particularly his modest, thoughtful heroes, like Tim Hess, a semi-retired police veteran in one of his finest books, The Blue Hour, or Robbie Brownlaw, the San Diego homicide detective in The Fallen. They are Boy Scouts in a sense—earnest, hardworking, essentially good—and, most appealingly, they are acutely aware of their imperfections. They're not as brilliant as Sherlock Holmes and they aren't introspective loners like Ian Rankin's Inspector John Rebus or Michael Connelly's Harry Bosch...."

6944. Petocz, Peter, and Anna Reid. "Rethinking the tertiary mathematics curriculum." Cambridge Journal of Education 35, no. 1 (2005): 89-106.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Mathematics curriculum at the tertiary level is located within a range of social and cultural theories, and is often constructed by academics seeking to promulgate a particular view of mathematics. We argue that such a curriculum should incorporate a real acknowledgement of the different ways in which students understand the nature of mathematics and its role in their professional lives. Our research with students across a variety of disciplines has shown a strong relationship between the ways in which students perceive their future work and how they go about learning whilst at university. We suggest that students of mathematics would benefit from a curriculum that focuses on using mathematics as a means of investigating the world and takes every opportunity to make connections and develop professional skills. Our aim is to provoke a general debate on the overall aim and nature of mathematics curriculum at the tertiary level. [ABSTRACT FROM AUTHOR] Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...There are some things that you can study that are, that are intellectually so beautiful it's gratifying to study it for its own sake, I mean when you can see it you think 'oh yes...this, this has to be right'. And it's just such a beautiful and elegant chain of reasoning like I, I sometimes hear people talking about murder mysteries or something or where the inspector, Inspector Poirot, you know, sort of engages in this, or Sherlock Holmes or whatever, engages in this beautiful piece of deductive logic to determine who did something. Well that's sort of about one percent of what you can be talking about with, with some mathematics...."

6945. Picker, Leonard. "A New MWA Grand Master." Publishers Weekly 252, no. 50 (2005): 44-44.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents an interview with Leonard Picker, a mystery fiction writer in the U.S. He says he feels appreciates being selected as a Mystery Writers of America Grand Master. He is set to publish his ninth Abe Lieberman mystery, as of December 2005. He based the character on film director Don Siegel. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Back when I was 12, it was what was available, what I could get in the library. I couldn't even go to a drugstore then and buy a paperback, so I read Sherlock Holmes, and I loved it...."

6946. Picton, John. "All I watch for Christmas From Alastair Sim's Scrooge to favorite sitcoms, TV celebrities have their holiday viewing all mapped out.; [SA2 Edition]." December 24, 1994; SW16.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Gosh! Golly! Gee-whiz! That's a tanned Elwy Yost, host of TVO's Saturday Night At The Movies, down-home in Vancouver and contemplating what he'll be viewing on the box during this festive season. He is one of a number of show-biz personalities asked by Starweek to share their TV picks over the holidays. And, it turns out, they'll be doing their viewing from as far away as Aruba and Winnipeg. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...I never fail to watch It's A Wonderful Life," says Elwy. 'It's so sentimental. Frank Capra (the movie's director) told me it was his favorite, and so did Jimmy Stewart (star of the film). It has a wonderful Christmas feeling about it. It has a lot of the feeling of A Christmas Carol, where Scrooge is allowed to look back over his life.' Lining up his festive viewing, he's planning to watch some

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

mysteries -- Sherlock Holmes's pursuit of The Hound Of The Baskervilles is a favorite -- and he'll be renting the little-known movie The Three Godfathers, a western based on the story of Jesus's birth...."

6947. Pierce, Charles P. "Mike Alstott's head." Esquire 130, no. 4 (1998): 54.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides information on the Tampa Bay Buccaneers football player Mike Alstott. What makes up a football player's head; Why the heads of players become weapons; Background data Alstott; Details on his career in football; How Alstott uses his head in the game; Why football is a game of deliberate and calibrated violence; Fatalities which were attributed by head injuries in this game. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...It is the dark secret at football's heart that in no other sport, not even in boxing, is the physical destruction of its participants so integral not only to the game's appeal but to the game itself. It is a brave but fearsome bargain that Mike Alstott makes with himself every time he puts his head down and goes. 'I confess that I covet your skull.' -- Dr. James Mortimer to Sherlock Holmes in the Hound of the Baskervilles...."

6948. Pinck, Dan. "A.J. Liebling, a writist at work." American Scholar 67, no. 1 (1998): 27.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the author's account of his employment as a writer at the 'The New Yorker' a periodical. His description of his boss Mr. Liebling; His first project in the publication; Experiences he had in his work. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...For Mr. Liebling, the scent of a dead publisher or a dying newspaper brought him up sharply, like Sherlock Holmes setting out on a new case from 221B Baker Street. His special venom was reserved for William Randolph Hearst, Roy Howard, Frank Munsey, Col. Robert R. McCormick, Joseph Medill Patterson, and their newspapers...."

6949. Pinsker, Sanford. "Ruminating about what college students read, and once read." Academic Questions 10, no. 3 (1997): 10.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Exhorts college students to take time out from their myriad activities to spend time to read. Mission as an English professor to help undergraduates become lifetime serious readers; Suggested readings for college students. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Granted, many caught the reading bug long before they first donned a college sweat shirt--some with Mother Goose stories, others with adventure novels such as Treasure Island or fascinating characters like Sherlock Holmes. What matters may be less the book than the fact that it made the sheer power of the printed word immanent...."

6950. Pinsky, Robert. "Myths of the Workroom." American Poetry Review 34, no. 3 (2005): 23-24.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an article about the influence of environmental conditions on poetry writing. Factors that influence a writer's mood for writing; Significance of walking to a writer; Characteristics of a room suitable for writing. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...My keyboard and saxophone are avenues out of the room while I remain in it. So too, the fax machine, the CD-player, the telephone, the cable-modem. Closer to my desires than those, the O.E.D. and the Odyssey. This place is mine and not mine. I am in it and not in it. It is saturated with me and alien to me; crowded with my stuff, it bleaches me out of the stuff and becomes a theatrical contraption as it oscillates between Zen retreat and Sherlock Holmes parlor...."

6951. Pitt, David. "Indigo Christmas." Booklist 104, no. 22 (2008): 43.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "Indigo Christmas" by Jeanne M. Dam. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Luckily, Hilda's a resourceful woman, and she soon comes up with an ingenious solution to her investigative problem, one that will, not to give too much away, be of particular interest to Sherlock Holmes fans. The novel has a suspenseful story, but, as usual, it's the characters and setting (rendered in precise but not obtrusive detail) that really capture our interest"

6952. Pittman Iii, Frank. "A buyer's guide to psychotherapy." Psychology Today 27, no. 1 (1994): 50.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Offers information from a psychiatrist on how find the right therapist for you. Value dilemmas and psychotherapy; The myth of therapeutic neutrality; The blaming blight; Therapy as an adversarial process; Your therapist's view of marriage; More. INSETS: Choosing a therapist to hire; The mental health professionals; What makes a good therapist? Last inset includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Good therapists have got to be eager detectives and explorers, people who like to solve mysteries and figure out how life works. They have a homing device that leads them quickly and directly to the aspects of the situation that don't make sense. Sherlock Holmes and Sigmund Freud had more in common than cocaine...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6953. Plain, Gill. "Rankin Revisited: an Interview with Ian Rankin." Scottish Studies Review 4, no. 1 (2003): 126-137.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Interviews author Ian Rankin, on the process of writing and about his fiction. Reason for his decision to embark on writing a collection of short stories; Plot of his book "Black and Blue"; Influence of Edinburgh, Scotland and its criminal history in his books. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The big problem for crime fiction came with Sherlock Holmes. Up until then, it looked as if the crime novel was going to be written by serious writers about serious working police officers. I'm thinking of Wilkie Collins, and Dickens' Bleak House. But suddenly along come Sherlock Holmes, this 'consulting' detective -- you never see him getting paid -- and suddenly the police officer is reduced to a kind of bumbling walk-on part...."
6954. Platten, David. "Polar-village': The French Roman Noir Beyond the City Walls." Romance Studies 25, no. 2 (2007): 95-110.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Cultural historians trace the origins of the hard-boiled crime story to the American Depression of the 1920s and the pulp magazines. Thus, in contrast to the classic 'whodunnit', the modern, naturalistic crime narrative is regarded as a child of the city. However, its French-language equivalent, the 'roman noir', engages in different kinds of relationship to the modern city. In this tradition the conceit of the iconic noir cityscape is mobilized through narratives which frame the urban environment as a direct threat to the human condition. Indeed the French roman noir reverses the direction of flow, which, in the literary mainstream of the nineteenth century, swept the hero of the novel from the provinces to the capital...." Includes passing references to Holmes. "...Consequently, the city may be represented as a reassuring haven for the beleaguered crimefighter, so that the reality of Edinburgh for Ian Rankin is concentrated in the Oxford Bar, where his Inspector Rebus's curmudgeonly moroseness is soothed. Like Holmes's London and Morse's Oxford, Rebus' Edinburgh has become assimilated to the tourist's itinerary....Conventional wisdom has it that with the traditional detective novel, the outbreak of violent crime signifies the potential breakdown of society and its values. Thus, the intervention of the normally eccentric detective, who is either marginal to society, like Sherlock Holmes, or an outsider, like Poirot, is designed not only to solve the crime but to restore order to society...."
6955. Polkinghorne, John. "Beyond Darwin." Christian Century 122, no. 23 (2005): 25-28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An excerpt from the book "Exploring Reality: The Intertwining of Science and Religion," by John Polkinghorne is presented. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...When Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson first meet, the great investigator feigns not to know whether the earth goes round the sun or the sun around the earth. He defends his apparent ignorance simply by asking what it matters for his daily work as a detective. Of course, it does not matter at all, but human beings know many things that neither bear relation to mundane necessities nor could plausibly be considered simply as spin-offs from the exercise of rational skills developed to cope with those necessities...."
6956. Pommier, Rod. "Observing With Class." Astronomy 30, no. 10 (2002): 84.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the classification of galaxies by Edwin Hubble. Elliptical galaxies; Spiral galaxies; Barred spiral galaxies; Where and how galaxies can be viewed. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...For our trip down the line of classic spirals, we'll need to put on our Sherlock Holmes caps again. Appropriately enough, we begin with the whimsical Sombrero Galaxy, M104, in Virgo...."
6957. Porter, James W. "What Makes Science, Science?" American Scientist 96, no. 3 (2008): 178-178.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Rothstein and Olanow show that patients taking levodopa to suppress the ravages of Parkinson's disease sometimes lose impulse control. This coincidental observation has led to research that may one day provide insight into the nature of addiction. Such connections give scientific voice to this dialogue from Sherlock Holmes: 'People said it was just fate, a series of unfortunate circumstances!' 'Rubbish, my dear Watson. 'Coincidental' events are rarely unrelated, rather their connections are, as yet, unknown.' As usual, American Scientist's contents demonstrate that science is international, an expression of the human spirit and not the property of any sovereign nation.... "
6958. Posner, Gary P. "ETs may be out there ... but he says they're not here." Skeptic 7, no. 4 (1999): 77.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Interviews aerospace journalist Philip J. Klass on his research on unidentified flying objects (UFO). Investigations on the existence of UFO; Reactions to UFO hoaxes; Books on UFO; Famous cases of UFO sightings and crashes; Views on alien abductions. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Dubbed the 'Sherlock Holmes of UFOlogy' in a book review, Klass's public persona more closely resembles that of the late Howard Cosell. He may rub many the wrong way but, like Cosell, Klass 'tells it like it is,' and welcomes the ensuing heat...."

6959. Pothos, Emmanuel M., and Patrick Juola. "Characterizing linguistic structure with mutual information." British Journal of Psychology 98, no. 2 (2007): 291-304.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "We explore mutual information (MI) as a means of characterizing linguistic statistical structure. The MI between two linguistic tokens x and y is the degree to which seeing x helps us anticipate the occurrence of y. We computed MI between words in 595 samples of written text in 25 languages. Our analyses indicate that MI dependencies do not extend beyond a range of five words. Moreover, the similarity between MI profiles of different languages was used to cluster the languages. These results are discussed in terms of a putative link between short-term memory and linguistic structure and the further utility of MI in terms of characterizing the latter." [Abstract from author] Includes references to Holmes. "...Secondly, we used the combined Sherlock Holmes novels from the ECI/MC1 database, which resulted in a corpus of approximately 750,000 tokens and about 23,000 types. We then phonologically transcribed from orthography to the International Phonetic Alphabet the Sherlock Holmes novels, using the Mobylist Pronunciator Ite (Copyright 1988-1993, Grady Ward)...."

6960. Price, Gary, and Chris Sherman. "Exploring the Invisible Web." Online 25, no. 4 (2001): 32.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses seven strategies essential for successfully navigating the hidden territories of the Web or the Internet. Explanation on Invisible Web; Advantage of considering oneself as a hunter instead of a searcher; Tips on using search engines; Implementation of an intelligence network called the 'Baker Street Irregulars'; Use of Invisible Web pathfinders.

6961. Prince, Cathryn J. "The Indiana Jones of rabbis." Christian Science Monitor 99, no. 119 (2007): 20-20.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profile of Rabbi Menachem Youlus. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Part Indiana Jones and part Sherlock Holmes, scribe Youlus travels the world following leads on sacred scrolls, brokering secret deals for them, smuggling them in ingenious fashion across hostile borders, and even digging in the earth for them...."

6962. Pritchard-Schoch, Teresa, and Susan Hutchens. "Remote access to public records. (Cover story)." Database Magazine 17, no. 1 (1994): 14.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the computer programs that permit remote access to public records by the public. Reasons why the state/local government allow remote access to public records; Computer program descriptions that access to public records; User costs; Contact information. INSET: A personal tale of access to personal data (Paula Hane). Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...IA excels in the cross-selling of its database features. Some time ago, IA introduced the 'Sleuth' feature. Sleuth allows a database novice to perform like an amateur Sherlock Holmes. Sleuth performs a simultaneous search of over 145 IA files from more than 45 sources and compiles a list of relationships between individuals and businesses...."

6963. Proctor, Edward. "Boolean Operators and the Naive End-User: Moving to AND." Online 26, no. 4 (2002): 34.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the impact of the incorrect use of Boolean operators on the effective use of electronic resources. Problem with many site-specific search engines; Counter-intuitive nature of Boolean logic; Complicating factor for inexperienced users; Problem of conceptualization. Article opens with a Holmesian quote from the Hound of the Baskervilles: "The world is full of obvious things, which nobody by any chance ever observes."

6964. Prophet, Graham. "Finding the limits." EDN Europe 55, no. 10 (2008): 6-6.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The author reflects on the accident of the British Airways Boeing 777 at the Heathrow airport in London, England. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Accident investigators like to be able to positively identify the cause of such an incident. In this case, they have had no choice but to adopt

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

the reductive process of, in the manner of Sherlock Holmes, eliminating everything that is impossible and concluding that what remains must be the answer...."

6965. Prum, Deborah M. "Finding a doctor: Making the smart choice." Current Health 26, no. 7 (2000): 20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on issues to consider when choosing a doctor. One heading in the article advises to "Imitate Sherlock Holmes."
6966. ———. "Requiem in B Flat Major for One Tuba." Virginia Quarterly Review 76, no. 4 (2000): 695.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the short story 'Requiem in B Flat Major for One Tuba.' Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Of course, I had other books, too. The ones my parents had passed on to me. My father's Milton's Complete Poems had illustrations that scared me to death as a kid. My mother had simpler and lighter tastes, volumes of Sherlock Holmes mysteries and a collection of stories by O. Henry...."
6967. Pryor, Robert G. L., Norman E. Amundson, and Jim E. H. Bright. "Probabilities and Possibilities: The Strategic Counseling Implications of the Chaos Theory of Careers. (Cover story)." Career Development Quarterly 56, no. 4 (2008): 309-318.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The chaos theory of careers emphasizes both stability and change in its account of career development. This article outlines counseling strategies derived from this emphasis in terms of convergent or probability thinking and emergent or possibility thinking." Includes passing references to Holmes. "...Such an approach views each decision maker as a kind of 'vocational Sherlock Holmes.' Holmes was the master detective who, through the application of rigorous deductive reasoning, was able to eliminate successive potential suspects until the true perpetrator of the felony was discovered. In the world of Sherlock Holmes, all the information required to make the right decision is 'out there' waiting to be discovered, and one merely needs to apply acute observation and irrelitable logic to solve the problem...."
6968. Puffer-Rothenberg, Maureen. "The Cabinet of Curiosities." Magill Book Reviews, no. (2003).
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // An archaeologist teams with a mysterious FBI agent and an ambitious journalist to stop a serial killer who may be immortal. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Fans of Preston and Child will also learn more about Special Agent Pendergast, a cross between Fox Mulder and Sherlock Holmes, whose background and motives are revealed more clearly in the course of this story."
6969. Quicoli, Antonio Carlos. "The Enigma of Ezequiel and The Covert Theme of Dom Casmurro." Luso-Brazilian Review 44, no. 1 (2007): 61-93.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes.
6970. Quint, Barbara. "Changing Standards, Changing Value Judgments." Information Today 18, no. 5 (2001): 10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses value of information and services found on the Internet. Standards for judging value and the definitions of what constitutes quality which are evolving in the all-digital world; Experiences searching for and using e-books; Use of legal transcripts from the Internet; Value of information from the Internet. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...This Black Mask site actually linked to a vast array of leisure reading. I didn't even bother to look for the mystery genre material, except for a Sherlock Holmes pastiche called 'A Double-Barreled Detective Story' by Mark Twain...."
6971. Quinton, Brian. "The Final Countdown." Telephony 237, no. 14 (1999): 8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Deals with the move of Bell Atlantic to file application to the United States Federal Communications Commission for permission to sell long-distance to its customers in New York state. Amount spent by the company in its plan; Competitors of the company; Challenges faced by the company in offering the service. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "As Sherlock Holmes would say, the game is afoot. Bell Atlantic's application for FCC permission to sell long-distance to the 8 million customers in New York state caps its efforts to offer a complete communications service, including high-speed data and wireless, over a nationwide platform...."
6972. Rabinowitz, Peter J. "The Rhetoric of Reference; or, Shostakovich's Ghost Quartet." Narrative 15, no. 2 (2007): 239-256.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article focuses on the interpretation of author Wayne C. Booth about the Dmitrii Dmitrievich Shostakovich's classical piece "Eight Quartet" from a narrative theorist's perspective. It has been stated that the piece was created due to the increasing pressure experienced by Shostakovich to join the Communist Party. The quartet "In Memory of the Victims of Fascism and War" has been made in commemoration of the devastation in Germany. The self references of the music are focused on the experiences of the victims. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...And Raymond Chandler tells us something about what Philip Marlowe is not like when he has Marlowe tell General Sternwood, 'I'm not Sherlock Holmes or Philo Vance...'" 6973. Radcliff, Deborah. "Crime in the 21st century." InfoWorld 20, no. 50 (1998): 65.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines the emergence of the field of computer forensics due to the increasing sophistication of computer crimes. New Technologies Inc.'s offering of a three-day course on computer forensics; Ways by which law enforcement agencies are preparing themselves against computer criminals; Types of crimes that employers and businesses are exposed to; Basic rules for evidence recovery. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Call Anderson a self-taught Sherlock Holmes for the 21st century. In his past life, Anderson developed tools to aid him in his job as a computer investigations agent for the IRS...."

6974. Rader, Rick. "Somebody Stole Our Tent." The Exceptional Parent 34, no. 5 (2004): 8.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The writer expresses his concern that although there have been great improvements in the lives of people with disabilities, there is still a large number of denials, refusals, appeals, unfunded mandates, loopholes, and exclusions being applied to cases. He says that it is disappointing that it still takes laws, statutes, and studies to make society do the fair and equitable thing for people with disabilities. Includes multiple reference to Holmes, including the World's Funniest Joke.

6975. Rados, Carol. "FDA Law Enforcement: Critical to Product Safety." FDA consumer 40, no. 1 (2006): 21-27.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses the importance of laws enforced by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) in promoting product safety. It presents the process of the enforcement of the laws, including outreach programs initiated by the FDA. The authority of FDA inspectors in enforcing the laws is stated. It also features the challenges faced by the inspectors in their work. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...From sample snatching to a Sherlock Holmes approach to enforcing the laws of the time, inspectors used all of their senses to poke and prod, taste and smell, inspect, examine, and observe suspect food and drug products...."

6976. Rainer, Peter. "No profound entries in 'The Nanny Diaries'." Christian Science Monitor, Aug 24, 2007: 11-14.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of the movie. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Anyone who knows anything about the real world of upper East Side nannies will tell you that before anybody is hired, the combined talents of Hercule Poirot and Sherlock Holmes are usually enlisted...."

6977. Rance, Nick. "'Truly Serpentine': 'New Journalism', In Cold Blood and the Vietnam War." Literature & History 11, no. 2 (2002): 78.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Cites the development of 'new journalism' as a perception of events going against conventional wisdom and expectations. Evocation of the mass murder incident to kindle 'In Cold Blood' by Truman Capote and its coincidence with Tom Wolfe's anthology 'The New Journalism.' Mission to expose imputed fact as fantasy; Affinity between crime and punishment in Kansas and the issues of the Vietnam war. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Capote now brooded 'with the austerity of a Greek or an Elizabethan', rather than being the 'artful charmer' of The Grass Harp or Breakfast at Tiffany's; he is again to be credited with the enticing knack of a Sherlock Holmes, via his accumulated records of details of past cases, or of a Miss Marple, via the files in her head, of eliciting the moral that the world has been transformed less than one might have supposed...."

6978. Ranger, Terence. "Scotland Yard in the Bush: Medicine Murders, Child Witches and the Construction of the Occult: a Literature Review." Africa 77, no. 2 (2007): 272-283.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses the techniques employed by detective agency Scotland Yard in interpreting data related to occultism, child witchcraft, and exorcism in Africa. According to the author,

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Scotland Yard had previously adopted the attitudes of ignorance, skepticism, and credulity in investigating African occult. He asserts that the agency lacked scientific measures in identifying the causes of the criminal case. Includes references to Holmes. "In the Sherlock Holmes stories Scotland Yard famously does not deploy science or make use of all those studies of blood and ash and bone which Holmes himself had pioneered. But the Yard is never so clumsy as when the occult seems to be involved--with suspected vampires, spectral dogs, tribal fetishes....A forensic squad disinterred skeletons from a cemetery in Benin City to find a match for Adam's bones. Sherlock Holmes would have been impressed....A particularly telling example, which in many ways brings together everything I have been arguing, is David Pratten's The Man-Leopard Murders: history and society in colonial Nigeria (Pratten 2007). Pratten's wonderful title might well be that of a Sherlock Holmes murder mystery...."

6979. Rapaport, Richard. "Singapore Sting." Forbes 159, no. 7 (1997): 84-89.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on computer software piracy in Singapore. The effort of Christopher Austin, who works both for the United States-based Business Software Alliance and Microsoft; Why Singapore is a focus of some pirate-hunters; The raid carried out on P&V Computer PTE, of which Chng Teck Bin is the proprietor; Why software producers must invest resources to privately investigate piracy before the government will get involved. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Solomon has been surveilling the building for weeks, watching suspicious-looking couriers picking up brown-wrapped packages at the site. The tip-off to the site came half a world away when a package containing pirated CD-ROMs was seized in Cyprus. Sherlock Holmes was not needed; the package had the Ang Mo Kio address on it...."

6980. Rapezzi, Claudio, Roberto Ferrari, and Angelo Branzi. "White coats and fingerprints: diagnostic reasoning in medicine and investigative methods of fictional detectives." BMJ: British Medical Journal 331, no. 7531 (2005): 1491-1494.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article suggests that an ideal clinician would present a harmonic fusion of almost all the investigative methods of fictional detectives such as Sherlock Holmes and avoid slavish adherence to protocols and procedures. Some analogies between detective fiction and clinical method include the fact that they were born in the same historical period (the second half of the 19th century), they both developed with the upper middle classes, they share a faith in logic, they have similar working patterns, and they involve an exchange of roles (in crime fiction). Shared characteristics of ideal detectives and clinicians include an ability in observation, an ability in deduction, knowledge, an ability to reconstruct psychological and social profiles, and the ability to spot inconsistencies. The article discusses the processes of deduction, induction, and abduction.

6981. Rasmussen, R. Kent. "Audio reviews." Library Journal 123, no. 1 (1998): 166.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the audio book 'Psmith in the City,' by P.G. Wodehouse. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Originally published in 1910, this novel was the first in Wodehouse's long writing career with an adult character as its protagonist. And what a character he is! Though barely out of Eton, Psmith is a brash sophisticate who speaks like a Sherlock Holmes and loves to stir up trouble...."

6982. Rasula, Jed. "When the Exception Is the Rule: Don Quixote as Incitement to Literature." Comparative Literature 51, no. 2 (1999): 123.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the book 'Don Quixote.' Views on its nature as a literary work; Social and philosophical implications of the novel. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Cervantes' character, like Hamlet, Sherlock Holmes, and Robinson Crusoe, began to stray from his book almost as soon as he was invented..."

6983. Rathbone, Julian. "Character assassination." New Statesman & Society 8, no. 383 (1995): 34.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on crime-writing. Author's opinion of modern mysteries; Quotes from Colin Dexter; Description of society; Details on authors ability to go inside the criminal's mind; Authors who set their story against real social backgrounds; Thriller/adventure stories; Advice to crime writers from author. Includes passing references to Doyle and Holmes. "...Occasionally, I admit, I succumb, but only when the whole thing is removed completely and self-consciously from real life--as in, say, David Suchet's Poirot, or Jeremy Brett's or Basil's Rathbone's Sherlock Holmes....Colin Dexter goes on to say, and many of my colleagues agree with him: 'The fiction writer who sets out to be morally uplifting or socially valuable soon becomes an unread writer.' You know, like Jane Austen, the Brontës, George Eliot, who didn't write crime novels, or Dickens, Conan Doyle, Conrad, Graham Greene, Raymond Chandler, Dashiell Hammett, Eric Ambler, Geoffrey Household and Lawrence Sanders (whose moral fervour almost got me off the bottle), and many, many more who did or do write crime novels?..."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6984. Rauch, Jonathan. "In defense of prejudice." Harper's Magazine 290, no. 1740 (1995): 37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the essay 'In Defense of Prejudice,' by Jonathan Rauch, regarding the contradiction of prejudice and justice. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...What they told us in high school about this process is very largely a lie. The Enlightenment tradition taught us that science is orderly, antiseptic, rational, the province of detached experimenters and high-minded logicians. In the popular view, science stands for reason against prejudice, open-mindedness against dogma, calm consideration against passionate attachment--all personified by pop-science icons like the magisterially deductive Sherlock Holmes, the coolly analytic Mr. Spock, the genially authoritative Mr. Science (from our junior-high science films)...."
6985. Ravetto, Kriss. "Shaking Down LA Cool: Hopping Up Neo-Noir." Emergences: Journal for the Study of Media & Composite Cultures 9, no. 2 (1999): 207.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines the critics about the writers and filmmakers in Los Angeles, California. Identification of a political cultural nihilist; Discrepancy in interpreting pulp fictions; Views about the counterfeit model of morality, history and political ideology. Includes references to Holmes.
6986. Rawson, Stratton. "Guide to records." American Record Guide 61, no. 2 (1998): 210.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the music recording 'Quartet' and 'Octet,' composed by Johan Svendsen. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Svendsen composed noble, harmonically adventurous symphonies. He wrote a Romance for violin and orchestra so popular on concert and recital stages as to make his name a household commodity. Even the fictional [sic] Sherlock Holmes mentions him. Transferring the panache, intelligence, and savvy stage presence that would have helped to make him a dominating violin virtuoso to the conductor's platform, Svendsen became one of the star conductors of the late 19th Century...."
6987. ———. "Guide to Records: Stanford." American Record Guide 62, no. 6 (1999): 219.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the violin music recording 'Violin Pieces,' composed by Charles Villiers Stanford. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...But never fear; I know how to sell this appealing disc. Just rename it, A Sherlock Holmes Recital. For as anyone who has ever entered Baker Street knows, Lady Halle was Holmes's favorite violinist."
6988. Raymond, Joan. "Forget the pipe, Sherlock: Gear for tomorrow's detectives." Newsweek 131, no. 25 (1998): 12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Looks at sophisticated equipment being developed as of 1998 to process information from crime scenes. Reduction of the number of people present at a crime scene, which reduces chances of degradation of evidence; Equipment that enhances fingerprints and the images on surveillance videotapes; Development of a device that would permit analysis of DNA samples at the crime scene; Other advances. Inset: The Y2K watch. Includes passing references to Holmes. "Sherlock Holmes could study a single footprint and deduce that the person who left it parted his hair on the right, wore glasses and suffered from migraines. In the nonfiction world, solving crimes is tougher. Fingerprints get smudged. Blood samples prove inconclusive. Add a savvy defense attorney, and a once compelling case can look pretty flimsy.... It's entirely possible that someday we'll be able to yield a profile from a print that tells us it's from a female who smokes, uses cocaine and is diabetic," Bohanan says. That kind of deduction would do Sherlock Holmes proud."
6989. Reader, Stephanie. "Radio, TV, Music: Tuned-in Readers offer lists of TV hits and misses." The News Tribune (Tacoma), December 14, 1994: E5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Again, one-voters are too numerous to list, but ranged from 'The Sherlock Holmes Mysteries' to 'Screen Scene' to 'The Real World' to 'Nature World.'..."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

6990. Reaves, Michael. "The Legend of the Midnight Cruiser." Fantasy & Science Fiction 105, no. 6 (2003): 6-23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the short story 'The Legend of the Midnight Cruiser,' by Michael Reaves. Note at end of story includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Twenty years have passed since we last published a story by Mr. Reaves, so a few biographical notes about this author certainly seem to be in order. Michael Reaves began publishing short fiction in the 1970s, with the majority of his short stories appearing here (remember 'Werewind'?). His first novel was published in 1978 and sixteen more have seen print since then, including The Shattered World and Voodoo Child. His next novel, Armageddon Blues, is due out in 2004. He also has extensive screenwriting credits, including an Emmy award for his work on Batman: The Animated Series. His most recent publication is an anthology he and John Pelan coedited, Shadows Over Baker Street, which crosses Sherlock Holmes with H. P. Lovecraft's cosmos...."
6991. Regan, F. Scott. "The Might Casey: Enduring Folk Hero of Failure." Journal of Popular Culture 31, no. 1 (1997): 91-109.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the fictitious character of Casey Farrel and its relationship with American culture and baseball, with reference to the poem 'Casey at the Bat: A Ballad of the Republic,' by Ernest L. Thayer. Popularity of the character; In-depth look at the history of this melodramatic poem. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Whether for personal aggrandizement, serious scholarly research, or as a prank, the pages of sports and popular magazines were filled with speculations inspired by the mysteries of 'Casey.' One can't help but be reminded of the similarities to Sherlock Holmes, Winnie the Pooh and other fictional icons who have come to be thought of as real people...."
6992. Reich, Jeff. "Simply irresistible." Writer 121, no. 7 (2008): 6-6.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses various published reports within the issue, including one by William G. Tapply on the keys to writing a long-running books series and another by John D. MacDonald on developing a famous book character. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "I've been a mystery fan for as long as I can remember. Growing up, I loved to watch those corny Sherlock Holmes and Charlie Chan movies from the '30s and '40s, and I read every Perry Mason and Maigret story I could get my hands on...."
6993. Reingold, I. David, and Ron DeLorenzo. "A concrete analogy for combustion analysis problems." Journal of chemical education 72, no. 3 (1995): 222.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an analogy for combustion analysis problems, using real life objects to which students can apply logic. Considering a Sherlock Holmes case; Case problems and solutions.
6994. Reis, Harry T. "Steps toward the ripening of relationship science." Personal Relationships 14, no. 1 (2007): 1-23.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The perils of 'theorizing before the facts are in,' as Sherlock Holmes put it, are evident, leading to wasted effort...."
6995. Remmerde, Jon. "Slip sliding away at Girl Scout camp." Christian Science Monitor 100, no. 80 (2008): 18-18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...I was never there to see this sequence of events, but it didn't take a Sherlock Holmes to piece together what led up to the hole in the wall, especially since the most honest of the adults told me what had happened...."
6996. Remmerde, Juniper C. "A child's treasure, real and imagined." Christian Science Monitor 89, no. 213 (1997): 16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Relates the author's experience with a treasure chest for memories. Types of objects that went in the treasure chest; The memories evoked when organizing the treasure chest; The value of the items in the chest to the author and her sister. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...We found more notes, this time between Sherlock Holmes and Watson. I remembered how resolutely they had tried to solve that murder, while the whole time my cousin, who was visiting us for a week, talked so loudly that the great detective found it distracting. Holmes hid his notes in a knothole in the ancient wall of our cabin, and our cousin kept asking what all those top-secret notes were about, little suspecting that she was on the scene of a crime...."
6997. Renaud, Chris. "The case of the missing amphibians." Environment 39, no. 6 (1997): 24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the decline in the population of amphibians. Reasons for the decrease in

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- population; Recommendations of researchers on the population decline. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "It's a mystery worthy of Sherlock Holmes: All over the world, once-common species of frogs, toads, and salamanders are disappearing, often at alarming rates...."
6998. Reyes, Alfonso. "About the Detective Novel." Literary Review 38, no. 1 (1994): 62-65.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an essay about the detective novel. Plot-oriented and character-oriented styles; Detective novel as an elaborate genre; Characteristics of the detective novel. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Perhaps the detective novel was born around 1840. Some trace it back as far as the biblical story of Daniel; we don't believe that. It is certain that in the Book of Daniel, revealed to us is the fraud of some priests during the night, surreptitiously and secretly devouring the offerings left at the foot of an altar, fraud that Daniel discovered by scattering ashes and looking at the footprints. (Sherlock Holmes did the same, more or less, in 'The Adventure of the Golden Pince-Nez.') What is certain is that, if Daniel invented the art of detection, he didn't invent the detective story...."
6999. Reynolds, Teri. "Spacetime and imagetext." Germanic Review 73, no. 2 (1998): 161.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines a literary genre, the imagetext, that disrupts the distinction between words and images. Details on Gotthold Lessing's 'Laocoon'; Formulation of the parallel association of painting to space and poetry; Details on the book 'Abend mit Goldrand.' Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...In fact, like all past indexes, these letters can be read via reverse causality--the darkness or intensity of the ink trace seen as an indication of the force of the finger's blow. 'It is a curious thing' remarks Sherlock Holmes in 'A Case of Identity,' 'that a type-writer has really quite as much individuality as a man's handwriting'..."
7000. Rich, Paul, and Guillermo De Los Reyes. "Mexican Caricature and the Politics of Popular Culture." Journal of Popular Culture 30, no. 1 (1996): 133-145.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The article focuses on the use of caricature by Mexican cartoonists to depict political issues involving the country's relations with the U.S." Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "The genius of popular culture studies is that sometimes they provide a flash of insight which narrower approaches never do. Such is the case with what can be called, with a Sherlock Holmes flourish, the affair of the sombreood dozer. It illustrates how the ordinary can exemplify a complex historical sequence...."
7001. Richards, Jeffrey. "From Christianity to Paganism: The New Middle Ages and the Values of 'Medieval' Masculinity." Cultural Values 3, no. 2 (1999): 213.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "In the context of the upsurge of interest in all things medieval, this essay examines the promotion in popular culture of 'medieval' masculine role models. It begins with an assessment of the 19th century's creation of a version of medieval masculinity which was essentially Christian and chivalric. It traces the transfer of this image from literature to cinema in the 20th century." Includes references to Holmes.
7002. Rifkind, Hugo. "Sherlock Holmes." The Times (London), December 14, 2006: 17.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Hull City Archives claims to have uncovered documents stating that Sherlock Holmes spent the last years of his life living in a local butcher's shop and receiving benefit payments. 'Popular belief was that he had retired to Sussex to keep bees,' says a proud spokesman. Mmm, we muse. And also that he was made up. A shrug. 'The documents may refer to another Sherlock Holmes.' Excellent deduction."
7003. Righetti, Pier Giorgio, and Egisto Boschetti. "Sherlock Holmes and the proteome – a detective story." FEBS Journal 274, no. 4 (2007): 897-905.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Beyond title, unknown references to Holmes.
7004. Ritter, Steven. "20th Century Russian Chamber Music (Music Release)." American Record Guide 64, no. 5 (2002): 194.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the music recording '20th Century Russian Chamber Music,' composed by various composers and performed by various artists. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The playing is suave and saturated with brilliant solo work and flowering color. There are no difficulties that are not met and solved with all the dispatch of Sherlock Holmes on the case...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

7005. Roane, Kit R. "The CSI Effect (Cover story)." U.S. News & World Report 138, no. 15 (2005): 48-54.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses how the television show "CSI: Crime Scene Investigation" has impacted real life. How many Americans, stoked by the technical wizardry they see on TV, are disappointed when they encounter the real world of law and order; Jurors who increasingly expect forensic evidence in every case, and expect it to be conclusive; How police and prosecutors are waking up to the need to cater to a jury's heightened expectations; Crime labs which are understaffed and often do not receive all of the relevant physical evidence from a crime scene; How juries tend to believe forensic experts and the evidence they provide, even when they shouldn't. Includes passing references to Holmes. "...At trial, many juries tend to believe forensic experts and the evidence they provide--even when they shouldn't. Sandra Anderson and her specially trained forensic dog, Eagle, are a case in point. Dubbed a canine Sherlock Holmes, Eagle and his trainer were the darlings of prosecutors and police across the country....That doesn't mean forensics can always be believed, however, even when the data are accurate. As Sherlock Holmes said, 'There is nothing more deceptive than an obvious fact.' DNA is a case in point..."
7006. Roberts, Nicholas. "Book and Media Reviews." Addiction Biology 9, no. 1 (2004): 89-91.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews books about addiction biology including "The Road of Excess," by Marcus Boon. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Of course, we know of writers who have written about or indeed used the fashionable drug of their day, e.g. De Quincey, Coleridge, Huxley and Burroughs. We may or may not be surprised at some of the names--Dickens, Proust, Barrett-Browning or Baudelaire. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle is presumably a name that will occasion little surprise...."
7007. Robertson, Barbara. "Crossing Over." Computer Graphics World 26, no. 9 (2003): 16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...It's a point worth considering this year because digital actors in live-action films have received such a flurry of media attention. Although CC characters first acted in live-action films in 1986 (Young Sherlock Holmes' stained glass man) and starred in live-action films since Casper in 1995, this year they crossed over. Take, for example, the MTV Movie Awards in May...."
7008. Robertson, Campbell. "Seeking the Nixon Behind the Caricature." New York Times, April 20, 2007: 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "In a quiet corner of the bar at the Hotel Plaza Athénée in New York, Frank Langella raised his hands in victory signs, furrowed his brow and shook his jowls violently: the International Symbol for Richard Nixon. Mr. Langella, one of the most celebrated stage actors of his generation, has tackled both Dracula and Sherlock Holmes; he knows what it means to step into a role that is already cemented in myth. But there may be no caricature as permanently etched in the American imagination as the one he's playing now." [Abstract from publisher]
7009. Robertson, Guy. "Mystery Madness: Understanding the Demand for Crime Fiction in Libraries." Felicitate 53, no. 4 (2007): 202-204.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article focuses on increasing demand for crime fiction novels. At the novels, the good guys were portrayed as less than heroic and is often a sympathetic loser while females are frequently seen struggling with misogynistic male bureaucrats. In selecting titles, it is recommended to read reviews and online tools. Key information about increasing trend of purchasing used copies is presented. A passing reference to Holmes in note on author.
7010. Robinson, Denis. "Failing to Agree Or Failing to Disagree?: Personal Identity Quasi-Relativism." Monist 87, no. 4 (2004): 512-536.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on several views on personal identity quasi-relativism. Relevant constraints on views of personal identity; Importance of the link between personal identity and evaluative attitudes and responses; Implication of different person-concept for moral disagreements. Includes references to Holmes (p. 518). "...Suppose Moriarty, facing death, so alters Sherlock Holmes's brain that Holmes's mental life is obliterated, Holmes's body thereafter embodying the only ongoing mental life continuous with the brilliant, corrupt mental life of Moriarty. Many would feel the resulting person, with Holmes's body but Moriarty's mind, should not be honoured as Sherlock Holmes, but condemned and punished as Moriarty, not least for murdering Holmes and commandeering his body. We could say Holmes survives despite losing, along with his mind, his former moral status (and, perhaps, acquiring that of Moriarty). But this would involve contortions of our notions of merit and responsibility which could be avoided by saying that Holmes is no more, and that the object of our current hostility is Moriarty himself. Here ethics puts pressure on ontology: one wellspring of Attitude M...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

7011. Robinson, Lori B. "In the footsteps of Sherlock Holmes: Information search and hypothesis testing." Dissertation Abstracts International. 47, no. 8-B (1987).

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //

7012. Robinson, Susan. "Phil Wilson." Rocks & Minerals 74, no. 4 (1999): 260.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles dinosaur artist Phil Wilson. Works; Style and method of painting; Exhibitions; Educational background; Hobbies. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...In his limited spare time, Wilson enjoys science fiction, photography, model building, 'all things Disney,' and Sherlock Holmes mysteries...."

7013. Robson, John. "Not where but how much." Alberta Report / Newsmagazine 22, no. 47 (1995): 12.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Argues that 'repatriating' the Canadian government's debt will just 'depatriate' everyone else's. The role of the Canadian Debt Retail Agency (CRDA), created in August 1995; Total debt in public hands; Total debt held by foreigners; Comments. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Last year, Ottawa tried to sell Canada Savings Bonds (CSBs) with an annoying cartoon squirrel Sherlock Holmes. This August the federal Department of Finance created a new agency, the Canadian Debt Retail Agency (CRDA), whose mandate is to get more federal government debt into the hands of ordinary Canadians through more mature means of persuasion. While the agency has yet to acquire a chief operating officer, it is already appears to be pursuing more sensible strategies than drawing rodents. But whether its goal will help or hinder the economy is a matter of dispute...."

7014. Rodden, John. "The Reputation of Irving Howe." Society 40, no. 2 (2003): 58-69.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This article addresses the diverse relationships and group affiliations of Irving Howe, the most influential American socialist intellectual of his generation." Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Equally negative was the notice in National Review, written by Joseph Sobran, who was even blunter and dismissed Howe's 'intellectual biography' as hopelessly intellectualized and 'abstract': 'To be anything but a socialist remains for Howe unthinkable, with the result that his has been at bottom an unexamined life. Has it ever crossed his mind that socialism might simply be wrong?... You vaguely gather he has been married once or twice; had some fun, some deeper pleasure; has written some books that (though he is too self-effacing to say so) will bear reading many years hence. But his recollections are so abstract ... And now, if you'll excuse me, I could do with a bit of Sherlock Holmes.'..."

7015. Roden, Barbara. "The Mail." Maclean's 116, no. 49 (2003): 6-8.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents letters to the editor in response to articles in previous issues of "Maclean's." Includes this one from Ashcroft, BC: "As a long-time admirer of Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson and their world, I was pleased to see a quotation from Vincent Starrett's sonnet '221B' in your article about Patrick O'Brian. However, you describe Starrett as an American writer, when he was, in fact, born in Toronto in 1886. He moved to America at an early age, but friends of Holmes in this country are proud of the Canadian connection of one of the leading figures of the Sherlockian movement."

7016. Roeder, Giselle. "Answers to your questions on skin care." Total Health 17, no. 4 (1995): 10.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Answers readers' inquiries on topics about skin care. Creams to cure freckles; Necessity of using night creams; Causes and treatment of spider veins; Alternatives for hair removal creams; Cure for summer acne. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Like Sherlock Holmes looking for the tiniest specks of something, our hide is looked at with quizzical eyes to determine if a freckle, a mark or pimple couldn't be the beginning of something bigger, but not better!"

7017. Roehner, Bertrand M., and Carol H. Shiue. "Comparing the Correlation Length of Grain Markets in China and

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

France." International Journal of Modern Physics C: Computational Physics & Physical Computation 11, no. 7 (2000): 1383.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "In economics, comparative analysis plays the same role as experimental research in physics. In this paper, we closely examine several methodological problems related to comparative analysis by investigating the specific example of grain markets in China and France respectively. This enables us to answer a question in economic history which has so far remained pending, namely whether or not market integration progressed in the 18th century...." Includes an opening quote from The Adventure of the Crooked Man. "Having gathered these facts, Watson, I smoked several pipes over them, trying to separate those which were crucial from others which were merely incidental."

7018. Roetzel, Calvin J. "Paul and the Hermeneutics of Faith." Journal of Religion 87, no. 1 (2007): 90-91.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Paul and the Hermeneutics of Faith," by Francis Watson. Includes passing references to Holmes. "...Just as Watson assisted the famed Sherlock Holmes in search of clues to solve nigh unsolvable crimes, this Watson (Francis) sifts Paul's letters, Scripture, and Jewish commentary for clues to the logic of Paul's hermeneutic....So, though this work is provocative, important, and may be lasting, one is left to wonder if Watson provides the great intuitive leaps that allowed Sherlock Holmes to make amazing breakthroughs to decipher the great riddles of a crime."

7019. Rogers, Michael. "GIS and OCLC Offering Helpful Freebies to Libraries." Library Journal 128, no. 16 (2003): 25-25.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides information on two free services that may be used in library management. Automation software standards from GIS Information Systems; Algorithm for converting bibliographic databases by the OCLC. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Developed in 1998 on the recommendation of the International Federation of Library Associations and Institutions (IFLA), the algorithm describes an automated process that extracts information from MARC21 records, compares it with a standard name authority file, and then brings the records together, based primarily on their author and title. For example, the more than 4000 different forms of The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes would be brought together as a single work using the FRBR algorithm...."

7020. Rose, Jeffrey J. "COMDEX '94 | Pace of change is accelerating." The San Diego Union - Tribune, November 29, 1994: 1.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...World Library Inc. (in Irvine at (800) 443-0238), for example, now offers several movie classics on CD, including 'A Farewell to Arms' and 'Gulliver's Travels,' as well as Three Stooges comedies and a Sherlock Holmes film...."

7021. Roseberry, Craig. "Underworld takes 'Off' On JBO/V2." Billboard 114, no. 37 (2002): 54.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the release of the music recording 'A Hundred Days Off,' by Underworld. Influences of the music recording; Information on an online promotion initiated by V2 Records on September 1, 2002; Concert tours of Underworld in October 2002. "Underworld's music is published by Warner/Chappell and Sherlock Holmes Music for North America and the rest of the world, respectively."

7022. Rosen, Marjorie. "Getting inside the mind of a serial killer." Biography 1, no. 10 (1997): 62.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features US Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) profiler John Douglas. Crime experiences and observations; Investigative abilities; Educational attainment in criminology; Career in criminal psychology; Special training in Applied Criminal Psychology; Fascination on criminal behavior; Lectures and consultations on various murder cases. Inset: The profiling process. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Like Sherlock Holmes, Douglas makes it all seem easy...."

7023. ———. "Titanic, Bismarck, PT 109: Robert Ballard's Amazing Deep-Sea Discoveries." Biography 7, no. 2 (2003): 66.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles oceanographer and deep-sea explorer, known for discovering the sites of the Titanic, the Bismarck, and the Yorktown. His fascination with the sinking of the Titanic in 1912; Discovery of hydrothermal vents; Expertise Ballard has in deep-sea exploration; Childhood; Education; Description of Ballard as a dreamer. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...But playing Sherlock Holmes on the high seas

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

also has its perils...."

7024. Rosenblum, Trudi Miller. "Audio books." Billboard 107, no. 48 (1995): 83.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the audio book recording 'Northern Frights: A Dark Fantasy Anthology' read by R.H. Thompson. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Tangled Web, a new mystery/suspense audio publisher that launched in August with two fine Sherlock Holmes collections, here turns to terror both old and new...."

7025. ———. "Audiobook catalog titles get boost." Billboard 106, no. 21 (1994): 45.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Part 2. Discusses the emergence of the budget audiobook market. Use of low-cost concept to spur sales of previously released products; Publishers' strategies in releasing low-priced catalog product; Random House Audio Publishing's Price-Less line; Dove Audio's Super Sound Buys line; Caution on devaluation of author; Product's similarity to paperback; Harper Audio's Harper Classics line. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The company does not have to hire actors or abridgers or pay for expensive recording sessions, so it can offer its one-hour Harper Classics at $5.99 each; however, by licensing from Caedmon, the company has unearthed a treasure trove of famous performers reading well-known titles. Examples of Harper Classics include Basil Rathbone reading Sherlock Holmes stories, Louis Jourdan reading 'The Little Prince,' Leonard Nimoy reading 'Time War Of The Worlds,' and Dylan Thomas, Ernest Hemingway, and T.S. Eliot reading their own work...."

7026. ———. "Marketing indie audiobook dramas." Billboard 107, no. 6 (1995): 57.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the increasing market for audiobooks with the advent of multivoice dramatizations. Niche marketing through nontraditional outlets; Price adjustment for specific target markets like truckers. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Dramatizations do sell comparably to similar backlist titles, Sensing says, adding that genre is more important than format. 'A Western dramatization would be expected to sell as a regular Western does,' he says. 'Simon & Schuster's Sherlock Holmes radio series does well, and general Sherlock Holmes audio-books also do well.'" 7027. Rosenfeld, Jeff. "Remembering Pat Hughes." Weatherwise 52, no. 4 (1999): 16.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Pays tribute to Pat Hughes, meteorologist and former editor of 'Weatherwise' magazine, who died in 1999. Awards that 'Weatherwise' received while Hughes was editor; His mantra; Career background; Description of his personality; Cause of death. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Pat determined to make Weatherwise a magazine where everyone--not just the unusually scientific--would be comfortable. He mined stories and photos for universal feeling. He loved the gut impact of a great lightning photo, but he also celebrated putting Sherlock Holmes, cats, the Hindenburg, and other surprises on the cover...."

7028. Roth, Daniel. "China tries to kick the piracy habit (Cover story)." Fortune 151, no. 1 (2005): 56-58.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reports on how China's entrepreneurs are asking for protection from intellectual-property thieves. Ben Ye is one of China's many rising young stars. At 24, he won the first round of a business-plan competition at Beijing's prestigious Tsinghua University with a proposal for a web-conferencing company. Rather than stay in the competition, Ye took his idea and started a business called V2 Technology. He has been able to raise $1.3 million and build a 70-person company, yet the plan didn't account for one potentially fatal threat: pirates. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Ye's lawyers declared that the only way to get relief was to find the pirates, collect evidence, and bring it to the cops. 'We said, 'Forget it,' says Ye. 'We aren't Sherlock Holmes.'..."

7029. Roth, Evan. "The Case of The Missing Mailing List; [Final Edition]." The Washington Post, November 24, 1994: b07.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "I searched far and wide, if not well - my Internet-searching skills being no better cultivated than my private-detective skills. On America Online, I typed in some keywords - mystery, mysteries, crime, detectives etc. - to search for newsgroups. The closest thing I found was a newsgroup for Sherlock Holmes fans. Well, I've read the whole Sherlockian canon, and frankly, my dear Watson, I really couldn't care less whether Holmes was still alive (indeed that was one theory that was discussed on the newsgroup). Then I found a true-crime newsgroup that had perhaps a half-dozen posts about crimes that may or may not be factual. Slim pickins.; Then one day I got a tip-off. One of my stoolies - I mean friends - told me to check out the global search feature of Listserv for mailing lists. Just type in global list in the body of an e-mail message and a keyword, such as mystery, he said, and send it to listserv@listserv.com. I tried 'mystery' and had no luck. Then I tried 'mysteries.' Eureka! (Was it Holmes who used to say that?) I learned there was a mailing list named DorothyL. I sent in my subscribe message and got a response. Turned out that DorothyL was just what I was looking for - a friendly group of knowledgeable mystery buffs of all types...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

7030. Roth, Wolff-Michael. "Reading graphs: contributions to an integrative concept of literacy." Journal of Curriculum Studies 34, no. 1 (2002): 1-24.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...If the nature of sign and phenomenon is uncertain, one may expect some dialectic process that fixes a particular reading of sign and phenomenon. Imagine Sherlock Holmes at work, reading a situation, hypothesizing a series of events, re-reading, rehypothetizing, and so on until his reading is consistent with a reasonable series of events. When he begins, even the nature of the sign is in question; it is only when the position of the chair with respect to the table becomes significant to him that he has constructed the sign that will lead him to the murderer...." Note three has an additional reference. "Eco (1984) defines 'sign' as a segmentation of matter pointing to and expressing something other than itself. Signs include letters, words, texts, pictures, drawings and graphs. For the literary Sherlock Holmes, even the positioning of some objects, a piece of hair on a sofa, or the barking of a dog at night were signs referring him to some object, event or phenomenon. In the mathematics education literature, the notion of 'symbol' (Kaput 1987, Greeno 1989) is often used in the same sense as 'sign' in the semiotics literature."

7031. Roth, Wolff-Michael, and Gervase Michael Bowen. "When Are Graphs Worth Ten Thousand Words? An Expert-Expert Study." Cognition & Instruction 21, no. 4 (2003): 429-473.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes (p. 469). "...Traditional lore might expect scientists to read these texts in such a way that some possible content emerges in which all signs are consistent with all others (i.e., we would expect scientists to work like Sherlock Holmes and, in a series of verbal and graphical productions elaborated during a session, specify a content model of a graph in which all elements are consistent such that some complex situation [content] is referred to by a series of signs)...."

7032. Rottman, Joey S. "The inside story." Cortlandt Forum 9, no. 7 (1996): 54.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the author's experience in treating a pregnant woman who was suffering from bloody amniotic fluid. Early diagnosis of abruptio placenta; Dystocia; Cesarean section; Treatment given to the infant who was actively bleeding from a large hemangioma. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...On entrance into the uterine cavity, more grossly bloody amniotic fluid was discovered. The infant boy was delivered without incident. Even Sherlock Holmes could not have found evidence of abruption. The placenta was perfect, gorgeous, and intact...."

7033. Rudge, David Wýss. "A Bayesian Analysis of Strategies in Evolutionary Biology." Perspectives on Science 6, no. 4 (1998): 341.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Analyzes the strategies in evolutionary biology using the Bayes theorem. Philosophy of experiment; Problem of experimental artifact in science; Techniques used by evolutionary biologists. Includes a passing reference to Holmes (p. 351). "...Kettlewell's investigations can also be show to exhibit Franklin's fifth strategy, what Franklin calls the 'Sherlock Holmes strategy' of eliminating possible sources of error and alternative explanations...."

7034. Ruggiero, Guido. "The Strange Death of Margarita Marcellini: Male, Signs, and the Everyday World of Pre-Modern Medicine." American Historical Review 106, no. 4 (2001): 1140-1158.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the issues related to the death of Margarita Marcellini, a patient who died of male disease in Venice, Italy in 1617. Investigation conducted by government agencies on the death of Marcellini in religious context; Analysis on the relationship between culture and medical practice during the period; Terminologies on the diseases associated with magic. Note 18 on p. 1148 includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...In a suggestive, but perhaps not perfect, way, the signs discussed here seem closer to the 'clues'

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

that Carlo Ginzburg associated with Giovanni Morelli, Sherlock Holmes, medical diagnosis, and ancient hunters in "Clues: Roots of an Evidential Paradigm," in Clues, Myths, 96-125."

7035. Russ, John C. "Seeing the Scientific Image, Part 1." Proceedings of the Royal Microscopical Society 39, no. 2 (2004): 97-114.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the dependence of vision on local comparisons of brightness, color, orientation and feature relationships. Recognition as the goal of much of human vision; Color perception; Visual acuity; Communication between eye and brain. Includes a passing reference to Holmes (p. 99).

"...Sherlock Holmes often criticized Watson for 'seeing but not observing' which is as good a distinction as any between having photons fall upon the retina and the conscious mind becoming aware...."

7036. Rust, Jayna. "Here Come the Short-Passage Detectives." Instructor 115, no. 3 (2005): 49-50.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article presents tips on answering comprehension questions. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Why is answering comprehension questions a Sherlock-Holmes worthy challenge for readers at all levels?..."

7037. Růžicka, Jiří. "Comics, a 21st century medium: the history and present state of a medium." New Presence: The Prague Journal of Central European Affairs 11, no. 4 (2008): 50-54.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article focuses on the 21st century history of comics' medium and its state in 2008 in Czech Republic. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Both volumes of Moore's The League of Extraordinary Gentlemen are also excellent. In one volume, Moore extracts and places popular characters from literature (Captain Nemo, Dr Jekyll and Mr Hyde, the Invisible man, etc.) as he draws inspiration from the Victorian Age. These characters face darker elements such as M from the Sherlock Holmes series...."

7038. Ryan, Brent D. "Book Reviews." Journal of Urban Design 11, no. 3 (2006): 367-387.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews The Dictionary of Urbanism by Robert Cowan. Streetwise Press, Tisbury, Wiltshire, UK, 2005, 500 pp., GBP29.95, ISBN 095443300-9. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Of course, because the Dictionary does not represent the entirety of the English language but only a subsection of it, it is to be expected that some content would exist at the conceptual boundary of the field, and that others might fall just outside the boundary of inclusion. Thus, such culturally relevant locales as 'Privet Drive' (Harry Potter) were included, but 'Baker Street' (Sherlock Holmes or Gerry Rafferty) and 'Abbey Road' (Beatles) were not!..."

7039. Ryan, David. "Discourse Structure and Cartesian Scepticism." South African Journal of Philosophy 22, no. 1 (2003): 40.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "I provide a new account of the nature of Cartesian scepticism, in which I show that if we draw on the notion of discourse structure we can show exactly how Cartesian scepticism is induced and that it is, in principle, impossible to dispel. The account proceeds by showing that, given the nature of discourse structure, there is no absolute distinction between what we normally think of as factual discourse as discourse about "the actual world" -- and what we normally think of as fictional discourse as discourse about "a fictional world" -- and, in short, no absolute distinction between fact and fiction. The power of the account of Cartesian scepticism therefore resides in the power of the account of discourse structure, and accordingly the account of discourse structure should be of at least as much interest as the account of scepticism." [Abstract from author] Includes passing references to Holmes. "...In a recent paper, 'Judgment in Fiction,' I argued that we distinguish between various 'discourses,' one being 'factual discourse,' the discourse which purportedly describes the actual world, the rest being 'fictional discourses,' discourses which purportedly describe fictional worlds, such as the world of Sherlock Holmes...."

7040. ———. "Judgment in Fiction." South African Journal of Philosophy 21, no. 1 (2002): 63.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Analyzes the judgment in fiction in terms of mental models and rules for the construction of models. World-theoretic analyses of truth in fiction; Problem of trans-world identity; Rules for fictions. Holmes (and the world of Holmes) used as an example or part of the model or argument throughout the article.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

7041. Ryff, Carol D., and Burton Singer. "The Contours of Positive Human Health." Psychological Inquiry 9, no. 1 (1998): 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an explicit operational formulation of positive human health that goes beyond the prevailing 'absence of illness' criteria. Attempt to clarify that positive human health does not derive from extant medical considerations, which are not about wellness, but necessarily require a base in philosophical accounts of the 'goods' in life; Implications of positive health for diverse scientific agendas and for practice in health fields. Includes a reference to Holmes in a quotation from Bertrand Russell. "Sherlock Holmes, it may be remembered, picked up a hat which he happened to find lying in the street. After looking at it for a moment he remarked that its owner had come down in the world as the result of drink and that his wife was no longer so fond of him as she used to be. Life could never be boring to a man to whom casual objects offered such a wealth of interest."
7042. Sabbag, Robert. "The cartels would like a second chance. (Cover story)." Rolling Stone, no. 681 (1994): 35.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // States that the cartels of Colombia and Latin America have started a program of morphine chemistry, and have been sending high-grade heroin into the United States for the past five years. History of heroin; World production of opium, the raw material from which such narcotics as morphine and codeine are derived; Cultivation of opium in Southeast Asia; Impact of heroin manufacturing spillover in other countries; Colombian creating of heroin. Insets: Burlington, Vt; Birmingham, Ala. Includes passing references to Holmes. "The Colombian drug lords have added a new product to their already successful line. You can look for it in your neighborhood soon. 'Four or five years ago we saw the first hints of it,' says Donald Cooper, a senior forensic chemist for the Drug Enforcement Administration, paraphrasing the coke-shooting Sherlock Holmes when he adds: 'We knew something was afoot.'...And now those wonderful people who ushered the word cartel into your daily vocabulary--those pioneering industrialists, those entrepreneurs from such places as Cali and Medellin, who introduced vertical integration into the international traffic in controlled substances--have graduated from cocaine to morphine chemistry. To some it is a textbook ratification of the principle put forth by Holmes that 'there is but one step from the grotesque to the horrible.'..."
7043. Safire, William. "A Watergate phrase explodes in Iraq." New York Times Magazine 152, no. 52375 (2003): 18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the terms 'smoking gun' and 'class warfare' and their use in U.S. politics. Use of the term 'smoking gun' in an 1893 Sherlock Holmes story, which was actually a typo; How it was made famous during the Golden Age of Political Coinage; Creation of the term 'class warfare' by the Democratic party; Different historical interpretations of the word.
7044. Sainati, Edward. "Desperately seeking Soetens." Strad 107, no. 1274 (1996): 614.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles French violinist, Robert Soetens. Performance on Prokofiev's Second Violin Concerto with the Madrid Sinfonica; Relationship with Prokofiev; Author's interview with Soetens on his role in the premiere and subsequent performances of Prokofiev's Second Violin Concerto. Inset: Prokofiev's letter. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Consulting one reference book after another, as well as a couple of Prokofiev biographies, proved fruitless until a STRAD colleague in Paris reported that Soetens is still very much alive at the age of 98, living in an apartment in a peripheral Parisian quartier. With the success and smugness of a resuscitated Sherlock Holmes, I arrange an interview and rush to Paris, where the tall, frail but lucid Soetens receives me with alacrity...."
7045. Samborn, Hope Viner. "This Bank does Not Take Cash." ABA Journal 89, no. 7 (2003): 24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the establishment of Choices Bank, a free password-protected central repository for living wills and advance directives. Reason of the bank for offering its service for free; Information on the group known as the Life's End Institute: Missoula Demonstration Project; Levels of privacy offered by Choices Bank. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Without a central repository, many advance directives are difficult to find, and some are never found. 'You have to be Sherlock Holmes to track down advance directives,' Tracy says...."
7046. Sambrook, Philip. "Vitamin D and fractures: quo vadis?" Lancet 365, no. 9471 (2005): 1599-1600.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the connection between vitamin D deficiency and fractures. How calcium plus vitamin D reduced the risk of hip and non-vertebral fracture; Details of a study conducted;

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Limitations of the study. Article opens with a quotation from The Speckled Band. "I had come to an entirely erroneous conclusion, which shows my dear Watson, how dangerous it always is to reason from insufficient data."

7047. Sanborn, Margaret, and Joy Parisi. "Spring 1995 hardcovers." Publishers Weekly 242, no. 3 (1995): 368.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents books on poetry. Includes 'Poems for Life: Famous People Select Their Favorite Poems and Say Why It Inspires Them'; 'Wounded in the House of a Friend,' by Sonia Sanchez; 'Straight Put Out of View,' by Joyce Sutphen; 'Gary Soto: New and Selected Poems'; 'The Columbia anthology of American Poetry,' edited by Jay Parini; 'Unleashed: Poems by Writers' Dogs,' edited by Amy Hempel and Jim Shepard. INSET: Sherlock Holmes on campus?
7048. Sander, Leonard M. "Diffusion-limited aggregation: a kinetic critical phenomenon?" Contemporary Physics 41, no. 4 (2000): 203-218.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Diffusion-limited aggregation (DLA) is a model which represents noisy growth limited by diffusion. This process is quite common in nature and the simple algorithm gives a good representation of the large-scale structure of many natural objects. The clusters grown in the computer and the real objects in question are tenuous and approximately self-similar. A good deal is known about the algorithm, but a complete theory is not yet available. I review the current state of knowledge about the model, its applications and theoretical analysis of the results. [Abstract from author] Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...However, a large number of scientists quickly became fascinated with DLA and started to do research on the subject. Our original paper has been cited almost 2000 times, and the literature is still growing unabated. From time to time, I have felt like Conan Doyle, who repeatedly wanted to kill off Sherlock Holmes -- without success...."
7049. Sanders, John T. "An Ontology of Affordances." Ecological Psychology 9, no. 1 (1997): 97.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Investigates the ecological approach in answering certain ontological questions. Maturity of the ecological approach into visual perception; Reference to various studies on perceptual psychology; Consideration of affordances as ontological primitives. Includes a passing reference to Holmes (p. 99). "Let us ask ourselves what there really is in the world. Well, there are tables and chairs, pumpkins and candles, llamas and penguins...perhaps I should spare the reader the entire list, given the paucity of space. there are also ideas and emotions, though, and beliefs and dreams too. And to make matters more confusing, there are fictional characters like Calvin and Hobbes and Sherlock Holmes. These latter things don't exist in reality, we may say, but rather only as fictions...or sometimes we say they exist only in the mind...."
7050. Sanders, Robert L. "RIM self-evaluation the case for truth and realism." Records Management Quarterly 31, no. 3 (1997): 47.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the author's evaluation of his company's records management program. Strengths and weaknesses of the program; Compatibility of the program with internal and external environment; Reflections on the viability of an imaging system that could reduce office space and maximize savings. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...In the category of accessibility, we would seem to do better. We receive numerous compliments from the legal department and elsewhere praising our ability to retrieve and produce the documents required for litigation and administrative purposes. However, a closer look reveals that this success is more a product of the Sherlock-Holmes talent of several of our staff for uncovering needed information than of the basic capability of our systems to identify and retrieve it...."
7051. Sanderson, Peter. "Return to Gasoline Alley. (Cover story)." Publishers Weekly 254, no. 25 (2007): 25-26.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article focuses on the current boom in graphic novels in the U.S. It reports that smaller publishers are taking advantage of an expanding market for legendary but long unavailable comic strips. The classic strip reprint trend started in 2004 with "The Complete Peanuts" from Seattle's Fantagraphics Books. Experts find promising new market in art students who are now studying comics, particularly early masters like McCay, and reports recent sales to a college art class in Virginia. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Thompson speculates that reprinting older strips in book collections will remain the domain of small, dedicated comics companies rather than large mainstream publishers. 'You have to be a Sherlock Holmes to do this,' he says, explaining that one has to go through 'a hundred different sources' to find copies of the strips to shoot from...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

7052. Sanneh, Kelefa. "Science Projects." New Yorker 84, no. 38 (2008): 122-123.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article reviews the television program "Fringe," starring Joshua Jackson and "The Mentalist," starring Simon Baker. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...And what of the mentalist's method? It turns out to be a combination of careful observation and advanced hunchology, which puts Patrick Jane squarely in the tradition of Adrian Monk (from "Monk"), Robert Goren (from "Law & Order: Criminal Intent"), and, for that matter, Sherlock Holmes...."

7053. Sattinger, Andrea M., and Lowell A. Goldsmith. "Clinical Snippets." Journal of Investigative Dermatology 123, no. 4 (2004): vi-vi.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Even though histology proved that many samples were benign, nevi with BRAF mutations may still be melanocytic. Since BRAF mutations cause cell proliferation in vivo, Sherlock Holmes will need to take the case of proliferating pigmented papules and macules."

7054. Saunders, George. "Soviet Deadpan." New York Times, Dec 9, 2007: 35.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Let us consider Daniil Kharmis, the Russian writer often described as an absurdist, largely unpublished in his lifetime except for his children's books, who starved to death in the psychiatric ward of a Soviet hospital during the siege of Leningrad, having been put there by the Stalinist government for, among other reasons, his general strangeness. Kharmis gave flamboyant poetry readings from the top of an armoire, did performance art on the Nevsky Prospect -- by, for example, lying down on it, sometimes dressed as Sherlock Holmes -- and was a founder of the Union of Real Art, an avant-garde group also known as Oberiu. His brilliant, hilarious, violent little stories, written "for the drawer," are now being discovered in the West through translations by Neil Cornwell (collected in 'Incidences') and by Matvei Yankelevich, whose anthology 'Today I Wrote Nothing: The Selected Writings of Daniil Kharmis' (Overlook, $29.95) has just been published. Kharmis's stories are truly odd, as in: at first you think they're defective. They seem to cower at the suggestion of rising action, to blush at the heightened causality that makes a story a story. They sometimes end, you feel, before they've even begun. Here, in Yankelevich's translation, is the entire text of 'The Meeting.' [Abstract from publisher]

7055. Saunders-McMaster, Laverna. "The Case of the Vanishing Internet Access." Computers in Libraries 17, no. 3 (1997): 49-49.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Editorial. Considers the proposal of Internet 2, a high-speed, high-bandwidth network that will piggyback on the original Internet. Use of the Internet for recreation versus use of it for research. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "As master detective Sherlock Holmes would say, 'The game is afoot!' The mystery to be solved is the case of vanishing Internet access...."

7056. Sava, Samuel G. "It's education, stupid!" Principal (Reston, Va.) 78, no. 2 (1998): 64.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // As the 1998 election campaign focuses on education, federal education programs need to provide increases in funding to meet schoolchildren's needs. One of the main challenges for educators and the 106th Congress will be the reauthorizing and refunding of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act that was last reauthorized in 1994. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...A recent Washington Post-ABC News poll of voter concerns put improving schools and education at the top of the list, followed by Social Security, crime, taxes, the economy, and health care. An earlier Harris poll produced almost identical results. 'You don't have to be a Sherlock Holmes to find this issue,' said a savvy campaign consultant. 'If you do a poll, (education) pops up first.'" 7057. Scaer, Peter J. "What They Beheld." Touchstone: A Journal of Mere Christianity 21, no. 8 (2008): 30-31.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Jesus and the Eyewitnesses: The Gospels as Eyewitness Testimony," by Richard Bauckham. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Bauckham, the Sherlock Holmes of New Testament studies, compiled a list of the most popular names in Palestine during the life of Jesus. And what did he find? Mary was, by far, the most popular name of the time...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

7058. Schechter, Martin A., and James A. Henry. "Assessment and Treatment of Tinnitus Patients Using a 'Masking Approach'." Journal of the American Academy of Audiology (B.C.Decker) 13, no. 10 (2002): 545.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // One reference in the endnotes refers to Holmes: Turk DC. (2002). Mysteries of chronic pain: Sherlock Holmes, Inspector Clouseau and Sergeant Friday meet Lieutenant Columbo. In: Patuzzi R, ed. VIIth International Tinnitus Seminar Proceedings. Perth: Physiology Department, University of Western Australia, 7-15.
7059. Scherer, Ron. "Bullet database: New crimefighter." Christian Science Monitor, July 16, 1998: 4.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the Integrated Ballistics Identification System, that compares bullets and casings with records in its database. The systems as part of a shift toward fighting crime by building databases; The system as saving hundreds of hours of work and giving police valuable leads. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...This new computer system, which puts Sherlock Holmes to shame, is saving police departments across the United States hundreds, if not thousands of hours, in detective work--and providing new leads to cases that might otherwise never be solved. Called the Integrated Ballistic Identification System (IBIS), the computer matches shell casings and bullets...."
7060. Schimmel, Daniela. "Healthy looks fashion news." Health 15, no. 3 (2001): 46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents several fashion tips for women. Tips for wearing pants with heeled shoes; Popularity of trench coats. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "From Jackie O to Audrey Hepburn, every modern fashion maven has donned a classic trench. So it's no surprise that trench coats are reclaiming the streets, just in time for April showers. Better yet, new fabrics and hip styles ensure that you can stay dry and comfy without looking like Sherlock Holmes...."
7061. Schlosser, Julie. "Mall Star Analyst." Fortune 153, no. 4 (2006): 161-166.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article presents opinions and recommendations from stock analyst Bob Buchanan about mall retailers. He rates Nordstrom as a good investment because of management by Blake Nordstrom. Gap, although confused about its product and customer target, is still a stock to hold onto because of its improving technology. Build-A-Bear Workshop is a buy because of creator Maxine Clark's management and new store openings. Abercrombie & Fitch is a buy because of management by CEO Michael Jeffries and its ability to target a customer. Inset: A Super-Shopper Sizes Up the Retailers. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The shirt-size test is just one way Buchanan takes the measure of a store. Like a retail Sherlock Holmes, he quizzes salespeople, queries shoppers, and counts cars in parking lots, looking for clues to how the stores and their stocks will fare in coming quarters...."
7062. Schmitz, Sandy. "The Club of Queer Trades/Wings." School Library Journal 54, no. 3 (2008): 232-232.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the books "The Club of Queer Trades," by G. K. Chesterton and "Wings," by Mikhail Kuzmin. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "The first book, originally published in Britain in 1905, is a set of six interconnected detective stories in which seemingly ordinary people find themselves in extraordinary and baffling situations, all of which are tied to the secretive Club of Queer Trades and its mysterious president. Only retired judge Basil Grant can separate illusion from reality to solve the mysteries. Teens who have read the Sherlock Holmes stories avidly will enjoy Basil Grant's adventures...."
7063. Schneider, Carl E. "Jesting Pilate." Hastings Center Report 38, no. 4 (2008): 14-15.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article examines a case in the news in which a transplant surgeon had tried to kill a patient to get transplantable organs. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...After all, error and bungling are far more common than murder. So we need to wait until the case has finished its judicial journey and to scrutinize news reports skeptically before we draw legal and social lessons from Roozrokh. As Sherlock Holmes warned, 'It is a capital mistake to theorize before one has data. Insensibly one begins to twist facts to suit theories, instead of theories to suit facts.'" 7064. Schneider, Susan M., and M. L. Workman. "Virtual Reality as a Distraction Intervention for Older Children Receiving Chemotherapy." Pediatric nursing 26, no. 6 (2000): 593.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses a study which described the perceived effectiveness and feasibility of using virtual reality (VR) as a distraction intervention for children receiving outpatient chemotherapy. How the study was conducted; Results of the study. Includes reference to the virtual reality game Sherlock Holmes Mystery.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

7065. Schroeder, Michael. "A Sherlock Holmes of Accounting." Business Week, no. 9/5 (1994): 48-52.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles accountant Howard Schilit. Teaching at American University; Clientele; Critics; Involvement in the fall of Kendall Square Research Corp.; Ways of finding financial record errors of corporations. Title reference to Holmes.
7066. Schroth, Raymond A. "ABC's 'Commander in Chief' tries to have it both ways." National Catholic Reporter, Dec 9, 2005: 21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article focuses on the television series "Commander in Chief" starring Geena Davis. The series is about Mackenzie Allen, an independent grafted into the Republican ticket as vice president only to have the president-elect die before taking office. The dying president has asked her to resign to make way for a party successor Nathan Templeton. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...The plots however are more soap opera or 'Sherlock Holmes' than 'The West Wing.' The great detective waits in his Baker Street apartment, a petitioner brings a mystery. Holmes spies the archcriminal Professor Moriarty's hand at work. Here Moriarty is the malevolent Templeton, determined to become president himself, smiling in Allen's face but sabotaging her at every turn...."
7067. ———. "'Law & Order'." National Catholic Reporter, Aug 24, 2001: 17.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on the stories of the television program 'Law and Order' in New York. Theme of the show; Suitability of the show to the viewers; Basis on the stories featured by the show. Includes passing reference to Holmes. "...If 'Law and Order' is not the 'best' program on TV--the best is the reruns of the BBC's Sherlock Holmes--it is the most consistently satisfying....To hold an audience--at least a mature audience--viewers need a character whom, to some degree, they can admire. A flawed eccentric, yes--like the neurotic Sherlock Holmes, the fastidious Hercule Poirot and the bibulous Inspector Morse--but basically honorable and idealistic...."
7068. ———. "The TV biography: Fill an hour with old photos." National Catholic Reporter, Jan 24, 1997: 27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on the Arts & Entertainment Network's television program 'Biography'. Personalities previously featured in the show; Quality of program; Review of previous shows. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Indeed, to merit a 'biography' it's not even necessary to have existed! Thus, 'biographies' of Frankenstein (the monster, not the creator), Dracula, Betty Boop, Zorro, Sherlock Holmes (although Holmes has been recreated so many times, he has accumulated more reality than most real people), and comic book characters like the Phantom...."
7069. Schulthes, Diane, and Jamie Wolosky. "Developing each child's potential: the Discovery Program." Gifted Child Today Magazine 21, no. 6 (1998): 42-45.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The Discovery Program at Tenaflly Middle School in New Jersey focuses on creating educational experiences that promote lifelong learning among all students. The program provides a range of differentiated teaching/learning activities to meet the needs of individual students. Students are self-nominated for the program and may take advantage of a variety of topics and varying time commitments. The options are research competitions, language arts studies, social action, art exhibitions, living newspaper, mathematics project, symposium for the arts, and technology training. The Discovery Steering Committee is made up of administrators, teachers, parents, and students who collectively set goals and make decisions about the program. The success of the Discovery Program at the middle level is such that the option is also to be provided at the elementary level." Survey instrument at end of article includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Most of us know people who describe themselves as history buffs, ecology nuts, science fiction freaks, health food faddists, or hopeless Sherlock Holmes addicts. Could you think of a special interest of yours for which you'd give yourself a similar label?..."
7070. Schwartz, Nelson D. "Inside the Head of BP." Fortune 150, no. 2 (2004): 68-76.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article profiles John Browne, the head of BP Oil. Lord Browne of Madingley, as he is formally known, is as content discussing his collection of crystal goblets or contemporary art as he is

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

BP's latest offshore find or next big pipeline project. He still speaks the Queen's English he learned at boarding school and Cambridge, England. While other CEOs like Exxon Mobil's Lee Raymond are skeptical about global warming, Browne is eager to talk about how to reduce greenhouse-gas emissions and limit the energy industry's impact on the environment. The rise of BP illustrates how oil provinces far from the Middle East--especially Africa and Russia--are becoming key sources of energy for the rest of the world. BP already pumps nearly twice as much oil and gas as Kuwait, and Browne is promising Wall Street that BP's production will outstrip its rivals' by a wide margin in the years to come. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...So Browne can remain single-minded in his determination to solidify BP's position as the world's leading oil company. 'The game is afoot,' he says, echoing another British bachelor mastermind, Sherlock Holmes. 'The game should always be afoot.'" 7071. Schwarz, Robert. "World literature in review: German." World Literature Today 68, no. 4 (1994): 799.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Vom Wunsch, Indianer zu werden: Wie Franz Kafka Karl May traf und trotzdem nicht in Amerika landete,' by Peter Henisch. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Some years ago the astonished public read of Sherlock Holmes's encounter with Sigmund Freud, whom the former 'professionally consulted.' And in Will Durant's Mansions of Philosophy, Voltaire, Marx, and Toynbee enjoy a nice chat. What next? Shall we perhaps soon be served up a meeting between James Bond and Hercule Poirot? Between Casanova and Don Juan? The possibilities are endless."
7072. Schweber, Nate, and Sharon Otterman. "A Painfully Early Arrival For a Summer Nuisance." New York Times, July 22, 2008: 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A wonder to biologists, a killer in a Sherlock Holmes story and a notorious pain to people they touch, jellyfish have always been a blobby summer menace to swimmers, fishermen and little children's curious fingers. But this year they have been even more of an annoyance than usual, arriving early and perplexing fishermen and beachgoers from Toms River, N.J., to Long Island and beyond. Biologists have several theories about why the jellyfish, particularly one breed, the lion's mane, have turned out about a month before they are usually seen here. [Abstract from publisher]
7073. Scruggs, Roberta, and Bonnie Rieser. "I Never Thought Anything would Hurt so Bad'." Yankee 66, no. 9 (2002): 66.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Relates the disappearance of Bob Smith from wife Shirley Smith in Maine. Narration of the incident; Efforts in finding the victim; Impact of the mysterious incident on the life of Shirley. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Maine game wardens, who find hundreds of lost people every year, use words like 'baffling,' 'humbling,' and a 'real Sherlock Holmes mystery' to describe the disappearance of Bob Smith...."
7074. Semino, Elena. "Mind Style Twenty-five Years On." Style 41, no. 2 (2007): 153-173.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // In this article I show how work on mind style over the last 25 years has built on the account provided by Leech and Short in "Style in Fiction." I begin by pointing out the central role of "fictional minds" in current work in narratology. In particular, I endorse the claim, made by many scholars, that fictional minds are primarily (although not exclusively) constructed on the basis of what we know about "real" minds, and can be usefully analysed by means of models developed by cognitive psychologists and cognitive scientists. I then consider the contributions of cognitive theories such as Schema theory and Cognitive Metaphor theory, and of theories from pragmatics such as Grice's Cooperative Principle and Politeness theory. I finish by considering the use of corpus-linguistic techniques to investigate the systematic linguistic patterns that can be responsible for the projection of mind style. [Abstract from author] Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Not surprisingly, however, the representation of Christopher's relationship with figurative language is not guided by medical research on autism generally and Asperger's syndrome in particular (e.g. Happé; Norbury), nor is it consistent throughout the novel. For example, Christopher both understands and uses not just many conventional metaphorical expressions such as stay out of other people's business but also more novel expressions such as detach one's mind at will (which he read in one of his favourite Sherlock Holmes novels)...."
7075. Semple, Ernest. "Partition is on the map." The Gazette (Montreal), March 22, 1999: B3.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Letter to the editor. "As Sherlock Holmes would say, 'The game's afoot, Watson.' Richard Janda (Comment, March 13), writes, 'Moreover, a two- tiered consultation that identifies the contours of the majority in favour of sovereignty gives rise not only to 'winning conditions' but to 'optimal conditions' for the negotiation of a substantial and sustainable economic partnership between the 'New Quebec' and Canada.' That comment is somewhat of a mystery to me, and probably would also be to Sherlock Holmes if he were here to examine it. In the words of one of Montreal's local radio comics, the separatists would not likely be able to buy even a toothpick from Canada after the great divide...."
7076. Sexton, Paul. "Junior Boy's Own Underworld sent overground with 'Slippy'." Billboard 108, no. 47 (1996): 13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the growing popularity of the band Underworld. Their song recording 'Born Slippy,' from the motion picture soundtrack for 'Trainspotting'; Their independent record label, Junior Boy's Own; The success enjoyed by their second album, 'Second Toughest in the Infants'; Critical praise for Underworld, including their nomination for the 1996 Mercury Music Prize. "The trio writes all its own material, which is published by Underworld/Sherlock Holmes Music."
7077. Shachtman, Tom. "Medical Sleuth." Smithsonian 36, no. 11 (2006): 23-30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article looks at the case of an Amish child who died from a genetic disease. When Sara Lynn Glick died, the coroner found blood in her brain and declared her death a homicide. Glick's parents, who were charged with murder, contacted the Clinic for Special Children and pleaded with its director, D. Holmes Morton, to find the cause of her death. Morton is the leading authority on genetic-based diseases of the Amish and Mennonite peoples. The Amish and Mennonites experience a high incidence of certain genetic-based diseases. Morton has diagnosed Amish children with a rare metabolic disorder known as glutaric aciduria type I. Morton reported that Glick had died of a vitamin K deficiency coupled with a bile-salt transporter disorder. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...But when Morton analyzed the urine, he saw no evidence of cerebral palsy. Rather, in a diagnosis that must have seemed to others like the amazing deductions of Sherlock Holmes, he recognized the footprint of a genetic-based disease so rare that it had been identified in only eight cases in the world, none of them in Lancaster County...."
7078. Shaheen, Jack G. "Arabs and Muslims in Hollywood's 'Munich' and 'Syriana'." Washington Report on Middle East Affairs 25, no. 2 (2006): 73-73.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reports on how Arabs and Muslims have been portrayed in Hollywood films. Hollywood is offering humane, equitable images of Arabs and Muslims. Stephen Gaghan's political drama "Syriana," and Steven Spielberg's "Munich" discard stale stereotypes. Instead, they forcefully and eloquently argue that unabated power and unconstrained violence serve to expedite terrorism and prevent peace. Stephen Gaghan's "Syriana" probes contemporary questions and reflects on the consequences of what happens when corrupt, influential U.S. government and corporate executives mix together greed, oil and terrorism in order to maintain their monopoly on Arab oil. Steven Spielberg's "Munich" displays the events surrounding the tragic deaths of 11 Israeli athletes. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...In movies that Spielberg has been associated with, Egyptians are shown as Nazisympathizers ('Raiders of the Lost Ark'), Arab terrorists try to machine-gun Michael J. Fox ('Back to the Future'), Dr. Moriarty's Egyptian cult kidnaps young girls and torches them alive ('Young Sherlock Holmes'), and fanatical Egyptian Christians are out to kill Indy ('Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade')."
7079. Shargel, Raphael. "Comic Book Summer." New Leader 86, no. 4 (2003): 35-37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several motion pictures. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...It is appropriate that Connery, the original James Bond, addresses the mastermind who assembles the team by the code name 'M.' The initial stands for 'Moriarty,' the nemesis of the Sherlock Holmes stories. This single wry allusion reveals the film's true colors. Its Victorian trappings notwithstanding, The League of Extraordinary Gentlemen is merely another bastard child of the Bond franchise...."
7080. ———. "Last Rays and Shadows of Summer." New Leader 85, no. 5 (2002): 35.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several motion pictures including 'Blood Work,' starring Clint Eastwood with a Sherlockian reference. "...The movie evokes familiar motifs. The idea of a damaged detective returning to duty brings to mind such films as Vertigo. The enigmatic beauty appealing to the prowess of an experienced

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

crime-fighter harks back to The Maltese Falcon and the Sherlock Holmes tales. There is even, toward the end, a bizarre assault on the villain that recalls a famous sequence in Dirty Harry, which made Eastwood a staple of cop dramas over the past 30 years. Blood Work puts a distinctive spin on all these themes, however: Unlike most catch-the-killer pictures, it is not about a race against time but against the ravages of age...."

7081. Sharrett, Christopher. "New age disaster movies." USA Today Magazine 125, no. 2616 (1996): 61.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Looks at the motion picture 'Twister,' starring Helen Hunt and Bill Paxton. 'Twister' as a 1996 version of the disaster film; How the genre differs in 1996 from the disaster films of the 1970s, such as 'The Towering Inferno,' and 'Earthquake'; How 'Twister' reflects a post-Cold War American psyche. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Tension is supposed to abound as viewers learn the hero (Bill Paxton) has forsaken his true love (Helen Hunt) and vocation (predicting tornados) in favor of a new relationship with a sex therapist. It doesn't take Sherlock Holmes to figure where this will lead...."
7082. Shea, Mike. "Aaron Allston." Texas Monthly 35, no. 12 (2007): 74.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The Round Rock author and former video game designer has just penned his ninth Star Wars serialization, Legacy of the Force: Fury....Is there any sign of interest waning? Oh, hell no. There are two new Star Wars TV series coming out, one computer-animated and one live-action, Sherlock Holmes just turned 120 years old, and he's as well known as ever. I wouldn't be surprised if Star Wars has those kind of legs...."
7083. Shenk, David. "Watching You." National Geographic 204, no. 5 (2003): 2-29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article focuses on technological surveillance. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Fingerprint identification has been used to solve crimes since the days of Sherlock Holmes, but the practice took a giant step forward in 1999 when the FBI began using a networked system that lets authorities search 46 million sets of prints within minutes...."
7084. Shepherd, Michael. "Conceptual issues in psychological medicine: Collected papers of Michael Shepherd." no. (1990).
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // (from the jacket) Professor Shepherd's two previously published volumes of collected papers, "Psychotropic Drugs in Psychiatry" and "The Psychosocial Matrix of Psychiatry," have been centred around a single theme. This latest collection, whilst offering a greater variety, is unified by a sustained attempt to tackle some of the conceptual issues raised by psychological medicine. The selection covers specific topics that illuminate the subject in its contemporary setting. The framework is broad enough to incorporate studies of clinical syndromes, essays on several key figures, as well as writings on the history of ideas and particular aspects of research and treatment. Contents includes "Sherlock Holmes and the case of Dr. Freud."
7085. Sherman, Chris. "15 ways to ring in '95 at home; [CITY Edition]." St. Petersburg Times (Florida), Dec 29, 1994: 1D.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Suggestions on different ways to bring in the new year. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...Give up electricity for the night and unplug the phone. Light some candles or a hurricane lamp, build a fire and read aloud a Sherlock Holmes case or the poems of Emily Dickinson...."
7086. ———. "Alternatives to Big Blowout for New Year's." The Plain Dealer (Cleveland, OH), Dec 29, 1994: 5E.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Suggestions on different ways to bring in the new year. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...Give up electricity for the night and unplug the phone. Light some candles or a hurricane lamp, build a fire and read aloud a Sherlock Holmes case or the poems of Emily Dickinson...."
7087. Sherman, Scott, and Steven R. Brechin. "Book reviews." Society & Natural Resources 11, no. 4 (1998): 431.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the videotape 'Global Dumping Ground,' by Bill Moyers. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Our adventure begins in Zimbabwe. Countless drums of deadly chemicals have ended up on the beaches of Africa. But, whodunit? This is a mystery for which we need a modern-day Sherlock Holmes; fortunately, we have Moyers to serve as our sleuth...."
7088. Shirinian, George, and Paul Nicholls. "CD-ROM lending at the City of York Public Library: A four-year

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- retrospective." Computers in Libraries 17, no. 1 (1997): 70.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Details the history of CD-ROM lending at the City of New York Public Library. The library as the first public library to lend CD-ROMs; The need to technical expertise; Costs involved; Comparison of the CD-ROM market in 1993 to 1996; Durability of the medium; Copyright issues due to the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA); Conclusions. Inset: Top 10 circulating titles. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...One can see from Table 1 that, while the majority of the top 10 circulating titles varies year to year, there are four titles whose popularity spans several years--specifically, Sherlock Holmes Consulting Detective, CD Game Pack, 7th Guest, and Compton's Multimedia Encyclopedia...."
7089. Shprintzen, Robert J. "Velo-cardio-facial syndrome: 30 Years of study." Developmental Disabilities Research Reviews 14, no. 1 (2008): 3-10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Syndromic diagnosis, or even syndromic suspicion is dependent on experience and the ability to use sound deductive reasoning to reach a conclusion, much the same way that Sherlock Holmes solved mysteries...."
7090. Shubinski, Raymond. "Around the universe with a 3-inch scope." Astronomy 33, no. 12 (2005): 84-89.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article presents the author's experiences while star-gazing. The author sought to prove that even a 3-inch telescope can provide tremendous freedom and enjoyable evenings under the stars. To prove this, he bought a classic 3-inch Unitron and a new 3-inch Tele-Vue-76. The author found well-known double stars in order to compare the performance of each telescope. The article presents details of many objects worth studying through 3-inch telescopes. Includes passing references to Holmes. "'You see, but you do not observe; there is a distinction.' -- Sherlock Holmes to Dr. Watson in A Scandal in Bohemia. The great fictional detective might have been talking to any of us who enjoys amateur astronomy. A star party, for example, is a wonderful place to see what's new with telescopes....When you look through your telescope, linger over each object. To paraphrase Sherlock Holmes: Don't just go out and see the stars; take time to observe them."
7091. Sieber, Sharon Lynn. "Time, Simultaneity, and the Fantastic in the Narrative of Jorge Luis Borges." Romance Quarterly 51, no. 3 (2004): 200-211.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the complex interaction of time and the fantastic in the narrative work of Jorge Luis Borges. Spatialization of time in "The Garden of Forking Paths"; Ways to group time, in "Tlön, Uqbar, Orbis Tertius"; Observations on language and the Aleph, in "El Aleph." Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The overlay of the characters of Lönnrot and his assistant Treviranus (as counterparts of Sherlock Holmes and Doctor Watson) also creates a conflict of reading--Lönnrot is like Quixote and Treviranus is like Sancho Panza in that the former always is seeking the idealistic or 'interesting' explanation, while the pragmatic Treviranus just wants to catch the guy who committed the murders...."
7092. Siegel, Lee. "Crime Scenes." New Republic 228, no. 12 (2003): 25.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several crime-related television programs. 'CSI: Crime Scene Investigation'; 'Dragnet'; 'Law & Order'. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...CSI's cops, though they carry highly visible, oversize guns on their hips--as if to compensate for the show's lack of violence--catch their criminals by means of forensics and various kinds of technology. Such violence as there is the show enacts through the CSI investigators' graphic computer simulations of knives penetrating skin, tissue, muscle, and bone. It's where Sherlock Holmes meets Popeye Doyle. Not the least of the show's enthrallments is the illusion it offers that by its imagining and then rationalizing the worst, the worst will never happen...."
7093. Sieruta, Peter D. "The Latest in a Series of 'Other Stuff' Columns." Horn Book Magazine 80, no. 2 (2004): 201-211.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses several books featured in "The Horn Book Guide." Includes a reference to Holmes. "...The Adventures of Samuel Blackthorne debuts with The Case of the Cat with the Missing Ear (Simon) by Scott Emerson. This is a Sherlock Holmes parody with a difference. It's still set in the Victorian era, but the action has been transferred from the foggy streets of London to the foggy streets of San Francisco. And this time around the detective is a Yorkshire terrier. In fact, all the characters in the book are animals. The narrator, Edward Smithfield, is the canine version of Holmes's Dr. Watson -- and of course he practices

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

veterinary medicine. The pacing is too leisurely, but now that the series premise has been established, future volumes will no doubt improve...."

7094. Sigmund, Karl. "Play it again, John." Nature 431, no. 7008 (2004): 509-510.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "Theory of Games and Economic Behavior: Sixtieth-Anniversary Edition," by John von Neumann and Oskar Morgenstern. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...In 1928, von Neumann had published in Berlin a paper on parlour games. Meanwhile Morgenstern, in Vienna, published a book entitled Wirtschaftsprognose, in which he claimed that economic predictions are in principle inconsistent, because they cause agents to act in a different way from that predicted. His favourite example was the fictional [sic] detective Sherlock Holmes being pursued by the murderous Moriarty and having to decide where to leave a train, with Moriarty anticipating this, in a vicious circle of mutual outguessing. Morgenstern, the director of a forecasting agency in Austria, saw in this infinite regress ('He thinks that I think that he thinks...') a basic obstacle to forecasting the decisions of interacting individuals, no less fundamental than the uncertainty principle or the incompleteness theorem...."

7095. Sillars, Les. "A copy of the house key." Alberta Report / Newsmagazine 25, no. 34 (1998): 25.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines the debate over whether the Canadian government should regulate encryption technology. Opposition to regulation from federal Privacy Commissioner Bruce Phillips; History of encryption; Aspects of modern encryption software; Problems with encryption for law enforcement; Encryption programs available over the Internet; Views of the Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...Encryption has been around for thousands of years. The earliest codes simply replaced each letter with another letter in the alphabet or a symbol. Thus 'KEEP' might become 'LFFQ.' These cryptograms were easy to solve, as Sherlock Holmes demonstrated in 'The Mystery of the Dancing Men,' by counting the letters which occurred most frequently in the encrypted message, guessing that they were 'e' or 'a,' and working from there...."

7096. Silver, Daniel J. "Mime and man." Commentary 103, no. 5 (1997): 66.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the books 'Charlie Chaplin and His Times,' by Kenneth S. Lynn and 'Tramp,' by Joyce Milton. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...A legend which Chaplin loved to retell is that he first appeared on stage as a replacement for his mother and quickly won over the crowd. This is probably apocryphal, but by his early teens Chaplin had indeed taken to the boards as a Cockney street urchin in a popular adaptation of Sherlock Holmes; he got good notices, and was hooked...."

7097. Silver, Karen. "Cheap and colorful: Ink jets under $150." PC World 16, no. 10 (1998): 261.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Evaluates several ink-jet printers. Canon BJC-250; Compaq IJ200; HP DeskJet 400L; Lexmark 1100 Color Jetprinter; NEC SuperScript 150C; Features; Price; Company contact information. Inset: Keeping up, by Harry McCracken. The inset contains a reference to Holmes. "What would Abraham Lincoln have thought of the United States in the age of Clinton? If you had participated in his recent chat session at the BBC's Beeb Web site, you could have asked him yourself. The site's weekly Fantasy Chats host historical and imaginary figures, portrayed by experts on the famous folks. Past guests have included Marilyn Monroe, Sherlock Holmes, and Henry VIII. For schedules and transcripts, visit www.oi.beeb.com/chat/fantasy."

7098. Simile, Catherine. "Reviews: Lesbian & gay studies." Lambda Book Report 5, no. 8 (1997): 29.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'The Diva's Mouth: Body, Voice, and Prima Donna Politics,' by Susan J. Leonardi and Rebecca A. Pope. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The authors traverse the cultural terrain of 18th century 'castrati,' autobiographies of opera divas, detective fiction (especially Sherlock Holmes), diva representation in film (especially 1930s Hollywood musicals and horror flicks), the writing of 19th century women (George Eliot, George Sand, and especially Willa Cather), comic fiction, and the 20th century pop and pomo worlds (a colleague once left a message on their answering machine--'I have a student paper here that spells 'prima donna' 'pre-Madonna') to deconstruct the cultural icon 'diva.' The book is most emphatically not about opera, but about women, the voice, homoerotic desire, and above all, power...."

7099. Singer, Barnett. "Recalling Artie Shaw: the Last of the Swing Virtuosos." Contemporary Review 287, no. 1676

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

(2005): 171-175.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles Artie Shaw, a clarinetist, saxophonist, composer and band leader. Shaw's music recordings including Jerome Kern's "All the Things You Are"; Shaw's artistic style in playing instrumental sounds; Popularity of Shaw's "Begin the Beguine" in 1938. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Even in small groups he called the Gramercy Five, he at times used instruments that nobody else did--for example, Johnny Guamieri's harpsichord. (Guamieri was a card who liked to dress up as Sherlock Holmes.)..."

7100. Sintonen, Matti. "Reasoning to Hypotheses: Where Do Questions Come?" Foundations of Science 9, no. 3 (2004): 249-266.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Detectives and scientists are in the business of reasoning from observations to explanations. This they often do by raising cunning questions during their inquiries. But to substantiate this claim we need to know how questions arise and how they are nurtured into more specific hypotheses. I shall discuss what the problem is, and then introduce the so-called interrogative model of inquiry which makes use of an explicit logic of questions. On this view, a discovery processes can be represented as a model-based game in which an inquirer subjects a source of information to a series of strategically organized questions. Strategic principles and why-questions are especially important in heuristical reasoning. Why-questions have their own peculiar nature among questions. They indicate that the inquirer's expectations are somehow disappointed, and that is cognitively challenging. In a finished argument why-questions can be omitted, but in the search for more specific questions they are highly important. As a detective example I shall analyze Sherlock Holmes reasoning in Silver Blaze, the scientific one is A.R. Wallace's discovery of the principle of natural selection. In both of these examples the meaning of questions, especially of well-chosen why-questions, of strategic principles, and of highly structured background knowledge come to the fore. Good questions frequent those who have orderly expectations, based on experience and expertise (detectives!) or highly structured background theories (scientists!). [Abstract from author]

7101. Sirant, Zenya. "Man of mystery." National Post (Canada), December 15, 2007: TO4.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Zenya Sirant discovers the secret to hawking whodunits with J.D. Singh, owner of detective-novel bookshop Sleuth of Baker Street, which recently celebrated its 25th year of business on the same Bayview block."

7102. Skeates, Richard. "A melancholy future poetic." City 8, no. 1 (2004): 135-140.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "Pattern Recognition," by William Gibson. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...On a meta-fictional level, and in particular in literary texts which attempt to represent the city, this critical function has frequently been pre-empted in the text itself by the insertion of a key character, a detective who is somehow able to see what others cannot, who has the capacity to look behind the outward face of the city and to read the hidden meanings encrypted within. Poe's narrator in Man of the Crowd, Dickens' Inspector Bucket in Bleak House, Sherlock Holmes and countless 20th-century detectives have walked those mean city streets and understood their intrinsic meaning...."

7103. Skelton, John R., J. A. A. Macleod, and C. P. Thomas. "Teaching literature and medicine to medical students, part II: why literature and medicine?" Lancet 356, no. 9246 (2000): 2001.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Offers the opinion that teaching literature and medicine simultaneously will help the learning process. Process of thinking associated with literature which is not solely concerned with finding an answer; Ethical and emotional aspect of literature; Suggestion that the study of literature teaches various ways in which information can be interpreted. Includes multiple references to Holmes.

7104. Slade, Michael, and Ken Tomlinson. "Creating the vision: The South Pole experience." Total Quality Management 8, no. 2/3 (1997): 281-284.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents edited versions of the proceedings of the Second World Congress for Total Quality Management in Great Britain in 1997. Visioning process; Approach. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The approach we are about to describe owes more to Alfred Hitchcock and John Grisham than to any of the management textbooks. It is based on two simple ideas, both of them from the world of thrillers and adventure stories. Here, fiction can help us with fact. The first idea belongs to Alfred Hitchcock. In film, the plot device that motivates the core of the action is the McGuffin. So, in the recent Mission Impossible, it is a computer diskette. In earlier times, it has been the design for the secret weapon (as in Sherlock Holmes and 'The Bruce Partington plans'), the formula which will... and so on. You know the sort of thing. How relevant is this to the 'real' content of the story? Hardly at all. Hitchcock himself pointed out that, once the McGuffin has done its work of motivating the actions--especially of the hero--it can be dispensed with. You never get to read the diskette, or to see the plans...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

7105. Slaten, Patricia. "The Book Cart Drill Team World Championship." American Libraries 36, no. 7 (2005): 63-63.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the 2005 Book Cart Drill Team World Championship that featured teams of librarians, staffers and students from across the U.S. showing off their skills at synchronized choreography, coordinated decorations and costumes. Features of the presentation from fourth placer, Public Library Cart Tarts from Oak Park, Illinois; Outfits of the team from Thousand Oaks Library from California; Team from the University of Wisconsin at Madison which emerged as the champion at the contest. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The St. Charles (Ill.) Public Library's Cart Capades wore Sherlock Holmes outfits and performed to the music of The Pink Panther...."
7106. Slattery, Mart. "Down on Triffid farm." New Statesman 130, no. 4564 (2001): 38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features author John Wyndham. Educational and career background; Criticisms on his book 'The Day of the Triffids' and his other books; Reason for the cynicism of Wyndham about institutions. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Wyndham's critics always pointed to his Englishness, and his stories are indeed rooted in the comforting glow of Dixon of Dock Green--his characters are almost all middle-class and white, and of a good educational background. They take quiet evening strolls. The name of the character Zellaby in The Midwich Cuckoos (played in the film version by George Sanders, perfectly cast) is an allusion to Sherlock Holmes...."
7107. Sleazar, Henry. "The Museum." Fantasy & Science Fiction 98, no. 3 (2000): 128.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the short story 'The Museum.' Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...I don't know yet,' Mason said. 'I never said I was Sherlock Holmes with a magnifying glass. What I do best is talk to people. People involved in this sort of crime, who have committed art thefts before, and know what's going on.'..."
7108. Slung, Michele. "Sleuthing the Sahara." Victoria 16, no. 7 (2002): 102.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles author Barbara Mertz. Doctor of philosophy degree in Egyptology earned at the University of Chicago; Books credited to the writer; Pseudonym of the author taken from the names of her children. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...All in all, the world of Amelia Peabody is seductive, and in that way not dissimilar to the Baker Street household surrounding Sherlock Holmes. Like that richly detailed milieu, Amelia Peabody's seems to have taken on a life of its own...."
7109. Smallwood, Scott. "As Seen on TV." Chronicle of Higher Education 48, no. 45 (2002): A8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the emergence of forensics programs in various U.S. universities influenced by several television programs dealing with forensic science. Description of television programs such as 'Crossing Jordan' and 'The X-Files'; Comparison of the television job portrayal of forensic scientists and the actual profession; Comments on the effect of the television programs on student expectations of the course. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Roxanne Smith was watching cable television one night a few years ago when The New Detectives came on the Learning Channel. The show highlights real-life cases where a modern-day Sherlock Holmes uses forensic science to catch the bad guy...."
7110. Smiley, Brenda. "Sherlock Holmes Canino." Archaeology 54, no. 6 (2001): 9.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on Eagle, a dog used in detecting buried human remains. Information on the archaeological project given to Eagle by the Panama Truth Commission to find the grave of Desaparecidos; Recognition received by Eagle; Details of how Eagle recovered the remains of Desaparecidos. A passing reference to Holmes in title and in article.
7111. Smith, Evan. "Estranged Bedfellows." Texas Monthly 28, no. 4 (2000): 19.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Deals with the decision of energy baron Bob Mosbacher to end his alimony payments to Georgette Mosbacher who divorced him in 1998. Details on the mid-nuptial agreement between the two; Role of the statements issued by Georgette against Bob in the decision; Contributions of Georgette's status as co-chairman of the presidential campaign of John McCain to the decision of Bob to cutoff Georgette's alimony. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Alexander acknowledges that his client has a history of saying uncharitable things about her ex, but he thinks the alimony acrimony is presidential preference posturing. 'McCain was the turning point,' he says. 'They claim it's just a coincidence that the McCain connection appears for the first time in the article they cite. None of her previous utterances had to do with McCain or the Bushes. As Sherlock Holmes might have said, 'I do not believe in coincidence.'" (Neither Piro nor his client will comment on this or any other aspect of the J case, citing pending litigation.)..."
7112. Smith, Godfrey. "Godfrey Smith Column." The Times (London), December 11, 1994: no page citation.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...We have now looked at nine of the dozen crime novels Julian Symons listed as the finest of them all; but what were his top three? He named The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes for the No3 slot: 'To choose an omnibus of the complete works would be cheating.'..."
7113. Smith, Margaret. "Charlotte Bronte's Letters: the Editing Adventure." Bronte Studies 29, no. 3 (2004): 199-207.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on editing letters written by British author Charlotte Bronte. Reasons for not accepting second-hand transcripts of original manuscripts in literature; Probability of locating a Bronte manuscript in auction sales; Background on the recording of details found in letters, including the kind and size of writing paper and watermarks; Use of paper, ink and handwriting evidence in the detection of forgeries. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Another intriguing challenge to the editorial Sherlock Holmes is presented by genuine letters which have been cut up into small pieces to send to autograph hunters...."
7114. Smith, Shawnee. "Audio field has busy 1st-qtr. schedule." Billboard 110, no. 4 (1998): 77.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a listing of audiobooks being released in 1998. Includes one Holmes listing. "Soundelux Audio titles include 'Car Talk: Men Are From GM. Women Are From Ford,' 'The Man In The Iron Mask,' 'The Senator's Wife,' 'The Soul Forge,' 'Sherlock Holmes: The Classics,'..."
7115. Snyder, Beth. "Company Sleuth spies on marketers." Advertising Age 69, no. 42 (1998): 8-8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article presents information on the web site launched by Infonautics Corp., which will track business news in the U.S. Infonautics launched the web site companysleuth.com, which will track up to 10 companies for each registered user. Consumers and competitors will receive daily electronic mail reports with information such as patents, trademarks and domain names registered, message board and news group postings, job listings and Securities & Exchange Commission filings. The information gathered by Company Sleuth is already public and available through various Web resources. The Web site, which cost Infonautics less than $250,000 in new expenses to develop, is free for consumers. Although no advertisements will appear on the site while it builds a customer base, the company eventually will offer six to 10 charter advertiser packages. Includes a passing reference to Holmes.
7116. Solomon, Akiba. "Holiday Stress Quiz." Essence 36, no. 8 (2005): 119-120.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A quiz about the skills of an individual in managing stress is presented. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Schedule your first annual mother-daughter spa day. Creating a tradition will spare you both the Sherlock Holmes routine."
7117. Soltan, Rita. "Grades 5 & Up." School Library Journal 51, no. 10 (2005): 156.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Church, Lisa, retel. Black Beauty. 153p. CIP. ISBN 1-4027-1144-1. LC 2004013644. SASAKI, Chris, retel. The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes. 151p. ISBN 1-4027-1217-0. LC number unavailable. ea vol: illus. by 1 Lucy Corvino. (Classic Starts Series). Sterling, 2005. PL B $4.95. Gr 4-6 "While better written than most abridged versions, these adaptations sacrifice character and theme development through simplified retellings of the basic plots or action. In Black Beauty, Church has reduced the original 49 chapters to 21 by combining the sequence and action into simpler accounts. Sasaki has reworked six of the Sherlock Holmes stories to maintain the mystery and solution minus Holmes's roundabout

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

explanations of deduction. The books include lists of questions for discussion. The generously spaced, large-type format, interspersed with occasional black-and-white drawings, may serve as an introduction or "starter" as the series intends. However, waiting for the right read-aloud setting combined with discussion of the original is the best way to include the classics in any child's literary experience."

7118. Songini, Marc L. "Fraud Sniffers." Computerworld 38, no. 25 (2004): 42-42.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reveals the use of data analytics and fraud-detection tools by companies to detect suspicious transactions. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Banks, government agencies and large companies have plenty of financial data to sift -- such as checking accounts, purchase orders and sales receipts, most of which record legitimate transactions. But to find that 1% or so that aren't squeaky-clean would frustrate even Sherlock Holmes if the data had to be sorted and matched by hand...."

7119. Sopeña, Bernardo, Gustavo J. Rodríguez, Javier de la Fuente, and Cesar Martínez-Vázquez. "Two Causes of Hypercalcemia: Learning by the Holmesian Method." Mayo Clinic proceedings 79, no. 5 (2004): 708-708.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a letter to the editor, with Holmesian references, commenting on an article about causes of hypercalcemia.

7120. Sorrentino, Richard M. "A World From Two Perspectives: E Pluribus Duo?" Psychological Inquiry 6, no. 4 (1995): 314.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on C. Dweck, Chi-yue and Ying-yi Hong's article about the influence of implicit theories in social judgments and emotional reactions. Synergism of motivation and cognition; Measurement of implicit theories; Incremental and entity theories. Includes a passing reference to Holmes (p.317). "...As I also stated previously, this is a chicken versus egg problem, assuming the two are in fact found to be related. It would be interesting, however, if they are, for as Sherlock Holmes would say, 'The game is afoot!'..."

7121. Spalding, John D. "Remembering James Luther Adams." Christian Century 112, no. 22 (1995): 711.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features the late James Luther Adams, professor of theology in Harvard University's Divinity School in Cambridge, Massachusetts. Author's experiences as Adams student; Author's friendship with Adams; Adams' teaching style. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...After my lunches with Adams I sometimes jotted down summaries of our discussions. Often I would ask him questions and record his answers right there at the table. I titled one of these scraps of paper, 'What JLA Considers His Ten Greatest Intellectual Influences.' Here's how he responded:...John Livingston Lowes. ('A Harvard professor of mine who specialized in Coleridge, Lowes tracked down literary sources with the precision of Sherlock Holmes.') 7122. Spence, Donald P. "The Freudian metaphor: Toward paradigm change in psychoanalysis." no. (1987).

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // (from the jacket) Spence attempts to recapture some of the freshness of Freud's original vision while guarding against the temptation to reify what is only hypothetical. When the metaphorical nature of such terms as 'unconscious,' 'free association,' and 'evenly-suspended attention' is recognized, the analyst's awareness of other possibilities is enhanced; there is always more than one perspective on the events of the session. Spence also encourages a closer look at the metaphor of so-called case histories; these are better viewed as good stories which partly fictionalize what happened than as faithful representations of the exchange between therapist and patient. While critical of outdated concepts, Spence is respectful of the wealth of information contained in the clinical interview and proposes an alternative approach, modeled on the legal system, for unpacking the wisdom of the patient's story. Contents include "The Sherlock Holmes tradition: The narrative metaphor."

7123. ———. "The metaphorical nature of psychoanalytic theory; Essential papers on literature and psychoanalysis." no. (1993): 102-114.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // (from the book) [this chapter] is the opening chapter of Spence's "The Freudian Metaphor" (1987), which describes central psychoanalytic concepts, such as the unconscious, as metaphors, and defines seeing psychoanalysis as a science as a metaphor too / [Spence argues that] we rarely notice . . . how much theory supplies us the meaning that we "discover" in clinical data, how much psychoanalytic

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

literature "represents a compromise between observation and speculation" / Spence's harsh criticisms of "the myth of the innocent analyst" and of "the Sherlock Holmes tradition" in psychoanalysis add to the controversial nature . . . of this intriguing work..."

7124. Spencer, Charles. "The Arts: Out walks a man and falls flat on his face." The Daily Telegraph (London), Dec 5, 1994: 21.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // I feel a heel for putting the boot into [Daniil Kharms] because he sounds a charmingly eccentric man (he delighted in dressing up as Sherlock Holmes) and his short life was wretched. "Today we are going to starve," announces a bleak diary entry; and the Stalinist authorities persecuted him. Little of his work saw the light of day during his lifetime, and he died in a prison psychiatric wing.; The fact that a writer was oppressed doesn't necessarily mean that he was any good. Most of Kharms's work consists of tiny avant-garde fragments, surreal shaggy-dog stories without point or purpose, which his admirers claim reflect the bewildering absurdity of Soviet life.; deeply tiresome clowns, neither of whom provides any real insight into the writer's personality. There are big mime set pieces, and there is a great deal of Shostakovich-like music by Gerard McBurney, ranging from rancid dance tunes to operatic arias and choral singing. You get the impression that this clumsily devised show has operatic ambitions, but haunting though the score is, it doesn't add up to much more than background music.

7125. Spiegel, Pamala. "The Book Cart Drill Team World Championship." American Libraries 36, no. 7 (2005): 63.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The writer reports on the first-ever Book Cart Drill Team World Championship. This fun event attracted 15 teams of library staff and students from all over the country and hundreds of enthusiastic onlookers. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The St. Charles (III.) Public Library's Cart Capades wore Sherlock Holmes outfits and performed to the music of The Pink Panther...."

7126. Spilner, Maggie. "Walking Fit." Prevention 52, no. 1 (2000): 76.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Offers information about walking vacations from 'Prevention' magazine. Destinations offered; Cost. Mentions Meiringen, Switzerland. "Hike well-maintained mountain trails; visit the Sherlock Holmes museum, and walk to Reichenbach Falls (where Holmes supposedly met his fate); explore the Aare and Rosenlauri Gorges and the Ballenberg Open Air Museum."

7127. Springen, Karen. "Your Family Tree of Life." Newsweek 138, no. 11 (2001): 72.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Offers advice for tracing family medical histories. Benefits of discovering a predisposition for a specific disease, such as early testing; Use of medical records and the accounts of older family members to discover family medical problems; How knowledge can affect lifestyle decisions, such as whether to have children. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...If you escape one of the childhood diseases, then by the time you're 50, 80 percent of how well and how long you live is under your control,' says gerontologist Michael Roizen, author of 'Real Age: Are You As Young As You Can Be?' Genetic detective work can increase that control. You don't have to be Sherlock Holmes to figure that out."

7128. Springman, Luke. "Poisoned hearts, diseased minds, and American pimps: the language of censorship in the Schund und Schmutz debates." The German Quarterly 68, no. (1995): 408-429.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The writer compares the debates surrounding the Schund-und-Schmutz censorship laws of 1926 and 1953 in the Federal Republic of Germany. He demonstrates how conservatives in both debates manipulated language to exaggerate the dangers of popular culture. He argues that the statutes against 'trash reading' created an arbitrary bureaucratic and judicial right to determine what constituted a danger to German youth and society. He reveals the paradox between 'legal censorship' and the guarantee of free speech expressed in the democratic constitutions of the Weimar Republic and the Federal Republic of Germany. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The kinds of literature these pedagogues, clerics, and judges had in mind was not unmitigated pornography, because the laws against sexually obscene materials had been in force since 1866 and, despite all the social upheavals, have changed little since 1900. By the time of the Weimar Republic, Germans associated the term Schund with a specific product: thin paperbacks sold by the millions at kiosks and stationery shops. They were usually between 25 and 35 pages long, with garish cover illustrations and containing formulaic adventure stories about detectives, Indian fighters, and other purportedly dubious heroes. According to one representative report from 1930, nearly all young Germans read detective

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

serials such as Nat Pinkerton, Frank Allen, James Robertson der Weltdetektiv, and Rolf Brand der deutsche Sherlock Holmes...."

7129. Spurr, Geoffrey D. "The London YMCA: a Haven of Masculine Self-Improvement and Socialization for the Late-Victorian and Edwardian Clerk." Canadian Journal of History 37, no. 2 (2002): 275.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // During the late-Victorian and Edwardian era British clerks were under considerable strain to construct a positive masculine identity and experience. Their middle-class contemporaries overwhelmingly portrayed them as marginal figures and, to some degree, clerks' work and home experiences corresponded to this portrayal. Clerks were, however, by no means passive victims and sought to improve their occupational, social, and masculine experience within fin-de-siecle society and counter the widespread satirical depiction of them as emasculated "little men." The London YMCA offered not only a number of services of a self-improving, fraternal, and associational nature to young clerks to better their material, social, and masculine conditions but clerks themselves impelled the YMCA to offer services that addressed their own distinct lower-middle-class needs. [Abstract from author] Includes a reference to Holmes. "...As Matthew Hilton has argued in his book, Smoking in British Popular Culture, 1800-2000, by the late-Victorian era smoking had become identified with masculine independence and individuality. Numerous middle-class and lower-middle-class periodicals, such as Once a Week, Chambers' Journal, All the Year Round and Macmillan's Magazine devoted considerable attention to smoking, portraying it as an important act of masculine consumption. Moreover, it was portrayed as an activity that was essential to cerebral endeavours and, thus, to self-improvement. Hilton points to the literary image of Sherlock Holmes, lighting up his pipe to ready his mind as he is presented with the facts of a case by a potential client, as an example of a man whose individuality and genius are both enhanced through the act of smoking...."
7130. St. Lifer, Evan. "Catching on to the 'now' medium; LJ's Multimedia/Technology Survey. (Cover story)." Library Journal 120, no. 2 (1995): 44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses results of 'Library Journal' magazine's Multimedia/Technology Survey. Number of libraries that responded; Types of CD-ROMs in libraries; Libraries reporting multimedia use by patrons; CD-ROM drives with multimedia capability; Popularity of the World Wide Web in libraries; Average library expenditure on in-house CD-ROMs in FY93/94. Includes a passing reference to Holmes.
7131. Stacy, Dennis. "The Omni open book field investigator's guide: Part three." Omni 17, no. 9 (1995): 65.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Part III. Presents a field investigator's guide to the basic hardware needed for unidentified flying object (UFO) investigations. Written record of investigations; Use of a compass to assess magnetic-field fluctuations or variations associated with UFO cases; Supply of plastic bags; Flashlights. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "It was the fictional [sic] Sherlock Holmes who noted that 'the game is afoot.' He didn't have UFOs in mind, obviously, but a more elusive quarry could hardly be imagined...."
7132. Staller, Natasha. "Babel: Hermetic languages, universal languages, and anti-languages in fin de siecle Parisian culture." Art Bulletin 76, no. 2 (1994): 331.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Describes the use of various types of language as an art form in fin de siecle Parisian culture. Relationship between images and realms of mental discourse; Symbolist obsession with language manipulated to subvert bourgeois society's goals; Defeat in war attributed to enemy's superiority in cryptography; Symbolist artists engaged in the ideal of linguistic universality. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...As Carlo Ginzburg vividly demonstrated by analyzing Morelli, Freud, and Sherlock Holmes, an epistemological 'paradigm' of clues, driven by positivism, became pervasive in the late nineteenth century...."
7133. Starfield, Jane. "Interview with Tim Couzens - 2003." English in Africa 30, no. 2 (2003): 101-122.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Interviews South African biographer, literary scholar and travel writer Tim Couzens. Release of a murder mystery titled "Murder at Morija"; Favorite detective writers; Argument that there is far more to murder than identifying the suspect; Genre of biography; Empirical methodology of writing. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...But I say right at the end, had Jacottet been able to choose his biographer, he would have done better. He could have got Sherlock Holmes, but what he got was Inspector Clouseau...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

7134. Starrs, Paul F., Carlin F. Starrs, Genoa I. Starrs, and Lynn Huntsinger. "Fieldwork...with Family." Geographical Review 91, no. 1/2 (2001): 74.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Relates experience of doing sabbatical fieldwork leave with the family in Spain. Mixture of thrill and chill in going to the field; Need of reflexivity in the fieldwork; Realization to complete the field studies for an oak woodland book. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...I also remember the road trip with just my dad, when we stayed by mistake at the five-star Hotel Rocamador, in a former convent and insane asylum, where I took a long bath reading Sherlock Holmes. There was the plaza in Salamanca which had a fair where I got the book, where we would buy roasted chestnuts and eat them while doing paseo through the streets with thousands of other people in the nighttime when it was really cold in November and December...."
7135. Stay, Flora. "Your Mouth Has a Lot to Say About Your Sex Drive." Total Health 29, no. 4 (2007): 56-57.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses the association between oral health and sex drive. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...So what can you do to help the situation? The solution is really simple. Always consider the health of your mouth as an important component of overall health, when seeking treatment. You'll almost have to be part Sherlock Holmes and part consumer health advocate like Ralph Nader. I say this, because more often than not, your physician may not ask you or consider such things as oral health...."
7136. Steger, Adrian. "Mountains, mules and monks: The society's young persons expedition to Kinnaur, Spiti and Lahaul." Asian Affairs 28, no. 1 (1997): 3.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Describes the Royal Society for Asian Affairs' 1995 Young Persons' Expedition to India. Geography and history of Kinnaur, Spiti and Lahaul; Weather; Journey to the Pin Valley; Kipling's description of Spiti; Guling; Kibar village; Gadi people; Crossing of the Baralacha pass. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The other people, of course, said to have walked in Spiti were Kim and his lama; as with Sherlock Holmes the world is a better place for their reality...."
7137. Stein, Alex. "An Essay on Uncertainty and Fact-Finding in Civil Litigation, with Special Reference to Contract." University of Toronto Law Journal 48, no. 3 (1998): 299.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an essay on uncertainty and fact-finding in civil litigation, with special reference to contract cases. Civil standard of proof and its two interpretations; Low-weight probability problem; Allocating the risk of error; Rhesa; Equality principle; Expectation principle; Stipulation-forcing penalty default; Error-minimizing principle. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...Evidence supporting these theories could not lift either of them above the conjectural. Both theories were considered by the judge to be theories of low probability. The judge found theory (3) more probable than theory (4). On the basis of this comparative preponderance, he ruled in favour of the plaintiffs.[47] As remarked by the House of Lords,[48] this finding seems to have adhered to Sherlock Holmes's notorious precept, pronounced to Dr. Watson, 'How often have I said to you that when you have eliminated the impossible, whatever remains, however improbable, must be the truth?'[49]..."
7138. Stein, Robert A. "Past and Future Meet in London." ABA Journal 85, no. 4 (1999): 90.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports that the American Bar Association will have its annual meeting in London, England in July 2000. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Lest it seem all work and no play in London, delightful special events will add spice to the outstanding educational programs. These, too, range from the eminently historical and ceremonial, such as visits to Runnymede, where Magna Carta was signed in 1215--to the literary, such as tours of Stratford-upon-Avon or the Dickensian London Walking Tour--to the mysterious and macabre, such as the Sherlock Holmes Walking Tour or the Jack the Ripper Walking Tour...."
7139. Stendhal, Renate. "Tell her about it." Advocate, no. (2005): 3p.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article offers pieces of advice on how monogamous gay couples can maintain sexual desire toward each other, and relates the pattern of desire that typically shows up in a relationship. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...By now I felt like the Sherlock Holmes of lesbian bed death. If dishonesty was the culprit and if honesty had such an impact, wouldn't we get the opposite result if we let that embarrassing truth out of the closet?..."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

7140. Sternbergh, Adam. "Prints and paupers." Canadian Business 69, no. 8 (1996): 64.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Considers Metro Toronto's Human Services Committee (MTHSC) plan to overhaul Metro's social welfare services. Consideration of proposals to incorporate biometric technology; MTHSC as most likely to choose a finger-scanning system implemented under the auspices of Unisys Canada Inc.; Outrage expressed by welfare recipients in opposition to finger-scanning; Comments of Constable Ron Cook of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police Centre for Forensic Identification. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Mention fingerprints to most people--people raised on Sherlock Holmes and Dragnet--and they think one thing: criminals. Few know that fingerprints were used by the British to combat welfare fraud in India in the mid-19th century, some 50 years before Scotland Yard first started using them to nab crooks...."
7141. Stewart, Ken. "Person, persona and product: Henry Kendall and 'Steele Rudd'." Australian Literary Studies 17, no. 3 (1996): 289.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the Steele Rudd and Henry Kendall personae created by Arthur Hoey Davis and Henry Kendall, respectively. Characters taken by the Kendall persona; Growth in the application of the Steele Rudd persona; Obstacles to the appreciation both persona. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...It is probably too, I suspect, that 'realism's' apparent guarantee of actuality was strengthened by the sheer popularity of the Rudds; and that especially in a television-free reading world, very popular fictional figures became 'real' through accessibility and imaginative reinforcement. The Rudd family became as much a part of life as Sherlock Holmes or Little Nell...."
7142. Stone, C. J. "Labour's own goals." New Statesman & Society 8, no. 336 (1995): 18.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the working class members of the British Labour Party. Party affiliation as flag of convenience; Fascism in the ranks; Feeling of betrayal. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...We were sitting outside the Sherlock Holmes pub just off Trafalgar Square. A coach pulled up loaded with Japanese tourists. They swooped inside, hopping about filming each other and all the drinkers and the olde-worlde fake decor. One of them asked us to stand next to her in the film. It was bizarre. 'We love Sherlock Holmes,' she said. And then it struck me. Guess who I was sitting with? Watson. Yes, that's his name. But when I tried to tell this to the Japanese, they thought I was mad...."
7143. Stouffer, Rick. "Failure of real estate brokerage is elementary." Inc. 19, no. 18 (1997): 37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the failure of real estate business Re/Max Sherlock Holmes and its subsequent filing for bankruptcy in 1997. History of the company; Joining with Re/Max; Success of the joint real estate office; Reasons its franchise agreement was not renewed.
7144. Stout, Rowland. "Descartes's Hidden Argument for the Existence of God." British Journal for the History of Philosophy 6, no. 2 (1998): 155.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on philosopher Rene Descartes' hidden argument for the existence of God. Trademark argument of the Third Meditation and the ontological argument of the Fifth Meditation; Existence of God as an objective requirement for knowledge; Manifestation of the Image of God doctrine in the idea of the divine nature of the human will. Passing reference to Holmes (p. 162-63) with a familiar quote: when you have eliminated the impossible whatever remains, however improbable, must be the truth."
7145. Strother, Phyllis. "A jump start zinger!" Gifted Child Today Magazine 20, no. (1997): 34-37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The writer describes how she uses an independent study in English course as an alternative to the traditional 12th-grade English course in high school to engage gifted students. This course requires students to leave school to pursue independent study projects in the less restrictive environments of the community, present the acquired knowledge to an audience, and decide their own grades. Although no tests are given, the academic skills of research, grammar, and writing are emphasized. Students are free from constant supervision and have a say in the selection of assessments. The writer provides samples of students' and parents' responses to this course." Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The course design forces students to develop the inquiry/discovery method of learning. Using investigative techniques, students act like Sherlock Holmes. Gifted students generally enjoy this strategy more than traditional methods of lecture, worksheets, memorizing, and testing...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

7146. Strout, Cushing. "The Case of the One-Eyed Pundits and Jeffersonian DNA." Sewanee Review 108, no. 2 (2000): 249.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on the controversy among historians regarding the sexual relationship of former United States President Thomas Jefferson and Black slave Sally Hemings. Role of DNA analysis in proving the biological father of Eston Hemings Jefferson; Events establishing the origin of the Jefferson/Hemings liaison; Speculations on the factors influencing the sexual relationships of Jefferson. Includes passing references to Holmes. "...Meanwhile the various versions of the story were subject to Dr. Watson's justified complaint about Sherlock Holmes's speculations in 'The Yellow Face.' Watson thought that Holmes's version was ingenious, but it was 'all surmise.' Holmes was surprised to discover that the face in the window was actually that of the black child of an interracial marriage....Surely Sherlock Holmes would have been fascinated to learn of the DNA experiments. When Dr. Watson first met him in a hospital chemistry laboratory, Holmes was exulting that he had discovered 'an infallible test for blood stains.' As a legendary figure he is supremely confident; but science and the infallible do not make good companions. The idea of fallibility is more of a modern idea than it is a characteristic of late nineteenth-century rationalism. But, as the canon developed, Holmes on occasion had to recognize his own fallibility. He said he would be 'infinitely obliged' if Watson reminded him of the dark face in the window, 'if it should ever strike you that I am getting a little over-confident in my powers, or giving less pains to a case than it deserves.' The rush to claim vindication by the report in Nature ('the chromosomes are on my side,' as one historian has put it) suggests that it is time to take to heart the example of Holmes's compunction...."

7147. Sturgeon, Julie. "What Works? (Cover story)." District Administration 41, no. 10 (2005): 45-49.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article discusses various issues related to the art of teaching how to read. According to the CEO of the Education Leaders Council in Washington D.C., reading is an area where there is a wealth of research and evidence that certain practices work with a much greater proportion than the practices commonly used today. According to Timothy Shanahan, a professor of urban education at the University of Illinois at Chicago and the president-elect of the International Reading Association, most school districts can impact reading scores positively with the dollars at their disposal. As the former director of reading for the Chicago Public Schools, he engineered a literacy program that saw the biggest test score gains in that city's history. Approximately 450 of 600 schools improved during the 2001-2002 school year. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Sherlock Holmes would develop a migraine deciphering this one: This spring, the Denver press jumped all over the fact that three years after the Denver Public Schools sank $13.5 million in the first year alone into a literacy program, students in the poorest schools still weren't reading or writing any better than before. Meanwhile, the wealthier kids did respond, widening the achievement gap between rich and poor...."

7148. Stuttaford, Andrew. "Loch Roswell?" National Review 49, no. 17 (1997): 24-84.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses the so-called Loch Ness monster phenomenon in Drumnadrochit, Scotland. The legend about this monster started over a thousand years ago about a saint who saved a swimmer from a beast in the loch. Folks picked up this story. The monsters allegedly reappear before certain John Mackay and his wife in March 1933. This report got the attention of the media and since then public interest on the Loch Ness monster never stopped. Today thousands of tourists visit the lake where the monster allegedly appeared. This influx of tourist benefit the village surrounding the site. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...But, in Loch Ness, finding nothing proves nothing. No one has even been able to locate the remains of the one monster that is certainly there: a mechanical Nessie sunk, tragically, during the filming of The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes. If Sherlock cannot find the beast, neither, probably, can we...."

7149. Succi, G., A. Eberlein, Jason Yip, K. Luc, M. Nguy, and Y. Tan. "Design of Holmes: a tool for domain analysis and engineering." IEEE Pacific RIM Conference on Communications, Computers, and Signal Processing - Proceedings, no. (1999): 365-368.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Holmes is a collection of tools that support the Sherlock domain analysis & engineering (DA&E) methodology. Holmes plans to improve on existing DA&E tools by providing a more usable interface and making better use of existing technologies and standards. Usability is achieved through

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

automation and the use of a critiquing system. The tool is developed in Java to allow easier upgrading to new technologies and standards by updating a server to deploy new versions. Internal data exchange is achieved using the JavaSpaces API while external data exchange uses the Extensible Markup Language (XML)."

7150. Succi, G., Witold Pedrycz, Jason Yip, and I. Kaytazov. "Intelligent design of product lines in Holmes." Paper presented at the Canadian Conference on Electrical and Computer Engineering, May 13-16 2001, Toronto, Ont., 2001.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- Software product lines; Product characterization // "Software product lines are a promising approach to develop multiple products by providing reduction in rework and a systematic way to exploit the synergistic relationships between products. Many software product line efforts risk failure by ignoring non-reuse aspects of software product lines. One should also consider how to increase the perceived value of each product in the line compared to competitors. Product characterization refers to the analysis of existing and potential products of a firm and their comparison with existing and potential products in the market place. The results of product characterization are essential for defining appropriate goals for a software product line. Holmes is a software product line support tool that addresses the full software product line life cycle by supporting all phases of the Sherlock method. This includes specific targeted and integrated support for product characterization."
7151. Succi, Giancarlo, Jason Yip, Eric Liu, and Witold Pedrycz. "Holmes: a system to support software product lines." Paper presented at the 2000 International Conference on Software Engineering, Jun 4-Jun 11 2000, Limerick, Ireland, 2000.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- Software product lines; Tool support // "A tool designed to support the Sherlock software product line methodology is presented. The tool, so-called Holmes, attempts to provide comprehensive support for product line development, from market and product array strategy analysis to modeling, designing, and developing the resulting system."
7152. Sull, Errol Craig. "Developing an Effective Resource Pool: An Important Tool for Teaching." Online Classroom, no. (2005): 6-7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents information related to effective online teaching. Educational instructors can always use to-the-point, effective and credible online resources. For this, they will have to develop their effective resource pool. It's important to focus on those websites, which are specific to one's needs, whether for teaching a chemistry course, doing a writing workshop or holding a math seminar. One should be sure to read what the requirements are to get from websites and be certain to read any fine print. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Have your 'Baker Street Irregulars.' Sherlock Holmes had his Baker Street Irregulars: young boys who fanned out over London to bring him news and information, and I have mine in the guise of my many students!..."
7153. Sullivan, Michael F., Thomas M. Skovholt, and Len Jennings. "Master Therapists' Construction of the Therapy Relationship." Journal of Mental Health Counseling 27, no. 1 (2005): 48-70.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Qualitative research methods were used to elicit master therapists' statements regarding their use and understanding of the therapy relationship. The master therapists were identified and recruited in a previous study (Jennings & Skovholt, 1999) through a procedure used to create a sample of information- rich cases. The result of the analysis is a Model of Relationship Stances. The Safe Relationship Domain is composed of three categories of therapist actions: Responding, Collaborating, and Joining. The Challenging Relationship Domain also is composed of three categories of therapist actions: Using Self, Engaging, and Objectivity. The domains and categories are conceptualized as relationship stances utilized by the master therapists to meet individual client needs." [Abstract from author] Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Other metaphors included 'good mother,' 'good parent,' 'helper,' and 'artist.' Lastly, from a master therapist who used a detective metaphor: There are two kinds of therapists as there are two kinds of detectives. There is Sherlock Holmes, and there is Columbo. And Sherlock Holmes is very keen-minded, cuts to the chase, and does it. And Columbo, who fumbles. I'm a Columbo. I frame the first interview as, 'We are going to 'muck' around; we're going to have to get to know each other and what we can or cannot do here.'..."
7154. Sullivan, Peggy. "How the Heather Looks." Horn Book Magazine 84, no. 1 (2008): 59-63.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "How the Heather Looks: A Joyous Journey to the British Sources of Children's Books," by Joan Bodger. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Joan had come to England hoping to interview Arthur Ransome....Her first view of him as he came through his own gate in the early evening is memorable. 'He was wearing brown tweed knickers, a brown tweed Sherlock Holmes hat stuck about with trout flies, and a Norfolk jacket. A great white mustache swept down from his nose. A Victorian Viking!'" 7155. Summers, Adam. "Sand Dune Two-Step." Natural History 110, no. 9 (2001): 90.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines the factor that bring the lizards to their hind feet. Theories of lizard locomotion; Evidence of a busy night for kangaroo rats and sidewinders; Existence of the Mojave fringe-toed lizard in Kelso Dunes. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...To circumvent the problems of exposing high-tech electronic equipment to sand and extreme heat, Jayne and Irschick borrowed a tactic from Sherlock Holmes: they measured the footprints left by lizards and then compared the prints with data from the laboratory experiments...."
7156. Swed, Mark. "On disk: All of Heifetz, and." Wall Street Journal; Eastern edition, Dec 21, 1994: A12.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Mark Swed reviews a new BMG release of violinist Jascha Heifetz's commercial recordings in a collection of 65 CDs. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Yet, in the end, Heifetz left a strange and confused legacy. For all his attentiveness to great music, he had few dealings with the great composers of his time, and played few of them. He had a Hollywood side, and had syrupy concertos written for him by the likes of Erich Wolfgang Korngold and Miklos Rosza (who later cannibalized the concerto he wrote for Heifetz as part of the soundtrack for 'The Private Lives of Sherlock Holmes')...."
7157. Swope, Richard. "Approaching the threshold(s) in postmodern detective." Critique 39, no. 3 (1998): 207.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Studies postmodern detective fiction. Characteristics of a postmodern detective fiction; Value of a detective novel; Examples of postmodern detective novels. Includes passing references to Holmes. "...Most critics of detective fiction, Holquist among them, trace the origins of detective fiction to Edgar Allen Poe's Chevalier Dupin, a bastion of logic who becomes popularized in the form of Sherlock Holmes during the late nineteenth and early twentieth century....Though the classic detective novel, 'the epistemological genre par excellence,' concerns itself with knowing, Brian McHale suggests that in recent fiction a shift has occurred from a modernist, 'epistemological dominant' to a postmodernist 'ontological dominant' (146-47), from questions of knowing to questions of being, as exemplified in Umberto's Eco's The Name of the Rose. In Eco's novel a monk detective, William of Baskerville, along with his sidekick Adso--parodies of Holmes and Watson--attempt to solve a rash of murders taking place within a medieval monastery...."
7158. Szabó, Zoltán Gendler. "Counting Across Times." Philosophical Perspectives 20, no. 1 (2006): 399-426.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The author argues that the common semantic arguments against presentism fail. Presentists believe that everything that is within the most comprehensive domain of quantification exists at the present time. The author cites the reasons for the acceptability of the present existence of past tensed states. Includes multiple references to Holmes.
7159. ———. "Definite Descriptions without Uniqueness: A Reply to Abbott." Philosophical Studies 114, no. 3 (2003): 279-291.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses the uniqueness clause in philosopher B. Russell's theory of definite descriptions. If Russell were correct in his observation that whenever there are multiple Fs it is more correct to use the indefinite article in talking about one of them. It is widely acknowledged that there are cases when definite descriptions carry no apparent uniqueness implication. The meaning of a linguistic expression goes frequently beyond its truth-conditional import. The standard example is the contrast between "and" and "but", a non-truth conditional contrast of which competent speakers must be aware in virtue of their understanding of the words. Includes a reference to Holmes in an example. "...The most striking examples involve definite descriptions that are anaphorically linked to indefinites, as in (1): (1) A man entered the room with five others. The man took off his hat and gave it to one of the others....It is often said that the unique man is the one the speaker 'had in mind' or the one he 'mentioned' by uttering the first sentence of (1). But these are bogus

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

explanations. The relevant intuition is that (1) could be true in a context, even if the speaker had no information that distinguishes one of the six men entering the room from the rest, that is, even if he was not in a position to have in mind or mention any one of them in particular. For example, suppose Sherlock Holmes deduces from general clues at the scene of a crime that six men entered the room, one of whom took off his hat and handed it over to another. He does not know whether another of the six also took off his hat and gave it to someone who entered the room with him; all he knows is that at least one of them did that. In this case, Holmes does not know enough to single out in thought or speech any one of the relevant men. Nonetheless, it seems clear that he could say something true in uttering (1)...."

7160. Taibo Ii, Paco Ignacio. "Mexico's Days of Melodrama." Nation 258, no. 16 (1994): 557-559.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents information on Mexico and the political assassination of Luis Donaldo Colosio. One is on the brink of something. One can't figure out what it is. The author's greatest wish was to see Colosio buried in a landslide of votes against him. He did not like the fact that he has been assassinated. The author does not believe in that kind of violence. Mexican society has learned to seek information for itself. To track it down, invent it, fill in the gaps with speculations. Deeply convinced that power is only capable of generating lies, ordinary Mexicans prefer their own lies to those of others. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...What's obvious is that on August 21 we will be facing the most bitterly contested and hostile elections in the contemporary history of the country. It makes me want to quote Sherlock Holmes: 'When you have eliminated the impossible, whatever remains, however improbable, must be the truth.' The problem is, What is the impossible? What remains?..."

7161. Talley, Brooks, and Lori Mitchell. "Integrating call center with the Internet can lead to helpful, efficient customer service." InfoWorld 22, no. 31 (2000): 62.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Offers a look at the advantages of integrating full-scale call center with the Internet to provide a company's efficient customer service. Several resources that will help a company in integrating electronic customer relationship management (eCRM) with traditional CRM. The article ends with a brief section, "Report from the Baker Street Irregulars," with feedback from readers and a passing reference to Holmes. "We had several interesting responses to our July 10 column about spontaneous, unexplained NT server reboots (see 'Mysterious reboots of Windows NT server take sleuthing skills of Sherlock Holmes')...."

7162. ———. "Mysterious reboots of Windows NT server take sleuthing skills of Sherlock Holmes." InfoWorld 22, no. 28 (2000): 62.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the problem of rebooting Windows NT server every few weeks. How to find out whether it is a software or a hardware problem; Detection of the general subsystem in which the problem is occurring. No reference to Holmes beyond title.

7163. Tally, Bill, and Lauren B. Goldenberg. "Fostering Historical Thinking With Digitized Primary Sources." Journal of Research on Technology in Education 38, no. 1 (2005): 1-21.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This pilot study examined middle school and high school student performance on an online historical thinking assessment task. After their teachers received training in the use of digital historical archives, students from all groups engaged in historical thinking behaviors (e.g., observation, sourcing, inferencing, evidence, question-posing, and corroboration) in response to an open-ended document analysis exercise. The types of thinking they did are described, and differences between AP-level and non-AP students are discussed. Challenges teachers face in developing students' historical thinking around visual documents are also discussed. Educators seeking to take advantage of digitized primary source documents need activities with clear curriculum linkages and small exercises that give students guidance in working with different kinds of documents (visual, textual, and audio). In addition, students and teachers need far more practice in learning to make meaning from primary source documents--in beginning to think like historians. [Abstract from author] Article begins with a Holmes quotation: "You know my method, Watson. It is founded upon the observation of trifles. --Sherlock Holmes, The Boscombe Valley Mystery"

7164. Tan, Teri. "The Publishing Players." Publishers Weekly 250, no. 30 (2003): 64.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on several book publishers in Korea. Background on Gimm-Young Publishers; Revenue of Kyowon for 2002; 2003 releases of Sejong Books. Includes a passing reference to

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- Holmes. "...Sales grew 25% last year, to around $22.8 million, at Minumsa. In business for 36 years, the 90-strong company has a stable list, with a 5%-10% increase in its frontlist every year....Its agent in the U.S., Maria Campbell, scouts for appropriate titles to buy and translate for the company. About 30% of its rights are obtained through direct liaison, while the rest are handled by the four major agencies in town: Eric Yang Agency, Korea Copyright Center, Imprima and Shin Won Agency. Translations represent some 70% of the list, of which more than half are from English. Minumsa's recent bestsellers include a war/historical series, The Three Kingdoms (12 million copies), the Rich Dad Poor Dad titles (2.1 million), the six-volume The Lord of the Rings (one million), The Collected Stories of Sherlock Holmes (800,000) and The Magic School Bus (1.3 million copies)...."
7165. Tapply, William G. "Creating a worthy villain." Writer 117, no. 7 (2004): 34-38.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents suggestions for creating villains in a mystery novel. Details of rewriting the story; Establishment of the plot; Characteristics of a villain. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...When I finished writing my first novel, I did what most unpublished writers did back then, 20 years ago, before literary agents became the publishers' gatekeepers. I bundled up a chapter with a query letter and sent it directly to several editors. Rejections, predictably, followed, so I was thrilled when an editor from Scribner's asked to see the whole manuscript. I mailed it out the next day. I waited for two months, trying not to think about it. The response, when it arrived, was not exactly what I'd hoped for. 'We think you can write,' she began, and you didn't need to be Sherlock Holmes to know a 'but' was coming. But, she went on, many of the characters are flat, the plot is predictable, the story doesn't generate much tension or suspense, and we knew whodunit from the beginning...."
7166. ———. "Write from the sleuth's point of view." Writer 120, no. 3 (2007): 13-13.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article presents tips on how to write from the sleuth's point of view in mystery novels. The article suggests the simplicity in the sleuth's point of view, the challenges of other point of views, and the benefits of first person narration in literature. The article refers to literary characters such as Sherlock Holmes and Dr. John H. Watson.
7167. Tardiff, Jill A., John Niernberger, Diane Patrick, Karole Riippa, and Carol Wiener. "PW's Select Guide to BEA Exhibitors. (Cover story)." Publishers Weekly 255, no. 17 (2008): 39-98.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents a list of exhibitors at the BookExpo America (BEA) 2008, along with information on products being promoted at each booth, giveaways and discounts being offered, as well as booth numbers, personnel, and autograph signings. Under the entry for BBC Audiobooks America it is noted that there will be drawings for The Complete Conan Doyle Sherlock Holmes and Hercule Poirot's Greatest Cases boxed sets (daily). Booths: 2228, 2230.
7168. Tatikonda, Lakshmi U., and Rao J. Tatikonda. "The mystery of distorted product cost." Production & Inventory Management Journal 34, no. 4 (1993): 78-81.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The writers portray an example of distorted product cost in the form of a Sherlock Holmes mystery case. The story concerns a president of a widget company who employs the services of Sherlock Holmes to solve the mystery of why his products are losing market share, but still the accounting figures show that he is making a profit. Holmes discovers that the company is incorrectly allocating overhead costs. The lesson to be learned is that by identifying and pooling costs caused by an activity, costs may be assigned to products more accurately on the basis of activities they consume.
7169. Taves, Brian. "Archival News." Cinema Journal 39, no. 4 (2000): 102.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents news briefs on motion pictures in the U.S., as of June 2000. List of foreign feature films received by the Library of Congress; Acquisitions of the National Center for Film and Video Preservation of the American Film Institute; Films of independent filmmaker Everett Foster which were obtained by the Northeast Historic Film. Page 109-111 discusses Holmes on screen and television.
7170. Taylor, Barry. "Realising Giorgione: aestheticism, the market and Renaissance values in Bernard Berenson." Journal of Victorian Culture 3, no. 2 (1998): 282.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the literary works of Bernard Berenson. Aestheticism and Renaissance

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

values; Contents of 'The Venetian Painters of Criticism' and 'Lorenzo Lotto: An Essay in Constructive Art Criticism'; Potential of Morellina connoisseurship. Endnote 2 contains a reference to Holmes. "...See also Carlo Ginzburg, 'Morelli, Freud, and Sherlock Holmes: Clues and Scientific Method', in The Sign of Three: Dupin, Holmes, Peirce, ed. Umberto Eco and Thomas A. Sebeok (Bloomington: Indiana University Press, 1983), 81-118...."

7171. Taylor, Chris. "Bidding for Greatness." Time Europe 157, no. 22 (2001): 56.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the Internet auction site eBay. Growth of the company, which has consistently posted profits; How eBay is known as the place where anything can be bought at a bargain price; Lack of geographic and legal restrictions on the site; Community aspect of the site. Includes a passing reference to Holmes, along with a photograph of a Holmes book (unidentified). "...Forget about black monoliths. If the late great Stanley Kubrick had known what was going to be really cool by the year 2001, his seminal movie would have opened with 25 million ape-descendants clustered silently round an awe-inspiring and somewhat unreal auction house. Then to the tune of the Blue Danube, some bizarrely diverse items would shoot weightlessly through the ether--sterling silver Jaguar cars, Sherlock Holmes first editions, Xerox networked printers, a pair of Madonna concert tickets, an ostrich-egg incubator--moving at a rate of 5 million purchases per day...."

7172. ———. "Who Needs Napster?" ON Magazine 6, no. 3 (2001): 62.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents several Web sites offering free music services in the Internet as of May 2001. Services provided by www.audiogalaxy.com; Features of the www.rapigator.com; Use of encryption for file swapping in the www.filetopia.com. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The first screen you see when launching WinMX software can be a little off-putting: a long list of servers coming online. But it doesn't take a Sherlock Holmes to figure out what to do next: click on the magnifying glass and start searching. From that point on, it's elementary...."

7173. Teagarden, Ernie, and Annie Weismantel. "The Dakotas: Alf Sully, John Pope and Sherlock Holmes Enter Dakota Territory." Journal of the West 45, no. 3 (2006): 59-64.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article examines the unexpected ramifications of the Western post on the careers of Major General John Pope and Brigadier General Alfred Sully who came to Dakota Territory following the Minnesota Sioux Uprising of 1862. The two Civil War era soldiers did not want the assignment because glory and promotion came from fighting rebels in Virginia and not from fighting Indians in Dakota Territory. Some of the questionable areas in the careers of both men are also highlighted. Beyond title, unknown references to Holmes.

7174. Teel, J. "Venturing into Genre (and Pseudonym): Joyce Carol Oates and 'Rosamond Smith'." Journal of American & Comparative Cultures 25, no. 3/4 (2002): 390-394.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the works of author Joyce Carol Oates who wrote under the pseudonym of Rosamund Smith. Subject-matter of Smith's writings; Appearance of twins in the novels of Smith; Depiction of serial killers in the novels of Smith. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...More pertinent to her own works are a number of commentaries Oates has written on mystery, horror, and gothic works of the nineteenth century that, she feels, have achieved a special sort of classic stature by going beyond being merely 'fictional' and becoming mythic, or perhaps more accurately, offering modern adaptations of earlier myths. In her essay, 'Frankenstein's Fallen Angel,' she notes that some fictional characters 'have made the great leap from literature to mythology,' have 'stepped from the rhythms of their authors' unique voices into what might be called a collective cultural consciousness' (114). Frankenstein and his monster are among those, of course, and Oates includes Dracula and Sherlock Holmes among others from nineteenth century fiction on this rather exclusive list...."

7175. Thau, Mike. "What is Disjunctivism?" Philosophical Studies 120, no. 1-3 (2004): 193-253.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the meaning of disjunctivism. Analysis of John McDowell's disjunctive conception of appearances; Identification of the kind of response to the argument from illusion that McDowell offers; Characterization of veridical and non-veridical experiences. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...If we don't use the content to specify the object of hallucination, the choice of object would be entirely

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

arbitrary; there's absolutely no reason to say that the object isn't the Mona Lisa, the number 17, the largest prime, Sherlock Holmes, or any other existent or (if such there be) non-existent object...."

7176. Theokritoff, George. "Stratigraphy: Indicator of mass extinction." Bioscience 44, no. 7 (1994): 500.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'The Great Paleozoic Crisis: Life and Death in the Permian,' by Douglas H. Erwin. Transitions between the paleozoic and the Mesozoic marked by the most extensive mass extinction event in the history of life; Review of Permian biotas and three evolutionary faunas. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The greenhouse effect would be further amplified by carbon dioxide released during the eruption of the Siberian traps. The resultant global warming would lead to oceanic anoxia.

Attractive as the hypothesis may be, Erwin recognizes its tentative nature: 'Unlike Hercule Poirot, Lord Peter Wimsey, or Sherlock Holmes, so many clues have not been uncovered or may have been misinterpreted that there is every likelihood that I am wrong in the suspect I finger.'..."

7177. Thilmann, Jean. "Working Backward." Mechanical Engineering 127, no. 6 (2005): 36-38.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article focuses on reverse engineering. Reverse engineering can be defined as taking something apart or breaking it down to its simplest pieces, to determine how it was built or how it works. Technology vendors now sell hardware that traces over existing parts and assemblies and inputs the shape into a computer-aided design system so engineers can adjust and rebuild the products. This is the use mechanical engineers perhaps most often associate with reverse engineering--that a company studies a product's basic structure in hopes of developing a competing or interoperable product. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Investigating engineers used analysis technology and other engineering technology in this case. They're as necessary to the forensic engineer as a magnifying glass was to Sherlock Holmes. But, as with the magnifying glass, the user has to know how to look, and what to look for...."

7178. Thomä, Helmut, and Horst Kächele. "Comparative Psychoanalysis on the Basis of a New Form of Treatment Report." Psychoanalytic Inquiry 27, no. 5 (2007): 650-689.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "In this article, we argue that it is essential to understand how the analyst applies his knowledge in the analytic situation to investigate the analytic process and develop research models to evaluated clinical hypothesis." Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...What is needed is a new genre and a new mode of clinical reporting and we are reminded of Eissler's prediction that 'when a case history has been published of a quality superior to the five pillars on which psychoanalysis now rests (Freud's five case reports), then psychoanalysis will have entered a new phase' (Eissler, 1963, p. 678). We need to have a clean break with what I call the Sherlock Holmes tradition, and to develop methods of presenting our data which will allow the reader to participate in the argument, allow him to evaluate the proposed links between evidence and conclusion, and which open up the possibility of refutation, disconfirmation, and falsification (none of these moves is now possible)...."

7179. Thomas, Alan. "Practical Reasoning and Normative Relevance: A Reply to McKeever and Ridge." Journal of Moral Philosophy 4, no. 1 (2007): 77-84.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A putative problem for the moral particularist is that he or she fails to capture the normative relevance of certain considerations that they carry on their face, or the intuitive irrelevance of other considerations. It is argued in response that mastery of certain topic-specific truisms about a subject matter is what it is for a reasonable interlocutor to be engaged in a moral discussion, but the relevance of these truisms has nothing to do with the particularist/generalist dispute. Given that practical reasoning is plausibly a form of abductive reasoning, and is therefore non-monotonic, any arbitrary addition of information can change the degree of support evidence offers for a conclusion. Given this arbitrariness, it is no objection to the particularist if he or she represents the 'normative landscape as flat' in a way that does not display the 'obvious' relevance of certain considerations. The normative landscape is flat and our best account of practical reasoning represents it precisely as such. Appealing to a distinction between practical reasoning and moral reasoning does not help to resurrect this pseudo-problem for particularism." [abstract from author] Includes a reference to Holmes.

"...Consider, by way of analogy, the theoretical use of abduction. Sherlock Holmes, that leading exponent of abductive inference, claimed in The Six Napoleons to have solved the complex Abernethy murder case on the basis of noting the depth to which parsley had sunk into butter on a table on a hot day. The idea that this fact could have a bearing on a particular theoretical hypothesis seems to me just as implausible as the claim that the colour of person's shoelaces could have any bearing on the deliberations of a practically rational agent...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

7180. Thomas, Evan. "A Spy We Loved." Newsweek 152, no. 10 (2008): 74-74.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "The Irregulars: Roald Dahl and the British Spy Ring in Wartime Washington" by Jennet Conant. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The British spies were a romantic bunch who included the playwright Noel Coward and Fleming, the British naval intelligence officer who later created the James Bond novels. They referred to themselves as the Baker Street Irregulars, after the Sherlock Holmes stories, and the most irregular may have been Dahl, an RAF pilot and assistant air attaché in the British Embassy, who went on to write very clever, macabre short stories and hugely popular children's books ('Charlie and the Chocolate Factory')...."
7181. Thomas, Kim. "Burglar hounded by Holmes." The Press (Christchurch, New Zealand), May 6, 2006: 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "A Christchurch pooch called Sherlock Holmes proved his crimefighting credentials by sniffing out a dairy robbery in progress and helping police put the burglar in the human doghouse. Sherlock Holmes, or Holmes for short, alerted his owner Blair Anderson to a burglary at the Wainoni Dairy while out for an early- morning walk last July. The case came to court this week...."
7182. Thomas, Scarlett. "Paperbacks: for Fans of Playstation Or Even Sherlock Holmes ; Number9dream by David Mitchell Sceptre Pounds 6.99." Independent on Sunday (London), April 21, 2002: 17.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Passing reference to Holmes.
7183. Thompson, Howard. "Movies this week." New York Times, May 31, 1998: 13.5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights the television programs 'The Women,' 'The Fallen Sparrow,' 'Adventures of Sherlock Holmes,' and 'China Seas' which will be shown during the week of May 31 to June 6, 1998, in the United States. Television channels the programs will be broadcast on; Information on the programs.
7184. Thurschwell, Pamela. "The Invention of Telepathy, 1870-1901 (review)." Victorian Studies 46, no. 3 (2004): 503-505.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of The Invention of Telepathy, 1870-1901, by Roger Luckhurst; pp. vi + 324. Oxford and New York: Oxford University Press, 2002, GBP40.00, $49.95. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...This study brilliantly illustrates the ways in which telepathy--that magical link between minds--connects in its own mysterious and not-so-mysterious ways to fin-de- siècle cultural contexts as various as class politics, ideas of empire, the new journalism, technological developments such as the telegraph, the rise of disciplines such as psychology and anthropology, the resurgence of Gothic literature, and the purportedly nervous disposition of the New Woman. Luckhurst's literary sources include Mona Caird, Arthur Conan Doyle, George Egerton, Henry James, Rudyard Kipling, Vernon Lee, Amy Levy, Arthur Machen, Robert Louis Stevenson, and Bram Stoker, winding up with a suggestive chapter on the resurgence of telepathy in psychoanalysis, Modernism, and Surrealism...."
7185. Tillinghast, Richard. "Inventing Ireland." Sewanee Review 106, no. 2 (1998): 338.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Criticizes the book 'Inventing Ireland,' by Declan Kiberd. Idea offered by Kiberd on the book; Plot summaries provided for readers; Why Ireland's relations with Britain continue to remain central. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Postcolonial theorists would like to convince us how significant it is that the chess set Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson play with is carved from Asian ebony and African ivory, or that the GBP10,000 per annum inherited by one of Jane Austen's heiresses comes from the West Indian spice trade. Much of this is on a par with the pipe dreams of Michel Foucault and Harold Bloom...."
7186. Tintner, Adeline R. "A gay Sacred Fount: The reader as detective." Twentieth Century Literature 41, no. 2 (1995): 224.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Studies the novel 'Sacred Fount,' by Henry James, as a text of homosexual love. Importance of term 'concealment' in the novel; Discussion of James' sexuality; James' concept of homosexuality; Significance of the art-gallery scene in the novel. Article opens with a Holmesian quote:

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

"When you have eliminated the impossible, whatever remains, however improbable, must be the truth."

7187. Tompkins, Daniel P. "Weber, Polanyi, and Finley." History & Theory 47, no. 1 (2008): 123-136.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Ancient Athens and Modern Ideology: Value, Theory and Evidence in Historical Sciences: Max Weber, Karl Polanyi and Moses Finley," by Mohammad Nafissi. Footnote 65 makes a passing reference to Holmes. "Compare Chris Wickham on the 'deadening effect of a vast, primitive, subsistence sector that mostly allowed only for small surpluses' in later antiquity, 'Marx, Sherlock Holmes, and Late Roman Commerce,' Journal of Roman Studies 78 (1988), 190."
7188. Tralka, George. "Clues to the blues." Cortlandt Forum 11, no. 11 (1998): 68.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an unusual medical case. Role of physicians in patient care; Evaluation of patient's behavior; Diagnosis unrelated to hospitalization. Includes a passing reference to Holmes.
7189. Traub, James, and Michael Freeman. "Mysterious pearls." Smithsonian 28, no. 4 (1997): 70.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Sheds light on the efforts of Benjamin Zucker, a jeweler and collector, to determine the origin of 23 orange pearls; How the pearls came into Zucker's possession; Why the pearls were believed to have belonged to Vietnamese royalty; Zucker's discoveries. Includes passing references to Holmes. "...Ben has described himself as the 'Sherlock Holmes of the gems trade.' He has a gift--a combination of doggedness and the conceptual leap--for tracing gems and jewels to, or at least near, their origins....Surely a revelation was at hand. And indeed, that evening, as we were exploring the houseboat where we would spend the night, Ben appeared on the stern to announce, Holmes-like, 'We've made a break in the case.'...It was better, in a way, that the truth remained tantalizingly remote, for then Ben could lose himself in strange texts, distant excursions and unforeseeable, ingenious inferences. Ben was a mystic at heart; but so, for all his formidable logic, was the spiritualistic Holmes...."
7190. Traubner, Richard. "Broadway." American Record Guide 64, no. 5 (2001): 30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews several musicals. 'Seussical'; 'Follies'; 'The Adventures of Tom Sawyer.' Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...What it gets quite right is the melodrama in Mark Twain's classic; indeed, David Krane is credited with the dance music and the incidental music. Ludwig's play, with or without songs, and the production reminded me of two excellent melodramas: London's National Theatre production of Dion Boucicault's The Shaughraun or the RSC's Sherlock Holmes...."
7191. Travers, Andrew H., and Terry Sosnowski. "St. Patrick, the organic chemist and Sherlock Holmes meet in the emergency department: a case report." CJEM: The Journal of the Canadian Association of Emergency Physicians 4, no. 4 (2002): 289.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines an innovative approach to ethanol ingestion in an inner city hospital emergency department. Case history; Clinical presentation; Treatment. No reference to Holmes beyond title and an "elementary" observation in the case.
7192. Travis, J. "Pollen for the prosecution?" Science news 154, no. 20 (1998): 316.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the research of Reinhard Szibor of the Otto-von-Guericke University in Magdeburg, Germany, into the pollen species found on the skeletons from a mass grave in Magdeburg. Theories of who might be responsible for the deaths; Possibility that the Gestapo or the Soviet secret police committed the murders; Pollen variety linked with the time the Soviet secret police were thought to have been active in the area. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Sherlock Holmes would be proud. Reinhard Szibor of the Otto-von-Guericke University in Magdeburg, Germany, and his colleagues suggest that pollen may offer a clue to a gruesome murder mystery...."
7193. Trelford, Donald. "Trelford On Thursday: Watson deserves a timely gift." The Daily Telegraph (London), Dec 22, 1994: 30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Barry McGuigan, the former world champion, is so concerned about Watson's plight that he has been trying to raise money through the Association of Professional Boxers. A number of individuals have shown generosity towards him - including some stewards of the BBC. But it isn't charity that Watson needs: it's his rights.; Did [Holmes] go to university? In The Gloria Scott, says Mr [Peter Tipping],

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

Holmes refers to his "two years at college". But he doesn't say where. In The Musgrave Ritual he tells Watson that Reginald Musgrave was in the same college, but that's all.; This Elizabethan Watson did not, of course, play rugby. Paul Beken, from Sutton, in Surrey, challenges a recent claim here that Rosslyn Park used the Old Deer Park at the time Watson would have been playing. Not so, he says: they appeared at Gunnersbury Lane in Acton.

7194. Tribby, Mike. "A Treasury of Foolishly Forgotten Americans: Pirates, Skinflints, Patriots, and Other Colorful Characters Stuck in the Footnotes of History." Booklist 104, no. 13 (2008): 46.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "Pirates, Skinflints, Patriots, and Other Colorful Characters Stuck in the Footnotes of History: A Treasury of Foolishly Forgotten Americans" by Michael Farquhar. "Farquhar's latest offering of historical and biographical oddments (previous ones have also borne the appellation Treasury) limns newsmakers in their times who are now unaccountably obscure....Successive chapters recount the exploits of William J. Burns, 'America's Sherlock Holmes,' and Gaston B. Means, 'the nation's . . . Moriarty.'..."
7195. Truett, Carol. "Sherlock Holmes on the Internet: language arts team up with the computing librarian." Learning and Leading with Technology 29, no. 2 (2001): 36-41.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The WebQuest model, which requires students to use the Internet to successfully complete an assignment, can be used to teach almost any subject but is particularly effective when combined with the teaching of the mystery genre. Such a WebQuest combines language arts, library objectives, and computer skills. A sample WebQuest using Sherlock Holmes is discussed, and relevant standards, a cooperative group rubric, and a list of resources are also provided.
7196. Truss, Lynne. "Convenient for heaven and the West End." The Times (London), Dec 16, 1994: No page citation.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Get Up, Stand Up is good humoured comedy old-fashioned sketches mixed with recognition-gags, with the best jokes arising out of situations that are better recognised by a black person than a white....There are some weak strands, but in sketch shows there usually are. A spoof Oprah with Angie Le Mar is obvious and second-rate; and the black Sherlock Holmes sketches are juvenile; but the dreadlocked Chris Tummings is a lovely stand-up act, and Malcolm Frederick's silly Moses and the Burning Bush is developing nicely...."
7197. Tuniz, C., U. Zoppi, and M. A. C. Hotchkis. "Sherlock Holmes counts the atoms." Paper presented at the 5th Topical Meeting on Industrial Radiation and Radioisotope (IRRMA-V), Jun 9-14 2002, Bologna, Italy, 2004.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- Accelerator mass spectrometry (AMS) // "Modern forensic science has to deal not only with homicides and other traditional crimes but also with more global threats such as smuggling of nuclear materials, clandestine production of weapons of mass destruction, stockpiling of illicit drugs by state-controlled groups and war crimes. Forensic applications have always benefited from the use of advanced analytical tools that can characterise materials found at crime scenes. In this paper we will discuss the use of accelerator mass spectrometry as an ultra sensitive tool for the crime labs of the third millennium." Unknown reference, beyond title, to Holmes or Doyle.
7198. Turner, Trevor. "Presumed Curable: An Illustrated Casebook of Victorian Psychiatric Patients in Bethlem Hospital." International Journal of Psychiatry in Clinical Practice 8, no. 1 (2004): 66-67.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "Presumed Curable: An Illustrated Casebook of Victorian Psychiatric Patients in Bethlem Hospital," edited by Colin Gale and Robert Howard. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...This belief that 'melancholia' or 'mania' or 'general paralysis of the insane' (GPI) could be distinguished at a glance was part of psychiatry's attempt to share in the diagnostic advances of Victorian medicine and surgery. Making a diagnosis from the end of the bed was very much the coup de théâtre of the brilliant professor, the 'elementary' expositions of Sherlock Holmes (himself created by a doctor) being the apogee of the art. Other influences on this process were the dominance of phrenology and physiognomy, for example the work of Professor Lombroso around 'criminal anthropology' (i.e. identifying criminals by their head shapes) and the work of Charles Darwin and Francis Galton in their studies on evolution and eugenics...."
7199. Tyre, Terian. "MacAdemic." T H E Journal 22, no. 10 (1995): 53.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents Macintosh resources for computer-assisted instruction. Includes Macintosh DOS compatibles; Software 'UltraWriter'; 'Library of the Future' CD-ROM; LCD1280 monitor. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Library of the Future, Third Edition combines more than 3,500 novels, short stories, essays, poems and historical documents on a single CD-ROM. An award-winning package for the PC platform, the Macintosh version adds nearly 600 illustrations, maps and portraits as well as author biographies and audio readings of some texts. Fifteen minutes of video capture scenes from films based on Sherlock Holmes, Gulliver's Travels and Aladdin...."

7200. Useem, Jerry. "Power (Cover story)." Fortune 148, no. 3 (2003): 56-59.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Singling out "power" for a special issue of "Fortune" is a bit like "Sports Illustrated": devoting an issue to "athletics." Power defines "Fortune"--it's what we write about every issue, special or not. Back in 1929, founder Henry Luce was even thinking of naming his new magazine "Power." While we're grateful he passed on that one (as well as "Tycoon"), Luce was onto something. Business, like golf, isn't solely about power--but power is in business's soul. Recognizing power is one thing. Ranking it is another. When "Fortune" set out to create a list of the 25 most powerful people in business, our goal was simple: to provide a snapshot of who controls the commanding heights of the American economy. Our definition of power was straightforward: the ability to affect the behavior of other people--whether in a company, an industry, or the world at large. The simple part pretty much ended there. We soon came to understand the four immutable laws of the quantification of power. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Touching one's fingers together in a raised position--Sherlock Holmes and The Simpsons' Mr. Burns both do it--turns out to be a dominance display that's most potent 'right at eye level,' notes Ellyson, 'so one person has to look through the other's hands.'..."

7201. Vaghi, Peter J. "Challenge and Opportunity." America 193, no. 13 (2005): 19-21.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines the views of the late Pope John Paul II on suffering. Information on an apostolic letter written by the pope about the Christian meaning of suffering; Significance of the document in dealing with human suffering; Link between suffering and redemption. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Like a magnet, Jesus was drawn to suffering. This was no accident. It is precisely in and through suffering that Jesus and his power are revealed. This 'salvific' power gives Christian meaning to the problem of suffering. It is a mystery. It is where we meet God. It is not the kind of mystery solved by Sherlock Holmes; rather it is a mystery in the sense that it can be understood only as an act of love...."

7202. Van Biema, David, Sean Scully, Jeremy Caplan, and Rita Healy. "Father & Child." Time 166, no. 25 (2005): 66-74.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses Joseph's relationship with Jesus. A growing interest in Joseph is reflected in recent books that fill out the narrative only hinted at in the Bible's brief mentions of him. Howard Edington's "The Forgotten Man of Christmas: Joseph's Story," combines biblical analysis with material suggested by additional reading. From almost the moment the gospels were set down, early Christian communities, church fathers, Pontiffs and random laity have colored in the lightly sketched character of Joseph. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Audiences,' writes Louise Bourassa Perrotta, author of Saint Joseph: His Life and His Role in the Church Today, 'do not generally react well when favorite characters are retired early,' citing Sherlock Holmes and Joseph...."

7203. Van Engen, Abram. "Reclaiming Claims: What English Students Want from English Profs." Pedagogy 5, no. 1 (2005): 5-18.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an article on the way people view those studying English as their major subject in college. Problem that the English professor and the English pupil encounter; Impact of literature on people; Importance of literature. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Recently, I went through the same ordeal in meeting the family of a new friend. The father--a banker, of course--was lounging in a plush recliner behind his copy of Forbes magazine as the Asian Market Watch rambled on above a rush of stock quotes skimming across the screen. 'And writing,' I said. He looked up. 'Fake stuff or real?' I blinked, my mouth opened slightly in the universal expression of incomprehension. 'I mean, are you writing fiction or non?' Now, I'm not so careful a judge of character as, say, Sherlock Holmes, Columbo, or the lady from Murder She Wrote, but I'm pretty sure that my questioner was not joking. Fiction, apparently, was fake...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

7204. van Niekerk, Anton A. "Death, meaning and tragedy." South African Journal of Philosophy 18, no. 4 (1999): 408.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // In this article, the author submits Zygmunt Bauman's analysis of postmodernity as a life strategy entailing the 'deconstruction of immortality' to critical scrutiny. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The postmodern enterprise constitutes a mode or strategy for dealing with death, a strategy oriented to establish some semblance of meaning, but which inevitably falters in view of the performative contradiction entailed in its constant ironizing of the very idea of meaning. Bauman himself makes the mistake of identifying the search for meaning exclusively with the orientation of the modern world, probably because he holds meaning to be the 'hard, yet invisible core wrapped tightly in what offers itself to the senses...That core can be uncovered and repossessed if the carapace of the signifier is broken' (1992: 183). Therefore, the modern world needs detectives of the kind epitomized by Sherlock Holmes, the one who was never content with things as they seem to be, the one who insists on pursuing truth as the unexpected explanation of the available evidence. The postmodern world, according to Bauman, has no time for Sherlock Holmeses, not because it is content to 'live with a lie', but because postmodernism is the event in which the distinction between appearance and reality collapses, in which everything becomes mere appearance, in which 'there is nothing outside the text' (Derrida)...."
7205. Van Tyle, Sherrie. "Hot PC products." Electronic Design 42, no. 16 (1994): 96.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents several computer software. UltraStat; Sherlock version 2.0 file-finding and management software for Windows 3.1; Upgrading of QAPLUS/Win 6.0.
7206. Van Wallendael, Lori R., and Reid Hastie. "Tracing the footsteps of Sherlock Holmes: Cognitive representations of hypothesis testing." Memory & Cognition. 18, no. 3 (1990): 240-250.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A phenomenon in opinion-revision literature is Ss' failure to revise probability estimates for an exhaustive set of mutually exclusive hypotheses (HYPs) in a complementary manner. In 3 experiments with 280 undergraduates, Ss were given murder mysteries to solve and allowed to request information about the suspects; after each new piece of information, Ss rated each suspect's probability of being the murderer. The noncomplementarity of opinion revisions was a strong phenomenon. Information-search data refuted the idea that Ss represented HYPs as a Bayesian set and support the independence HYP as a model of cognitive HYP representation. In the independence HYP, HYPs are mentally represented as individual possibilities, each of which may increase or decrease in likelihood, independent of other possibilities. (PsycINFO Database Record (c) 2005 APA, all rights reserved)
7207. Varhol, Peter. "DVD helps give new meaning to interactive game design." Computer Design's: Electronic Systems Technology & Design 36, no. 7 (1997): 35.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the convergence of Digital Video Disk (DVD), digital television, and Internet gaming that offers a significant market opportunity in line with interactive multimedia games. First generation of Digital Video Disk players; Audio and video systems for the digital television; Interactive games in the market. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...For adults with more sedate tastes in entertainment, DVD video promises to give a highly realistic backdrop to a strategy game like Risk or a Sherlock Holmes type of mystery, while preserving an interaction that was available only on board games...."
7208. Vawter, Edward. "Macintosh Toolbars and Search Tools." Searcher 13, no. 3 (2005): 18-27.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article discusses the availability of toolbar options online for Macintosh users. Macintosh users are accustomed to either patiently waiting for the release of Macintosh versions of software packages or industriously hunting for alternative to popular Windows-only software. Searching the Internet using a Macintosh has several angles when one starts looking for software assistance. Apple has provided one application to act as a Web service, Sherlock. This application, which comes with every Macintosh computer, allows a user to search the Internet using About.com, Best Site 1st, Looksmart, Lycos and Overture. Plug-ins allow users to search Google as well as the Google directory. Sherlock 3 allows users another view of information on the Internet without using a browser. Sherlock can get information from a Web site and display in a format determined by a Sherlock plug-in, rather than as presented on the Web site. Besides the Internet, Google and Google Directory plug-ins, Sherlock has other useful channels. These include a phonebook, flight

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

information, an e-Bay connection, a dictionary, translation service and others. Other channels are available on various sites on the Internet.

7209. Verburg, Peter. "Misery seeks companies." Canadian Business 71, no. 19 (1998): 63.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on Greg Noval, president of Canadian 88 Energy Corp., and his hopes to transform his midsize gas producer into a major company. Why he has decided to team up with J.P. Bryan, formerly of Gulf Canada Resources Ltd.; How the two men differ; Challenges that face the company. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Noval's job was to study the leases and ensure the company was meeting its obligations. 'This job was so boring it would drive you around the bend,' says Brown. 'But Noval came to work every morning like he was Sherlock Holmes, ready to solve the next case.'..."
7210. ———. "Trouble on Bourbon Street." Alberta Report / Newsmagazine 22, no. 42 (1995): 16.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Maintains that crime and deafening music are threatening the polished image of the West Edmonton Mall (WEM) in Alberta. Creation of WEM's 'Bourbon Street' with new tenants Club Malibu and the Hard Rock Cafe; Increase in vandalism, public drunkenness and nightly fights; Increase in number of police on patrol at WEM. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...A worker at Sherlock Holmes, who also requested anonymity, says, 'The fights are a problem.'..."
7211. Vicarel, Jo Ann. "A Beautiful Blue Death." Library Journal 132, no. 8 (2007): 57-57.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "A Beautiful Blue Death," by Charles Finch. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Vividly capturing the essence of Victorian England, Finch presents us with a unique sleuth who combines the deductive powers of Sherlock Holmes with the people skills of Thomas Pitt...."
7212. Viets, Elaine. "It's Rock Bottom for Paul Jones in Photos." St. Louis Post-Dispatch (St. Louis, MO), Dec 13, 1994: 03D.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Sexy letters threatened the careers of Woodrow Wilson and James A. Garfield. They were the standard fare of mystery writers. Sherlock Holmes, always on the cutting edge, was hired by the king in 'A Scandal in Bohemia' to get back letters AND a photo from adventuress Irene Adler. The damaging photo showed the king and Irene together. Fully dressed...."
7213. Virjee, Nadia. "Book Reviews." Howard Journal of Criminal Justice 43, no. 4 (2004): 449-461.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // In the book by V. Ruggiero, Crime in Literature: Sociology of Deviance and Fiction, the review contains a passing reference to Holmes. "...Baudelaire's opinion on various drugs, via De Quincey, Rimbaud and Dumas and Sherlock Holmes, is set out: wine - good; hashish - antisocial, and opium - 'no crime...but weakness' (p.64) and John Barleycorn reveals Jack London's wrestle with the Bottle and his eventual prohibitionist conclusions...."
7214. Vismann, Cornelia. "The Love of Ruins." Perspectives on Science 9, no. 2 (2001): 196-209.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The love of ruins has generated various epistemes and disciplines: In the sixteenth century it informed philology, in the nineteenth century historiography and criminology. Its status has changed from an allegorical one in the Renaissance to a literal, positivistic one at the beginning of the twentieth century. Johann Gustav Droysen was among the first who reflected the positivistic treatment of ruins systematically. The Prussian historiographer formulated a theory of remains including both written documents and material objects. In the twentieth century the positivistic view lost its appeal for scholars. They began to question the supposed ability of ruins to access the past. The physicality of remains was no longer trusted to guide the process of memory. This disillusion in the power of remains led to a practice of mere tabulation where statistics instead of historical narrative were generated. The contemporary philosopher Giorgio Agamben proposes yet another way of dealing with remains. He liberates ruins from their materialistic shell altogether and takes them consequently in their discursive form as that which is and which is in language. [Abstract from author] Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...A piece of evidence gains in plausibility when it has built up an accidental relationship to the deed in question, that is when a piece of evidence previously considered irrelevant becomes relevant. Meant here are not Sherlock Holmes' classifications of cigarette ash and other refuse. Primary to every other semiotic art of reading clues, the dogmatics of proof is concerned with a kind of truth molded by the juridical form of inquiry that depends on the non-manipulated, the accidental...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

7215. Wakeham, Lord. "The Lords: Building a House for the Future." Political Quarterly 71, no. 3 (2000): 277.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the British Royal Commission's task of finding solutions that will bring about the long-term reform of the House of Lords. Role of the second chamber; Broad nature of a reformed second chamber. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Obviously, as the government moved to implement the 'first stage' of Lords reform--the expulsion of the bulk of the hereditary peers--the existence of the Royal Commission enabled them to claim that they were serious about moving on to 'stage two'. But all the members of the Commission felt, throughout the process, that we had genuinely been brought together to exercise our collective judgment on what Sherlock Holmes would call a 'three pipe problem'...."
7216. Waldman, Allison J. "25 Cable Shows That Stand Out." Television Week 26, no. 21 (2007): 33-35.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A list of the top 25 shows in U.S. cable television that stood out is presented, including 'Monk' and a reference to Holmes. "With his multiple psychological problems, Monk is anything but normal. Although he's obsessive-compulsive to the point of paralysis in certain situations, his intense focus and attention to detail make him as brilliant as Sherlock Holmes when analyzing a crime scene. The mystery plots are usually more 'how-done-it' than 'who-done-it,' allowing 'Monk' to be more character-driven than plot-oriented. As Monk, Tony Shalhoub is masterful, winning three Emmys as lead actor in a comedy."
7217. Wallace, Trudy, and Herbert J. Walberg. "Girls who became famous literalists of the imagination." Roeper Review 18, no. 1 (1995): 24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Identifies the early conditions of successful adults by an historical analysis of psychological traits and childhood environments of several notable twentieth century American women writers. Comparison of writers to other successful women by a historical analysis of childhood learning; Examination of factors associated in the context of literacy development of several authors. Includes passing references to Holmes. "...Dorothy Parker also described herself as a child who was a prolific reader. She attended a convent school where reading was not taught, but she read on her own enjoying the works of Charles Dickens and Charles Reade's The Cloister and the Hearth. At age 11 she read Vanity Fair and thrilled at the line, "George Osborne lay dead with a bullet through his head." This led to her love of Sherlock Holmes stories (Cowley, 1963)....Another effective form of writing pedagogy developed by Hillock included the modeling of good pieces of writing from primary sources such as works by Charles Dickens. George Eliot, and Sherlock Holmes from which the future writers modeled their own literary productions...."
7218. Walls, Jeannette. "Call me Ishmael...Smith." Esquire 125, no. 6 (1996): 28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reveals that pseudonyms used by several celebrities. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...And it's not just individuals who take on assumed names. Not all hotel clerks are happy to book a room for Ku Klux Klansmen, so the organization travels as Empire Publishing. Here are some more names to amuse the bellhops:...Indiana Pacer guard Reggie Miller: Sherlock Holmes...."
7219. Walski, Thomas M. "Sherlock Holmes meets Hardy-Cross or model calibration in Austin, Texas." American Water Works Association Journal 82, no. (1990): 34-8.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- //
7220. Walters, Jeff. "Have brands, will travel." Brandweek 38, no. 37 (1997): 22.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the distribution of brand-name goods in foreign countries and cultures. Problems faced by organizations which distribute their products to foreign countries; Identification of alternative foreign distribution methods. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Like the phone representatives, ads vary by language and also in approach. In French ads, for instance, Gateway stresses the 'chicness' of its brand and lending names such as Intel and Microsoft, because that is important to French consumers. German ads focus on the technical features of the product. British ads take a light-hearted approach by using Sherlock Holmes, Robin Hood or an old cartoon known as Magic Roundabout. The point again is that it's not only the cultural fit, but the consumer fit...."
7221. Wang, Karissa S. "Big names try their hand at piloting." Electronic Media 19, no. 18 (2000): 30.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Lists several television programs for the 2000-2001 season in the United States.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- 'The Beast,' starring Frank Langella and Courtney B. Vance; 'American Family,' from writer-director Gregory Nava; 'Deadline,' from Dick Wolf and Robert Palm; 'CSI,' from movie producer Jerry Bruckheimer. Includes a reference to a Holmes-related show. "Elementary" (Shephard/Robin Co./Touchstone Television) From Josh Friedman. A modern-day tale of Sherlock Holmes set in San Francisco.
7222. ———. "Pilots with punch." Advertising Age 71, no. 21 (2000): s30-S34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the programs that will be featured during the 2000-01 television season. How TV networks are using movie producers and directors to work on their programs; Increase in the number of minority actors in TV shows; Offerings in drama, comedy, and alternative programming by the networks. Includes reference to a Holmes-related show. "Elementary" (Shephard/Robin Co./Touchstone Television) From Josh Friedman. A modern-day tale of Sherlock Holmes set in San Francisco.
7223. Waterhouse, Keith. "Oh, to be Back on Treasure Island." Daily Mail (London), April 26, 1999: 14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Passing reference to Holmes. "...It seems that in primary schools most teachers are women, and it is the teachers who choose the books. The books they choose are more likely to be Jane Eyre and Pride And Prejudice than The Hound Of The Baskervilles and Treasure Island, and Education Secretary David Blunkett quite rightly wants Long John Silver and Sherlock Holmes to get a look in...."
7224. Watson, Elizabeth S., and Anita Silvey. "Booklist: For intermediate readers." Horn Book Magazine 70, no. 6 (1994): 730.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'The Dark Stairs: A Herculeah Jones Mystery,' by Betsy Byars. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Move over, Encyclopedia, Sherlock, and Nancy - Herculeah is on the case. Byars's new heroine reminds the reader a bit of Bingo Brown as she finds herself in one tight spot after another...."
7225. Watson, George. "The amiable heretic I.A. Richards 1893-1979." Sewanee Review 104, no. 2 (1996): 248.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles literary writer and academic I.A. Richards. Character traits; Love for ideas; Reputation as a heretic; Sense of mission. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...His private literary tastes, however, were in no way modern or modernistic. Kipling's Kim was a favorite novel, often reread; and it is salutary to recall that the pioneers of literary modernism were pre-modern themselves: that Eliot, for example, read and reread the Sherlock Holmes stories, that Ezra Pound admired Robert Browning. Richards did things because he wanted to do them. No curriculum interested him...."
7226. Webster, Norman. "Tory rot; Britain's John Major is running out of chances." Dec 3, 1994: B5.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The world still penetrates. Down below, at Widecombe-in-the- Moor, where cows graze beside the church, the publican offers pints of his own Widecombe Wallop - or Molson's Dry. In the tiny hamlet of Sheepstor you discover the tomb of the Brooke family, the fabulous White Rajahs of Sarawak - the principality on the island of Borneo, which, improbably, they ruled from 1841 to 1945; on a board nearby is a notice about the Devon and East Plymouth European Parliamentary Constituency.; The Queen's Bargemaster does his duty, as do the Ladies of the Bedchamber, the Yeomen with their lamps searching for gunpowder under the House of Lords (remember what happened in 1605) and, of course, the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, who marches off to summon the Commons and gets the door slammed loudly in his face. (Cheeky headline in the Sunday Times: "Is that a Black Rod or are you just pleased to see us?"); The Gunpowder Plotters of today are sitting on the Tory benches. The governing party's right-wingers are mightily unhappy with [John Major] and waiting for the right moment to blow him out of 10 Downing Street. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "This is one of my favorite places in the world, though some shiver at the mention of it. Dartmoor has had a bad rap from Sherlock Holmes and the hell-hound of the Baskervilles. In fact, it's an outdoor treasure, one of the best places to go walking, anywhere...."
7227. Webster, Stephen. "Off Line: the Case of the Cursed Curriculum." The Guardian (London), December 7, 1995: 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on scientific illiteracy with passing reference to Holmes. "Was Sherlock Holmes scientifically literate? Undoubtedly he considered himself a scientist - his first recorded words concerned a new test for haemoglobin he had just cooked up in the Bart's Hospital chemistry lab. And

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

the great detective was forever making observations and deductions and rearranging his ideas in the light of experience. Yet with his second comment, delivered to Dr Watson, Sherlock Holmes surely fails. Holmes believed the Sun went round the earth. He was a pre-Copernican, and not prepared to change his mind. Dr Watson was absolutely horrified. How could a man of science make such an elementary mistake? Holmes saw no problem whatsoever. For him, the machinations of the solar system were no business of his. Sleuthing in London, not the cosmos, was his job. I'm not sure Holmes would be so stubborn today. These days, innocent bystanders regularly find themselves polled about things miles away (the movements of the Sun) or about events that unfolded years ago (the creation of the universe). Rather like Sherlock Holmes, and probably for very much the same reason, they often give the wrong answer. And by giving the wrong answer the innocent bystanders show themselves to be suffering from that modern malady, scientific illiteracy...."

7228. Webster-Stratton, Carolyn, and Deborah Woolley Lindsay. "Social competence and conduct problems in young children: Issues in assessment." Journal of clinical child psychology 28, no. 1 (1999): 25.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Studies the differences in various facets of social competence and conduct problems among young children. Assessment of preschool and early school-age children; Assessing children's social information processing competence; Peer and home observational measures to determine conduct problems. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...We derived our WALLY game (Webster-Stratton, 1990; Webster-Stratton & Hammond, 1997) from Spivak and Shure's (1985) Preschool Problem-Solving Test and Rubin and Krasnor's (1986) Child Social Problem Solving Test. The game was designed to be particularly attractive to young children by utilizing a game-fantasy approach and bright colorful pictures of young children. We assessed both the qualitative and quantitative dimensions of a child's social problem solving. In this game, the child is presented with 12 brightly colored illustrations of hypothetical problem situations related to object acquisition (i.e., how to obtain a desired object) and to friendship (i.e., how to make friends with an unfamiliar person). The child is told he or she is a 'problem-solving detective' (each child is given a Sherlock Holmes hat to wear while he or she thinks of responses) and is asked to solve the problems in the pictures...."

7229. Weiner, Justus Reid. "'My Beautiful Old House' and Other Fabrications by Edward Said." Commentary 108, no. 2 (1999): 23.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Considers the life story of scholar and literary figure Edward Said as an allegory of the plight of the Palestinian people. Family background of Said; Information on his most famous book 'Orientalism'; Said's books bearing directly on the Palestinian issue. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Is it not curious in the extreme that Said, while on record as remembering the 'rooms [in this house] where as a boy he read Sherlock Holmes and Tarzan, and where he and his mother read Shakespeare to each other,' has nowhere brought to mind the presence upstairs of the Yugoslavian consulate, the comings and goings of visa-seekers, diplomats, and politicians, including for a time the king of Yugoslavia himself, or the arrival of limousines and their elegantly attired occupants for official functions like the annual Yugoslavian independence-day reception?..."

7230. Weisser, Cybele. "Betting The House." Money 33, no. 9 (2004): 65-65.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This is an article providing information on the stock of Washington Mutual and its performance. It doesn't take Sherlock Holmes to surmise that Bill Nygren's favorite stock is Washington Mutual (WM). The celebrated manager of the very concentrated Oakmark Select fund (a MONEY 100 selection for several years running) has a whopping 16% of the fund's assets in the stock (it's also the top holding in Nygren's Oakmark fund, where his bets are more spread out). Nygren believes that Wall Street has misjudged the impact of Washington Mutual's profit shortfall. Investors have fixated on the explosive growth in WaMu's mortgage lending, but earnings from checking account fees, business loans and the like made up two-thirds of its $3.9 billion in profits last year. Though its mortgage profits are predicted to fall 75% this year, Nygren expects earnings from retail banking to rise at least 15%.

7231. Welker, W. A. "The road signs of reading." Journal of Adolescent & Adult Literacy 49, no. 8 (2006): 644-647.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Contains a passing reference to Holmes. "...Literature: Sherlock Holmes would trust only his good friend Dr. Watson when explaining his deductive thoughts in reference to a case...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

7232. Weller, Anthony. "The Bookshops of London." Forbes 156, no. 12 (1995): 91-92.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights several bookshops in London, England. Features; Addresses; Contact points; Bell, Book & Radmall; Nigel Williams Books; Bertram Rota; Maggs Bros. Ltd; Hatchards; Heywood Hill; Others. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Bell, Book & Radmall (4 Cecil Court, 44-171-240-2161; fax 379-1062) is for many the modern literature first-edition bookshop of choice; fairly priced, low-key, unstuffy, yet with only top-quality copies. (A first edition is the first appearance of a book, before it gets reprinted.) Want an original of The Adventures Of Sherlock Holmes (1892), a distinguished blue volume with gold lettering above a London street scene?..."
7233. ———. "Flashman!" Forbes 156, no. 12 (1995): 82-89.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on Flashman, the character made popular in the novel 'Flashman,' by George MacDonald Fraser. The character appearing as a boy in Thomas Hughes' novel 'Tom Brown's Schooldays,' in 1857; Flashman's personality; Humor, prose, and period slang in 'Flashman'; Plot description of 'Flashman'; Ten Flashman books in print; The books not having as much popularity in the United States compared with Britain. Includes passing references to Holmes. "Boys read different books than girls: this is why there are soldiers, and freebooters, and pirates, and empires. It is why Sherlock Holmes and James Bond and Tarzan have nothing to fear from posterity, for every man has deep within him a shadow self dreaming of impossibly heroic lives he might have led....Flash is the antithesis of a 007 or a Holmes or a Horatio Hornblower, ever stalwart for England....We are a long way from Holmes and Hornblower here: the jingoistic historical fantasy of England is finished...."
7234. Wesley, Marilyn C. "Power and Knowledge in Walter Mosley's Devil in a Blue Dress." African American Review 35, no. 1 (2001): 103.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines the relationship between power and knowledge depicted in 'Devil in a Blue Dress,' by Walter Mosley. Examination of black empowerment in the aftermath of Second World War; Similarities of the detective story with British counterparts; Assessment of the book. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The classic detective, like Sherlock Holmes, an agent of the aristocracy, puts his highly specialized knowledge to use solving lurid crimes in a manner that protects the dominant class from the threat of or responsibility for violence. By defining criminal activity as deviation, his solutions demarcate knowledge as separate from violent power...."
7235. Wessely, Simon. "How to profile a Hannibal Lecter." The Times (London), January 31, 1994: no page citation.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes passing references to Holmes.
7236. West, Cathie E. "Helping your successor succeed." Principal (Reston, Va.) 78, no. 5 (1999): 34+.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The writer discusses the steps a departing principal can take to make a successor's transition smooth. Departing principals can assemble priority information, preserve essential data, throw out worthless items, organize files and references, clean house, update computer files, complete tasks, prepare transition plans, be available, and be positive." Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...After six principalships over the past 21 years, I can now look back at that frantic first week and see it as unexpectedly fortuitous. Because it was from my exasperating experience as an incoming principal that I learned to be a considerate departing principal--a role I have played five times. When I leave a school, I don't expect my successor to be a Sherlock Holmes...."
7237. Whalen, Carol K., Larry D. Jamner, Barbara Henker, Ralph J. Delfino, and Jorie M. Lozano. "The ADHD Spectrum and Everyday Life: Experience Sampling of Adolescent Moods, Activities, Smoking, and Drinking." Child Development 73, no. 1 (2002): 209.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Using an experience sampling methodology, the everyday lives of 153 adolescents with low, middle, or high levels of attention-deficit/hyperactivity disorder (ADHD) characteristics as assessed by either parent or teen were examined. Twice each hour, across two 4-day recording intervals, participants in a longitudinal study of stress and health risks logged their behaviors, moods, and social contexts. Those with high, in contrast to low, ADHD symptom levels recorded more negative and fewer positive moods, lower alertness, more entertaining activities relative to achievement-oriented pursuits, more time with friends and less time with family, and more tobacco and alcohol use. Fewer associations emerged with parent-defined than with

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- teen-defined subgroups, although the differences in alertness, peer and family contexts, entertainment versus achievement activities, and substance use were consistent across sources. Even at subclinical levels, ADHD characteristics were associated with behavioral patterns and contexts that may promote peer deviancy training, unhealthy lifestyle behaviors, and vulnerability to nicotine dependence. [Abstract from author] References at end of article include one related to Holmes: Jensen, P. S., & Watanabe, H. (1999). Sherlock Holmes and child psychopathology assessment approaches: The case of the false-positive. Journal of the American Academy of Child & Adolescent Psychiatry, 38, 138-146.
7238. Wheaton, Ken, and Emily Tan. "Food & Wine publisher tries his hand at saber rattling." Advertising Age 78, no. 29 (2007): 28-28.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article presents information on people and events associated with the advertising business. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Perhaps our recent mentions of the 'Transformers' movie have led some people to believe Adages has a fondness for action figures. How else to explain the recent package we received from WGBH in Boston, which is promoting an upcoming Masterpiece Theatre series? No, we aren't the proud owners of a Sherlock Holmes doll or a Martin Chuzzlewit with a kung-fu grip. Instead, we're in possession of a Jane Austen action figure 'with writing desk and quill pen!' Super Jane is promoting 'The Complete Jane Austen,' in which 'adaptations of all six Jane Austen novels and a special biography of Austen will be broadcast as a complete collection.'" 7239. Wheeler, Harvey. "Francis Bacon's "Verulamium" the common-law template of the modern in English science and culture." Angelaki: Journal of the Theoretical Humanities 4, no. 1 (1999): 7.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the development of England's common laws of society and nature according to philosopher Francis Bacon. Concept of positivism; Bacon's science-related innovations; Features of modern common-law system. Includes a passing reference to Holmes (p. 13). "...The element that then emerged was not a ruling but an analytically discovered law that 'must' be the juridical foundation for a set of related case rulings: judging the rulings to find the rule they jointly express. The process is like what in artificial intelligence programming is called back-chaining, and is the foundation for computer-mediated searches for roots and causes, as in medical diagnosis. It is also the empiricist process of that supreme Baconian, Sherlock Holmes (Sebeok 1981)...."
7240. Wheen, Francis. "Francis Wheen finds the missing link in JFK's assassination ... Where's Wally?" The Guardian (Manchester), Dec 4, 1994: No page citation.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Who killed President Kennedy? Thirty-one years on, and after at least 100 books on the subject, we are still waiting for a conclusive answer. Two weeks ago, however, a young arts impresario named Giri Tharmananthar told me that he had cracked the case....'When you have eliminated the impossible,' Sherlock Holmes used to remind Dr Watson, 'whatever remains, however improbable, must be the truth.' But the whole point of conspiracy theory is that nothing is impossible. What remains is everything, and so everything must be true: Shakespeare's plays were written by Francis Bacon, aided by four monkeys with typewriters; John Major is really an alien invader from the planet Vulcan...."
7241. White, Richard. "Cooees across the Strand." Australian Historical Studies 32, no. 116 (2001): 109.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Over the nineteenth century, the European 'cooe' in Australia shifted from being a functional colonial bush call to being a means of performing a specifically Australian nationality. This article examines the particular circumstances--in literature and music, in trade, war and, most critically, in travel--in which the 'cooe' took on self-consciously nationalist meanings. The cooes of Australian travellers in London predated its entry into a nationalist repertoire in the later nineteenth-century, part of the process whereby Australian identity was forged out of the relationship between Australia and Britain. [Abstract from author] Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...In most literary references, the cooe simply added local colour, marking the setting as Australian. Furphy, Paterson, Richardson, Gaunt, Baynton, Rudd, Bruce all had their use for the cooe. In some works published in Britain, it carried more weight. In the 1880s Rosa Praed began one novel and ended another with cooes.(n42) Mrs Patchett Martin's 1891 collection from Australian writers in London was titled Coo-ee: Tales of Australian Life.(n43) In 'The Boscombe Valley Mystery' the same year, Sherlock Holmes realised the case revolved around a 'crucial' cooe, and the fact only an Australian would answer it.(n44)..."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

7242. Whitfield, Peter. "The House of Maps." Geographical 75, no. 12 (2003): 50-55.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Traces the early history of Stanfords, which was referred to as the house of maps in England. Background on the original Stanford map shop business; Geographers hired by the son of Edward Stanford, owner of the first Stanford company; Official bodies for whom Stanford acted as sales agents. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...During the winter of 1887, John Ruskin, art critic, moralist and sage, now descending into madness, dashed off a cry for help to a well-known London shop: Gentlemen, Have you any school atlas or any other sort of atlas on sale at present without railroads in its maps? Of all the entirely odd stupidities of modern education, railroads in maps are infinitely the oddest to my mind. Ever your faithful servant and victim J Ruskin. The recipient of this rather strange appeal was the house of Edward Stanford, the map-seller who, in the three decades since he started in business, had made himself pre-eminent in his field. Whether you sought an Ordnance Survey map of Surrey, a map of a Balkan war-zone, of the railways of India or of the goldfields of South Africa, Stanfords was acknowledged to be the first port of call; Sherlock Holmes himself was to 'send down to Stanfords' for a large-scale map of Dartmoor at the opening of The Hound of the Baskervilles. This year, Stanfords is celebrating a century and a half of map-selling, during which time the company has had a small but intriguing role in Britain's political and social history...."

7243. Whittington-Egan, Richard. "Men of the 1890s: Yellow or green?" Contemporary Review 267, no. 1555 (1995): 81.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on some of the more notable literary men in the 1890s. Biographical accounts of Oscar Wilde and Audrey Beardsley; Other key figures of the 1890s that have had shoals of volumes written concerning them; Men who lack biographical studies. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Symons was certified and spent nearly two years in a private lunatic asylum, Brooke House, at Clapton, south east London. He emerged, ostensibly cured, in 1910, and was able to resume his writing, but he was, like Sherlock Holmes after his plunge over the Reichenbach Falls, never quite the same again...."

7244. Wickens, Barbara. "Red Army faceoff." Maclean's 110, no. 48 (1997): 11.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Describes the two hockey teams in Moscow, Russia, both of which are called by the name Red Army. How that happened with the breakup of the Soviet Union in 1991; The turmoil in hockey and the attempts of legendary coach Viktor Tikhonov to save it; The competition between the two teams. Inset: Best-Sellers. The Inset includes a reference to Holmes. "The Sherlock Holmes Victorian Cookbook: Favorite Recipes of the Great Detective & Dr. Watson by William Bonnell features recipes for 90 dishes in the writings of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. They range from 12-course meals of the great country houses to the simpler fare of the sleuthing duo's Baker Street landlady, Mrs. Hudson."

7245. Wiederhold, Mark D., and Brenda K. Wiederhold. "Virtual Reality and Interactive Simulation for Pain Distraction." Pain Medicine 8, no. (2007): S182-S188.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Pain and discomfort are perceptible during many medical procedures. In the past, drugs have been the conventional means to alleviate pain, but in many instances, medications by themselves do not provide optimal results. Current advances are being made to control pain by integrating both the science of pain medications and the science of the human mind. Various psychological techniques, including distraction by virtual reality environments and the playing of video games, are being employed to treat pain." Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Schneider and Workman, in 1999, investigated whether VR as a distraction intervention was effective in minimizing chemotherapy-related symptom distress in children (aged 10-17) with cancer in a convenience sample of 11 children receiving outpatient chemotherapy [4]. Patients wore a Virtual IO headset (a lightweight display) during an intravenous chemotherapy treatment while playing one of the following three CD ROM-based scenarios: Magic Carpet, Sherlock Holmes Mystery, and Seventh Guest...."

7246. Willett, Roslyn. "F." Feminist Studies 28, no. 3 (2002): 623.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the short story 'F---,' which deals with the challenge of identity from the point of view of a woman. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...I am bent on preserving what I know. I am like Sherlock Holmes. To learn a new thing, I must forget an old thing. I cannot forget old things. I must constantly refresh them, or I forget them even if I do not learn a new thing...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

7247. Willhoite, Michael. "Joyas Voladoras and Love in a Box." American Scholar 74, no. 1 (2005): 143-143.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a letter to the editor about an error in "Love in a Box" with a reference to Holmes. "...That said, somebody should have caught the error in Andrew Hudgins's piece, "Love in a Box." Sherlock Holmes lived at 221B Baker Street, not number 10."
7248. Williams, Geoff. "Death sleuth." Biography 2, no. 7 (1998): 50.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on forensic scientist James Starrs' interest in exhuming the bodies of famous dead people in the United States. Criticisms directed to Starrs regarding his exhumation activities; Famous people exhumed; Discoveries in Starrs' exhumation of famous dead people's bodies. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Clearly Starrs, who turns 68 this month, loves a good mystery-a holdover from childhood. Growing up in the New York area, the middle son of an English professor father and an artist-art teacher mother, he was a voracious reader and a Sherlock Holmes fan...."
7249. ———. "Recipe for disaster: How Mary Mallon became Typhoid Mary." Biography 1, no. 12 (1997): 69.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles Mary Mallon, also known as 'Typhoid Mary.' Mallon's job as a cook; How she began spreading typhoid; Reasons Mallon was sentenced to live on North Brother Island; Her appalling strength and resistance to doctors who came to admit her to a hospital; Why she felt she was unjustly persecuted; Death. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Soper was a good choice. For the last several years, the epidemiologist had spent much of his time investigating several serious typhoid fever outbreaks throughout New York and neighboring states. He had a master's degree and a Ph.D. from Columbia University, where he had focused on sanitary engineering. He dived into Thompson's case with the enthusiasm of a Sherlock Holmes...."
7250. Williams, Mark E. "Old Lives Tales, Sherlock Holmes at the Bedside: The Case of the Missing Patient." Journal of the American Geriatrics Society 51, no. 12 (2003): 1813-1813.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents author's experiences when he was a second year medical student. He describes his experience about usual weekly encounters of medical students which they named "Geri Action." In the meeting the students used to observe aged patients without their instructor's permission. During the group visit, their head, a geriatrician would share his observations and would point out the specific observational evidence that would underlie his impression. This observation and deductive approach was reminiscent of the famous fiction detective Sherlock Holmes. The article also discusses the author's reaction to a missing patient when they went on the usual "Geri Action" session.
7251. Williams, Stephanie. "How women size you up." Men's Health 14, no. 1 (1999): 92.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the things women look for in men. Physical appearance; Attitude towards fashion; Standards of masculinity. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Women have to play Sherlock Holmes to figure out whether you're datable, boyfriend material, or merely--to borrow your lingo--doable. All this sleuthing happens in seconds...."
7252. Wilson, Jennifer. "Mapping Murder." Geographical 74, no. 11 (2002): 14.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Provides information on the use of detailed maps and models of behavior to catch serial killers, rapists and arsonists. Details on the development of computer program Dagnet to learn the ways by which offenders operate; Examples of cases wherein criminals were successfully tracked through geographic profiling; Implications for the development of crime prevention techniques. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...In 1854, London's Soho district was stricken by a cholera outbreak that claimed over 500 lives. Dr John Snow, a doctor in the area, took on the task of finding the source of the culprit, like a medical Sherlock Holmes...."
7253. Wilson, Janell D., Charles C. Notar, and Barbara Yunker. "Elementary In-Service Teacher's Use of Computers in the Elementary Classroom." Journal of Instructional Psychology 30, no. 4 (2003): 256-264.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Continued advancements in technology have fundamentally changed the way we work and live. Today's educators have unlimited opportunities to more broadly apply our powerful technological tools and change the way students of all ages are learning. Yet, there continues to remain a consensus among business leaders, parents and educators that our current educational practices do not prepare students to thrive in our ever-changing technological society. The purpose of this study was to investigate and describe the use of computers in the classroom by elementary teachers and their students. Data was collected university pre-service teachers who were currently enrolled in a required education technology course. The results indicate that the responding elementary teachers reported only limited use of computers in their classrooms. The computer use that was employed by the teachers was primarily for desk organization with very little if any classroom instruction being addressed by computer technology. [Abstract from author] Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Elementary, my dear Watson, Elementary! Unfortunately, this famous saying, attributed to Sherlock Holmes, does not reflect the use of technology by teachers in elementary level classrooms or by elementary pre-service teachers during their training. Frank (1990) follows Sherlock's dictum when he wrote that teachers tend to teach in the same way that they, themselves, were taught...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

7254. Wilson, Landice. "Under the microscope." Career World 28, no. 4 (2000): 20.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Describes the work of clinical laboratory technicians. Role of medical technologists in the detection, diagnosis, and treatment of disease; Steps to certification; Impact of technology on such occupational group. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Clinical Laboratory Technicians If you are interested in microscopic mysteries, put on your Sherlock Holmes hat and head for the lab...."

7255. Wilson, Mark. "The Unreasonable Uncooperativeness of Mathematics in the Natural Sciences." Monist 83, no. 2 (2000): 296.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Justifies the extension of applied mathematics to include rationalized expedients in the absence of workable physical models. Response to anti-realist criticisms of mathematical opportunism and mathematical optimism; Historical evidence supporting mathematical opportunism; Acceptance of use of defined differential equation for handling an unknown function. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Suppose some friend throws an old violin, a deer-stalker hat, some false mustaches and a vial of cocaine on the table and declares: 'Behold the man.' If we are rather dense, we might require our companion to provide some story of why the odd stuff she has cast before us should be regarded as introducing a personage. True, enough paraphernalia of this ilk should be sufficient to isolate Sherlock Holmes uniquely but it is also clear that we tacitly rely upon an interpretative scheme in reading their import rightly...."

7256. Wilson, Patricia S., and Jennifer B. Chauvot. "Focus issue: history." Mathematics Teacher 93, no. 8 (2000): 642-717.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // A special section on mathematics history and history in the mathematics classroom is presented. Articles discuss the integration of history into mathematics lessons, a mathematical problem in the form of an ancient document, a classroom visit from Pythagoras, mathematician Levi ben Gershon, etymologies of mathematics words, mathematics education in the age of Jane Austen, Andrew Wiles and Johannes Kepler as models of perseverance for mathematics students, mathematics problems and solutions, students' discovery of the origins of familiar mathematical concepts, a paradigm to explore the evolution of mathematical entities, well-known mathematicians, John Napier and the development of the logarithms concept, the role of history in the mathematics classroom, Benoit Mandelbrot, and the parallels between the early 20th-century ideas of Felix Klein and the 2000 Principles and Standards for School Mathematics. Bibliography includes a reference to Holmes. Buck, R. Creighton. "Sherlock Holmes in Babylon." American Mathematical Monthly 87 (May 1980): 338-45.

7257. Winfrey, Marion E., and Amy Rex Smith. "The Suspiciousness Factor: Critical Care Nursing and Forensics." Critical care nursing quarterly 22, no. 1 (1999): 1-7.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This conceptual article provides a guide for understanding the place of forensic nursing within the discipline of nursing. Ways of knowing in nursing and expert nursing practice are described to identify the role of intuition in nursing practice. The relationship between suspicion and intuition is explored. Strategies for developing forensic nursing expertise and increasing suspicion are described. Suspicion (intuition) is presented as a rapid, acquired, patient oriented perception that leads to decisive action. [Abstract from author] Includes two quotations from Holmes: "The world is full of obvious things which nobody, by any chance, ever observes." (A Case of Identity) and "You will remember, Watson, how the dreadful business of the Abernethy family was first brought to my notice by the depth which the parsley had

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

sunk into the butter on a hot day." (The Six Napoleons)

7258. Winicki-Landman, Greisy. "On proofs and their performance as works of art." Mathematics Teacher 91, no. 8 (1998): 722-725.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Part of a special section on the concept of proof in mathematics education. An activity for preservice mathematics teachers that requires them to prove a theorem incorporates mathematics' cultural and artistic aspects. Students present individual proofs for the theorem, commenting on each other's proofs, and they also comment on proofs the instructor presents to them. The main purposes of this activity are to give students an opportunity to prove mathematical results new for them, to think about the presented proofs of such results and compare them following Barbeau's recommendations, and to discuss possible implications for their future teaching." Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The idea of facing a challenge or a mystery appears also in Irene's words: 'When you see that you can use a remote result to solve a problem or prove a result, you feel that you solved a mystery, like Sherlock Holmes. When you see it, you just smile and feel great.'"

7259. Winters, Brian. "Logic and Legitimacy: the Uses of Constitutional Argument." Case Western Reserve Law Review 48, no. 2 (1998): 263.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on Stephen Toulmin's insights into the nature of logic to the problem of constitutional skepticism. Discussion on the so-called naive view of the Constitution and of judicial review; Introduction to constitutional skepticism. Includes passing references to Holmes. "...Richard Posner is quite emphatic: '[Interpretation is] a mental activity distinct from... logical reasoning';(n77) '[T]here is no such thing as deduction from a text.'(n78) As Toulmin suggests, such claims would certainly surprise Sherlock Holmes who was always deducing things from texts (as well as from bits of mud, etc.).(n79) Of course, Posner is not using 'deduction' in its (everyday) Sherlockian sense; he is using it in the Cartesian sense, just as did the legal formalists (and their critics)....Posner is right: There is no such thing as Posnerian deduction/entailment from a text. But what if, as Toulmin argues, entailment turns out to be such a special case that its implications for practical reasoning are nil? What if, instead of the Posnerian view of logical deduction as logical entailment, we focus on the (Sherlock) Holmesian conception of deduction as simply arguing from premises to conclusions?Posner, it turns out, is probably hoist on his own petard...."

7260. Wiseman, Richard. "The Sherlock Holmes of Stuff." New Scientist 198, no. 2662 (2008): 50-50.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reviews the book "Snoop: What your stuff says about you," by Sam Gosling.

7261. Woeber, Catherine. "Compiler's Preface." English in Africa 30, no. 2 (2003): 5-26.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the compilation of Tim Couzens' archival research and oral testimony for South African literary studies. Couzens' writing on South African literary history; Documentation of South African literary production and reception from 1970 to 1979; Benefits of a meticulous training in bibliographic compilation for researchers. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...It indicates the revolutionary research methods he has adopted to fill in the lacunae of our literary history, going beyond armchair criticism in following the precept of Sherlock Holmes: 'It is a capital mistake to theorise before one has data.'" 7262. Wolf, Stewart. "Commentary on Medical Specialties." Integrative Physiological & Behavioral Science 33, no. 4 (1998): 311.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on medical specialties. Examples of traditional clinical specialties; First objective in medical practice diagnosis; Argument on detaching and isolating medical specialties; Information on specialists. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The first objective in medical practice diagnosis, however, requires of the physician a comprehensive intellectual background and certain capabilities such as perspicacity, the ability to relate to people, a capacity for intellectual synthesis comparable to that of Sherlock Holmes and comparative judgment as well as a personal interest in patients...."

7263. Wolin, Richard. "Leo Strauss, Judaism, and Liberalism." The Chronicle of Higher Education, no. (2006): B13-14.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The followers of Leo Strauss seem to be fighting a losing battle in their vigorous

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- efforts to defend the political philosopher against accusations of antiliberalism. Strauss's esoteric political philosophy was formulated as a way of superseding liberalism rather than reinforcing it." Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...A perfect example is Strauss's defense of revelation against Spinoza's modern skepticism. In A Theologico-Political Treatise, Spinoza, with the zeal of an early modern Sherlock Holmes, ruthlessly unmasked biblical inconsistencies and far-fetched, supernatural claims...."
7264. Wolkomir, Richard. "Shooting right for the stars with one gargantuan gas gun." Smithsonian 26, no. 10 (1996): 84.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Investigates the largest gun invention called SHARP created by physicist John Hunter and physical chemist Harry Cartland. Cost; Operation mechanics; Efforts to develop a hydrogen-powered cannon that would launch satellites and spacecraft into orbit around the earth; Product description. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Of course, it is not so simple. And Cartland is already eyeing his colleague dubiously. It is as if brash Teddy Roosevelt had teamed up with coolly analytical Sherlock Holmes...."
7265. Wolkomir, Richard, and Richard Howard. "Following the footsteps of fox and bear." Smithsonian 27, no. 10 (1997): 34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Profiles naturalist Susan Morse, executive director of Keeping Track. Why Morse, and her fellow conservationists in the non-profit organization, teach tracking to community groups across the United States; Use of tracing to generate data on wild animal habitat use which then can be used by parties trying to preserve critical habitats; Morse's work in the Green Mountains of Vermont; Morse's background; How she became involved in tracking. Includes passing references to Holmes. "...I listen to all this glumly. Tracking turns out to be no snap course. Besides, my own urge to track comes mostly from books--probably my first encounter was Robinson Crusoe, discovering that footprint in the sand. But what really fired me up as a kid was Sherlock Holmes. In The Hound of the Baskervilles, for instance, Holmes must ponder the unfortunate Sir Charles Baskerville's footprints down his yew-lined walk, en route to his mysterious death. And, as the attending physician told Holmes, the walk had other tracks, too. Dr. Mortimer looked strangely at Holmes and his friend, Watson. His voice sank to a whisper: 'Mr. Holmes, they were the footprints of a giant hound!'" 7266. Wolkomir, Richard, and Joyce Wolkomir. "Reading the Messages in Everyday Things." Smithsonian 31, no. 1 (2000): 74.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on historian John Stilgoe, and his pursued study of the manufactured objects that often comprise urban and rural landscapes. Use of the stories of Sherlock Holmes by Stilgoe to acquire his powers of observation; Fascination for such objects as the granite bollard in sidewalks and the plates that mark underground gas lines; Observations on railroads and the effect of the automobile on criminal behavior; His work at Harvard University; Observations of the socioeconomic history of an area as detailed by objects such as mailboxes.
7267. Wollen, Peter. "Kim: The More Things Change the More They Stay the Same." Emergences: Journal for the Study of Media & Composite Cultures 12, no. 1 (2002): 157-170.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Argues that an analysis of Rudyard Kipling's novel 'Kim,' is a metonym for processess of repetitive historical destruction. Relational nature of discipline; Joining of imagination and politics to enforce the discipline of futility; Overlapping of Kipling's story with the larger processes of destruction; Kipling's take on imperialism. Includes multiple references to Holmes.
7268. Wolper, Joanna, and Allan Wolper. "Papering over the Joel Rose case in Cleveland?" Editor & Publisher 133, no. 51 (2000): 34.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the ethical issues surrounding a 'Plain Dealer' newspaper story naming Cleveland, Ohio, television and radio celebrity Joel Rose as a suspect in a sexual stalking case, which led to Rose's suicide. Background information on Rose; Chronology of events leading to the publishing of the story and the death of Rose; Controversy stirred by the newspaper article. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Seeley theorizes that the person who sent the packages might not have been trying to hurt anyone. 'The point is that they could even be playing a game with somebody else, a sort of Sherlock Holmes or Ellery Queen kind

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

of game,' Seeley explains...."

7269. Woodard, Colin. "NATO throws itself a party." Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists 55, no. 4 (1999): 36.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the anniversary celebration of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) in the United States. Overview and coverage of the celebration; Demonstration of a crowd of Serbian-Americans opposite the White House in Pennsylvania Avenue, Washington, D.C.; Message of NATO Secretary-General Javier Solana; Relations between the United States and Albania. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Solana wasn't really briefing the press on the proceedings; he was sending a message to Milosevic and the rest of the world that NATO had the stomach to continue bombing until its demands were met. Yet it didn't take Sherlock Holmes to find evidence that this wasn't entirely the case...."
7270. Woolverton, John F. "Hans W. Frei in context: A theological and historical memoir." Anglican Theological Review 79, no. 3 (1997): 369.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reflects on the life and theology of Hans W. Frei, a priest in the Episcopal Church. Reticence about dismissing biblical accounts as incapable of maintaining an integrity of their own or as historically untrustworthy or both; Teaching career; Interpretation of history; Relationship with mentor H. Richard Niebuhr; Influence on the American life. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Schweitzer was more the dramatist, especially at the beginning and the end of his Quest, and Frei a Sherlock Holmes who, having read the clues, 'confronted us with the largely forgotten history of our own minds, returning us to fundamental questions that had seemed long settled.'..."
7271. Wren, Celia. "Killer Ratings." Commonweal 128, no. 15 (2001): 22.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on the television (TV) program 'Murder in Small Town X.' Features and mechanics of the TV program. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Auden was writing about the classic, English mystery tradition, which encompasses, for example, the Sherlock Holmes and Father Brown tales...."
7272. Wynne-Jones, Tim. "Where Ideas Really Come From." Horn Book Magazine 78, no. 5 (2002): 625.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Gives pieces of advice to children about writing stories. Origin of the term serendipity; Tips on playing at writing; Areas to look for in searching for ideas. Includes passing references to Holmes. "...In the movie They Might Be Giants, George C. Scott is an affable nut who thinks he's Sherlock Holmes. His family hires a psychiatrist to try to cure him of this delusion. His Holmes is a paranoid: he believes his archenemy, Moriarity, is out to get him. He sees clues everywhere. At one point, he overturns a garbage can and roots through the garbage for a clue, which, of course, he finds. I can't remember what it is: a candy wrapper, an old cigarette carton -- the thing is, to him, it's a clue. The psychiatrist begins to think maybe he's right. Maybe there is a Moriarity out there. As a writer, you have to be something of a Sherlock Holmes. You have to be on the lookout for clues all the time. It's not an enemy you're looking for; it's a story...."
7273. Yanovsky, Marcelo J., and Jorge J. Casal. "How Plants 'See' (Cover story)." Natural History 113, no. 7 (2004): 32-37.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the ability of plants to vision its surrounding population. Hypothesis of plant physiologists on mutual plant shading; Study on the use of color-ratio by plants to estimate the population around them; Effects of light on the developmental processes throughout the life cycle of a plant; Classes of photoreceptors by Arabidopsis thaliana, a thale cress; Identification of photoreceptors that synchronize circadian clocks in plants. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...In all the experiments they performed, the results were so consistent that once they, like Sherlock Holmes, had eliminated the impossible, they had to accept the most improbable explanation of all...."
7274. Yeh, Catherine Vance. "A Public Love Affair Or a Nasty Game? the Chinese Tabloid Newspaper and the Rise of the Opera Singer as Star." European Journal of East Asian Studies 2, no. 1 (2003): 13-51.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Explores the rise of tabloids and the rise of the opera singer as a star as part of the emerging mass culture in 20th-century China. Events that highlighted the changing social position of actors and of the forms of patronage; Moral standards applied by editors and writers in dealing with the change in the social status of actors; Description of the star actors' relationship to the tabloids. Includes a passing reference to

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- Holmes (pp. 19-20). "...During the late 1910s and well into the 1920s, a second wave of xiaobao came on the scene, with the so-called 'four door gods' (si da jingang) Jing bao (The Crystal; 1919), Jingangzuan (The Diamond; 1923), Fuermosi (Sherlock Holmes; 1926) and Luobinhan (Robinson Crusoe; 1926). Among the xiaobao, these four were the most influential and long-lasting...."
7275. Yoder Jr, Edwin M. "The State of Letters." Sewanee Review 112, no. 2 (2004): 240-256.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The author introspects himself as a writer. As he looks back from the perspective of almost half a century at his life as a writer--and he has been some sort of writer since the day when he put aside his paint-box for the old upright typewriter his father had brought home, surely in the hope that it might intensify his interest in the home work. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Yet, for all his brilliance and celebrity as a writer of nonfiction, Willie had it fixed in his mind from the start that 'real' writers write fiction: imagine stories, rather than report them. For a long time I viewed this as a sort of folly--akin to Conan Doyle's chagrin at the popularity of his Sherlock Holmes stories, which he regarded as by-blows, inferior to 'serious' novels of his which are now long forgotten...."
7276. Zabel, Karen. "Variety of factors come into play in glaucoma treatment." Ophthalmology Times 22, no. 16 (1997): 44.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the contributory factors leading to the development of glaucoma. Increases in intraocular pressure; Appearances of optic nerve heads; Changes in blood pressure; Genetic factors. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Like a good mystery, there is often more to the problem than meets the eye. Just as Sherlock Holmes carefully reviewed every shred of evidence in each case, good physicians should become cognizant of other possible factors contributing to the onset and development of glaucoma in order to develop more effective treatment modalities...."
7277. Zelnick, Bob. "For Selfish Purposes'." National Review 52, no. 15 (2000): 48-49.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article deals with U.S. Vice President and presidential candidate Al Gore and his political campaign. It describes the political campaigns of Gore. It compares the 1988 and 2000 presidential campaigns of Gore. It cites the problems faced by Gore as Democratic nominee. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Common to both Gore's presidential campaigns has been the lack of any figure of authority at the top. Fred Martin, a former Mondale middleweight, was the nominal '88 campaign manager, but his voice was one of many. It would take a Sherlock Holmes to unravel the mystery of which media adviser--if any--was shaping Gore's message at any time and developing spots to drive it home...."
7278. Ziegler, Joseph. "Philosophers and Physicians on the Scientific Validity of Latin Physiognomy, 1200-1500." Early Science & Medicine 12, no. 3 (2007): 285-312.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article surveys and contextualizes the main arguments among philosophers and academic physicians surrounding the status of physiognomy as a valid science from the thirteenth to the early sixteenth centuries. Includes a passing reference to Holmes by way of citing the article by Ginzburg (note 1). Carlo Ginzburg, "Morelli, Freud, and Sherlock Holmes: Clues and Scientific Method," The Sign of Three: Dupin, Holmes, Peirce, ed. U. Eco and T.A. Sebeok (Bloomington, 1983), 81-118, at 91 [originally "Spie. Radici di un paradigma indiziario," in A. Gargagni, ed., Crisi della ragione (Turin, 1979), 59-106].
7279. Zigmond, Naomi. "Reflections on a research career: research as detective work." Exceptional children 66, no. 3 (2000): 295-304.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "This article by Naomi Zigmond presents her perspective of research as detective work, starting from the investigation of dyslexia, and progressing over time to such topics as the design of secondary education for students with learning disabilities, dropouts, classroom and instructional variables, and educating students with chronic medical problems in inclusive schools." Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...I don't have a trench coat like Columbo, nor a spy glass like Sherlock Holmes. I'm not as dapper as Poirot, and though I love opera, I don't have the taste for booze of Inspector Morse. But I do have something in common with each of these famous detectives. A puzzle cannot go unsolved. A clue must be pursued. The answers must make sense."
7280. Zimmerman, Barbara. "Piecing together a puzzle." CD-ROM Professional 8, no. 10 (1995): 30.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a discussion on copyright clearances for materials to be used in CD-ROM publishing. Key usage issues; Reprints of printed works; Film clips; Television clips; Music rights; Photographs and fine arts; Alternative rights acquisition strategies; Original materials alternative; Methods for minimizing rights clearance woes. INSETS: Affordable sources for materials and..., by Stephen Nathans; Rights clearance for corporate in-house use. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...One effective way of alleviating rights clearance difficulties is to use as much public domain material as possible. Public domain materials are those no longer covered by copyright law, and are consequently usable in any way without permission and without paying a fee. These materials pop up in disparate locales on the title-enhancing materials map: public domain music like Irving Berlin's 'Alexander's Ragtime Band' and Scott Joplin's 'Maple Leaf Rag.' And there are stock characters--although not meaning the specific expressions of them--like Sherlock Holmes or Pinocchio, that are there for the taking, as are many photos and works of art and literature. Written guides to available public domain music can prove an invaluable asset as well...."

7281. Zimmerman, Herman, and Philip Thomas Edgerly. "Architrek: Designing generations." Omni 17, no. 3 (1994): 50.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the work of production designer Herman Zimmerman on the set of the film 'Star Trek: Generations.' Various ways that Zimmerman seeks to stimulate his imagination during the set creation process; Comments from him about his work. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The holodeck is pure joy for a designer, because it is a place where you can go to get away from the starship and usual science-fiction locations. You can design an exterior in a garden, as we did in the Next Generation pilot, 'Encounter at Farpoint.' You can be taken back to merry old England; to the Wild West; to Sherlock Holmes' study; or to a card game with Einstein, Newton, and Stephen Hawking...."

7282. Zipp, Yvonne. "A mystery shrouded by the Muslim world." Christian Science Monitor, June 24, 2008: 15.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of Finding Nouf By Zoë Ferraris. Houghton Mifflin, 305 pp., $24. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Agatha Christie once sent Hercule Poirot on a trek through the Middle East (mirroring her own real-life travels). But the American Ferraris, who lived in Saudi Arabia, does far more with the local setting and culture than the grande dame of mysteries ever did. She details everything from the Byzantine politics governing upper-class women's sitting rooms to a study of desert footprints that would delight Sherlock Holmes to a heat so hot it melts sandals and requires drivers to carry pot holders to protect against third-degree burns from car doors...."

7283. ———. "Two for the Road." Christian Science Monitor, Nov 6, 2007: 13-15.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "It's easy to picture this year's surprise bestseller 'The Dangerous Book for Boys' on Michael Chabon's bookshelf--perhaps dog-eared at the page that tells you how to make your own bow and arrow, or five Latin verbs everyone should know. In recent years, the Pulitzer Prize-winning writer has detoured from emotionally rich short stories and novels such as 'Wonder Boys' to carve out a specialty in topics dear to boyish souls--from magic and comic books in 'The Amazing Adventures of Kavalier and Clay,' to baseball and Bigfoot in his Young Adult novel 'Summerland,' to detectives in this year's 'The Yiddish Policemen's Union' and 'The Final Solution,' starring an elderly Sherlock Holmes. One can only assume that sci-fi is next...."

7284. ———. "When literature goes up in flames." Christian Science Monitor, Sept 4, 2007: 13-16.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Review of An Arsonist's Guide to Writers' Homes in New England by Brock Clarke. Algonquin 320 pp.; $24.95. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...To clear his name, Sam decides to investigate. Soon enough, he's uncovering unhappy facts about his parents and making Inspector Clouseau look like Sherlock Holmes in his hapless efforts to erase himself from the 'Massachusetts Mt. Rushmore of big, gruesome tragedy,' alongside 'the Kennedys, and Lizzie Borden and her ax, and the burning witches of Salem.'..."

7285. Zizek, Slavoj. "Looking awry: An introduction to Jacques Lacan through popular culture." no. (1991).

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // (From the jacket) In this book Slavoj Zizek, a leading intellectual in the new social movements that are sweeping Eastern Europe, provides a virtuoso reading of Jacques Lacan. Zizek inverts current pedagogical strategies to explain the difficult philosophical underpinnings of the French theoretician

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

and practitioner who revolutionized our view of psychoanalysis. He approaches Lacan through the motifs and works of contemporary popular culture, from Hitchcock's "Vertigo" to Stephen King's "Pet Sematary," from McCullough's "An Indecent Obsession" to Romero's "Night of the Living Dead"--a strategy of "looking awry" that recalls the exhilarating and vital experience of Lacan. Žizek discovers fundamental Lacanian categories--the triad Imaginary/Symbolic/Real, the object small a, the opposition of drive and desire, the split subject--at work in horror fiction, in detective thrillers, in romances, in the mass media's perception of ecological crisis, and, above all, in Alfred Hitchcock's films. The playfulness of Žizek's text, however, is entirely different from that associated with the deconstructive approach made famous by Jacques Derrida. By clarifying what Lacan is saying as well as what he is not saying, Žizek is uniquely able to distinguish Lacan from the poststructuralists who so often claim him. Includes a chapter entitled "The Sherlock Holmes way."

7286. Zoglin, Richard, and Dan Cray. "Trekking onward. (Cover story)." Time 144, no. 22 (1994): 72.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features the Star Trek phenomenon, the most enduring and all-embracing pop-culture marvel of our time. The television series 'Star Trek: The Next Generation' and 'Deep Space Nine'; The six 'Star Trek' movies; Revenues from 'Trek'-related merchandise; 'Star Trek: Generations,' with William Shatner and Patrick Stewart; History of the series. INSETS: Star Trek: The timeline; Reconfigure the modulators! (techno-babble), by Michael Okuda. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The mother ship of all TV cult hits seems poised to boldly go where none has gone before: into eternity. For all that, Star Trek has never won much respect. In the realm of long-running entertainment phenoms, Sherlock Holmes has more history; James Bond, more class; Star Wars and Indiana Jones, more cinematic cachet. And while no one sneers at the Baker Street Irregulars, noninitiates consider Trekkies to be pretty odd...."

13 PASSING REFERENCES -- HOLMES -- GINZBURG (1)

7287. "Searching For Traces: How To Connect the Sciences and the Humanities by a Peircean Theory of Indexicality." Transactions of the Charles S. Peirce Society 44, no. 1 (2008): 1-25.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes passing references to Doyle and Holmes. "For about 20 years, a new methodological paradigm in culture studies, art history, philosophy and the humanities has been developing. In conferences in Germany, Italy and France scholars from the humanities, philosophy and from archeology, art history and history of science have developed a methodology of traces, clues, hints, indices or markers concentrating on the specific and concrete details of their fields or drawing bold parallels to neuroscience and genetics. One of the starting points for this development--the one I want to concentrate on--is a paper by Ginzburg from the eighties titled 'Clues: Morelli, Freud and Sherlock Holmes'. Ginzburg's paper paints a bold, comprehensive picture that includes Sherlock Holmes who is looking for footprints and ashes fallen to the floor and Freud interpreting unconscious gestures and slips of the tongue...."

13 PASSING REFERENCES -- HOLMES -- SILVER BLAZE (90)

7288. "Don't Bug Me." USA Today Magazine 128, no. 2660 (2000): 77.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Features the electromagnetic and ultrasonic technology called PestContro for pest control, with a reference to Holmes. "In a classic Sherlock Holmes tale, the master detective bases his deduction on the fact that a dog didn't bark. That sort of negative inference also can apply when it comes to ridding your home of ants, spiders, roaches, waterbugs, and other insects, as well as mice, bats, and various critters that might take up residence in your residence, maintains Lentek International, Orlando, Fla. The method to control these pests is through electromagnetic and ultrasonic technology with PestContro."

7289. "Editorials." Nation 271, no. 10 (2000): 3-38.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This editorial highlights some social and political issues in the U.S. Includes passing reference to Holmes. "The forces behind his [George W. Bush's] campaign are like the solution to the famous Sherlock Holmes mystery--the dogs that aren't barking."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

7290. "Grapevine." New Scientist 174, no. 2349 (2002): 53.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the political issues of 'earthquakes' on the Yucca Mountain in Nevada. Interest of the U.S. Department of Energy (DOE) on nuclear test site of the Nevada mountain; Analysis on the features of the mountain; Comments of the Nevadans about the DOE scheme. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "We'd almost forgotten about Yucca Mountain. Then a curious statement arrived from the US Department of Energy. 'There was not an earthquake at Yucca Mountain today,' it began. Readers of Sherlock Holmes will be well aware of the significance of dogs that don't bark...."

7291. "How not to save the pound." Economist 359, no. 8223 (2001): 56-56.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the issue of adopting the euro currency in England, in regard to election campaigns. Begins with a passing Holmes reference. "As you can imagine, many absorbing press releases about this and that have landed on Bagehot's desk since the start of the present election campaign. But only one has been significant in the way that Sherlock Holmes found the failure of the dog to bark in the night significant. This was the one whose sender promised to say nothing until the campaign was over."

7292. "Quarks don't bark." Economist 330, no. 7856 (1994): 103-103.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Speculates that physicists who work with the CDF particle detector at Fermilab (outside Chicago) are canceling their presentations at conferences because they have seen an exceptionally heavy top quark. Opens with quote: "Is there any other point to which you would wish to draw my attention?" "To the curious incident of the dog in the night-time." "The dog did nothing in the night-time." "That was the curious incident," remarked Sherlock Holmes.

7293. "Somewhere over the rainbow." Economist 386, no. 8564 (2008): 27-29.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article presents the author's perspective on the state of the world. He feels that politicians and the public are generally unjustifiably pessimistic. He cites the dramatic decrease in world poverty, increase in health and sanitation, technological progress, and widespread educational gains as quantifiable evidence of global progress. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...As Sherlock Holmes remarked of the curious incident of the dog at night ('The dog did nothing in the night-time...That was the curious incident'), events that do not happen can be as revealing as those that do...."

7294. Adler, Jonathan E. "Surprise." Educational Theory 58, no. 2 (2008): 149-173.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // 'Surprise is of great value for learning, especially in cases where deep-seated preconceptions and assumptions are upset by vivid demonstrations. In this essay the author explores the ways in which surprise positively affects us and serves as a valuable tool for motivating learning.' Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "In the Sherlock Holmes story 'Silver Blaze,' there is a famous exchange beginning with Watson's question to Holmes: 'Is there any other point to which you would wish to draw my attention?... The dog's doing nothing is 'curious' because were the perpetrator to have been a stranger the dog would have barked. Given that expectation, the dog's doing nothing becomes a surprise, from which Holmes 'deduces' that the perpetrator is the dog's owner...."

7295. Alter, Jonathan. "Big Media Gets Even Bigger." Newsweek 135, no. 4 (2000): 42.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the problems with objectivity which occur when media and journalism companies are owned by larger corporations. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "It's like the Sherlock Holmes story of the dog that didn't bark."

7296. ———. "A call for Chinese walls." Newsweek 126, no. 7 (1995): 31.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines that the culture clash between journalists and business is becoming a source of major discomfort. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "It's like that Sherlock Holmes story-the dog that didn't bark."

7297. Beinart, Peter. "Quiet Time." New Republic 226, no. 18 (2002): 6-6.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Deals with the contributions of the administrations of former U.S. President Bill Clinton and President George W. Bush to the anti-immigrant sentiment in the country. Includes a reference to Holmes. "In the short story 'Silver Blaze,' Sherlock Holmes draws Inspector Gregory's attention to 'the curious

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

incident of the dog in the night-time.' 'The dog did nothing in the night-time,' insists the confused Inspector. 'That,' Holmes responds, 'was the curious incident.' Last month in France, a dog barked at the top of its lungs: Jean-Marie Le Pen placed second in the first round of voting for the French presidency....The 'curious incident'--the dog that hasn't barked--is the United States."

7298. Benner, Laurence A. "Protecting Constitutional Rights in an Age of Anxiety: A New Approach." Human Rights: Journal of the Section of Individual Rights & Responsibilities 29, no. 2 (2002): 11.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Like the dog that didn't bark in the famous Sherlock Holmes mystery, perhaps the most significant factor, never mentioned by the Court in Arvnu, was that the family in the minivan was Hispanic...."

7299. Birinyi Jr, Laszlo. "Hit-and-run advice." Forbes 158, no. 2 (1996): 331-331.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Opinion. Criticizes people who offer financial advice and are not held accountable. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Someone once recommended a new book which was thought to have useful trading approaches. But early on, the book referred to the famous Sherlock Holmes story about the nonbarking dog and said it was from The Hound of the Baskervilles. We all know that this was not the case and if the writer had done so little or such sloppy work regarding English literature, what assurance did I have that his market efforts were researched?"

7300. Bobrow, Davis B. "The US and ASEM: why the hegemon didn't bark." Pacific Review 12, no. 1 (1999): 103.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes.

7301. Bose, Meena. "Words as signals: Drafting Cold War rhetoric in the Eisenhower and Kennedy Administrations." Congress & the Presidency 25, no. 1 (1998): 23.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines the speech-writing processes of two United States presidents, Dwight D. Eisenhower and John F. Kennedy, who began their terms during the Cold War. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Like the dog that did not bark of Sherlock Holmes fame, Kennedy's drafting processes are most significant for what they did not contain...."

7302. Bradford, James C. "The Missing Link: Expeditionary Logistics." Naval History 20, no. 1 (2006): 54-61.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Perhaps most significant for the history of expeditionary warfare -- like the failure of Sherlock Holmes' dog to bark in the night -- is the lack of evidence that either the Army or the Navy studied the problems that beset the forces sent to Russia in order to find lessons for the conduct of similar expeditionary warfare in the future...."

7303. Brady, James. "Brady's Bunch." Advertising Age 73, no. 6 (2002): 38-38.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on current events relating to media, with a reference to Holmes. "...How delicious. That know-it-all Bill Safire in The New York Times of Jan. 24 got an entire column out of the Sherlock Holmes line about the curious incident of 'the dog in the night time' (which didn't bark) in the story of 'Silver Blaze.' Mr. Safire then informed readers the dog was named 'Silver Blaze.' The dog, to my knowledge, and perhaps even to Holmes', had no name. 'Silver Blaze' was a racehorse...."

7304. Bramham, Peter. "Hard and Disappearing Work: Making Sense of the Leisure Project." Leisure Studies 25, no. 4 (2006): 379-390.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article discusses the difficulty of scholarly attempts to provide authoritative commentary on the development and trajectory of leisure studies. When traditional disciplines specialize or subdivide, academics generally cooperate and knowledge production and dissemination follow traditional lines. When a new field of study is formed by academics from different disciplinary backgrounds, knowledge generation is fiercely contested and more politicised and marginalised. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The four stages in the leisure project and their distinctive research questions have not been resolved. In the words of Sherlock Holmes, there are strange anomalies, 'curious incidents' of dogs that do not bark in the night...."

7305. Burka, Paul, and Patricia Kilday Hart. "The best and the worst legislators 1997." Texas Monthly 25, no. 7 (1997):

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

90.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Suggests the best and worse Texas legislators in 1997. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Remember the Sherlock Holmes story in which the great detective solves a mysterious death case because a dog did not bark at a thief in the night? The lesson is that what doesn't happen can be just as important as what does happen--in crime or in the Legislature...."
7306. Cate, Alan C. "Book Reviews." Military Review 77, no. 3 (1997): 97.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Dereliction of Duty: Johnson, McNamara, the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the Lies that Led to Vietnam,' by H.R. McMaster. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "The best-known incident in the Sherlock Holmes series occurs when, at a crime scene, the great detective calls Dr. Watson's attention to the curious incident of the dog in the night. 'The dog did nothing,' replies his puzzled colleague. 'That,' says Holmes, 'was the curious incident.' The behavior of the Joint Chiefs of Staff (JCS) was similarly curious when the United States mired itself in Vietnam. This is the mystery author H.R. McMaster seeks to solve...."
7307. Cohen, Robin. "Book reviews." International Affairs 82, no. 5 (2006): 989-1035.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Among the books reviewed is one in which the review contains a reference to Holmes. Ethnicity and cultural politics: The illusion of cultural identity. By Jean-François Bayart. "...Bayart correctly argues that civil wars in Yugoslavia, the Caucasus and Central Asia will 'lead one to worry about the exacerbation of ethno-nationalism' (p. 63), but he immediately downplays this, talking of the dog that did not bark in the night (one up for Sherlock Holmes), the amicable divorce between the Czechs and the Slovaks, and the acceptance of diversity in the European Union...."
7308. Cowen, Rob. "E(14 trillion electron-volts)=m(?)c(close to the speed of light)2. (Cover story)." Science news 174, no. 2 (2008): 16-21.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses the Large Hadron Collider, an underground research facility below the border of France and Switzerland. Details are included about the facility, which will test the energy generated from high speed proton collisions and may be groundbreaking in the field of physics research. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The lightest supersymmetric particle is thought to have no charge and to interact only weakly, which is why it is a candidate for the invisible dark matter. 'As such, these particles would not be seen in a detector, hence the energy it carries would be missed,' notes Ellis. It's like the curious incident of the dog that did nothing in the nighttime, from the Sherlock Holmes story, he notes. Its what's missing that counts."
7309. Coxe, Donald. "They done Him Wrong." Maclean's 116, no. 31 (2003): 33.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses Bank of Canada governor David Dodge and the aftermath of the sell-off of the Canadian dollar after the Bank cut its rate. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...What made the day memorable was what a latter-day Sherlock Holmes would identify as the dogs that didn't bark. There were no screams of rage at currency traders from prominent Liberals and New Democrats...."
7310. Crawford, Walt. "Pc Monitor." Online 24, no. 6 (2000): 72.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses issues related to personal computing for the year ending June 2000. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "It's been a surprisingly calm year for personal computing because many of the developments haven't mattered all that much. The Dogs That Did Not Bark. Since this is the last PC Monitor for 2000, I planned to discuss the year's hot topics in personal computing--or, given the realities of publishing, the hot topics for the year ending in June 2000. As I was going over the possibilities, however, I found an interesting commonality--expressed in this column's title (with apologies to Sherlock Holmes). It's been a surprisingly calm year for personal computing--not because technology hasn't kept developing, but because many of the developments haven't mattered all that much...."
7311. Dee, James H. "Black Odysseus, White Caesar: When Did 'White People' Become 'White'?" The Classical Journal 99, no. 2 (2003): 157-167.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "The writer examines the extent to which Greeks and Romans regarded themselves as 'white people' or part of a 'white race' and the classical terms, if any, for 'white' in this context. He argues

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

among other things that the idea of a 'white race' has no historical or scientific basis and that it was not entertained by Caesar or his colleagues." Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...On the general issue of 'black' and 'white' in today's lexicon: as with Sherlock Holmes' 'curious incident of the dog that did nothing' (from Silver Blaze), the most remarkable aspect of all this material is the absence of the kind of obsessive and corrosive concern with 'whiteness' and 'blackness' that so disfigures our modern world...."

7312. Dent Jr, George W. "Stakeholder Governance: a Bad Idea Getting Worse." Case Western Reserve Law Review 58, no. 4 (2008): 1107-1144.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- M3: Article // The article explores the traditional objections to stakeholder governance along with other trends which should influence thoughts about such governance in the U.S. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...My students know that one of my favorite allusions is the story Silver Blaze, in which Sherlock Holmes solves a crime in part by noting the dog that did not bark. The dog's silence showed that the intruder was an insider; had it been an outsider, the dog would have barked. It is interesting in this case to notice the dogs that are not barking. Professor Greenfield touts his proposal as beneficial to employees. If he were right, we should see groups of employees forming firms and hiring capital...." The footnote for this passage (note 37) reads: "When Holmes refers to 'the curious incident of the dog in the night-time,' Inspector Gregory says, 'The dog did nothing in the night-time.' Holmes replies, 'That was the curious incident.' Arthur Conan Doyle, Silver Blaze, in 1 The Complete Sherlock Holmes 335, 347 (Doubleday & Co. 1930) (1893)."

7313. Doniger, Wendy. "The Reluctant Transvestite." Nation 261, no. 12 (1995): 436-439.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article focuses on two books "Monsieur D'Eon Is a Woman," by Gary Kates and "The Arabian Nights." The double cross-dress, or sexual switchback, explains how D'Eon got away with it. People later remarked, with surprising surprise, that he had actually looked more feminine in his uniform than he did later in a dress. For D'Eon's autobiography is a fairy tale in more ways than one. D'Eon's idea that one must become a woman in order to become virtuous is a commonplace in Hinduism, where male worshipers impersonate women in order to be close to God, and saints like Ramakrishna and Gandhi became women in their hearts. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "'Qamar al-Zaman' illuminate the case of the Chevalier d'Eon through both its similarity and its difference. In its similarity, it suggests darker psychological levels that are inaccessible to us in the documentation of the Chevalier but that may well be quite relevant to it. Yet in its difference, it also shows us what Sherlock Holmes referred to as the dog that did not bark: The French case reveals an assumption that is not present in the Arabian story or in most of the thousands of variants of the same plot..."

7314. Doyle, Denis P. "The schools we want, the schools we deserve: American education in retrospect and prospect." Phi Delta Kappa Fastbacks, no. 469 (2000): 7-62.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "American elementary and secondary schools must reclaim their legacy in the curriculum of the future. They must be liberal arts institutions where students learn to read, write, listen, speak, master a second language, manipulate symbols, and enter the world of art and music with confidence and pleasure. Moreover, they must lay the foundations of wisdom by imparting knowledge--the capacity to understand what has been learned and how little is actually known. The themes of standards, knowledge-based decision making, choice, and technology are examined." Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...If technology is not an end in itself, it is a tool of such power that it transforms all that it touches. It provides intellectual leverage -- if that is what it is used for. But it is noteworthy that in the world of elementary and secondary education, technology is most conspicuous by its absence (perhaps like the Sherlock Holmes dog that didn't bark)...."

7315. Farrell, Christopher. "The Making of an Equity Culture." Business Week Online, no. (2003): N.PAG.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the economic condition of the U.S. stock market in 2003. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Here we go again. For three years, people have been arguing over whether the stock market is overvalued or not. The pessimists believe the recent stock market rally is unsustainable and that the bulls are running on fumes. The optimists point out that stocks are attractive relative to bonds, and that the recent economic data are largely pointing to an economy turning upward. It all reminds me of the Sherlock Holmes dialogue about the dog that didn't bark in the short story Silver Blaze: 'Is there any point to which you

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

would wish to draw my attention?' 'To the curious incident of the dog in the night-time.' 'The dog did nothing in the night-time.' 'That was the curious incident,' remarked Sherlock Holmes. Well, the curious incident in the stock market is what didn't happen: Individual investors haven't fled the market in a panic, despite the searing economic and business trauma of the past three years...."

7316. Fey, Mark, and Kristopher W. Ramsay. "Mutual Optimism and War." American Journal of Political Science 51, no. 4 (2007): 738-754.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Working with the definition of mutual optimism as war due to inconsistent beliefs, we formalize the mutual optimism argument to test the theory's logical validity." Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Suppose that when the true state is a it is brought to the player's attention that the state is in fact a. However, when the true state is b nothing is brought to the player's attention. In this situation a rational Bayesian can always deduce the true state of the world. When the state is a, the player is informed of that fact and knows it is a. When the state is b, the player knows that if the state were a she would have been told, but since she was not, the state must be b. The rational Bayesian, like Sherlock Holmes, learns from the dog that does not bark."

7317. Fisher, George Ross. "Clinton health plan: Promises broken?" Atlantic Economic Journal 22, no. 1 (1994): 57.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the proposed health care reform plan of United States President Bill Clinton. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...For quaint historical reasons, those conference committees on health will be made up of the leadership of the Senate Finance Committee and the House Ways and Means Committee, the supreme court of national taxation. Now, Sherlock Holmes noticed it was peculiar a dog did not bark, and the Clinton proposal has one big omission, too. He does not touch the $48 billion annual tax entitlement of wages paid in the form of health insurance premiums. Even without the revenue loss, this is the heart of the artificial crisis which President Clinton proposes to solve...."

7318. Gerring, John, and Rose McDermott. "An Experimental Template for Case Study Research." American Journal of Political Science 51, no. 3 (2007): 688-701.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Regrettably, there are quite a few instances in which a key variable of theoretical interest does not change appreciably within the scope of any possible research design. This is the classic instance of the dog that refuses to bark and is typically focused on 'structural' variables-- geographic, constitutional, sociological--which tend not to change very much over periods that might be feasibly or usefully observed. Even so, causal analysis is not precluded. It did not stop Sherlock Holmes, and it does not stop social scientists. But it does lend the resulting investigations the character of a detective story, for in this setting the researcher is constrained to adopt a research design in which the temporal variation is imaginary, a counterfactual thought experiment...."

7319. Gleason, Judith. "The Guadalupe Perspective." Mythosphere 1, no. 3 (1999): 336.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on Virgin of Guadalupe in Mexico. Note 7 contains a reference to Holmes. "Poole's only literary reference within the text is to a Sherlock Holmes story, 'The Adventure of Silver Blaze,' in which a watchdog's silence identifies the culprit as an insider (220 and 240 n. 8)."

7320. Goodwin, Irwin. "Pseudo-history redux: FBI clears atomic bomb physicists of spying." Physics Today 48, no. 6 (1995): 44.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports that the US Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) has cleared atomic bomb physicists Niels Bohr, Robert Oppenheimer, Enrico Fermi and Leo Szilard of espionage activities during World War II. Allegations that the four physicists passed classified information about US nuclear bombs to Soviet agents during World War II; Investigation of NKGD officer Pavel Sudoplatov's charges by Les Aspin. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...This is like a Sherlock Holmes case of the dog that didn't bark,' Aspin added. 'Their names are not on the lists. This is not proof. It's nearly impossible to prove a negative.... The FBI is now very comfortable in its belief that Sudoplatov is mistaken....'"

7321. Gore, Al. "The Politics of Fear." Social Research 71, no. 4 (2004): 779-798.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines how terrorism was used by the administration of U.S. President George

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- W. Bush in relation to their political agenda. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "... Sherlock Holmes wrote [sic] a famous story in which the key clue was the dog that didn't bark. The White House hasn't even growled about who forged the document that got into the hands of the president of the United States and was used on national television..."
7322. Greenleaf, Stephen. "A mystery in three acts." Writer 109, no. 4 (1996): 11.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Advises writers to follow the basic structure of the play in three acts when writing a mystery novel. Introduction of the crime and the mystery to be solved; Sleuth who will solve the mystery; Crime setting; Inclusion of a symbol in the opening scenes; Sources of subplots; Development of a sense of urgency in solving the crime; Investigation process; Mistaken conclusion; Climactic scene. Includes a passing (if mistaken) reference to Holmes. "...The opening crime should generate two essential aspects of the plot. First, it should provide two clues to a solution--physical and psychological. Some clues obviously point in a specific direction; others aren't recognized as clues until later, e.g., the hound that didn't bark (as in Sherlock Holmes' The Hound of the Baskervilles)[sic]...."
7323. Hart, Gary. "The mysterious disappearance of American liberalism." Journal of Political Ideologies 2, no. 3 (1997): 227.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses liberalism in the United States. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Conservatism's silence on these critical entitlement programmes--like Sherlock Holmes' dog that did not bark---contains the central clue to American liberalism's mysterious demise...."
7324. Heppner, D. Gray, Robert J. Schwenk, David Arnot, Robert W. Sauerwein, and Adrian J. F. Luty. "The dog that did not bark: malaria vaccines without antibodies." Trends in parasitology 23, no. 7 (2007): 293-296.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "To date, the only pre-blood stage vaccine to confer protection against malaria in field trials elicits both antigen-specific antibody and T-cell responses. Recent clinical trials of new heterologous prime-boost malaria vaccine regimens using DNA, fowlpox or MVA, have chiefly elicited T-cell responses that have promisingly reduced hepatic merozoites in challenge trials, but failed to protect in field trials. These encouraging results suggest further augmentation of T-cell responses to pre-blood stage antigens might one day contribute to a highly protective vaccine. We envision that a highly protective pre-erythrocytic vaccine will likely be based upon a heterologous prime-boost regimen that induces both appropriate T-cell responses as well as robust and protracted antibody production." Includes quotation from Silver Blaze. "Inspector Gregory: 'Is there any other point to which you would wish to draw my attention?' Holmes: 'To the curious incident of the dog in the night-time.' 'The dog did nothing in the night-time.' 'That was the curious incident,' remarked Sherlock Holmes."
7325. Hesman, T. "Telltale Dino Heart Hints at Warm Blood." Science news 157, no. 17 (2000): 260.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the discovery of a heart within the fossil of a Thescelosaurus. Structure of the heart which suggests that this and other dinosaurs were warm-blooded; Investigation by Mike Hammer; Urge for fossil hunters to look for traces of internal organs; Differences in the hearts of warm-blooded and cold-blooded animals. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "A pulmonary vessel--which carries blood to the lungs--is conspicuous in its absence and may be a clue that the dinosaur had a second aorta, Ruben says. 'It's like the dog that didn't bark in Sherlock Holmes,' he explains...."
7326. Hirsh, Michael, Roy Gutman, and John Barry. "Powell's New War." Newsweek 139, no. 6 (2002): 24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses reaction to United States President George W. Bush's State of the Union address in which he compared Iraq, Iran, and North Korea to an axis of evil. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...In diplomacy, as in a Sherlock Holmes detective story, the giveaway clue is the dog that does not bark. It took several days for Powell, speaking at the World Economic Forum in New York, to declare that Americans would take on 'evil regimes' to defeat terrorism...."
7327. Howard, Carole M. "Going global: How to expand your horizons while avoiding the 'ugly American' syndrome." Executive Speeches 12, no. 3 (1997): 29.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the author's speech made at the Strategic Public Relations Conference in Chicago, Illinois on the global expansion of businesses. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...You need to talk frequently, and listen carefully, to be sure there's an easy avenue for questions. Remember that Sherlock Holmes' best clue came when the dog did not bark. It is inevitable that there will be problems associated with any major launch in a new market...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

7328. Hu, Henry T. C. "Faith and Magic: Investor Beliefs and Government Neutrality." Texas Law Review 78, no. 4 (2000): 777.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Suggests that respect for market primacy requires that the United States government take steps directly related to investor enthusiasm. Discussion on indeterminism, market primacy and government stasis; Role of the Securities and Exchange Commission. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...As with Holmes's dog that failed to bark during the night, the absence of this kind of stock-hedged derivative is curious. There are two basic groups of explanations for the nonexistence of the fountain of youth swap. First, there may simply be certain institutional or cognitive barriers to the product's introduction. Second, more important and more likely, the bedrock model may be more fragile than it appears...."

7329. Hughes, Chris. "The supervisor's influence on workplace learning." Studies in Continuing Education 26, no. 2 (2004): 275-287.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Many of the data concern relatively mundane incidents, learning-related activities and supervisor contacts. The task of reporting on these data is rather like Sherlock Holmes' reflections on the dog that didn't bark in the night...the remarkable thing to note is the fact that there was so little direct involvement in learning processes by the supervisors...."

7330. Jahoda, Gustav. "'Ordinary Germans' before Hitler: A critique of the Goldhagen thesis." Journal of Interdisciplinary History 29, no. 1 (1998): 69.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Hitlers Willing Executioners: Ordinary Germans and the Holocaust,' by Daniel Jonah Goldhagen. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...If this were an accurate picture, Germany would have been an extremely unpleasant country for Jews to inhabit, even before the advent of Adolf Hitler, and Goldhagen might have been expected to offer testimonies to this effect. That, for all intents and purposes, he did not is significant--like the dog in the Sherlock Holmes story that failed to bark...."

7331. Johnstone, Rick. "Ethnic Purges and Neighborly Pacts: Reflections on a Swiss Statue." Telos, no. (1999): 11p.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Offers a look at the enigma of Switzerland's success as a neutral state through a reflection on the statue at Pont du Mont Blanc. Geopolitics of Swiss democracy; Literal meaning of the pact between communities; Unspoken truth of the 1920s. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Perhaps too much time is spent asking the wrong questions, like why does ethnic cleansing happen in places like Bosnia and Rwanda? What should also be asked, instead, is 'why does it not happen in other places where it could, such as Switzerland and Canada?' Like Sherlock Holmes, we could pay more attention to the dog that does not bark, the ethnics that do not cleanse...."

7332. Kennedy, Donald. "Breakthrough of the Year." Science 298, no. 5602 (2002): 2283.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Editorial. Reports that each year the editorial and news staffs of the journal 'Science' gather to debate and decide which among the discoveries of the preceding year deserves the Breakthrough Trophy. Various entries for the trophy related to physical science types; Breakthrough which the physical scientists honor; Importance of recognizing Breakdowns and Breakthroughs. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The physical scientists made a strong case for honoring the neutrino: the nearly massless particle that has earned a special status, like the dog that didn't bark in the Sherlock Holmes story Silver Blaze. Although the nuclear reactions taking place in the Sun were expected to produce a special class of neutrino--'electron neutrinos'--they weren't there. That paradox has now been solved with the discovery that the Sun has been emitting neutrinos all right, but they were changing identities on the trip...."

7333. Kesavan, Vasan, and Michael Stokes Paulsen. "Is West Virginia Unconstitutional?" California law review 90, no. 2 (2002): 293.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines whether West Virginia is lawfully a state of the U.S. resulting from constitutional inquiry. Question of formalism and state formation; Query on textualism under constitutional consent requirement. Includes a passing reference to Holmes (p. 370-71 and notes 257, 258). "...Can a

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

meaningful interpretive clue be drawn from silence--from the fact that no one spoke about the particular problem of Article IV, Section 3--under these particular circumstances? Sherlock Holmes famously solved the case of the Silver Blaze by drawing a correct inference from the 'curious incident' of the 'dog that did not bark,' but this is an unreliable canon for interpreting legislative acts, and it seems especially hard to draw a reliable inference from the Ratifiers' silence about the interpretive ambiguity of Article IV, Section 3....The dog would have less reason to bark in the night, other things being equal, since no 'curious incident'--no departure from past practice--had occurred...."

7334. Kovach, Yugo. "'A Blank Check': Going to War over Kosovo." Harvard International Review 23, no. 2 (2001): 5.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Talks about the decision by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) to go to war over Kosovo in Serbia. Reason for the decision; Views on the movement of the Kosovo Liberation Army; Comments on the action of the NATO. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "The decision by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) to go to war over Kosovo was not a spur-of-the-moment mistake but the tragic outcome of faulty Western policy ('Madeleine's War' and the Costs of Intervention" HIR, Winter 2001). There was, to paraphrase Sherlock Holmes, the curious incident of the NATO watchdog that did nothing in the night-time...."

7335. Kubicek, Paul. "Civil Society, Trade Unions and Post-Soviet Democratisation: Evidence from Russia and Ukraine." Europe-Asia Studies 54, no. 4 (2002): 603-624.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Highlights why trade unions in post-communist Russia and Ukraine do not fit neatly into civil society as the term is often used. Marginalization of organized labor in the two countries; Meaning of union weakness in terms of democratization; Relationship between civil society and democracy. Includes a passing reference to Holmes (p. 604). "...But much of this worker radicalism has occurred outside the framework of trade unions, and, overall, unions' role has been nothing like one might have thought, given their previous role in helping bring down communist governments, their sheer size, and the socioeconomic disaster that has accompanied the move to the market. Unions' relative silence is thus a puzzle; they have been, to borrow from a Sherlock Holmes story, dogs that should have barked. This, of course, also explains their relative absence from much academic work...."

7336. Mackenzie, Jim. "Two images of bias." Oxford Review of Education 23, no. 4 (1997): 487.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Distinguishes bias from statistical bias (symmetric error). Comparison of two accounts of bias (lack of consideration of alternatives) against a list of eight criteria; Definition of bias. Includes a reference to Holmes. "...It may require extraordinary insight to realise that some among the statements to which A is committed do indeed form a set from which an answer to one's question can be deduced. Sherlock Holmes realised that the dog's doing nothing in the nighttime was relevant to how the horse trainer John Straker met his death only because he realised that it meant that any night-time visitor to the stable must have been someone whom the dog knew well..., and and also saw the significance of the trainer's family having had curried mutton for dinner that evening, and of the knife found in the dead man's hand being a special surgical one which no sane man would choose as a weapon...."

7337. Maloney, Sean M. "Anthrax, Bombs and Al-Qaeda." Maclean's 120, no. 20 (2007): 27-27.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article reports on al-Qaeda's efforts to acquire weapons of mass destruction. Rather than the nuclear bombs rumored to be in Iraq, the focus in Afghanistan has been on chemical and biological weapons. Former CIA director George Tenet's book "At the Center of the Storm" reports on a number of successful attempts to disrupt al-Qaeda's production and dissemination of chemical and biological weapons. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Sherlock Holmes reminded Watson that sometimes it was the dog that didn't bark that was the significant thing. The same goes for al-Qaeda's search for weapons of mass destruction capability, truncated and disrupted as it is."

7338. Marshall, Eliot, and Pallava Bagla. "Did test ban watchdog fail to bark?" Science 280, no. 5372 (1998): 2038.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the failure of the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty (CTBT) to monitor an explosion in India on May 13, 1998. How some members of the United States Congress oppose the treaty; Details on critics who believe that the seismic network cannot be trusted to detect small tests; Involvement of

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

- the International Data Center (IDC) which monitors and enforces the treaty. Inset: Novaya Zemlya: The quake that roared. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Seismologists who watch for tremors caused by nuclear tests are puzzling over a problem like one that intrigued Sherlock Holmes: the dog that didn't bark in the night. In their case, the watchdog is a sprawling web of sensors that encircles the globe, programmed to monitor compliance with the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty (CTBT)...."
7339. Mayers, Adam. "Let's all help give this dog some bite." The Toronto Star, January 9, 1995: C1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "In The case of Silver Blaze, a Sherlock Holmes mystery about a missing race horse, the great detective turns to Dr. Watson and asks him to take note of the dog that didn't bark in the night. We might all be asking ourselves the same question of the Consumers' Association of Canada, the watchdog we expect to bark on our behalf, about everything from cable television to local phone rates to car insurance premiums...."
7340. McAdam, Anthony. "Advertising's link to the economy." Vital speeches of the day 63, no. 9 (1997): 272.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a speech by the journalist, writer, broadcaster and leading international communications strategist and public affairs specialist, delivered before the 35th IAA World Advertising Congress in Seoul, Korea on June 12, 1996 concerning journalist Enno Von Loewenstern's perspectives on the relationship of advertising freedoms to the open society. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Like the dog that didn't bark in the Sherlock Holmes story, the lack of reflection on the historical, economic and social links between economic and political freedoms by so many contemporary institutions is curious and disturbing, to say the least...."
7341. McBrien, Richard P. "The curious case of the dropped column." National Catholic Reporter 32, no. 42 (1996): 19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on Chicago, Illinois, Cardinal Berdardin's handling of the Catholic Common Ground Project. Composition of the project committee; Berdardin's efforts to forestall opposition against the project. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...There was one major item missing, which I referred to as 'the elephant in the living room,' an expression taken from literature about dysfunctional families. A friend suggested a different expression, taken from Sherlock Holmes: 'the dog didn't bark.'" 7342. McGrath, Mike. "The Cukes of Hazard." Organic Gardening (1978) 47, no. 1 (2000): 61.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on planting cukes. Cuke varieties that can be planted; Growth of cukes. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Then dry turns to drought, and everything slows down. The final sign of the apocalypse is the zucchini--or rather, as Sherlock Holmes once said about the dog that did not bark in the night, the lack of zucchini...."
7343. Mdyer, Michael. "Breaking Open the Unknown Universe." Popular Science 273, no. 4 (2008): 64-69.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article looks at the Large Hadron Collider experiment which the author describes as the largest and most complex scientific experiment in the history of civilization. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...When two protons come together, they will generate a shower of particles. Most of them will be ordinary particles, and the detectors will catch these. Then the scientists will look for what's missing. 'It's a bit like the Sherlock Holmes story where the most important clue is the dog that doesn't bark,' says John Ellis, a theorist at CERN...."
7344. Millman, Gregory J. "Traders' secrets: How to cover the new money makers." IRE Journal 22, no. 9 (1999): 10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents information on how to report a story about the financial markets. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Although lawyers are usually unable to discuss settled cases, I usually find that those who win in the courtroom are more than willing to boast about their brilliance. This attorney was a troubling exception. He not only declined to talk, he also declined to fax me any portion of the public record, on utterly specious grounds that he could be sued for libel if he did so. I thought about Sherlock Holmes and the dog that didn't bark, then booked a flight to Texas...."
7345. O'Sullivan, John. "Asians of Influence." National Review 51, no. 12 (1999): 22-24.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents the author's opinions about racist remarks made by U.S.

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

politicians about Chinese-Americans and Asian-Americans. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "Sherlock Holmes would have had little difficulty in analyzing the real motives behind the recent expressions of concern from prominent Democrats such as U.N. ambassador Bill Richardson, the Chinese government, and Asian-American activists about the racist reactions of prominent Republicans, the Washington media elite, and the American people towards Chinese-Americans, and Asian-Americans generally, as a result of the China spy scandal. 'You say, Watson, that the dog barked on the night of the crime. Curiously, that same dog had also barked on the night of a previous crime. On both occasions, however, when inquiry was made, there was no sign that any assault had been attempted on the distinguished Chinese-Americans whom the dog was allegedly guarding. Plainly, the dog had been trained to bark whenever a crime was being committed elsewhere--in one case when illegal donations were accepted from a foreign power, in the second when military secrets were transferred to that self same power. On both occasions the canine noise served to distract the attention of passersby from these nefarious transactions. It all points to a criminal mind of almost diabolical craftiness. But unless I am very much mistaken, behind the sinister mask of Dr. Fu Manchu we shall find the smiling features of William Jefferson Clinton.' 'The Arkansas Fundraising Chain-letter Perjuror?' I gasped. 'The very same,' replied the great detective impassively. 'It is perhaps his greatest coup in a life devoted to crime of every sort.'..."

7346. ———. "The Limits of Media Bias." National Review 56, no. 22 (2004): 46-48.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the media bias in favor of Senator John Kerry during the 2004 U.S. presidential election. Exploration of why the big media failed in their effort; Reference to the fact that they no longer control the news agenda the way they did a decade ago; Importance of the Internet, talk radio and cable television; Deception of Dan Rather and CBS concerning some forged documents purporting to show that George W. Bush used his father's political influence to evade Vietnam. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The first case--establishment-media coverage of the Swift-boat vets--is like the Sherlock Holmes story about the dog that barked in the night. Holmes realizes that the guard dog did not bark...because the intruder was its owner! Similarly, when the Swift vets alleged that Kerry was unfit for command--because of his war-crimes allegations against U.S. soldiers in Vietnam, and his exaggerations of his own bravery there--the media failed to bark for a very long period...."

7347. Perrin, Burt. "Commentary: Making Yourself--and Evaluation--Useful." American Journal of Evaluation 22, no. 2 (2001): 252.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Offers professional advice to evaluators. Evaluator's belief in enhancing the profession of evaluation; Need for evaluators to use the simplest means possible to address the key evaluation questions of interest; Ways of generating interest in any evaluation. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...What is critical is that you demonstrate your ability to listen. Active listening may in fact be the most important skill an evaluator needs. It involves hearing what people are saying as well as what they are communicating nonverbally. As with Sherlock Holmes and the dog that did not bark, it also means hearing what people are not saying...."

7348. Phillips, Andrew, and Bruce Wallace. "The chances of change." Maclean's 111, no. 18 (1998): 32.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the change in attitudes in Cuba and Washington regarding the anti-Castro sentiment as of May 1998. The ease of sanctions by the Clinton administration; Pressure by American business to get into the Cuban market; Mention of the personal phone call made to Fidel Castro by Canada Prime Minister Jean Chretien; The change in attitudes of Cuban-Americans. INSET: Dealing with Fidel Castro. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "It was, as Sherlock Holmes might have put it, the case of the dog that did not bark. Issac Delgado, one of Cuba's most popular singers, played Miami Beach last week, and what happened was....nothing...."

7349. Phillips, Bob. "Curious case of casino would challenge Holmes." The Ottawa Citizen, September 23, 1994: B2.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Passing reference to Holmes. "...It was a curious incident that enabled Sherlock Holmes to solve one of his most famous cases. If only he were here to solve our own mystery of the dog that didn't bark. The Outaouais conundrum is why the Liberals did nothing about the casino, either in the days before the election or in that nighttime while they waited to hand over the reins of power...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

7350. Rockefeller, Jay. "Conventional wisdom." Health systems review 29, no. 4 (1996): 42.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the sweeping health policy changes that were offered, debated, and ultimately rejected by legislators in the United States. Proposed comprehensive health care coverage; Spending reductions in Medicare and Medicaid; Insurance reform. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "It is as if Sherlock Holmes were in charge of national health legislation over the past three years. The main point of the story has been 'the dog that didn't bark'--the sweeping health policy changes that were offered, debated and ultimately rejected...."
7351. Rose, Daniel. "The Theology Of Rent Control." Vital speeches of the day 69, no. 21 (2003): 670-672.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents the text of a speech given by Rose Associates Inc. chairman Dainel Rose on June 17, 2003 which deals with the history of low income housing and residential rent control in the U.S. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Advocates of controls claim that major reform would bring chaos and misery; 'price control' people point out that, contrary to widespread fear, when Massachusetts, California and Washington, DC removed controls in recent years, nothing happened! Like the dog that didn't bark in the Sherlock Holmes story, there were no massive rent increases, no flood of evictions, no celebrated hardship cases...."
7352. Rutten, Andrew. "The neglected politics of the American Founding." Independent Review 2, no. 4 (1998): 579.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents two books on the constitutions of the American Founding era that shows the importance of both roles of politics in the history of that period. 'Between Authority and Liberty: State Constitution Making in Revolutionary America (1997),' by Marc Kruman; 'The People's Welfare: Law and Regulation in Nineteenth-Century America (1996),' By William Novak. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...But some of the most important protective mechanisms were invisible; like the dog that did not bark in the Sherlock Holmes story, they were important because of what they did not do...."
7353. Seeman, Nadrian C. "DNA Nanotechnology: Novel DNA Constructions." Annual Review of Biophysics & Biomolecular Structure 27, no. 1 (1998): 225.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a reference to Holmes. "We are all familiar with DNA as the substance that functions as genetic material for living cells. Its double-helical structure has become one of the cultural icons representing contemporary civilization in much the same way that we associate previous societies with the Pyramids of Egypt, the Colosseum of Rome, or the Great Wall of China. It is often useful to look at such a familiar object from the contrary viewpoint expressed by Sherlock Holmes in Silver Blaze (8), when he remarked to the inspector on the 'curious incident of the dog in the nighttime.' When the inspector replied, 'The dog did nothing in the night-time,' Holmes replied, 'That was the curious incident.' A similarly curious feature of DNA is its lack of branches: Insofar as we know, the helix axis of genomic DNA is topologically linear...."
7354. Shankman, Kimberly C., and Roger Pilon. "Reviving the Privileges Or Immunities Clause to Redress the Balance among States, Individuals, and the Federal Government." Texas Review of Law & Politics 3, no. 1 (1998): 1.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Argues that the power will be devoted to the states and the people in a principled way only if the principles inherent in the U.S. Privileges or Immunities Clause are revived. Statement of section 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution; Origins of the Privileges or Immunities Clause; Discussion on the natural rights, the social contract and the foundation of U.S. constitutionalism. Includes a passing reference to Holmes (p. 4). "...Like the bark of the hound in the canon of Sherlock Holmes, what is most striking about the privileges or Immunities Clause in the canon of constitutional law is its absence....Like Sherlock Holmes, therefore, we would do well to consider the significance of the silence that has ensued...."
7355. Sharp, David. "Bookshelf." Lancet 343, no. 8902 (1994): 905.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book 'Seven Experiments That Could Change the World,' by Rupert Sheldrake. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Exploration of the paranormal is often driven by anecdote, and the risk of positive publication bias here is grave. Suppose you work erratic hours and have a dog, and every evening, long before you are within ear or smell shot of home, it rushes to the door to greet you. You would tell your friends and even write about it. If, on the other hand, the faithless creature never lifted its nose from the hearthrug, you would keep quiet. Only Sherlock Holmes goes public about a silent dog. This is one of Sheldrake's tests, requiring rigorous controls in a domestic setting but little equipment, apart from a canine companion...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

7356. Siegel, Jonathan R. "The Polymorphic Principle and the Judicial Role in Statutory Interpretation." Texas Law Review 84, no. 2 (2005): 339-394.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses the judicial role in statutory interpretation and the polymorphic and strong unitary principles. The differences between the strong unitary principle and the polymorphic principle of statutory interpretation are discussed. The principle of statutory interpretation implemented in the U.S. Supreme Court case Clark v. Martinez is stated. The strong unitary principle has an impact on the role of judicial choice in statutory interpretation. Reference on page 387 to Silver Blaze and the dog in the night-time.
7357. Singham, Mano. "The science and religion wars." Phi Delta Kappan 81, no. 6 (2000): 424-432.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // "Recent discussion over the decision by the Kansas State Board of Education to no longer require knowledge of evolution theory in its science standards has reignited the science/religion debate. To the casual observer, the current conflict appears to be about choosing between two fairly straightforward but dissonant propositions. Advocates of one side believe that creation science and evolution are unproven theories and that fairness requires either teaching or omitting both from the school science curriculum; those on the other side argue that creation science is a religion-based belief, which justifies its exclusion from the public school curriculum under the establishment clause of the First Amendment. The issues do, however, involve subtle and complex questions, and key roles in the debate are played by scientists, theologians, creationists, postmodernists, social constructivists, feminists, philosophers, multiculturalists, and historians of science. The writer explores what drives the reasoning of the leading players in the conflict." Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The third predictable feature of discussions of scientific literacy is harder to observe because, like the dog that did not bark in the night in the Sherlock Holmes story, it involves noticing what is not said. No one raises the question as to what fundamental difference, if any, exists between these supposedly non- (or even anti-) science fringe beliefs and those of mainstream religions. And it is this silent issue that must be confronted if we are to understand the often bizarre coalitions that form and re-form around the science/religion issue...."
7358. Snyder Jr, James M., and Tim Groseclose. "Estimating party influence in Congressional roll-call voting." American Journal of Political Science 44, no. 2 (2000): 193.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Describes a simple means of estimating the extent of party influence in roll-call voting in the United States Congress. Findings of strong evidence of party influence in both the House and the Senate from 1871-1998; Absence of any substantial difference in influence between the two houses of Congress; Political issues where party influence is most felt. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Finally, party influence appears to be very rare on moral and religious issues (e.g., abortion and school prayer) and never occurs on gun control....This last finding offers some strong support for our method, analogous to Sherlock Holmes' 'dog that didn't bark.' If, as a critic might claim, our party variable only acts as proxy for unseen preferences, then why doesn't this variable bark on moral issues and gun control?..."
7359. Sowell, Thomas. "Government shutdown is cause for deep thinking." Headway 8, no. 2 (1996): 20.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Comments on the government shutdown in the United States. Background on the negotiations concerning the federal budget; Budget balancing policies proposed by the Republicans in Congress. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Where is the media during all this? They are like the dog that didn't bark while a crime was being committed, in a famous Sherlock Holmes story. That was a clue that told Holmes that the dog was on friendly terms with the criminal...."
7360. Stein, Carol A., and Seth Stein. "Mantle plumes: heat-flow near Iceland." Astronomy & Geophysics 44, no. 1 (2003): 1.08-1.10.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // In the first of four pieces arising from Gill Foulger's challenge to the mantle plume hypothesis (last issue), Carol Stein and Seth Stein join the debate with some data and comment on heat-flow around Iceland. Abstract Seafloor heat-flow near Iceland on the North American side of the Mid-Atlantic Ridge is comparable to that for oceanic lithosphere elsewhere, and thus shows no evidence for significantly higher temperatures associated with a mantle plume. Heat-flow is higher on the Eurasian plate than on the North American plate, an intriguing asymmetry opposite to that expected from models in which Iceland formed over a mantle plume. [Abstract from author] Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The small or absent heat-flow anomalies at other hotspots play a role similar to that of the dog whose failure to bark helped Sherlock Holmes locate the missing racehorse Silver Blaze...."

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

7361. Stewart, Bruce A. "The Changes To Come in Five Years." Computerworld 39, no. 14 (2005): 18-19.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article discusses changes in the information technology (IT) field. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Those are all a part of the story, but in the end, I'd have to borrow a phrase from Sherlock Holmes and say that what really drove the change was the dog that didn't bark. Since 2005, there really hasn't been that much change in the technology world. Rather, what's changed is how IT decisions are made...."

7362. Taylor, Elizabeth M. "Durkheim Meets Discourse: Forms of Symbol and Society in African Religion." Reviews in Anthropology 27, no. 4 (1998): 141.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews books on African religion and society. 'Dreaming, Religion and Society in Africa,' edited by M.C. Jedrej and Rosalind Shaw; 'Beyond the Stream: Islam and Society in a West African Town,' by Robert Launay; 'River of Blood: The Genesis of a Martyr Cult in Southern Malawi, c. A.D. 1600,' by J. Matthew Schoffeleers. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Gender has a stark silence in this text that, like Sherlock Holmes' clue of the (non)barking dog, might open up quite different plots...."

7363. Thompson, Michael. "Clumsiness: why isn't it as easy as falling off a log?" Innovation: The European Journal of Social Sciences 21, no. 3 (2008): 205-216.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...They need to back off from elegance-- single definitions of problem and solution, clear separation of facts and values, reliance on optimization, etc. -- so as to be able to listen to 'other voices.' And to do that they are going to need methods that will tell them when some of these voices that they should be listening to are not being heard -- a bit like Sherlock Holmes and 'The Dog That Did Not Bark'!..."

7364. Volcker, Paul A. "Sustaining economic growth." Vital speeches of the day 60, no. 13 (1994): 392.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents speech given by the Chairman of James D. Wolfensohn Inc. before the Economic Club of Detroit in Michigan, dealing with the issue of economic stability. Fruits of years of restructuring and driving for efficiency; Resistance to monetary stimulus; Need of improving productivity to offset budgetary deficits. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...One important source of comfort to me lies in that famous clue in the Sherlock Holmes story: The dog that didn't bark. In fact, there are two dogs in this economic story...."

7365. Wald, Kenneth D., Adam L. Silverman, and Kevin S. Fridy. "Making Sense of Religion in Political Life." Annual Review of Political Science 8, no. 1 (2005): 121-143.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // After a long period of postwar neglect by mainstream scholars, religion assumed a new prominence in political science during the late 1970s. Despite the latter-day significance accorded religion by the discipline, the product of several unexpected real-world events, much of the recent research has focused on specific episodes or groups without drawing on or developing general theories. Social movement theory (SMT), particularly in its most recent incarnation, offers a way to address the three critical questions about religiously engaged political movements: What are the motives for political activity by religious groups? By what means do these groups facilitate political action? What features and conditions of the political system provide them opportunities for effective political action? This review explores various expressions of religiously based political action from the vantage point of SMT. We conclude that the translation of religious grievances into political action is contingent on a string of conditions that involve the interplay of motive, means, and opportunity. The implicit message is that scholars should approach religiously engaged social movements with the same theoretical frameworks used to understand secular political forces and that focusing these interpretive lenses on religion will illuminate issues of general interest to the discipline. [Abstract from author] Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Like the famous dog that did not bark, enabling Sherlock Holmes to solve a mystery, the importance of the opportunity structure may be most evident in cases when

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

religious groups fail to mobilize politically despite propitious motives and resources....'

7366. Wan, Zhu-li, Kun Huang, Bin Xu, Shi-Quan Hu, Shuhua Wang, Ying-Chi Chu, Panayotis G. Katsoyannis, and Michael A. Weiss. "Diabetes-Associated Mutations in Human Insulin: Crystal Structure and Photo-Cross-Linking Studies of A-Chain Variant Insulin Wakayama." Biochemistry 44, no. 13 (2005): 5000-5016.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...The structure of insulin Wakayama thus evokes the reasoning of Sherlock Holmes in 'the curious incident of the dog in the night': the apparent absence of structural perturbations (like the dog that did not bark) provides a critical clue to the function of a hidden receptor-binding surface."
7367. Weidenbaum, Murray. "Federal Regulatory Policy, 1980-2000." Society 38, no. 1 (2000): 86-89.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article provides an overview of government regulation in the U.S. for the period 1980-2000. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Several deregulatory statutes were enacted, such as the Bus Regulatory Reform Act of 1982 and the Shipping Act of 1984. The most significant accomplishment was so undramatic that it went unnoticed: during the Reagan presidency--and unlike other administrations in recent decades--no new regulatory agency was established nor was any major regulatory program substantially expanded. It was reminiscent of the Sherlock Holmes tale where the most significant clue was not action at all, but the fact that the dog did not bark...."
7368. ———. "U.S. defense industry." Vital speeches of the day 64, no. 3 (1997): 82.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents a speech by the chairman of the Center for the Study of American Business at Washington University in St. Louis, Missouri given before the National Association of Business Economists on September 17, 1997 dealing with the defense industry in the United States. Industry's adjustment to the end of the Cold War; Key danger to national security; Approach to antitrust enforcement. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...In light of these good numbers, it is not surprising that, in spite of the massive cutbacks in U.S. defense spending, no plea has been heard for taxpayer bailouts of faltering defense contractors. It reminds me of the famous Sherlock Holmes story where the key clue was that the dog did not bark...."
7369. ———. "The U.S. defense industry after the Cold War." Orbis 41, no. 4 (1997): 591.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the impact of the end of the Cold War on the defense industry in the United States. Changing threats to national security; Maintenance of an adequate industrial base; Fiscal 1998 cutbacks in defense spending. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...In light of these good numbers, it is not surprising that despite the massive cutbacks in U.S. defense spending, no plea was heard for taxpayer bailouts of faltering defense contractors. Then-Secretary of Defense William Perry's admonition was good policy but too pessimistic a forecast: 'We expect companies to go out of business, and we will stand by and let that happen.' [13] No Chrysler-style corporate loan guarantee program--much less anything like the U.S. Reconstruction Finance Corporation of the 1930s--was necessary, or even requested. This situation may remind the reader of the famous Sherlock Holmes story where the key clue was that the dog did not bark. Similarly, the most important point in military-industry relationships in the post-cold war period has been the absence of crisis...."
7370. ———. "US defense firms dodged the budget bullet." Christian Science Monitor, Mar 20, 1997: 19.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reports on the United States defense industry adjustment from the end of the cold war. Information on the strength of the defense industry; Details on losses which the industry experienced. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Remember the famous Sherlock Holmes story where the key clue was that the dog did not bark? Similarly, the most important point in military-industry relationships in the post-cold war period has been the absence of crisis...."
7371. Weiler, Stephan, and Alexandra Bernasek. "Dodging the glass ceiling? Networks and the new wave of women entrepreneurs." Social Science Journal 38, no. 1 (2001): 85.
NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Examines the causes and effects of the increase in women-owned businesses in the United States. Impact of information networks on women's market difficulties; Motivations for the influx of women to entrepreneurship; Implications for women's economic status; Comparison of women- and men-

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

owned businesses; Gender discrimination in the labor market; Arrow's model of discrimination. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Yet, to this point, there has been relatively scarce direct evidence of such labor market arbitrage. 'Sherlock Holmes, a man much concerned with the formulation of hypotheses for the explanation of empirical behavior, once asked about the barking of a dog at night. The local police inspector, mystified as usual, noted that the dog had not barked at night. Holmes dryly noted that his silence was precisely the problem' (Arrow, 1972, p. 91). So far, it seems that the dog has indeed not barked...."

7372. Williams, Ian. "Real Scandal Not Oil-for-Food, but CPA-Administered Development Fund for Iraq." Washington Report on Middle East Affairs 25, no. 2 (2006): 14-15.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article presents information on mismanagement of funds by the Coalition Provisional Authority (CPA). The International Accounting and Monitoring Board has been acting as if the effective disappearance of billions of dollars was nothing terribly memorable. The U.S.-dominated CPA under Paul Bremer spent nearly $20 billion of the $23.34 billion of Iraqi funds it had under its control in the so-called Development Fund for Iraq (DFI). Much of the money involved presumably came from the $10 billion surplus that the Security Council ordered the United Nations Oil-for-Food Fund to hand over to the CPA-controlled DFI. Includes a passing reference to Holmes and the name of an new case in the Canon. "...It was hardly reported at all -- calling to mind the Sherlock Holmes case of 'The Dog that Did Not Bark.' If ever there were watchdogs that should have been howling to the moon, however, it is these worthy auditors. Instead they spent the best part of an hour acting as if the effective disappearance of billions of dollars was nothing terribly memorable...."

7373. Williams, Richard. "The mystery of disappearing heat." Weatherwise 49, no. 4 (1996): 28.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the discovery of the phenomenon of latent heat by Scottish scientist Joseph Black during the eighteenth century. Inability of earlier scientists to grasp the concept of latent heat; Role played by latent heat in shaping weather and climate; Process; Black's basis for his reasoning; Argument used by Black to explain the phenomenon; Black's experiments on water vapor. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Black based his reasoning in part on the fact that something expected to happen did not. (Sherlock Holmes used similar logic to solve a puzzling case by noting that a dog at the crime scene had not barked.)..."

7374. Wise, Michael O. "Dating the Teacher of Righteousness and the Floruit of His Movement." Journal of Biblical Literature 122, no. 1 (2003): 53-87.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Presents an examination of the chronological framework of the traditional form of the Essene Hypothesis based on the Dead Sea scholarship on the Jewish sect known as Essenes led by a man called "the Teacher of Righteousness" in the ancient Khirbet Qumran. Methods of dating the archaeology of Khirbet Qumran; Historical references and allusions in the Dead Sea Scrolls. Includes a passing reference to Holmes (p. 85). "...To draw an inference from the total absence of allusions to the first century C.E. in the Dead Sea Scrolls is really not an argument from silence. The situation is rather akin to that of the hound in the Sherlock Holmes story "Silver Blaze": this is a dog that should have barked. The most natural conclusion from the silence is that the dog could not bark: it was either sick, or it was dead...."

7375. Witkin, Stanley L. "Noticing." Social work 45, no. 2 (2000): 101-104.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // This article discusses the social aspect of noticing. For something to be noticed, it must be perceivable. It must be located within detectable parameters, materially and, perhaps less obvious, conceptually, within the range of intelligibility as defined by a culture. Expressions of noticing that are unintelligible are considered misperceptions such as illusions, or symptoms of physical or psychological problems, or drug use. But because intelligibility is a social construct, it will change over time and place, thereby altering that range of what can be noticed. Noticing involves an intertwined, interdependent relationship between what is noticed and various contexts. Intelligibility depends on the contexts assumed, their compatibility with culturally recognized explanations, and understandings of what is possible within those contexts. The social aspect of noticing is highlighted further by the role of language. Expressions of noticing that enter the stream of social discourse are legitimated, dismissed, or revised. The author argues that what people notice is a social act. What they notice has consequences. The consequences of noticing are particularly relevant in relationships of unequal power in which certain people have greater authority to name what they and others notice. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "...Sensitivity to the context dependence of noticing

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

enables us to notice the absence of something. This excerpt from a Sherlock Holmes story (cited in Goldstein & Goldstein, 1978) illustrates such acuity: Colonel Ross: 'Is there any point to which you wish to draw my attention?' Holmes: 'To the curious incident of the dog in the night-time.' Colonel Ross: 'The dog did nothing in the night-time.' Holmes: 'That was the curious incident.' That the dog 'did nothing' suggested to Holmes that the crime was committed by someone with whom the dog was familiar. In this context, noticing 'nothing' was noticing 'something'..."

7376. Zakaria, Fareed. "Bin Laden's Bad Bet. (Cover story)." Newsweek 140, no. 11 (2002): 34.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Focuses on the fundamentalist ideology of terrorist Osama bin Laden, and how his support is fading in the Arab world. Lack of movement made by bin Laden since the terrorist attacks on the U.S. on September 11, 2001; Danger posed by bin Laden's al Qaeda terrorist network; Belief that although many Islamic groups are lying low, many will still attempt terrorism in the future. Includes a passing reference to Holmes. "In one of his legendary moments of brilliance, Sherlock Holmes pointed the attention of the police to the curious behavior of a dog on the night of the murder. The baffled police inspector pointed out that the dog had been silent during the night. 'That was the curious incident,' explained Holmes. Looking back over the last year, I am reminded of that story because the most important event that has taken place has been a nonevent. Ever since that terrible day in September 2001, we have all been watching, waiting and listening for the angry voice of Islamic fundamentalism to rip through the Arab and Islamic world. But instead there has been... silence. The dog has not barked...."

7377. Zender, Karl F. "Faulkner and the politics of incest." American Literature 70, no. 4 (1998): 739.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Investigates author William Faulkner's use of the incest motif in fiction. Interpretations of incest in Falkner's fiction; Moral and political valuation of imagined acts of incest; Faulkner's understanding of the incest metaphor; Romanic views about incest; Direction of Faulkner's development relative to incest. Includes a passing reference to Doyle (p. 745). "...Like the hound that fails to bark in Conan Doyle's short story, Faulkner's refusal to depict incest as it was most commonly believed to exist in the South--as it is depicted in Erskine Caldwell's God's Little Acre, for example--is an absence that carries profound meaning...."

13 PASSING REFERENCES -- MORIARTY (1)

7378. Wesson, Paul S. "On higher-dimensional dynamics." Journal of Mathematical Physics 43, no. 5 (2002): 2423.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Technical results are presented on motion in  $N(>4)D$  manifolds to clarify the physics of brane theory, Kaluza-Klein theory, induced-matter theory, and string theory. The so-called canonical or warp metric in five dimensions (5D) effectively converts the manifold from a coordinate space to a momentum space, resulting in a new force (per unit mass) parallel to the four-dimensional (4D) velocity. The form of this extra force is actually independent of the form of the metric, but for an unbound particle is tiny because it is set by the energy density of the vacuum or cosmological constant. It can be related to a small change in the rest mass of a particle, and can be evaluated in two convenient gauges relevant to gravitational and quantum systems. In the quantum gauge, the extra force leads to Heisenberg's relation between increments in the position and momenta. If the 4D action is quantized then so is the higher-dimensional part, implying that particle mass is quantized, though only at a level of  $10^{sup -65}$  g or less, which is unobservably small. It is noted that massive particles which move on timeline paths in 4D can move on null paths in 5D. This agrees with the view from inflationary quantum field theory, that particles acquire mass dynamically in 4D but are intrinsically massless. A general prescription for dynamics is outlined, wherein particles move on null paths in an  $N(>4)D$  manifold which may be flat, but have masses set by an embedded 4D manifold which is curved. © 2002 American Institute of Physics. [Abstract from author] The article ends with an interesting Holmesian dedication. "This work is dedicated to the memory of Professor J. Moriarty, whose monograph The Dynamics of an Asteroid 'ascends to such rarefied heights of pure mathematics that it is said that there was no man in the scientific press capable of criticizing it.'"

A Holmes & Doyle Bibliography
Vol. 6, Periodical Articles, By De Waal Category

13 PASSING REFERENCES -- MYCROFT (4)

7379. Holland Jr, William J. "Fitting submarines into the Fleet." U.S.Naval Institute Proceedings 134, no. 6 (2008): 32-36.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // The article focuses on submarines as part of the fleet of the U.S. Navy. Fleet is considered to be the number of warships under a definite area of operation and under one command. It analyzes the reasons for the difficulty faced in operating submarines as an arm of the fleet. It states that technical and process knowledge is needed to control submarines. Includes a passing reference to Holmes and his brother. "...As predicted in 1892 by Mycroft Holmes, the fictional elder brother of Sherlock, 'You may take it from me that naval warfare becomes impossible within the radius of a Bruce-Partington [submarine] operation.'..."

7380. Hurley, S. L. "Vehicles, contents, conceptual structure, and externalism." Analysis 58, no. 1 (1998): 1.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Discusses the properties represented in contents of the mental states of subjects with the properties of the vehicles of content. Systematic conceptual structure of the cognitive abilities of persons; Role of internal relations as vehicle of content; Distinction between perception and action. Note 3 includes a reference to Holmes: "I am indebted to Nicholas Rawlins for casting Mycroft and Marlowe in this illustration. For those who were never Sherlock Holmes fans, Mycroft is the famous detective's still more cerebral but inactive older brother."

7381. Quinn, Dermot. "Pym Wins." First Things: A Monthly Journal of Religion & Public Life, no. (2003): 5p.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the book "The Book Against God," by James Wood. Includes a passing reference to Mycroft Holmes (p. 57). "...The reader is reminded of Mycroft Holmes, Sherlock Holmes' cleverer older brother, whose cleverness was always asserted, never shown...."

7382. Skow, John. "Cops with machisma." Time 144, no. 14 (1994): 76.

NOTE // ABSTRACT --- // Reviews the novels 'The Body Farm,' by Patricia Cornwell, 'Mallory's Oracle,' by Carol O'Connell and 'North of Montana,' by April Smith. Includes a reference to Mycroft Holmes. "...A cleverly built foundation underlies Mallory's Oracle (Putnam; 286 pages; $21.95), by newcomer Carol O'Connell; the author relates that her flamboyant main character, a young cop named Kathleen Mallory, was a Manhattan street kid into her early teens. The experience left her a borderline sociopath, and since she is both gorgeous and unusually bright, she can cause a lot of trouble. Her beloved adoptive uncle, an old police lieutenant, is murdered as the novel begins. She undertakes a lone-wolf investigation, having been forbidden to do so, and wanders like a gun-packing Alice into a mirror world of characters as clever and without conscience as she. A coven of rich, carnivorous old ladies is both scammed upon and scamming, but can its doddering members really have anything to do with a series of ferocious murders? How much should Mallory trust the male character who seems to have been modeled on Mycroft Holmes, Sherlock's smarter brother? O'Connell's fairy tale is wild-eyed nonsense and good fun...."